

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

[N preparing this collection of English verse, it has been the aim of the compiler to include such poems as are acknowledged to be among the best works of the authors here represented; and also to present, in one compact, inexpensive volume, a popular handbook of English Poetry, from the time of Chaucer to the present day.

In the pursuance of this plan he has availed himself largely of the labor and judgment of others, in deciding what authors or selections should be included.

Among the works more frequently consulted, and from which numerous extracts have been made, are the following: viz., Ward's "English Poets," Palgrave's "Golden Treasury," Mackay's "Thousand and One Gems," Beeton's "Book of Poetry," "Living English Poets," and "English Poetesses."

A number of poems by authors now living brings the volume down to the latest period, and will doubtless prove of interest to many readers who have not access to the works of these writers.

The biographical data are from Johnson's "Cyclopedia," Ward's "English Poets," Allibone's "Dictionary of Authors," "Men of the Time," and other reliable sources.

An Index of Authors, Contents, and First Lines has been placed at the end of the volume.

[GEOFFREY CHAUCER, born in London probably about 1328, died at Westminster in 1400. He was the son of a vintner; was page in Prince Lionel's household, served in the army, was taken prisoner in France. He was afterwards valet and squire to Edward III., and went as king's commissioner to Italy in 1372, and later. He was Controller of the Customs in the port of London from 1381 to 1386, was M. P. for Kent in 1386, Clerk of the King's Works at Windsor in 1389, and died poor. Mr. Furnivall divides his poetical history into four periods: (1) up to 1371, including the early poems: viz., the A. B. C., the Compleynte to Pitt, the Boke of the Duchesse, and the Compleynte of Mars; (2) from 1372 to 1381, including the Troilus and Criseyde, Anelida, and the Former Age; (3) the best period, from 1381 to 1389, including the Parlement of Foules, the Hous of Fame, the Legende of Goode Women, and the chief of the Canterbury Tales; (4) from 1390 to 1400, including the latest Canterbury Tales, and the Ballades and Poems of Reflection and later age, of which the last few, like the Steadfastness, show failing power.]

PRAISE OF WOMEN.

FOR, this ye know well, tho' I wouldin
lie,
In women is all truth and steadfastness;
For, in good faith, I never of them sie
But much worship, bounty, and gentle-
ness,
Right coming, fair, and full of meeké-
ness;
Good, and glad, and lowly, I you ensure,
Is this goodly and angelic creature.

And if it hap a man be in disease,
She doth her business and her full pain
With all her might him to comfort and please,
If fro his disease him she might restrain:
In word ne deed, I wis, she woll not faine;
With all her might she doth her business
To bringen him out of his heaviness.

Lo, here what gentleness these women have,
If we could know it for our rudéness!
How busy they be us to keep and save

Both in hele and also in sicknèss,
And alway right sorry for our distress!
In evéry manère thus shew they ruth,
That in them is all goodness and all truth.

THE YOUNG SQUIRE.

WITH him there was his son, a young Squire,
A lover and a lusty bachelor,
With lockés crull, as they were laid in press.
Of twenty year of age he was I guess
Of his stature he was of even length,
And wonderly deliver and great of strength;
And he had been some time in chevachie
In Flandres, in Artois, and in Picardy,
And borne him well, as of so little space,
In hope to standen in his lady's grace.
Embroidered was he, as it were a mead
All full of freshé flowers white and red.
Singing he was or fluting all the day:
He was as fresh as is the month of
May.

Short was his gown, with sleeves long and wide;
Well could he sit on horse, and faire ride.
He couldé songés well make, and indite, Joust, and eke dance, and well pourtray and write.
So hot he lovéd, that by nightertale
He slept no more than doth the nightingale.
Courteous he was, lowly and serviceable,
And carved before his father at the table.

ARCITAS DYING ADDRESS.

"ALAS, the wo! alas, the painés strong
That I for you have suffered, and so long!
Alas, the death! — alas, mine Emelie!
Alas, departing of our company!
Alas, mine herté's queen! — alas, my wife,
Mine herté's lady — ender of my life!
What is this world? What axen men to have?
Now with his love, now in his coldé
grave
Alone! withouten any company,
Farewell, my sweet! — farewell, mine Emelie?"

GOOD COUNSEL OF CHAUCER FLY from the press,¹ and dwell with soothfastness;
Suffice unto thy good, though it be small,
For hoard² hath hate, and climbing tickleness;³
Preise⁴ hath envie, and weal is blent o'er all.
Savor⁵ no more than thee behoven shall Rede⁶ well thy self that other fold can'st rede,
And Truth thee shalt deliver — 'tis no drede.⁷

That thee is sent receive in buxomness:
The wrestling of this world, asketh a fall.
Here is no home, here is but wilderness.
Forth, pilgrim, forth — on, best out of thy stall,
Look up on high, and thank the God
of all!
Weivith⁸ thy lust, and let thy ghost⁹ thee lead,
And Truth thee shalt deliver — 'tis no drede.

THE EARL OF SURREY.

1517-1547

[HENRY HOWARD was the eldest son of Thomas Earl of Surrey, by his second wife, the Lady Elizabeth Stafford, daughter of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham. The date and place of his birth are alike unknown. It probably occurred in 1517. He became Earl of Surrey on the accession of his father to the dukedom of Norfolk in 1524. The incidents of his early life are buried in obscurity; the incidents of his later life rest on evidence rarely trustworthy and frequently apocryphal. He was beheaded on Tower Hill January 31, 1547, nominally on a charge of high treason, really in consequence of having fallen a victim to a Court intrigue, the particulars of which it is now impossible to unravel. With regard to the chronology of his various poems we have nothing to guide us. Though they were extensively circulated in manuscript during his lifetime, they were not printed till June, 1557, when they made their appearance, together with Wyatt's poems, and several fugitive pieces by other authors, in Tottel's Miscellany.]

THE MEANS TO ATTAIN HAPPY LIFE.

[Translated from Martial.]

MARTIAL, the things that do attain
The happy life be these, I find;
The riches left, not got with pain,
The fruitful ground, the quiet mind.

The equal friend, no grudge, no strife,
No charge of rule nor governance;
Without disease, the healthful life,
The Household of continuance

The mean diet, no delicate fare;
True wisdom joined with simpleness,

The night discharged of all care,
Where wine the wit may not oppress.

The faithful wife, without debate;
Such sleeps as may beguile the night;
Contented with thine own estate, Ne wish for death, ne fear his might.

GIVE PLACE, YE LOVERS.

GIVE place, ye lovers, here before That spent your boasts and brags in vain;
My lady's beauty passeth more
The best of yours, I dare well sayen,
Than doth the sun the candlelight,
Or brightest day the darkest night;

And thereto hath a troth as just
As had Penelope the fair;
For what she saith ye may it trust,
As it by writing sealed were; —
And virtues hath she many mo'
Than I with pen have skill to show.

I could rehearse, if that I would,
The whole effect of Nature's plaint,
When she had lost the perfect mould,
The like to whom she could not paint.
With wringing hands, how did she cry!
And what she said, I know it aye.

I know she swore, with raging mind,
Her kingdom only set apart,
There was no loss by law of kind
That could have gone so near her
heart;
And this was chiefly all her pain, —
"She could not make the like again."

Sith Nature thus gave her the praise
To be the chiefest work she wrought,
In faith, methink, some better ways
On your behalf might well be sought,
Than to compare, as ye have done,
To match the candle with the sun.

HOW NO AGE IS CONTENT WITH ITS OWN ESTATE.

LAYD in my quiet bed in study as I were,
I saw within my troubled head, a heap of thoughts appear,

And every thought did shew so lyvely in myne eyes,
That now I sight, and then I smilde, as cause of thoughts did ryse.
I saw the little boy, in thought how oft that he Did wishe of God, to scape the rod, a tall young man to be,
The young man eake that feles his bones with paines opprest
How he would be a riche old man, to live and lye at rest;
The riche olde man that sees his end draw on so sore,
How he would be a boy againe to live so much the more.
Whereat full oft I smylde, to see how all those three
From boy to man, from man to boy, would chop and change degree.
And musing thus, I think, the case is very strange,
That man from wealth, to live in wo, doth ever seke to change.
Thus thoughtfull as I lay, I sawe my withered skyn,
How it doth shew my dented chewes,
the flesh was worn so thin,
And eke my tootheless chaps, the gates of my right way,
That opes and shuttes, as I do speak,
do thus unto me say:
The white and horish heres, the messengers of age,
That shew like lines of true belief, that this life doth assuage, Biddes thee lay hand, and feele them hanging on thy chin.
The whiche doth write to ages past, the thirld now coming in;
Hang up therefore the bitte, of thy yong wanton tyme,
And thou that therein beaten art, the happiest life defyne.
Whereat I sighed, and sayde, farewell
my wonted toye, Trusse up thy packe, and trudge from me, to every little boy,
And tell them thus from me, their time most happy is,
If to theyr time they reason had, to know the truth of this.

SIR THOMAS WYATT.

1503-1542.

[THOMAS WYATT, the eldest son of Sir Henry Wyatt, a baronet of ancient family, was born at Allington Castle, in Kent, in 1503. In the Court of Henry VIII. he soon became a conspicuous figure, famous for his wit, his learning, his poetical talents, his linguistic attainments, his skill in athletic exercises, his fascinating manners and his handsome person. From a courtier he developed into a statesman and a diplomatist, and in the duties incident to statesmanship and diplomacy most of his life was passed. He died at Sherborne, while on his road to Falmouth, and was buried there October 11, 1542. His poems were first printed in Tottel's Miscellany in 1557.]

A DESCRIPTION OF SUCH A ONE AS HE COULD LOVE.

A FACE that should content me wonderous well,
Should not be fatt, but lovely to behold,
Of lively look all grieve for to repell With right good grace so would I that it should.
Speak without word, such words as none can tell;
Her tress also should be of crisped gold.
With wit and these, perchance I might be tryde
And knit againe with knot that should not slide.

COMPLAINT OF THE ABSENCE OF HIS LOVE.

SOE feeble is the thred that doth the burden stay,
Of my poor life in heavy plight that falleth in decay,
That but it have elsewhere some ayde
or some succours,
The running spindle of my fate anon shall end his course.
For since the unhappy houre that dyd me to depart,
From my sweet weale one only hoape hath stayed my life apart, Which doth perswade such words unto my sored mynde, Maintaine thy selfe, O wofull wight, some better luck to find.
For though thou be deprived from thy desired sight
Who can thee tell, if thy returne before thy more delight;
Or who can tell thy loss if thou mayst once recover,

Some pleasant houres thy wo may wrap,
and thee defend and cover.
Thus in this trust, as yet it hath my life sustained,
But now (alas) I see it faint, and I by trust am trayned.
The tyme doth flete, and I see how the hours do bende,
So fast that I have scant the space to marke my coming end.
Westward the sunn from out the east scant shewd his lite,
When in the west he hies him straite within the dark of night And comes as fast, where he began his path awry,
From east to west, from west to east, so doth his journey lye.
Thy lyfe so short, so frayle, that mortall men lyve here, Soe great a weight, so heavy charge the bodyes that we bere,
That when I think upon the distance and the space,
That doth so farre divide me from thy dere desired face,
I know not how t'attaine the winges
that I require,
To lyft me up that I might fly to follow my desyre.
Thus of that hope that doth my lyfe somethyng susteyne, Alas I fear, and partly feel full little doth remaine.
Eche place doth bring me grieve where I doe not behold,
Those lively eyes which of my thoughts were wont the keys to hold.
Those thoughts were pleasant sweet whilst I enjoy'd that grace,
My pleasure past, my present pain, when I might well embrace.

And for because my want should more my woe increase,
 In watch and sleep both day and night
 my will doth never cease.
 That thing to wishe whereof synce I did lose the sight,
 Was never thing that mought in ought my wofull hart delight.
 Th' uneasy life I lead doth teach me for to mete,
 The floods, the seas, the land, the hills,
 that doth them intermete, Twene me and those shene lights that wonted for to clere, My darked pangs of cloudy thoughts as bright as Phebus sphere;
 It teacheth me also, what was my pleasant state,
 The more to feele by such record how that my welth doth bate.
 If such record (alas) provoke the inflamed mynde,
 Which sprung that day that I dyd leave the best of me behynde, If love forgeat himselfe by length of absence let,
 Who doth me guid (O wofull wretch) unto this baited net:
 Where doth encrease my care, much better were for me, As dumm as stone all things forgott, still absent for to be.
 Alas the clear christall, the bright transplendant glasse, Doth not bewray the colours hid which underneath it hase.
 As doth the accumbred sprite the thoughtfull throwes discover,
 Of teares delyte of fervent love that in our hartes we cover,
 Out by these eyes, it sheweth that evermore delight;
 In plaint and teares to seek redress, and eke both day and night.
 Those kindes of pleasures most wherein men soe rejoyce,
 To me they do redouble still of stormy sighes the voice.
 For, I am one of them, whom plaint doth well content,
 It fits me well my absent wealth me
 semes for to lament,

And with my teares t' assy to charge
 myne eyes twayne,
 Like as my hart above the brink is fraughted full of payne.
 And for because thereto, that these fair eyes do treat,
 Do me provoke, I will returne, my plaint
 thus to repeate;
 For there is nothing els, so toucheth me within,
 Where they rule all, and I alone, nought but the case or skin.
 Wherefore I shall returne to them as well or spring,
 From whom descends my mortall wo, above all other thing.
 So shall myne eyes in paine accompany my heart,
 That were the guides, that did it lead of love to feel the smart.
 The crisped gold that doth surmount Appolloe's pride,
 The lively streames of pleasant starrs that under it doth glyde, Wherein the beames of love doe still increase theire heate,
 Which yet so far touch me to near in cold to make me sweat,
 The wise and pleasant take, so rare or else alone,
 That gave to me the curties gyft, that earst had never none.
 Be far from me alas, and every other
 thing,
 I might forbear with better will, then this that did me bring.
 With pleasand woord and cheer, redress of lingred payne,
 And wonted oft in kindled will, to vertue me to trayne.
 Thus am I forc'd to hear and hearken after news,
 My cor'fort scant, my large desire in doubtful trust renews.
 And yet with more delight to move my wofull case,
 I must complaine these hands, those armes, that firmly do embrace, Me from myself, and rule the sterne of my poor life,
 The sweet disdaynes, the pleasant wrathes, and eke the holy strife,

That wanted well to tune in temper just and mete,
 The rage, that oft did make me err by furour indiscrete.
 All this is hid from me with sharp and ragged hills,
 At others will my long abode, my depe dyspayr fullfills.
 And of my hope sometime ryse up by some redresse,
 It stumbleth straite for feable faint my fear hath such excesse.
 Such is the sort of hoape, the less for more desyre,
 And yet I trust e're that I dye, to see
 that I require.
 The resting-place of love, where virtue dwells and growes,
 There I desire my weary life sometime may take repose,
 My song thou shalt attaine, to find the pleasant place,
 Where she doth live by whom I live, may chance to have this grace.
 When she hath read and seen, the grieve wherein I serve,
 Between her brests she shall thee put,
 there shall she thee reserve.
 Then tell her, that I come, she shall me shortly see,
 And if for waight the body fayl, the soul shall to her flee.

*THE AGED LOVER RENOUNCETH
 LOVE.*

I LOTHE that I dyd love,
 In youth that I thought swete,
 As time requires for my behove, Methinks they are not mete.
 My lustes they do me leave,
 My fancies all are fled,
 And tract of time begynnes to weave Gray heares upon my hed.
 For age with stealing steppes Hath clawde me with his crouche,
 And lusty lyfe away she leapes
 As there had been none such.
 My muse doth not delight
 Me as she dyd before,
 My hand and pen are not in plight,

As they have been of yore.

For reason me denyes
 This youthly ydle ryme,
 And day by day to me cryes,
 Leave of these toyes in tyme.
 The wrinkles in my browe,
 The furrows in my face,
 Say lymping age will lodge hym now,
 Where youth must geve him place.
 The harbinger of death,
 To me I see him ride,
 The cough, the cold, the gasping breath
 Doth byd me to provyde
 A pickax and a spade
 And eke a shrowding shete,
 A house of clay for to be made,
 For such a geaste most mete.
 Methinkes I hear the clarke
 That knoles the carefull knell,
 And byddes me leave my woful warke,
 Ere nature me compell.
 My kepers knit the knot,
 That youth did laugh to skorne,
 Of me that cleane shall be forgot,
 As I had not been borne.
 Thus must I youth geve up,
 Whose badge I long dyd weare,
 To them I yelde the wanton cup,
 That better may it beare.
 Lo, here the bare hed skull,
 By whose balde signe I know,
 That stouping age away shall pull
 Which youthful yeres did sowe.
 For beauty with her hand
 These croked cares hath wrought,
 And shipped me into the land,
 From whence I fyrst was brought.
 And ye that byde behinde,
 Have ye none other trust
 As ye of clay were cast by kynd,
 So shall ye waste to dust.

THE LONGER LIFE THE MORE OFFENCE.

THE longer life the more offence,
 The more offence the greater paine,
 The greater paine the lesse defence,
 The lesse defence the lesser gaine;
 The loss of gaine long yll doth trye,
 Wherefore come death and let me dye.

The shorter life, less count I finde,
The less account the sooner made,
The account soon made, the merier mind,
The merier mynd doth thought evade;
Short life in truth this thing doth trye,
Wherefore come death and let me dye.

Come gentle death, the ebbe of care,
The ebbe of care, the flood of life,
The flood of life, the joyful fare,
The joyful fare, the end of strife,
The end of strife, that thing wish I,
Wherefore come death and let me die.

BEN JONSON.

[Born 1573; educated at Westminster School and (according to Fuller) at St. John's College, Cambridge. After a brief connection with the trade of his step-father, a master brick-layer, he served as a volunteer in the Low Countries, and settled in London as a playwright not later than 1597. His first important comedy, Every Man in his Humour, was acted 1598; his first tragedy, Sejanus, 1603. His masques chiefly belong to the reign of James I., more especially to its earlier part. He wrote nothing for the stage from 1616 to 1625. After this he produced a few more plays, without permanently securing the favor of the public. Of these plays the last but two was The New Inn, the complete failure of which on the stage provoked Jonson's longer Ode to Himself. He enjoyed, however, in his later years, besides a fluctuating court patronage, the general homage of the English world of letters as its veteran chief. He died in London, August 6, 1637. The First Folio edition of his Works, published in 1616, included the Book of Epigrams, and the lyrics and epistles gathered under the heading The Forest in the same Folio: the Second Folio, published posthumously in 1641, contained the larger and (as its name implies) supplementary collection, called Underwoods by its author.]

THE SWEET NEGLECT.

STILL to be neat, still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast:
Still to be poud'red, still perfum'd:
Lady, it is to be presum'd,
Though art's hid causes are not found,
All is not sweet, all is not sound.

Give me a looke, give me a face,
That makes simplicitie a grace;
Robes loosely flowing, haire as free:
Such sweet neglect more taketh me,
Than all th' adulteries of art,
That strike mine eyes, but not my heart.

THE NOBLE NATURE.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make Man better be (Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere:
A lily of a day
Is fairer far in May,
Although it fall and die that night —
It was the plant and flower of Light.
In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures life may perfect be.

TRUTH.

[From Hymenæi; or, the Solemnities of Masque and Barriers at the marriage of the Earl of Essex, 1606.]

UPON her head she wears a crown of stars,
Through which her orient hair waves to her waist,
By which believing mortals hold her fast,
And in those golden cords are carried even,
Till with her breath she blows them up to heaven.
She wears a robe enchased with eagles' eyes,
To signify her sight in mysteries:
Upon each shoulder sits a milk-white dove,
And at her feet do witty serpents move:
Her spacious arms do reach from east to west,
And you may see her heart shine through her breast.
Her right hand holds a sun with burning rays,
Her left a curious bunch of golden keys,

With which heaven's gates she locketh and displays.
A crystal mirror hangeth at her breast,
By which men's consciences are searched and drest;
On her coach-wheels Hypocrisy lies racked;
And squint-eyed Slander with Vainglory backed Her bright eyes burn to dust, in which shines Fate:
An angel ushers her triumphant gait, Whilst with her fingers fans of stars she twists,
And with them beats back Error, clad in mists.
Eternal Unity behind her shines,
That fire and water, earth and air combines.
Her voice is like a trumpet loud and shrill,
Which bids all sounds in earth and heaven be still.

EPODE.¹[From The Forest.]

NOT to know vice at all, and keep true
state,
Is virtue and not Fate;
Next to that virtue, is to know vice well,
And her black spite expel.
Which to effect (since no breast is so sure
Or safe, but she'll procure Some way of entrance) we must plant a guard
Of thoughts to watch and ward
At the eye and ear, the ports unto the
mind,
That no strange or unkind Object arrive there, but the heart, our spy
Give knowledge instantly
To wakeful reason, our affections' king:
Who, in th' examining,
Will quickly taste the treason, and commit
Close the close cause of it.

¹ The following is only the earlier (general) part of this fine Epode, "sung to deep cars."

'Tis the securest policy we have To make our sense our slave.
But this true course is not embraced by many —
By many? scarce by any.
For either our affections do rebel,
(Or else the sentinel,
That should ring alarm to the heart doth sleep;
Or some great thought doth keep Back the intelligence, and falsely swears
They are base and idle fears Whereof the loyal conscience so complains.
Thus, by these subtle trains
Do several passions invade the mind,
And strike our reason blind.

TO CELIA.

I.

DRINK to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine,
Or leave a kiss within the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise,
Doth ask a drink divine:
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

II.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honoring thee,
As giving it a hope, that there
It could not withered be;
But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent'st it back to me,
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself but thee

JEALOUSY.

WRETCHED and foolish Jealousy,
How can'st thou thus to enter me?
I ne'er was of thy kind:
Nor have I yet the narrow mind
To vent that poor desire, That others should not warm them at my fire:
I wish the sun should shine On all men's fruits and flowers, as well as mine.

But under the disguise of love,
Thou say'st thou only cam'st to prove What my affections were.
Think'st thou that love is helped by fear?
Go, get thee quickly forth, Love's sickness, and his noted want of worth,
Seek doubting men to please,
I ne'er will owe my health to a disease.

SONG OF HESPERUS.

[From "Cynthia's Revels."]

QUEEN and huntress, chaste and fair,
Now the sun is laid to sleep,
Seated in thy silver chair,

State in wonted manner keep.
Hesperus entreats thy light,
Goddess excellently bright!

Earth, let not thy envious shade
Dare itself to interpose;
Cynthia's shining orb was made Heaven to clear, when day did close.
Bless us then with wished sight,
Goddess excellently bright!

Lay thy bow of pearl apart,
And thy crystal-shining quiver:
Give unto the flying hart
Space to breathe how short soever;
Thou that mak'st a day of night,
Goddess excellently bright!

1563-1631.

[MICHAEL DRAYTON was born at Hartshull in Warwickshire about the year 1563. He died on the 23d of December, 1631, and lies buried in Westminster Abbey. In 1591 he published The Harmony of the Church, which was for some unknown reason refused a license, and has never been reprinted till recently. It was followed by Idea and The Pastorals, 1593; Mortimeriades (the Barons' Wars), 1596; The Heroical Epistles (one had been separately printed, 1598); The Owl, 1604; Legends of Cromwell and others, 1607-1613; Polyolbion (first eighteen books, 1612, whole, 1622); The Battle of Agincourt, 1626; besides minor works at intervals.]

THE QUEST OF CYNTHIA.

WHAT time the groves were clad in
green,
The fields drest all in flowers,
And that the sleek-hair'd nymphs were seen
To seek them summer bowers.

Forth rov'd I by the sliding rills,
To find where Cynthia sat,
Whose name so often from the hills
The echoes wonder'd at.

When me upon my quest to bring,
That pleasure might excel,
The birds strove which should sweetliest
sing,
The flow'rs which should sweetest smell.

Long wand'ring in the wood, said I,
"O whither's Cynthia gone?"
When soon the echo doth reply
To my last word — "Go on."

At length upon a lofty fir
It was my chance to find,
Where that dear name most due to her
Was carved upon the rind.

Which whilst with wonder I beheld,
The bees their honey brought,
And up the carved letters fill'd,
As they with gold were wrought.

And near that tree's more spacious root,
Then looking on the ground,
The shape of her most dainty foot Imprinted there I found.

Which stuck there like a curious seal,
As though it should forbid
Us, wretched mortals, to reveal What under it was hid

Besides, the flowers which it had press'd, Appeared to my view
More fresh and lovely than the rest,
That in the meadows grew.

The clear drops, in the steps that stood
Of that delicious girl,
The nymphs, amongst their dainty food,
Drunk for dissolved pearl.

The yielding sand, where she had trod,
Untouch'd yet with the wind,
By the fair posture plainly shew'd
Where I might Cynthia find.

When on upon my wayless walk
As my desires me draw,
I like a madman fell to talk With everything I saw.

I ask'd some lilies, "Why so white
They from their fellows were?"
Who answer'd me, "That Cynthia's sight Had made them look so clear."

I ask'd a nodding violet, "Why
It sadly hung the head?"
It told me, "Cynthia late past by,"
Too soon from it that fled.

A bed of roses saw I there,
Bewitching with their grace,
Besides so wond'rous sweet they were,
That they perfum'd the place.

I of a shrub of those inquir'd,
From others of that kind,
Who with such virtue them inspir'd?
It answer'd (to my mind):

"As the base hemlock were we such,
The poison'dst weed that grows,
Till Cynthia, by her godlike touch, Transform'd us to the rose.

"Since when those frosts that winter brings
Which candy every green,

Renew us like the teeming springs,
And we thus fresh are seen."

At length I on a fountain light,
Whose brim with pinks was platted,
The bank with daffodillies dight
With grass like sleeve was matted:

When I demanded of that well
What pow'r frequented there;
Desiring it would please to tell
What name it us'd to bear:

It told me, "It was Cynthia's own,
Within whose cheerful brims,
That curious nymph had oft been known
To bathe her snowy limbs,

"Since when that water had the pow'r Lost maidenhoods to restore
And make one twenty in an hour,
Of Æson's age before,"

And told me, "That the bottom clear,
Now lay'd with many a fett
Of seed pearl, e'er she bath'd her there Was known as black as jet:

"As when she from the water came Where first she touch'd the mould,
In balls the people made the same
For pomander, and sold."

When chance me to an arbour led,
Whereas I might behold;
Two blest elysiums in one sted,
The less the great infold;

The place which she had chosen out,
Herself in to repose:
Had they come down the gods no doubt
The very same had chose.

The wealthy Spring yet never bore
That sweet, nor dainty flower,
That damask'd not the chequer'd floor
Of Cynthia's summer bower.

The birch, the myrtle, and the bay,
Like friends did all embrace;
And their large branches did display,
To canopy the place.

Where she like Venus doth appear Upon a rosy bed;
As lilies the soft pillows were,
Whereon she lay'd her head.

Heav'n on her shape such cost bestow'd,
And with such bounties blest,
No limb of hers but might have made
A goddess at the least.

The flies by chance mesh'd in her hair,
By the bright radiance thrown From her clear eyes, rich jewels were,
They so like diamonds shone.

The meanest weed the soil there bare,
Her breath did so refine,
That it with woodbine durst compare,
And eke the eglantine.

The dew which on the tender grass
The evening had distill'd,
To pure rose-water turned was,
The shades with sweets that fill'd.

The winds were hush'd, no leaf so small
At all was seen to stir:
Whilst tuning to the waters' fall
The small birds sing to her.

Where she too quickly me espies,
When I too plainly see
A thousand cupids from her eyes Shoot all at once at me.

"Into these secret shades (quoth she)
How dar'st thou be so bold
To enter, consecrate to me,
Or touch this hallowed mould?"

"Those words (quoth she) I can pronounce,
Which to that shape can bring Thee, which that hunter had, who once Saw Dian in the spring."

"Bright nymph (again I thus reply),
This cannot me afright:
I had rather in thy presence die,
Than live out of thy sight.

"I first upon the mountains high Built altars to thy name,

And grav'd it on the rocks thereby,
To propagate thy fame.

"I taught the shepherds on the downs
Of thee to form their lays:
'Twas I that fill'd the neighboring towns
With ditties of thy praise.

"Thy colors I devis'd with care,
Which were unknown before:
Which since that in their braided hair
The nymphs and sylvans wore.

"Transform me to what shape you can,
I pass not what it be:
Yea, what most hateful is to man,
So I may follow thee."

Which when she heard, full pearly floods
I in her eyes might view.
(Quoth she), "Most welcome to these woods
Too mean for one so true.

"Here from the hateful world we'll live,
A den of mere despatch:
To idiots only that doth give,
Which be for sole delight.

"To people the infernal pit,
That more and more doth strive;
Where only villany is wit,
And devils only thrive.

"Whose vileness us shall never awe:
But here our sports shall be Such as the golden world first saw,
Most innocent and free.

"Of simples in these groves that grow,
We'll learn the perfect skill:
The nature of each herb to know,
Which cures and which can kill.

"The waxen palace of the bee,
We seeking will surprise,
The curious workmanship to see
Of her full-laden thighs.

"We'll suck the sweets out of the comb,
And make the gods repine,
As they do feast in Jove's great room,
To see with what we dine.

"Yet when there haps a honey fall,
We'll lick the syrup'd leaves,
And tell the bees that theirs is gall
To this upon the greaves.

"The nimble squirrel noting here,
Her mossy dray that makes,
And laugh to see the dusty deer
Come bounding o'er the brakes.

"The spider's web to watch we'll stand,
And when it takes the bee,
We'll help out of the tyrant's hand
The innocent to free.

"Sometime we'll angle at the brook,
The freckled trout to take,
With silken worms and bait the hooks Which him our prey shall make.

"Of meddling with such subtle tools,
Such dangers that enclose,
The moral is, that painted fools
Are caught with silken shews.

"And when the moon doth once appear,
We'll trace the lower grounds,
When fairies in their ringlets there Do dance their nightly rounds.

"And have a flock of turtle doves,
A guard on us to keep,
As witness of our honest loves,
To watch us till we sleep."

Which spoke, I felt such holy fires
To overspread my breast,
As lent life to my chaste desires,
And gave me endless rest.

By Cynthia thus do I subsist,
On earth heaven's only pride;
Let her be mine, and let who list
Take all the world beside.

TO HIS COY LOVE.

I PRAY thee love, love me no more,
Call home the heart you gave me,
I but in vain that saint adore,
That can, but will not save me :

These poor half kisses kill me quite ;
Was ever man thus served?
Amidst an ocean of delight,
For pleasure to be starved.

Show me no more those snowy breasts.
With azure rivers branched,
Where whilst my eye with plenty feasts,
Yet is my thirst not stanch'd.
O Tantalus, thy pains ne'er tell,
By me thou art prevented;
'Tis nothing to be plagu'd in hell,
But thus in heaven tormented.

Clip me no more in those dear arms,
Nor thy life's comfort call me;
O, these are but too powerful charms,
And do but more enthrall me.
But see how patient I am grown,
In all this coyle about thee;
Come, nice thing, let thy heart alone,
I cannot live without thee.

LOVE'S FAREWELL.

SINCE there's no help, come let us kiss and part, — Nay I have done, you get no more of
me;
And I am glad, yea glad with all my
heart,
That thus so cleanly I myself can
free;

Shake hands forever, cancel all our vows,
And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows
That we one jot of former love retain.

Now at the last gasp of love's latest breath,
When his pulse failing, passion speechless lies,
When faith is kneeling by his bed of
death,
And innocence is closing up his eyes,

— Now if thou would'st, when all have given him over,
From death to life thou might'st him yet recover!

THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT.

FAIR stood the wind for France
 When we our sails advance,
 Nor now to prove our chance Longer will tarry;
 But putting to the main,
 At Kaux, the mouth of Seine,
 With all his martial train, Landed King Harry.

And taking many a fort,
 Furnish'd in warlike sort March'd toward Agincourt
 In happy hour;
 Skirmishing day by day
 With those that stop'd his way,
 Where the French gen'ral lay
 With all his power.

Which in his height of pride,
 King Henry to deride,
 His ransom to provide
 To the King sending;
 Which he neglects the while,
 As from a nation vile
 Yet with an angry smile,
 Their fall portending.

And turning to his men,
 Quoth our brave Henry then,
 Though they to one be ten,
 Be not amazed.
 Yet, have we well begun,
 Battles so bravely won
 Have ever to the sun
 By fame been raised.

And for myself, quoth he,
 This my full rest shall be,
 England ne'er mourn for me,
 Nor more esteem me.
 Victor I will remain,
 Or on this earth lie slain,
 Never shall she sustain Loss to redeem me.

Poictiers and Cressy tell,
 When most their pride did swell,
 Under our swords they fell,
 No less our skill is,

Than when our grandsire great,
 Claiming the regal seat,
 By many a warlike feat,
 Lop'd the French lilies.

The Duke of York so dread,
 The eager vanward led;
 With the main Henry sped,
 Amongst his henchman.
 Excester had the rear,
 A braver man not there,
 O Lord how hot they were On the false Frenchmen!

They now to fight are gone,
 Armor on armor shone,
 Drum now to drum did groan
 To hear, was wonder;
 That with cries they make,
 The very earth did shake,
 Trumpet to trumpet spake, Thunder to thunder.

Well it thine age became,
 O noble Erpingham,
 Which did the signal aim
 To our hid forces;
 When from a meadow by,
 Like a storm suddenly,
 The English archery
 Stuck the French horses.

With Spanish yew so strong,
 Arrows a cloth-yard long,
 That like to serpents stung Piercing the weather;
 None from his fellow starts,
 But playing manly parts,
 And like true English hearts,
 Stuck close together.

When down their bows they threw
 And forth their bilbows drew,
 And on the French they flew;
 Not one was tardy;
 Arms were from shoulders sent,
 Scalps to the teeth were rent,
 Down the French peasants went,
 Our men were hardy.

This while our noble king,
 His broad sword brandishing,

Down the French host did ding,
 As to o'erwhelm it;
 And many a deep wound lent,
 His arms with blood besprent
 And many a cruel dent Bruised his helmet.

Glo'ster, that duke so good,
 Next of the royal blood,
 For famous England stood,
 With his brave brother,
 Clarence, in steel so bright,
 Though but a maiden knight,
 Yet in that furious fight Scarce such another.

Warwick in blood did wade,
 Oxford the foe invade,
 And cruel slaughter made,
 Still as they ran up;
 Suffolk his axe did ply,
 Beaumont and Willoughby Bear them right doughtily, Ferrers and Fanhope.

Upon St. Crispin's day
 Fought was this noble fray,
 Which fame did not delay,
 To England to carry;
 O when shall Englishmen
 With such acts fill a pen,
 Or England breed again
 Such a King Harry?

SONNET.

LOVE in a humor play'd the prodigal,
 And bade my senses to a solemn feast;
 Yet more to grace the company withal,
 Invites my heart to be the chiefest guest:
 No other drink would serve this glut-ton's turn
 But precious tears distilling from mine
 eyne,
 Which with my sighs this epicure doth burn,
 Quaffing carouses in this costly wine;
 Where, in his cups o'ercome with foul excess, Straightways he plays a swaggering ruf-fian's part,

And at the banquet in his drunkenness, Slew his dear friend, my kind and truest
 heart:
 A gentle warning (friends) thus may you see,
 What'tis to keep a drunkard company.

LOVE BANISHED HEAVEN.

SONNET.

LOVE banish'd heaven, in earth was held in scorn,
 Wand'ring abroad in need and beggary;
 And wanting friends, though of a goddess born,
 Yet crav'd the alms of such as passed by:
 I, like a man devout and charitable,
 Clothed the naked, lodg'd this wand'ring guest,
 With sighs and tears still furnishing his table,
 With what might make the miserable
 blest;
 But this ungrateful, for my good desert, Entic'd my thoughts against me to conspire,
 Who gave consent to steal away my
 heart,
 And set my breast his lodging on a fire.
 Well, well, my friends, when beggars grow thus bold,
 No marvel then though charity grow cold.

SONNET.

If he, from heaven that filch'd that living fire,
 Condemn'd by Jove to endless torment be,
 I greatly marvel how you still go free,
 That far beyond Prometheus did aspire:
 The fire he stole, although of heavenly
 kind,
 Which from above he craftily did take,
 Of lifeless clods, us living men to make,
 He did bestow in temper of the mind:
 But you broke into heav'n's immortal
 store,

Where virtue, honor, wit, and beauty lay;
Which taking thence you have escap'd
away,
Yet stand as free as e'er you did before:
Yet old Prometheus punish'd for his rape:
Thus poor thieves suffer, when the greater 'scape.

KING HENRY TO FAIR ROSAMOND.

THE little flow'rs dropping their honey'd
dew,
Which (as thou writ'st) do weep upon thy shoe,
Not for thy fault (sweet Rosamond) do moan,
Only lament that thou so soon art gone:
For if thy foot touch hemlock as it goes,
That hemlock's made far sweeter than the rose.

My camp resounds with fearful shocks of war,
Yet in my breast more dang'rous conflicts are;
Yet is my signal to the battle's sound
The blessed name of beauteous Rosamond.
Accursed be that heart, that tongue, that
breath,
Should think, should speak, or whisper of thy death:
For in one smile or lower from thy sweet
eye
Consists my life, my hope, my victory.
Sweet Woodstock, where my Rosamond doth rest,
Be blest in her, in whom thy king is blest:
For though in France awhile my body
be,
My heart remains (dear paradise) in
thee.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND
OF HAWTHORNDEN.

1585-1649.

[WILLIAM DRUMMOND was born at the manor-house of Hawthornden, near Edinburgh, on December 13, 1585, and died there December 4, 1649. His chief poetical works are: Tears on the Death of Mæliades (Prince Henry), 1613; Poems, 1616; Forth Feasting, a panegyricke to the King's most excellent Majestie, 1617; Flowers of Sion, 1623; The Entertainment of the high and mighty monarch Charles, 1633; The Exequies of the Honourable Sir Anthony Alexander, Knight, 1638. Besides these he wrote innumerable political pamphlets, etc., and a considerable historical work. More important are his well-known Conversations with Ben Jonson, of which an authentic copy was discovered by Mr. David Laing and printed by him in 1832. A unique copy of the Poems, printed on one side of the paper only, and containing Drummond's autograph corrections, is in the Bodleian Library. It varies most curiously from the later editions.]

SUMMONS TO LOVE.

PHOEBUS, arise!
And paint the sable skies
With azure, white, and red:
Rouse Memnon's mother from her Tithon's bed
That she may thy career with roses
spread:

The nightingales thy coming each where
sing:
Make an eternal spring!
Give life to this dark world which lieth
dead;
Spread forth thy golden hair
In larger locks than thou wast wont
before,
And emperor-like decore

With diadem of pearl thy temples fair :
Chase hence the ugly night
Which serves but to make dear thy glorious light.

— This is that happy morn,
That day, long-wishéd day
Of all my life so dark, (If cruel stars have not my ruin sworn And fates my hopes betray),
Which, purely white, deserves
An everlasting diamond should it mark.
This is the morn should bring unto this grove

My Love, to hear and recompense my love.

Fair King, who all preserves,
But show thy blushing beams,
And thou two sweeter eyes
Shalt see than those which by Penéus' streams

Did once thy heart surprise.
Now, Flora, deck thyself in fairest guise :

If that ye winds would hear
A voice surpassing far Amphion's lyre,
Your furious chiding stay;
Let Zephyr only breathe,
And with her tresses play.

— The winds all silent are,
And Phoebus in his chair
Ensaffroning sea and air Makes vanish every star :

Night like a drunkard reels
Beyond the hills, to shun his flaming wheels :

The fields with flowers are deck'd in every hue,
The clouds with orient gold spangle their blue;

Here is the pleasant place —
And nothing wanting is, save She, alas !

TO A NIGHTINGALE.

SWEET bird, that sing'st away the early hours

Of winters past, or coming, void of care,
Well pleaséd with delights which present are,

Fair seasons, budding sprays, sweet-smelling flowers :

To rocks, to springs, to rills, from leafy bowers

Thou thy Creator's goodness dost declare,

And what dear gifts on thee he did not spare, —

A stain to human sense in sin that lowers.

What soul can be so sick, which by thy songs

(Attired in sweetness) sweetly is not driven

Quite to forget Earth's turmoils, spite, and wrongs,

And lift a reverend eye and thought to Heaven?

Sweet, artless songster, thou my mind dost raise

To airs of spheres, yes, and to angels' lays.

THE LESSONS OF NATURE.

Of this fair volume which we World do name,

If we the sheets and leaves could turn with care,

Of him who it corrects, and did it frame,
We clear might read the art and wisdom rare :

Find out his power which wildest powers doth tame,

His providence extending everywhere,
His justice which proud rebels doth not spare,

In every page, no period of the same.

But silly we, like foolish children, rest
Well pleased with color'd vellum, leaves of gold,

Fair dangling ribbands, leaving what is best,

On the great writer's sense ne'er taking hold;

Or if by chance we stay our minds on aught,

It is some picture on the margin wrought.

A GOOD THAT NEVER SATISFIES THE MIND.

A GOOD that never satisfies the mind,
 A beauty fading like the April flow'rs,
 A sweet with floods of gall, that runs combin'd
 A pleasure passing ere in thought made ours,
 An honor that more fickle is than wind,
 A glory at opinion's frown that low'rs,
 A treasury which bankrupt time devours,

A knowledge than grave ignorance more blind,
 A vain delight our equals to command,
 A style of greatness, in effect a dream,
 A swelling thought of holding sea and
 land,
 A servile lot, deck'd with a pompous
 name,
 Are the strange ends we toil for here
 below,
 Till wisest death make us our errors know.

JOHN DONNE.

1573-1631.

[BORN 1573, in London; his mother being a descendant of Sir Thomas More. He studied both at Oxford and Cambridge, and also at Lincoln's Inn; travelled in Italy and Spain, "and returned perfect in their languages." He was afterwards in the service of Lord Chancellor Ellesmere and others, and in 1610 was persuaded by James I. "to enter into sacred orders." In 1621 the king made him Dean of St. Paul's, and he held other benefices. He died in 1631. Izaak Walton's celebrated Life was prefixed to his Eighty Sermons, fol., 1640; and this Life asserts that "most of his poems were written before the twentieth year of his age." The Poems were collected and first published posthumously in 1633; but Harl. MS. 5110 (British Museum), is entitled, "Jhon Dunne, his Satyres anno domini 1593."]

SONG.

SWEETEST love, I do not go
 For weariness of thee,
 Nor in hope the world can show
 A fitter love for me;

But since that I Must die at last, 'tis best
 Thus to use myself in jest
 By feigned deaths to die.

Yesternight the Sun went hence,
 And yet is here to-day,
 He hath no desire nor sense,
 Nor half so short a way;

Then fear not me,
 But believe that I shall make Hastier journeys, since I take More wings and spurs than he.

O, how feeble is man's power,
 That if good fortune fall,
 Cannot ado another hour,
 Nor a lost hour recall!

But come bad chance,
 And we join to't our strength,
 And we teach it art and length,
 Itself o'er us t' advance.

When thou sigh'st thou sigh'st not wind,

But sigh'st my soul away;
 When thou weep'st unkindly kind,
 My life's blood doth decay.

It cannot be
 That thou lov'st me, as thou say'st;
 If in thine my life thou waste,
 Thou art the life of me.

Let not thy divining heart
 Forethink me any ill,
 Destiny may take my part
 And may thy fears fulfil;

But think that we Are but laid aside to sleep:
 They who one another keep Alive, ne'er parted be.

FROM "VERSES TO SIR HENRY WOTTON."

BE then thine own home, and in thyself
dwell;
Inn anywhere; continuance maketh
Hell.

And seeing the snail, which everywhere
doth roam,

Carrying his own house still, is still at
home:

Follow (for he's easy pac'd) this snail,
Be thine own palace, or the world's thy jail.

But in the world's sea do not like cork
sleep

Upon the water's face, nor in the deep Sink like a lead without a line: but as Fishes glide, leaving no print where they pass,

Nor making sound, so closely thy course
go;

Let men dispute whether thou breathe or no:

Only in this be no Galenist. To make Court's hot ambitions wholesome, do not take

A dram of country's dulness; do not add Correctives, but as chymics purge the bad.

But, sir, I advise not you, I rather do Say o'er those lessons which I learn'd
of you:

Whom, free from Germany's schisms, and lightness

Of France, and fair Italie's faithlessness,

Having from these suck'd all they had of worth

And brought home that faith which you carry'd forth,

I thoroughly love: but if myself I've won
To know my rules, I have, and you have, Donne.

THE MESSAGE.

SEND home my long stray'd eyes to me,
Which, oh! too long have dwelt on thee:
But if they there have learned such ill,
Such forc'd fashions

And false passions,

That they be

Made by thee

Fit for no good sight, keep them still.

Send home my harmless heart again,
Which no unworthy thought could stain;
But if it be taught by thine

To make jestings

Of protestings,

And break both

Word and oath,

Keep it still. 'tis none of mine.

Yet send me back my heart and eyes,

That I may know and see thy lies,

And may laugh and joy when thou

Art in anguish,

And dost languish

For some one

That will none,

Or prove as false as thou dost now.

SIR EDWARD DYER.

[BORN about 1550. at Sharpham, near Glastonbury; educated at Balliol College, Oxford; ambassador to Denmark, 1589; knighted, 1596; died, 1607.]

TO PHILLIS THE FAIR SHEP-HERDESS.

MY Phillis hath the morning Sun,

At first to look upon her:

And Phillis hath morn-waking birds,
Her rising still to honor.

My Phillis hath prime feathered flowers,

That smile when she treads on them:

And Phillis hath a gallant flock

That leaps since she doth own them.

But Phillis hath too hard a heart,

Alas, that she should have it!

It yields no mercy to desert
Nor grace to those that crave it.

Sweet Sun, when thou look'st on,
Pray her regard my moan!
Sweet birds when you sing to her
To yield some pity woo her!
Sweet flowers that she treads on,
Tell her, her beauty dreads one.
And if in life her love she nill agree me, Pray her before I die, she will come see
me.

MY MIND TO ME A KINGDOM IS.

My mind to me a kingdom is,
Such present joys therein I find,
That it excels all other bliss
That earth affords or grows by kind: Though much I want which most would
have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

No princely pomp, no wealthy store,
No force to win the victory,
No wily wit to salve a sore,
No shape to feed a loving eye;
To none of these I yield as thrall:
For why? My mind doth serve for all.

I see how plenty [surfeits] oft,
And hasty climbers soon do fall;
I see that those which are aloft
Mishap doth threaten most of all;
They get with toil, they keep with fear;
Such cares my mind could never bear.

Content to live, this is my stay;
I seek no more than may suffice;
I press to bear no haughty sway;
Look, what I lack my mind supplies:
Lo, thus I triumph like a king,
Content with that my mind doth bring.

Some have too much, yet still do crave;
I little have, and seek no more.
They are but poor, though much they
have,
And I am rich with little store;
They poor, I rich; they beg, I give;
They lack, I leave; they pine, I live.

I laugh not at another's loss;
I grudge not at another's pain;
No worldly waves my mind can toss;
My state at one doth still remain:
I fear no foe, I fawn no friend;
I loathe not life, nor dread my end.

Some weigh their pleasure by their lust,
Their wisdom by their rage of will;
Their treasure is their only trust;
A cloaked craft their store of skill:
But all the pleasure that I find
Is to maintain a quiet mind.

My wealth is health and perfect ease:
My conscience clear my chief defence;
I neither seek by bribes to please,
Nor by deceit to breed offence:
Thus do I live; thus will I die;
Would all did so as well as I!

EDMUND SPENSER.

1552-1598-9.

[EDMUND SPENSER was born in London about 1552. He was educated at Merchant Taylors' School: his first poetical performances, translations from Petrarch and Du Bellay, published without his name in a miscellaneous collection, belong to the time of his leaving school in 1569. From that year to 1576 he was at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. In 1579 he was in London, acquainted with Philip Sidney, and in Lord Leicester's household. In 1580 was published, but without his name, The Shepheards Calender; and in the autumn of that year he went to Ireland with Lord Grey of Wilton, as his private secretary. The remainder of his life, with the exception of short visits to England, was spent in Ireland, where he held various subordinate offices, and where he settled on a grant of forfeited land at Kilcolman, in the county of Cork. In 1589 he accompanied Sir Walter Raleigh to London, and in 1590 published the first three books of The Faerie Queene. In 1591 he returned to Ireland, and a miscellaneous collection of compositions of earlier and later dates (Complaints) was published in London. In June, 1594, he married, and the next year, 1595, he again visited London, and in Jan., 1595-6, published the second instalment of The Faerie Queene (iv-vi). With the same date, 1595, were published his Colin Clouts Come Home again, an account of his visit to the Court in 1589-90, and his Amoretti Sonnets, and an Epithalamion, relating to his courtship and marriage. At the end of 1598 his house was sacked and burnt by the Munster rebels, and he returned in great distress to London. He died at Westminster, Jan. 16, 1598-9, and was buried in the Abbey.]

THE MINISTRY OF ANGELS.

AND is there care in Heaven? And is there love
In heavenly spirits to these creatures base,
That may compassion of their evils
move?
There is:—else much more wretched were the case
Of men than beasts: but O! th' exceeding grace
Of highest God, that loves his creatures so,
And all his works with mercy doth embrace,
That blessed angels he sends to and fro,
To serve to wicked man, to serve his foe!

How oft do they their silver bowers leave
To come to succor us that succor want!
How oft do they with golden pinions
cleave
The flitting skies, like flying pursuivant, Against foul fiends to aid us militant!
They for us fight, they watch and duly ward,
And their bright squadrons round about us plant;
And all for love, and nothing for reward:
O, why should heavenly God to men have such regard?

UNA AND THE LION.

ONE day, nigh weary of the irksome way,
From her unhasty beast she did alight;
And on the grass her dainty limbs did lay
In secret shadow, far from all men's
sight;
From her fair head her fillet she undight,
And laid her stole aside: her angel's
face,

As the great eye of Heaven, shined
bright,
And made a sunshine in the shady place;
Did never mortal eye behold such heavenly grace.

It fortunéd, out of the thickest wood
A ramping lion rushéd suddenly,
Hunting full greedy after salvage blood:
Soon as the royal virgin he did spy,
With gaping mouth at her ran greedily,
To have at once devoured her tender corse:
But to the prey when as he drew more nigh,
His bloody rage assuagéd with remorse,
And, with the sight amazed, forgot his furious force.

Instead thereof he kissed her weary feet,
And licked her lily hands with fawning
tongue;
As he her wrongéd innocence did weet.
O how can beauty master the most strong,
And simple truth subdue avenging wrong!
Whose yielded pride and proud submission,
Still dreading death, when she had marked long,
Her heart 'gan melt in great compassion;
And drizzling tears did shed for pure affection.

"The lion, lord of every beast in field," Quoth she, "his princely puissance doth abate,
And mighty proud to humble weak does yield,
Forgetful of the hungry rage, which late
Him pricked, in pity of my sad estate:—

But he, my lion, and my noble lord,
How does he find in cruel heart to hate Her, that him lov'd, and ever most adored
Is the god of my life? why hath he me abhorred?"

Redounding tears did choke th' end of her plaint,
Which softly echoed from the neighbor
wood;
And, sad to see her sorrowful constraint,
The kingly beast upon her gazing stood;
With pity calmed, down fell his angry mood.

At last, in close heart shutting up her
pain,
Arose the virgin born of heavenly brood,
And to her snowy palfrey got again,
To seek her stray'd champion if she might attain.

The lion would not leave her desolate,
But with her went along, as a strong guard
Of her chaste person, and a faithful mate
Of her sad troubles and misfortunes hard:
Still, when she slept, he kept both watch and ward;
And, when she waked, he waited diligent,
With humble service to her will prepared:
From her fair eyes he took commandé-
ment,
And ever by her looks conceived her intent.

SWEET IS THE ROSE.

SWEET is the rose, but grows upon a brere;
Sweet is the juniper, but sharp his bough;
Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh
near;
Sweet is the firbloom, but his branches rough;
Sweet is the cyprus, but his rind is tough;

Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill;
Sweet is the broom flower, but yet sour enough;
And sweet is moly, but his root is ill;
So, every sweet, with sour is tempered
still,

That maketh it be coveted the more:
For easy things that may be got at will Most sorts of men do set but little store.
Why then should I account of little pain,
That endless pleasure shall unto me gain.

THE HERMITAGE.

A LITTLE lowly hermitage it was,
Down in a dale, hard by a forest's side,
Far from resort of people that did pass
In travel to and fro: a little wide
There was an holy chapel edifyde, Wherein the hermit duly went to say
His holy things each morn and eventide;
Thereby a crystal stream did gently play,
Which from a sacred fountain welled forth alway.

THE RED CROSS KNIGHT.

A GENTLE knight was pricking on the plain,
Yclad in mighty arms and silver shield, Wherein old dints of deep wounds did
remain,
The cruel marks of many a bloody field;
Yet arms till that time did he never wield:
His angry steed did chide his foaming bit,
As much disdaining to the curb to yield:
Full jolly knight he seem'd, and fair did sit,
As one for knightly guists and fierce encounters fit.

And on his breast a bloody cross he bore,
The dear remembrance of his dying
Lord,
For whose sweet sake that glorious badge he wore,

And dead, as living, ever him ador'd:
 Upon his shield the like was also scor'd,
 For sovereign hope, which in his help he had.
 Right, faithful, true he was in deed and word:
 But of his cheer did seem too solemn sad:
 Yet nothing did he dread, but ever was ydrad.

Upon a great adventure he was bond,
 That greatest Gloriana to him gave,
 (That greatest glorious Queen of Faery Lond)
 To win him worship, and her grace to have,
 Which of all earthly things he most did crave.
 And ever, as he rode, his heart did yearn
 To prove his puissance in battle brave;
 Upon his foe, and his new force to learn;
 Upon his foe, a dragon horrible and stern.

THE TRUE WOMAN.

THRICE happy she that is so well assur'd
 Unto herself, and settled so in heart,
 That neither will for better be allur'd, Ne fears to worse with any chance to start,
 But like a steady ship doth strongly part
 The raging waves, and keeps her course aright;
 Ne ought for tempest doth from it depart,
 Ne ought for fairer weather's false de-
 light.
 Such self-assurance need not fear the spight
 Of grudging foes, ne favor seek of friends;
 But in the stay of her own stedfast
 might,
 Neither to one herself or other bends.
 Most happy she that most assur'd doth
 rest,
 But he most happy who such one loves best.

THE SEASONS.

So forth issued the Seasons of the year;
 First lusty Spring, all dight in leaves and
 flowers
 That freshly budded, and new blossoms did bear,
 In which a thousand birds had built their bowers,
 That sweetly sung to call forth para-mours;
 And in his hand a javelin he did bear,
 And on his head (as fit for warlike stours)
 A gilt engraven morion he did wear,
 That as some did him love, so others did him fear.

Then came the jolly Summer, being dight
 In a thin silken cassock colored green
 That was unlined all, to be more light,
 And on his head a garland well beseen
 He wore, from which, as he had chafed
 been,
 The sweat did drop, and in his hand he bore
 A bow and shaft, as he in forest green
 Had hunted late the libbard or the boar,
 And now would bathe his limbs, with labor heated sore.

Then came the Autumn, all in yellow clad,
 As though he joyed in his plenteous
 store,
 Laden with fruits that made him laugh, full glad
 That he had banished Hunger, which to fore
 Had by the belly oft him pinched sore;
 Upon his head a wreath, that was en-roled
 With ears of corn of every sort, he bore,
 And in his hand a sickle he did hold,
 To reap the ripened fruits the which the earth had yold.

Lastly came Winter, clothed all in frize, Chattering his teeth for cold that did him chill, Whilst on his hoary beard his breath did freeze,

And the dull drops that from his purpled bill
As from a limbeck did adown distil;
In his right hand a tipped staff he held,
With which his feeble steps he stayed
still,
For he was faint with cold and weak with eld
That scarce his loosed limbs he able was to weld.

LOVE IN ABSENCE.

LIKE as the culver on the bared bough Sits mourning for the absence of her mate,
And in her songs sends many a wishful vow
For his return, that seems to linger late;
So I alone, now left disconsolate,
Mourn to myself the absence of my love,
And wandering here and there all desolate,
Seek with my plaints to match that mournful dove.
Ne joy of ought that under heaven doth hove
Can comfort me, but her own joyous
sight,
Whose sweet aspect both god and man can move,
In her unspotted pleasance to delight:
Dark is my day whiles her fair light I miss,
And dead my life, that wants such lively
bliss.

ASTROPHEL (SIR PHILIP SID-NEY).

“WOODS, hills, and rivers, now are desolate,
Sith he is gone, the which them all did
grace;
And all the fields do wail their widow
state,
Sith death their fairest flower did late deface:
The fairest flower in field that ever grew
Was Astrophel; that was we all may rue.

“What cruel hand of cursed foe unknown Hath cropt the stalk which bore so fair a flower?
Untimely cropt, before it well were grown,
And clean defaced in untimely hour;
Great loss to all that ever him did see,
Great loss to all, but greatest loss to me.

“Break now your girlonds, O ye shepherds’ lasses!
Sith the fair flower which them adorn’d is gone;
The flower which them adorn’d is gone to ashes,
Never again let lass put girlond on:
Instead of girlond wear sad cypress now,
And bitter elder broken from the bough.

“Ne ever sing the love-lays which he made;
Who ever made such lays of love as he?
Ne ever read the riddles which he said Unto yourselves to make you merry glee:
Your merry glee is now laid all abed,
Your merry maker now, alas! is dead.

“Death, the devourer of all world’s de-
light,
Hath robbed you, and reft fro me my
joy;
Both you and me, and all the world, he quite Hath robb’d of joyance, and left sad annoy.
Joy of the world, and shepherds’ pride was he;
Shepherds, hope never like again to see.

“O Death! that hast us of such riches reft,
Tell us, at least, what hast thou with it done?
What is become of him whose flower here left
Is but the shadow of his likeness gone?
Scarce like the shadow of that which he was,
Nought like, but that he like a shade did pass.

"But that immortal spirit, which was deck'd
With all the dowries of celestial grace,
By sovereign choice from th' heavenly quires select,
And lineally deriv'd from angels' race,
O what is now of it become? aread:
Aye me! can so divine a thing be dead:

"Ah! no: it is not dead, ne can it die,
But lives for aye in blissful paradise,
Where like a new-born babe it soft doth lie
In bed of lilies, wrapt in tender wise,
And compass'd all about with roses
sweet,
And dainty violets from head to feet.

"There thousand birds, all of celestial brood,
To him do sweetly carol day and night,
And with strange notes, of him well understood,
Lull him to sleep in angel-like delight;
Whilst in sweet dream to him presented be Immortal beauties, which no eye may see.

"But he them sees, and takes exceeding pleasure
Of their divine aspects, appearing plain,
And kindling love in him beyond all measure;
Sweet love, still joyous, never feeling
pain;
For what so goodly form he there doth
see
He may enjoy, from jealous rancor free.

"There liveth he in everlasting bliss,
Sweet Spirit! never fearing more to die,
Ne dreading harm from any foes of his,
Ne fearing savage beasts' more cruelty, Whilst we here wretches wail his private lack,
And with vain vows do often call him back.

"But live thou there still, happy, happy Spirit!
And give us leave thee here thus to lament;

Not thee that dost thy heaven's joy inherit,
But our own selves, that here in dole are drent.
Thus do we weep and wail, and wear
our eyes,
Mourning in others our own miseries."

THE GARDEN OF BEAUTY.

COMING to kiss her lips (such grace I found),
Me seem'd I smelt a garden of sweet flow'rs,
That dainty odors from them threw
around,
For damsels fit to deck their lovers' bow'rs.
Her lips did smell like unto gilliflowers,
Her ruddy cheeks like unto roses red,
Her snowy brows like budded bellamoures,
Her lovely eyes like pinks but newly spred,
Her goodly bosom like a strawberry bed,
Her neck like to a bunch of cullam-
bines,
Her breast like lilies ere their leaves be
shed,
Her nipples like young blossom'd jessamines:
Such fragrant flow'rs do give most odor-ous smell,
But her sweet odor did them all excel.

THE BRIDAL DAY.

"OPEN the temple-gates unto my love, Open them wide that she may enter in,
And all the posts adorn as doth behove,
And all the pillars deck with garlands trim,
For to receive this saint with honor
due,
That cometh in to you.
With trembling steps and humble reverence
She cometh in before th' Almighty's view:

virgins! learn obedience,
 e come into these holy places,
 e your proud faces.
 up to th' high altar, that she d ceremonies there partake, do endless matrimony make;

 e roaring organs loudly play s of the Lord, in lively notes, s with hollow throats sters the joyous anthems sing, the woods may answer, and echo ring.

whiles she before the altar
 s,
 the holy priest that to her
 s, es her with his two happy
 s,
 the roses flush up in her
 s! ure snow, with goodly vermil son dy'd in grain, the angels, which continually sacred altar do remain, air service, and about her fly, ng in her face, that seems fair

 they on it stare;
 ad eyes, still fast'ned on the id,
 ned with goodly modesty,
 ers not one look to glance

ay let in a little thought unl.
 h ye, Love! to give to me
 hand,
 e of all your band?
 weet angels! Alleluia sing, the woods may answer, and
 echo ring.

is done: bring home the bride
 e the triumph of our victory:
 ne with you the glory of her nce bring her, and with jollity.

 man more joyful day than this,

Whom Heaven would heap with bliss.
 Make feast, therefore, now all this livelong day,

This day for ever to me holy is;
 Pour out the wine without restraint or stay,

Pour not by cups, but by the belly-full:
 Pour out to all that wull,
 And sprinkle all the posts and walls with wine,

That they may sweat, and drunken be withal:

Crown ye god Bacchus with a coronal, And Hymen also crown with wreaths of vine,

And let the Graces dance unto the rest,
 For they can do it best,

The whiles the maidens do their carol
 sing,

To which the woods shall answer, and their echo ring.

"Ring ye the bells, ye young men of the town,

And leave your wonted labors for this
 day;

This day is holy; do you write it down,
 That ye for ever it remember may.

"Now cease, ye damsels! your delights forepast,

Enough it is that all the day was yours;
 Now day is done, and night is nighing

fast,
 Now bring the bride into the bridal
 bowers;

Now night is come, now soon her dis-
 array,

And in her bed her lay;
 Lay her in lilies and in violets,

And silken curtains over her display,
 And odor'd sheets, and arras coverlets.

Behold how goodly my fair love does
 lie,

In proud humility;
 Like unto Maia, when as Jove her took

In Tempe, lying on the flow'ry grass,
 'Twixt sleep and wake, after she weary was

 With bathing in the Acidalian brook:

Now it is night, ye damsels may be gone,
 And leave my love alone,

And leave likewise your former lays to
sing;
The woods no more shall answer, nor your echo ring.

THE POWER OF POETRY TO CONFER FAME.

ONE day I wrote her name upon the strand,
But came the waves and washed it
away;
Again I wrote it with a second hand,
But came the tide, and made my pains his prey.

Vain man! said she, that doth in vain assay

A mortal thing so to immortalize,
For I myself shall like to this decay,
And eke my name be wiped out like wise.

Not so, quoth I, let baser things devise To die in dust, but you shall live by fame:

My verse your virtues rare shall eternize,
And in the heavens write your glorious
name,

Where, when as Death shall all the world subdue,
Our love shall live, and later life renew.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

1554-1586.

[PHILIP SIDNEY was the eldest son of the well-known Sir Henry Sidney, President of Wales and Lord Deputy of Ireland under Elizabeth, and through his mother, Lady Mary Dudley, grandson of the Duke of Northumberland executed in 1553, and nephew of Lord Leicester. He was born at Penshurst, Nov. 29, 1554; he entered Shrewsbury School, Oct. 17, 1564, on the same day as his friend and biographer, Fulke Greville, afterwards Lord Brooke; and in 1568 he was sent to Christ Church, Oxford. From May 1572 to May 1575 Sidney was abroad, in France, Germany, and Italy; sheltered in Sir Francis Walsingham's house in Paris on the night of St. Bartholomew, and spending a considerable time at Frankfort with Hubert Languet, the reformer, afterwards his constant correspondent. In 1575 he appeared at Elizabeth's Court, and took part in the Kenilworth progress. In 1577 he was sent as English ambassador to Rodolph II., at Prague, returning the same year. He seems to have made acquaintance with Harvey and Spenser in 1578, and in 1580, while he was in retirement at Penshurst, after his letter of remonstrance to the Queen on the Anjou match, he and his sister, the well-known Countess of Pembroke, produced a joint poetical version of the Psalms, and the Arcadia was begun (published 1590). He returned to Court in the autumn of 1580, and the Astrophel and Stella sonnets (published 1591) probably date from the following year. The Apologie for Poetrie was written in or about 1581 (the first known edition is that of London, 1595). Sidney was knighted in the same year. In 1583 he married Frances, daughter of Sir Francis Walsingham, and was for the second time a member of Parliament. In Nov., 1584, he was appointed governor of Flushing, and nearly two years later, on Sept. 22, 1586, received his fatal wound at the battle of Zutphen. A complete edition of Sidney's poems was published by the Rev. A. B. Grosart, London, 1877.

SONNETS FROM ASTROPHEL AND STELLA.

I.

LOVING in truth, and fain in verse my love to show
That she, dear she, might take some pleasure of my pain, — Pleasure might cause her read, reading might make her know, Knowledge might pity win, and pity grace obtain, —

I sought fit words to paint the blackest face of woe;

Studying inventions fine, her wits to entertain,

Oft turning others' leaves, to see if thence would flow

Some fresh and fruitful showers upon my sun-burn'd brain.

But words came halting forth, wanting Invention's stay;

Invention, Nature's child, fled step-dame Study's blows;

And others' feet still seem'd but strangers in my way.
 Thus, great with child to speak, and helpless in my throes, Biting my truant pen, beating myself for spite;
 Fool, said my Muse to me, look in thy heart and write.

5.

It is most true that eyes are form'd to serve
 The inward light, and that the heavenly part Ought to be King, from whose rules who do swerve,
 Rebels to nature, strive for their own smart.
 It is most true, what we call Cupid's dart
 An image is, which for ourselves we carve,
 And, fools, adore in temple of our heart,
 Till that good god make church and churchmen starve :
 True, that true beauty virtue is indeed,
 Whereof this beauty can be but a shade,
 Which, elements with mortal mixture breed :
 True, that on earth we are but pilgrims made,
 And should in soul up to our country move :
 True, and yet true — that I must Stella love.

31.

With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the skies !
 How silently, and with how wan a face !
 What, may it be that even in heavenly place
 That busy archer his sharp arrows tries !
 Sure, if that long-with-love-acquainted eyes
 Can judge of love, thou feel'st a lover's case,
 I read it in thy looks ; thy languisht grace,
 To me, that feel the like, thy state describes.

Then, even of fellowship, O Moon, tell me,
 Is constant love deem'd there but want of wit ?
 Are beauties there as proud as here they be ?
 Do they above love to be lov'd, and yet
 Those lovers scorn whom that love did possess ?
 Do they call virtue there ungratefulness ?

32.

Morpheus, the lively son of deadly Sleep,
 Witness of life to them that living die,
 A prophet oft, and oft an history,
 A poet eke, as humors fly or creep ;
 Since thou in me so sure a power dost keep,
 That never I with clos'd-up sense do lie,
 But by thy work my Stella I descry,
 Teaching blind eyes both how to smile and weep ;
 Vouchsafe, of all acquaintance, this to tell,
 Whence hast thou ivory, rubies, pearl, and gold,
 To show her skin, lips, teeth, and head so well ?
 Fool ! answers he ; no Indies such treasures hold ;
 But from thy heart, while my sire charmeth thee,
 Sweet Stella's image I do steal to me.

87.

When I was forced from Stella ever dear —
 Stella, food of my thoughts, heart of my heart —
 Stella, whose eyes make all my tempests clear —
 By Stella's laws of duty to depart ;
 Alas, I found that she with me did smart ;
 I saw that tears did in her eyes appear ;
 I saw that sighs her sweetest lips did part,
 And her sad words my sadden'd sense did hear.
 For me, I wept to see pearls scattered so ;

I sighed hersighs, and wailed for her woe;
Yet swam in joy, such love in her was seen.

Thus, while th' effect most bitter was to
me,
And nothing then the cause more sweet could be,
I had been vexed, if vexed I had not been.

90.

Stella, think not that I by verse seek fame,
Who seek, who hope, who love, who live but thee;
Thine eyes my pride, thy lips mine history:
If thou praise not, all other praise is shame.
Nor so ambitious am I, as to frame
A nest for my young praise in laurel tree:
In truth, I swear I wish not there should
be Graved in my epitaph a poet's name.
Nor, if I would, could I just title make,
That any laud thereof to me should grow,
Without my plumes from others' wings
I take:
For nothing from my wit or will doth flow,

Since all my words thy beauty doth en-dite,
And love doth hold my hand, and makes me write.

107.

Stella, since thou so right a princess art
Of all the powers which life bestows on
me,
That ere by them ought undertaken be,
They first resort unto that sovereign
part;
Sweet, for a while give respite to my
heart,
Which pants as though it still should leap to thee:
And on my thoughts give thy lieuten-ancy
To this great cause, which needs both use and art.
And as a queen, who from her presence sends Whom she employs, dismiss from thee my wit,
Till it have wrought what thy own will attends,
On servants' shame oft masters' blame doth sit:
O let not fools in me thy works reprove,
And scorning say, "See what it is to love!"

JOHN LYLY.

1554-1606.

[LITTLE is known of Lyly's life. He was born in Kent, in 1554, studied at Magdalen College, Oxford, was patronized by Lord Burghley, and wrote plays for the Child players at the Chapel Royal,—the "aery of children," alluded to in Hamlet, "little eyases, that cry out on the top of the question and are most tyrannically clapped for't." He died in 1606. His Euphues was published, first part in 1579, second part in 1580.]

CUPID AND CAMPASPE.

[From Alexander and Campaspe.]

CUPID and my Campaspe play'd
At cards for kisses; Cupid paid:
He stakes his quiver, bow and arrows,
His mother's doves, and team of sparrows;
Loses them too; then down he throws
The coral of his lip, the rose

Growing on's cheek (but none knows how),
With these, the crystal of his brow,
And then the dimple of his chin;
All these did my Campaspe win.
At last he set her both his eyes,
She won, and Cupid blind did rise.
O Love! has she done this to thee?
What shall, alas! become of me?

THOMAS LODGE.

1556-1625.

THOMAS LODGE was born in Lincolnshire about 1556, entered Trinity College, Oxford, in 1572, and died of the plague at Low Leyton, in Essex, in 1625. The most important of his works are, Scilla's Metamorphosis, 1589; Rosalynde Euphues' Golden Legacy, 1590; Phyllis, 1593; A Fig for Momus, 1595; A Margarite of America, 1596.]

ROSALIND'S COMPLAINT.

in my bosom, like a bee,
 he suck his sweet;
 with his wings he plays with me,
 and with his feet.
 In mine eyes he makes his nest,
 and amidst my tender breast;
 kisses are his daily feast,
 yet he robs me of my rest:
 O wanton, will you?

If I sleep, then pierceth he with pretty slight, and makes his pillow of my knee in a livelong night.
 O I the lute, he tunes the string;
 music plays if I but sing;
 and steals my every lovely thing, cruel, he my heart doth sting:
 O wanton, will you?

Else I with roses every day
 Will whip you hence,
 And bind you when you long to play,
 For your offence.
 I'll shut my eyes to keep you in,
 I'll make you fast it for your sin,
 I'll count your power not worth a pin:
 Alas! what hereby shall I win,
 If he gainsay me?

What if I beat the wanton boy
 With many a rod?
 He will repay me with annoy,
 Because a god.
 Then sit thou softly on my knee,
 And let thy bower my bosom be;
 Lurk in my eyes, I like of thee,
 O Cupid! so thou pity me;
 Spare not, but play thee.

ROBERT GREENE.

1560-1592.

ROBERT GREENE was born at Norwich, probably in 1560. He was a graduate of St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1578, but took his degree of M.A. five years later at Clare Hall. After this he travelled in Italy and Spain, and, returning to London, gained his living as a playwright and leeteer. He died in Dowgate, Sept. 3, 1592. His first work was the novel of Mamillia, 1580, which was followed by a rapid succession of tales, poems, plays, and pamphlets. His most notable lyrics appeared in Menaphon, 1587; Never Too Late, 1590; and The Mourning Tricke, 1590.]

A DEATH-BED LAMENT.

LIVING world, that with alluring toys made my life the subject of thy scorn, scornest now to lend thy fading joys, at-length my life, whom friends have left forlorn;
 well are they that die ere they be born,
 never see thy slights, which few men shun,
 unawares they helpless are undone!

O that a year were granted me to live,
 And for that year my former wits restored!
 What rules of life, what counsel I would give,
 How should my sin with sorrow be deplored!
 But I must die of every man abhorred:
 Time loosely spent will not again be won;
 My time is loosely spent, and I undone.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL.

1562-1595.

[BORN at Horsham St. Faith's, Norfolk, about 1562; entered the Society of Jesus, 1578, at Rome; accompanied Father Garnet to England, was captured; and was executed at Tyburn, 1594-5. St. Peter's Complaint, with other Poems, was first published in 1595; Maconiae in the same year; Marie Magdalen's Funerall Teares, 1609.]

TIMES GO BY TURNS.

THE lopped tree in time may grow again;
Most naked plants renew both fruit and flower;
The sorest wight may find release of pain,
The driest soil suck in some moist'- ning shower;
Times go by turns and chances change
by course,
From foul to fair, from better hap to worse.

The sea of Fortune doth not ever flow,
She draws her favors to the lowest ebb;
Her tide hath equal times to come and go,
Her loom doth weave the fine and coarsest web;
No joy so great but runneth to an end,
No hap so hard but may in time amend.

Not always fall of leaf nor ever spring,
No endless night, yet not eternal day;
The saddest birds a season find to sing,
The roughest storm a calm may soon allay;
Thus with succeeding turns God tempereth all,
That man may hope to rise, yet fear to fall.

A chance may win that by mischance was lost;
The well that holds no great, takes little fish;
In some things all, in all things none are cross'd,
Few all they need, but none have all they wish;
Unmeddled joys here to no man befall,
Who least hath some, who most hath never all.

THOMAS DEKKER.

[In a tract dated 1637, Dekker speaks of himself as a man of threescore years. This is the only clue to his age that has been discovered. He was born in London, and apparently lived all his life there, as playwright, pamphleteer, and miscellaneous literary hack. His plays were published separately at various dates from 1600 to 1636. He frequently worked with other dramatists, Webster, Middleton, Massinger, Ford, etc.]

SWEET CONTENT.

ART thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?

Oh, sweet content!

Art thou rich, yet is thy mind perplexed?

Oh, punishment!

Dost thou laugh to see how fools are vexed

To add to golden numbers, golden numbers?

O, sweet content!

Work apace, apace, apace, apace;

Honest labor bears a lovely face;

Then hey noney, noney, hey noney, noney.

Canst drink the waters of the crisped spring?

O, sweet content!

Swimmest thou in wealth, yet sink'st in thine own tears?

O, punishment!

Then he that patiently want's burden
bears,

No burden bears, but is a king, a king!

O, sweet content!

Work apace, apace, &c.

1564-1593.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE was born at Canterbury, in February, 1564, and educated at the school, in his birth-place, and at Benet (Corpus Christi) College, Cambridge. He was killed in a tavern brawl, and was buried at Deptford, June 1, 1593. The dates and order of his plays are somewhat uncertain. Of his plays, the first, Tamburlaine the Great, a tragedy in two parts, have been acted in public by 1587. It was followed by The Tragical History of Dr. Faustus, The Jew of Malta (probably in 1589 or 1590), The Massacre at Paris (not earlier than 1589), Edward II., and The Tragedy of Queen Dido, which was probably left unfinished at Marlowe's death, and completed by Nash. Another play, Lust's Dominion, was formerly attributed to Marlowe; but, in return for this injustice, the probability that he had at least a share in Shakespeare's 2 and 3 Henry VI., or in the plays on which those are based, is now rather widely admitted. Of his poems, the translations of Ovid's Metamorphoses and the first book of Lucan's Pharsalia are of uncertain date. The Passionate Shepherd to his Love was first printed complete in England's Helicon, 1600, but is quoted in The Jew of Malta. Hero and Leander was left unfinished at Marlowe's death; Chapman completing Marlowe's fragment into two parts, which now form the first two Sestiads of the

PASSIONATE SHEPHERD TO HIS LOVE.

With me, and be my love,
 Till all the pleasures prove Faint, as groves, or hill, or field,
 And steepy mountains yield;

Will sit upon the rocks,
 As shepherds feed their flocks,
 By rivers, to whose falls
 The birds sing madrigals.

I will make thee beds of roses,
 And a thousand fragrant posies,
 With flowers, and a kirtle,
 Bedecked all with leaves of myrtle;

Make of the finest wool,
 From our pretty lambs we pull;
 Lined choicely for the cold,
 And adorned with the purest gold;

Give straw and ivy-buds,
 And clasp and amber studs:
 And these pleasures may thee move,
 To come with me and be my love.

Give dishes, for thy meat,
 As the gods do eat,
 On an ivory table, be Ready each day for thee and me.

And swains shall dance and sing
 To delight each May morning.
 And these delights thy mind may move,
 To come with me and be my love.

ANSWER BY SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

IF all the world and love were young,
 And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
 These pretty pleasures might me move
 To live with thee and be thy love.

But time drives flocks from field to fold,
 When rivers rage and rocks grow cold,
 Then Philomel becometh dumb,
 And age complains of cares to come.

The flowers do fade, and wanton fields
 To wayward winter reckoning yields;
 A honey tongue, a heart of gall,
 Is fancy's spring, but sorrow's fall.

Thy gowns, thy shoes, thy beds of roses,
 Thy cap, thy kirtle, and thy posies,
 Soon break, soon wither, soon forgotten;
 In folly ripe, in reason rotten.

Thy belt of straw and ivy-buds,
 Thy coral clasps and amber studs,
 All these in me no means can move,
 To come to thee and be thy love.

What should we talk of dainties, then,
 Of better meat than's fit for men?
 These are but vain: that's only good
 Which God hath bless'd and sent for food.

But could youth last, and love still breed,
 Had joys no date, nor age no need;
 Then those delights my mind might move,
 To live with thee and be thy love.

1588-1643.

[WILLIAM BROWNE was born at Tavistock in 1588, and died, probably, in the year 1643. He went to Oxford as a member of Exeter College; entered the Inner Temple in 1612; published his elegy on Prince Henry in a volume along with another by his friend Christopher Brooke in 1613; the first book of his Britannia's Pastorals in the same year; his Shepherd's Pipe in 1614; and the second book of his Pastorals in 1616, the year of the death of Shakespeare. The third book of his Britannia's Pastorals was unknown till 1851, when it was published for the Percy Society from a manuscript in the Cathedral Library at Salisbury. The most complete edition of Browne is that published in the Roxburghe Library by Mr. W. Carew Hazlitt in 1868.]

WILLY, OR GLIDE SOFT YE SILVER FLOODS.

GLIDE soft ye silver floods,
And every spring:
Within the shady woods,
Let no bird sing!
Nor from the grove a turtle dove
Be seen to couple with her love,
But silence on each dale and mountain
dwell,
Whilst Willy bids his friend and joy
farewell.

But (of great Thetis' train)
Ye mermaids fair,
That on the shores do plain
Your sea-green hair,
As ye in trammels knit your locks
Weep ye; and so enforce the rocks
In heavy murmurs through the broad shores tell How Willy bade his friend and joy
farewell.

Cease, cease, ye murmuring winds
To move a wave;
But if with troubled minds
You seek his grave;
Know 'tis as various as yourselves,
Now in the deep, then on the shelves,
His coffin toss'd by fish and surges' fell, Whilst Willy weeps and bids all joy
farewell.

Had he, Arion like,
Been judg'd to drown,
He on his lute could strike
So rare a swon;
A thousand dolphins would have come,
And jointly strive to bring him
home.

But he on shipboard dy'd, by sickness fell,
Since when his Willy bade all joy farewell.

Great Neptune hear a swain!
His coffin take,
And with a golden chain (For pity) make
It fast unto a rock near land!
Where ev'ry calmy morn I'll stand,
And ere one sheep out of my fold I tell,
Sad Willy's pipe shall bid his friend
farewell.

THE PRAISE OF SPENSER.

ALL their pipes were still,
And Colin Clout began to tune his quill With such deep art that every one was given
To think Apollo, newly slid from
Heaven,
Had ta'en a human shape to win his
love,
Or with the western swains for glory strove.
He sung th' heroic knights of Faery-
land
In lines so elegant, of such command,
That had the Thracian played but half so well,
He had not left Eurydice in Hell.
But ere he ended his melodious song
An host of angels flew the clouds among,
And rapt this swan from his attentive
mates,
To make him one of their associates

In Heaven's fair quire: where now he sings the praise
Of Him that is the first and last of days Divinest Spenser, heaven-bred, happy muse!

Would any power into my brain infuse Thy worth, or all that poets had before,
I could not praise till thou deserv'st no
more.

JAMES SHIRLEY.

1596-1667.

[SHIRLEY was born in London about the year 1596, and lived through the Civil War and Commonwealth into the Restoration, dying in 1667. His copious dramatic activity began in 1625, in which year he produced the comedy entitled Love's Tricks. Before this, in 1618, he had published an imitation of Venus and Adonis under the title of Echo. His plays were produced in rapid succession up to 1641. In 1646 he published a volume of poems, chiefly erotic, and two small volumes of Masques, etc., in 1653 and 1659.]

DEATH'S FINAL CONQUEST.

THE glories of our birth and state,
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armor against fate:
Death lays his icy hand on kings.
Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

Some men with swords may reap the field,
And plant with laurels where they kill;
But their strong nerves at last must yield,
They tame but one another still;
Early or late,
They stoop to fate,
And must give up their murmuring
breath,
When they, pale captives! creep to
death.

The garlands wither on your brow;
Then boast no more your mighty deeds;
Upon death's purple altar, now,
See where the victor victim bleeds!

All heads must come
To the cold tomb,
Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in the dust.

VICTORIOUS MEN OF EARTH.

VICTORIOUS men of earth, no more Proclaim how wide your empires are;
Though you bind in every shore,
And your triumphs reach as far
As night or day;
Yet you proud monarchs must obey,
And mingle with forgotten ashes, when Death calls ye to the crowd of common
men.

Devouring famine, plague, and war,
Each able to undo mankind, Death's servile emissaries are:
Nor to these alone confin'd:
He hath at will
More quaint and subtle ways to kill;
A smile or kiss, as he will use the art,
Shall have the cunning skill to break a
heart

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

1579-1625.

[JOHN FLETCHER was born in December, 1579, at Rye in Sussex, where his father, who ultimately became Bishop of London, was minister. He was admitted pensioner at Benet College, Cambridge, in 1591; and little is known of his life between this date and the period of his connection with Beaumont.]

FRANCIS BEAUMONT was the son of Sir F. Beaumont, of Grace-Dieu in Leicestershire, and was born at that place, probably in 1585. He resided for a short time at Broadgates Hall (now Pembroke College), Oxford, and was entered of the Inner Temple in 1600.

Not many years after this we may suppose the friendship between the two poets to have begun. "They lived together on the Bank side," in Southwark, "not far from the Play-house" (the Globe), and wrote for the theatre. The most celebrated of their joint productions were produced probably between 1608 and 1611. But the common life which has been described by Aubrey, and is itself almost a poem (if partly a comic one), must have been disturbed in 1613, when Beaumont married. In the spring of 1616 he died. So far as is known, Fletcher remained single till his death, which took place in August, 1625.]

FROM "THE MIDSUMMER TRAGEDY."

[By Beaumont and Fletcher.]

LAY a garland on my hearse
Of the dismal yew;
Maidens, willow branches bear;
Say, I died true.

My love was false, but I was firm
From my hour of birth.
Upon my buried body lie Lightly, gentle earth!

LINES ON THE TOMBS IN WESTMINSTER.

[By Beaumont.]

MORTALITY, behold and fear!
What a change of flesh is here!
Think how many royal bones
Sleep within this heap of stones;
Here they lie had realms and lands,
Who now want strength to stir their hands;
Where from their pulpits seal'd with dust
They preach, "In greatness is no trust."
Here's an acre sown indeed
With the richest royall'st seed
That the earth did e'er suck in,
Since the first man died for sin:
Here the bones of birth have cried,
"Though gods they were, as men they died":

Here are sands, ignoble things,
Dropt from the ruin'd sides of kings:
Here's a world of pomp and state,
Buried in dust, once dead by fate.

FROM "THE FAITHFUL SHEPHERDESS."

[By Fletcher.]

I.

THE SATYR.

HERE be grapes whose lusty blood
Is the learned poet's good;
Sweeter yet did never crown
The head of Bacchus; nuts more brown
Than the squirrel's teeth that crack
them;
Deign, O fairest fair, to take them!
For these black-eyed Dryope Hath oftentimes commanded me
With my clasped knee to climb:
See how well the lusty time
Hath deck'd their rising cheeks in red,
Such as on your lips is spread.
Here be berries for a queen,
Some be red, some be green;
These are of that luscious meat
The great god Pan himself doth eat:
All these, and what the woods can yield,
The hanging mountain or the field,
I freely offer, and ere long Will bring you more, more sweet and
strong;

hen, humbly leave I take,
 he great Pan do awake,
 leeping lies in a deep glade, a broad beech's shade.
 go, I must run
 r than the fiery sun.

THE RIVER GOD TO AMORET.

his fountain's god. Below aters to a river grow, twixt two banks with osiers set,
 only prosper in the wet,
 gh the meadows do they glide, ling still on every side, ime winding round about d the evenest channel out.
 f thou wilt go with me,
 ng mortal company,
 : cool streams shalt thou lie,
 from harm as well as I;
 give thee for thy food
 h that useth in the mud, out and pike, that love to swim e the gravel from the brim igh the pure streams may be seen;
 t pearl fit for a queen
 I give, thy love to win, a shell to keep them in;
 fish in all my brook shall disobey thy look, when thou wilt, come gliding by rom thy white hand take a fly:
 o make thee understand
 I can my waves command, shall bubble whilst I sing, er than the silver string.

The Song.

ot fear to put thy feet

 : not leach or newt or toad et the water rising high,

 ob; but ever live with me, ot a wave shall trouble thee!

III.

THE SATYR.

THOU divinest, fairest, brightest,
 Thou most powerful maid and whitest,
 Thou most virtuous and most blessed,
 Eyes of stars, and golden tressed
 Like Apollo! tell me, sweetest,
 What new service now is meetest
 For the Satyr? Shall I stray
 In the middle air, and stay
 The sailing rack, or nimbly take Hold by the moon, and gently make Suit to the pale queen of night
 For a beam to give thee light?
 Shall I dive into the sea
 And bring thee coral, making way
 'Through the rising waves that fall Like snowy fleeces? Dearest, shall I catch thee wanton fawns, or flies
 Whose woven wings the summer dyes
 Of many colors? get thee fruit,
 Or steal from heaven old Orpheus' lute?
 All these I'll venture for, and more,
 To do her service all these woods adore.

FROM "THE NICE VALOUR."

[By Fletcher.]

HENCE, all you vain delights,
 As short as are the nights
 Wherein you spend your folly!
 There's nought in this life sweet,
 If man were wise to see't,
 But only melancholy;
 O sweetest melancholy!
 Welcome, folded arms and fixed eyes,
 A sigh that piercing mortifies,
 A look that's fasten'd to the ground,
 A tongue chain'd up without a sound!
 Fountain heads and pathless groves,
 Places which pale passion loves!
 Moonlight walks, when all the fowls
 Are warmly hous'd save bats and owls!
 A midnight bell, a parting groan,
 These are the sounds we feed upon;
 Then stretch our bones in a still gloomy valley;
 Nothing's so dainty sweet as lovely melancholy.

FROM "THE QUEEN OF CORINTH."

[By Fletcher.]

WEEP no more, nor sigh, nor groan;
Sorrow calls no time that's gone;
Violets plucked the sweetest rain

Makes not fresh nor grow again;
Trim thy locks, look cheerfully;
Fate's hid ends eyes cannot see;
Joys as winged dreams fly fast,
Why should sadness longer last?
Grief is but a wound to woe;
Gentlest fair, mourn, mourn no mo.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

1564-1616.

[WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE was born at Stratford on Avon, in April, 1564; there also he died, April 23d (old style), 1616. The following are the titles of his poems, with the dates of publication: Venus and Adonis, 1593; The Rape of Lucrece, 1594; The Passionate Pilgrim (a miscellany which includes only a few pieces by Shakespeare), 1599; The Phoenix and the Turtle (printed with pieces on the same subject by other poets of the time, at the end of Robert Chester's Love's Martyr, or Rosalin's Complaint), 1601; Sonnets, 1609; A Lover's Complaint (in the same volume with the Sonnets), 1609.]

ADVICE OF POLONIUS TO HIS SON, ON SETTING FORTH ON HIS TRAVELS.

[From Hamlet.]

GIVE thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportioned thought his act,
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are most select and generous, chief in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all — to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou can'st not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee.

HAMLET'S SOLILOQUY ON LIFE AND DEATH.

To be, or not to be, — that is the question: —
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end them? — To die, — to sleep, —
No more; — and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, — 'tis a consummation

Devoutly to be wish'd. To die; -- to
 sleep; —
 To sleep! perchance to dream; — ay, there's the rub!
 For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
 When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
 Must give us pause; there's the respect
 That makes calamity of so long life:
 For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
 The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
 The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
 The insolence of office, and the spurns
 That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
 When he himself might his quietus make
 With a bare bodkin? who would fardels
 bear,
 To grunt and sweat under a weary life;
 But that the dread of something after
 death, —
 The undiscovered country, from whose bourn
 No traveller returns, — puzzles the will;
 And makes us rather bear those ills we
 have,
 Than fly to others that we know not of?
 Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
 And thus the native hue of resolution Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
 And enterprises of great pith and moment,
 With this regard, their currents turn a-wry,
 And lose the name of action.

HAMLET'S ADDRESS TO HIS FATHER'S GHOST.

ANGELS and ministers of grace defend us! —
 Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,
 Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell,
 Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou com'st in such a questionable
 shape,
 That I will speak to thee; I'll call thee Hamlet,
 King, father, royal Dane: O, answer
 me:
 Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in
 death,
 Have burst their cerements! why the sepulchre,
 Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,
 Hath oped his ponderous and marble jaws,
 To cast thee up again! What may this mean,
 That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,
 Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous; and we fools of nature,
 So horribly to shake our disposition, With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

HAMLET'S ESTEEM FOR HORATIO.

NAY, do not think I flatter:
 For what advancement may I hope from
 thee,
 That no revenue hast but thy good spirits
 To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flattered?
 No, let the candied tongue lick absurd
 pomp;
 And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
 Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
 Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
 And could of men distinguish her election,
 She hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been
 As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
 A man that fortune's buffets and rewards

Hath ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled,
 That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger
 To sound what stop she please: Give me that man
 That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
 In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of hearts,
 As I do thee.

A LOVER'S LAMENT.

[From Twelfth Night.]

COME away, come away, death,
 And in sad cypress let me be laid;
 Fly away, fly away, breath;
 I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
 My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
 O, prepare it;
 My part of death no one so true
 Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
 On my black coffin let there be strown;
 Not a friend, not a friend greet My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown.
 A thousand thousand sighs to save,
 Lay me, O, where Sad true lover ne'er find my grave
 To weep there.

HUMAN NATURE.

[From The Tempest.]

THESE our actors,
 As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
 Are melted into air, into thin air:
 And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
 The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
 The solemn temples, the great globe itself;
 Yea, all which it inherit shall dissolve;
 And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,

Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
 As dreams are made on, and our little life
 Is rounded with a sleep.

LIFE.

[From Macbeth.]

TO-MORROW, and to-morrow, and tomorrow,
 Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
 To the last syllable of recorded time;
 And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
 The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
 Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
 That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
 And then is heard no more; it is a tale
 Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

THE VISIONARY DAGGER.

[From Macbeth.]

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
 The handle toward my hand? Come,
 let me clutch thee.
 I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
 Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
 A dagger of the mind; a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed
 brain?
 I see thee yet, in form as palpable.
 As this which now I draw.
 Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
 And such an instrument I was to use.
 Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,
 Or else worth all the rest; I see thee
 still,
 And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of
 blood,
 Which was not so before. — There's no such thing:
 It is the bloody business, which informs Thus to mine eyes.

REMORSE.

[From Macbeth.]

WHENCE is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noise appeals me?
What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

EDGAR'S DEFIANCE OF EDMUND.

[From King Lear.]

DRAW thy sword;
That if my speech offend a noble heart, Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honors,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,— Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,
Thy valor, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince;
And from the extremest upward of thy
 head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou,
 "No,"
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, Thou liest.

THE STORM.

[From King Lear.]

POOR naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That hide the pelting of this pitiless
 storm,

How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your looped and windowed raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en
Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou mayest shake the superflux to
 them,
And show the heavens more just.

CLEOPATRA ON THE CYDNUS.

[From Antony and Cleopatra.]

THE barge she sat in, like a burnish'd
 throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that The winds were love-sick with them:
 the oars were silver;
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description; she did lie
In her pavilion (cloth of gold, of tissue),
O'er picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy outwork nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling
 Cupids,
With divers-color'd fans, whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid, did.

Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the
 eyes,
And made their bends adornings; at the helm
A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle

Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,
That yarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony, Enthroned i' the market-place, did sit
alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And make a gap in nature.

THE SEVEN AGES OF MAN.

[From As You Like It.]

ALL the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first,
the Infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then, the whining School-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail Unwillingly to school. And then, the Lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eye-brow. Then a Soldier;
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard, Jealous in honor, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation Even in the cannon's mouth. And then, the Justice,
In fair round belly, with good capon lined,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,

Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd Pantaloon, With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene
of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

THE USES OF ADVERSITY.

[From As You Like It.]

Now my co-mates, and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more
sweet
Than that of painted pomp? are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference; as the icy fang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's
wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even 'till I shrink with cold, I smile,
and say,
This is no flattery; these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.
Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.

INGRATITUDE.

[From As You Like It.]

BLOW, blow thou winter wind, Thou art not so unkind
 As man's ingratitude;
 Thy tooth is not so keen,
 Because thou art not seen,
 Although thy breath be rude.
 Heigh, ho! sing heigh ho! unto the green holly:
 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:
 Then heigh, ho, the holly!
 This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
 That dost not bite so nigh
 As benefits forgot:
 Though thou the waters warp,
 Thy sting is not so sharp
 As friend remember'd not.
 Heigh, ho! sing heigh ho! etc.

UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE.[From As You Like It.]

UNDER the greenwood tree
 Who loves to lie with me,
 And tune his merry note
 Unto the sweet bird's throat,
 Come hither, come hither, come hither;
 Here shall he see
 No enemy,
 But winter and rough weather.

Who doth ambition shun,
 And loves to lie i' the sun,
 Seeking the food he eats,
 And pleas'd with what he gets,
 Come hither, come hither, come hither;
 Here shall he see
 No enemy,
 But winter and rough weather.

SHYLOCK'S REMONSTRANCE
WITH ANTONIO.[From Merchant of Venice.]

SIGNIOR Antonio, many a time and oft,
 In the Rialto you have rated me
 About my monies and my usances:
 Still have I borne it with a patient shrug;
 For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe;
 You call me — misbeliever, cut-throat
 dog,
 And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
 And all for use of that which is mine own.
 Well then, it now appears you need my help:
 Go to then; you come to me, and you
 say,
 "Shylock, we would have monies":
 you say so;
 You that did void your rheum upon my beard,
 And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur
 Over your threshold; monies is your suit:
 What should I say to you? should I not say
 "Hath a dog money? is it possible A cur can lend three thousand ducats?"
 or Shall I bend low, and in a bondsman's
 key,
 With 'bated breath, and whispering humbleness, Say this, — "Fair sir, you spit on me on Wednesday
 last:
 You spurn'd me such a day; another time
 You called me — dog; and for these courtesies
 I'll lend you thus much monies?"

THE DECEIT OF APPEARANCES.

THE world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
 In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
 But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
 Obscures the show of evil? In religion,

What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?

There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on its outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false

As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins

The beards of Hercules and frowning
Mars;

Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk?

And these assume but valor's excrement, To render them redoubted. Look on beauty,

And you shall see 'tis purchased by the weight;

Which therein works a miracle in nature, Making them lightest that wear most of
it:

So are those crisped snaky golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,

Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,

The skull that bred them in the sepulchre.

Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beautiful scarf

Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on

To entrap the wisest.

MERCY.

[From Merchant of Venice.]

THE quality of Mercy is not strain'd;
It droppeth, as the gentle rain from
heaven,

Upon the place beneath. It is twice
bless'd;

It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes

The thronèd monarch better than his crown.

His sceptre shows the force of temporal
power,

The attribute to awe and majesty, Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;

But mercy is above this sceptred sway, —
It is enthronèd in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;

And earthly power doth then show likeliest God's,

When mercy seasons justice. Therefore,
Jew,

Though justice be thy plea, consider this, —

That, in the course of justice, none of us

Should see salvation. We do pray for mercy;

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

The deeds of mercy.

CELESTIAL MUSIC.

[From Merchant of Venice.]

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music

Creep in our ears: soft stillness and the night

Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look, how the floor of
heaven

Is thick inlaid with patines of bright
gold:

There's not the smallest orb, which thou behold'st,

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubims, —

Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear
it.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn!

With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,

And draw her home with music.

QUEEN ELIZABETH.

[From Midsummer Night's Dream.]

I SAW, but thou could'st not, Flying between the cold moon and the
earth,
Cupid all-armed: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal thronéd by the west,
And loosed his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts;
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon,
And the imperial votaress passéd on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.

THE POWER OF IMAGINATION.

[From Midsummer Night's Dream.]

THE poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.

FEMININE FRIENDSHIP.

[From Midsummer Night's Dream.]

O, AND is all forgot?
All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one
flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one
key;
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,

Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet a union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem:
So, with two seeming bodies, but one
heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor
friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for
it,
Though I alone do feel the injury.

BEATRICE.

[From Much Ado about Nothing.]

DISDAIN and scorn ride sparkling in her
eyes,
Misprising what they look on; and her wit
Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak; she cannot
love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endear'd,
I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featured,
But she would spell him backward; if fair-faced,
She'd swear the gentleman should be her sister;
If black, why, nature, drawing of an antic,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vilely cut:
If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds:
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side
out;
And never gives to truth and virtue, that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

SIGH NO MORE, LADIES.[From Much Ado about Nothing.]

SIGH no more, ladies, sigh no more;
 Men were deceivers ever;
 One foot in sea, and one on shore;
 To one thing constant never:
 Then sigh not so,
 But let them go,
 And be you blithe and bonny;
 Converting all your sounds of woe
 Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
 Of dumps so dull and heavy;
 The fraud of men was ever so,
 Since summer first was leavy,
 Then sigh not so,
 But let them go,
 And be you blithe and bonny;
 Converting all your sounds of woe
 Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

A WOMAN'S TONGUE.[From Taming of the Shrew.]

THINK you, a little din can daunt my ears?
 Have I not in my time heard lions
 roar?
 Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
 Rage like an angry boar, chafed with sweat?
 Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
 And heaven's artillery thunder in the
 skies?
 Have I not in a pitched battle heard Loud 'larums, neighing' steeds, and trumpets' clang?
 And do you tell me of a woman's
 tongue;
 That gives not half so great a blow to the ear,
 As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire.

THE MIND ALONE VALUABLE[From Taming of the Shrew.]

FOR 'tis the mind that makes the body rich:
 And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
 So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
 What! is the jay more precious than the lark,
 Because his feathers are more beautiful?
 Or is the adder better than the eel, Because his painted skin contents the
 eyes?
 O, no, good Kate: neither art thou the worse
 For this poor furniture and mean array.

A WIFE'S DUTY.[From Taming of the Shrew.]

FIE, fie! unknit that threatening unkind
 brow;
 And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
 To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:
 It blots thy beauty, as frost bites the
 meads:
 Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds;
 And in no sense is meet, or amiable.
 A woman moved is like a fountain troubled,
 Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
 And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty Will deign to sip or touch one drop of
 it.
 Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
 Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares
 for thee,
 And for thy maintenance; commits his body
 To painful labor, both by sea and land;
 To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
 While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;
 And craves no other tribute at thy hands.

POWER OF LOVE.

From Love's Labour's Lost.]

first learned in a lady's eyes, alone immured in the brain;
the motion of all elements,
s swift as thought in every

And gives to every power a double
power,

Above their functions and their offices.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye:

A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;

A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,

When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;

Love's feeling is more soft and sensible

Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;

Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste;

For valor, is not love a Hercules,

Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?

Subtle as sphinx; as sweet and musical

As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;

And, when love speaks, the voice of all the gods

Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony,

Never durst poet touch a pen to write

Until his ink were temper'd with love's sighs:

O, then his lines would ravage savage
ears,

And plant in tyrants mild humility.

WINTER.

[From Love's Labour's Lost.]

WHEN icicles hang by the wall,

And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,

And Tom bears logs into the hall,

And milk comes frozen home i' the pail;

When blood is nipt, and ways be foul,

Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whoo!

Tu-whit; tu-whoo! a merry note,

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,

And coughing drown the parson's saw,

And birds sit brooding in the snow,

And Marion's nose looks red and raw;

When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,

Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whoo!

Tu-whit! tu-whoo! a merry note,

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

OTHELLO'S DESPAIR.

O NOW, for ever
 Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
 Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars
 That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
 Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
 The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
 The royal banner; and all quality, Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
 And O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
 The immortal Jove's dread clamors counterfeit,
 Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

OTHELLO'S DYING SPEECH.

SOFT you; a word or two before you go I have done the state some service, and they know it;
 No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
 When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
 Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak
 Of one that loved not wisely, but too well.
 Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought, Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose
 hand,
 Like the base Judean, threw a pearl
 away, Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd eyes,
 Albeit unus'd to the melting mood,
 Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
 Their medicinal gum. Set you down
 this:
 And say besides, — that in Aleppo once,
 Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
 Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
 I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
 And smote him — thus. [Stabs himself.]

THE GARDEN SCENE.[From Romeo and Juliet.]

Romeo. HE jests at scars that never felt a wound. —
 But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!
 It is the east, and Juliet is the sun! —
 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
 Who is already sick and pale with grief,
 That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
 Be not her maid, since she is envious:
 Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
 And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. —
 It is my lady; O, it is my love:
 O, that she knew she were! — She speaks, yet she says nothing; what of that?
 Her eye discourses, I will answer it. —
 I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
 Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, Having some business, do entreat her
 eyes
 To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
 What if her eyes were there, they in her
 head:
 The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,
 As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in
 heaven
 Would through the airy region stream
 so bright,
 That birds would sing, and think it were not night.
 See, how she leans her cheek upon her
 hand!
 O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
 That I might touch that cheek!

WHAT'S IN A NAME?[From Romeo and Juliet.]

'Tis but thy name that is mine enemy;
 Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
 What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
 Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part

O, now begins ; more light and light it grows. Page 49.

Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
 What's in a name? that which we call a rose
 By any other name would smell as sweet:
 So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
 Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
 Without that title: — Romeo, doff thy name:
 And for that name, which is no part of thee,
 Take all myself.

RELUCTANCE TO PART.

[From Romeo and Juliet.]

Juliet. WILT thou be gone? It is not yet near day.
 It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
 That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
 Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.
Romeo. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
 No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east;
 Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
 Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops:

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Juliet. Yon light is not daylight, I know it, I:

It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
 To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
 And light thee on thy way to Mantua;
 Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Romeo. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death:

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
 I'll say, yon gray is not the morning's eye,

'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow,
 Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat

The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:

I have more care to stay than will to go; —

Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so, —

How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.

Juliet. It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away;

It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
 Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.

Some say, the lark makes sweet division;
 This doth not so, for she divideth us:

Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes;

O, now I would they had chang'd voices too!

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,

Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.

O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

PERFECTION NEEDS NO ADDITION.

[From King John.]

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
 To throw a perfume on the violet,
 To smooth the ice, or add another hue
 Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
 To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
 Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

THE CURSES OF ROYALTY.

[From King John.]

It is the curse of kings to be attended
 By slaves that take their humors for a warrant

To break within the bloody house of life;

And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humor than advised respect.

How oft the sight of means to do ill
 deeds,
Makes deeds ill done! Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature marked, Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of
 shame,
This murder had not come into my
 mind.
But taking note of thy abhorr'd aspect, —
Finding thee fit for bloody villany,
Apt, liable, to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's
 death;
And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hadst thou but shook thy head, or made a pause,
When I spake darkly what I purposed;
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my
 face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words;
Deep shame had struck me dumb,
 made me break off,
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me.

THE TRAGICAL FATE OF KINGS.

[From King Richard II.]

OF comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epi-taphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy
 eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills;

And yet not so, — for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Boling-broke's,
And nothing can we call our own but
 death,
And that small model of the barren
 earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For heaven's sake let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings: —
How some have been deposed, some slain in war:
Some haunted by the ghosts they have deposed:
Some poison'd by their wives; some sleeping kill'd;
All murder'd: — for within the hollow
 crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king Keeps Death his court: and there the antic sits,
Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit, —
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and humor'd
 thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin Bores through his castle wall, and — farewell king!
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence; throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want taste grief,
Need friends: subjected thus,
How can you say to me I am a king?

PRINCE HENRY'S DEFENCE OF HIMSELF.[From King Henry IV.]

GOD forgive them, that have so much sway'd

Your majesty's good thoughts away from
me!

I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And, in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my favors in a bloody mask, Watch, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with it.

And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights,

That this same child of honor and renown,

This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,

And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet:

For every honor sitting on his helm,
Would they were multitudes; and on my head

My shames redoubled! for the time will come

That I shall make this northern youth exchange

His glorious deeds for my indignities.

Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;

And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up, Yea, even the slightest worship of his
time,

Or I will tear the reckoning from his
heart.

This, in the name of God, I promise
here:

The which, if He be pleas'd I shall perform,

I do beseech your majesty may salve

The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:

If not, the end of life cancels all bands;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,

Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

PRINCE HENRY'S SPEECH ON THE DEATH OF HOTSPUR.[From King Henry IV.]

FARE thee well, great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound:
But now, two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough: — this earth, that bears thee dead,

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

If thou wert sensible of courtesy,

I should not make so dear a show of zeal: —

But let my favors hide thy mangled face;
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to
heaven:

Thy ignomy sleep with thee in thy
grave,

But not remember'd in thy epitaph!

HENRY'S SOLILOQUY ON SLEEP.[From King Henry IV.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects

Are at this hour asleep! — O sleep, O gentle sleep,

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened
thee,

That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,

And steep my senses in forgetfulness?

Why rather, Sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,

Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,

And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber;

Than in the perfumed chambers of the great,

Under the canopies of costly state,

And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody?

O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile,

In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch,

A watch-case, or a common 'larum bell?
 Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast, Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
 In cradle of the rude imperious surge.
 And in the visitation of the winds,
 Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
 With deaf'ning clamors in the slippery
 clouds,
 That, with the hurly, death itself
 awakes? —
 Canst thou, O partial Sleep, give thy repose
 To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude;
 And, in the calmest and most stillest
 night,
 With all appliances and means to boot,
 Deny it to a king? — Then, happy low, lie down!
 Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

*KING HENRY'S SPEECH BEFORE
 THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT.*

[From King Henry V.]

HE that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
 Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
 And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
 He that shall live this day, and see old age,
 Will yearly on the vigil feast his friends,
 And say — To-morrow is Saint Crispian:
 Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars,
 And say, These wounds I had on Crispin's day.
 Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
 But he'll remember, with advantages,
 What feats he did that day; then shall our names,
 Familiar in their mouths as household words, —
 Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloster, —
 Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

This story shall the good man teach his son;
 And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
 From this day to the ending of the
 world,
 But we in it shall be remembered, —
 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
 For he to-day that sheds his blood with
 me,
 Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
 This day shall gentle his condition:
 And gentlemen in England, now a-bed, Shall think themselves accurs'd, they were not here;
 And hold their manhoods cheap, whiles any speaks
 That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

A GOOD CONSCIENCE.

[From King Henry VI.]

WHAT stronger breast-plate than a heart untainted?
 Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just;
 And he but naked though lock'd up in steel
 Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

THE KING'S ENVY OF A SHEP-HERD'S LIFE.

[From King Henry VI.]

O GOD! methinks it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain;
 To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
 Thereby to see the minutes how they run:
 How many make the hour full complete,
 How many hours bring about the day,
 How many days will finish up the year,
 How many years a mortal man may live.

this is known, then to divide the
 me:

ny hours must I tend my flock;
 ny hours must I take my rest;
 ny hours must I contemplate;
 ny hours must I sport myself;

ny years ere I shall shear the ee;

utes, hours, days, weeks, months,
 id years,

over to the end they were created,
 I bring white hairs unto a quiet ave.

hat a life were this! how sweet!
 ow lovely!

ARD DUKE OF GLOSTER'S SCRIPTIOIN OF HIMSELF.

[From King Henry VI.]

I can smile, and murder while I nile;

ry, content, to that which grieves
 y heart;

et my cheeks with artificial tears, ame my face to all occasions;

own more sailors than the me:
 aid shall;

y more gazers than the basilisk;

y the orator as well as Nestor;

re more silyly than Ulysses could,

 ges,

 hool.

do this and cannot get a crown?

NG WORDS OF WARWICK THE KING MAKER.

[From King Henry VI.]

: eyes, that now are dimm'd with eath's black veil,

been as piercing as the mid-day
 in,

To search the secret treasons of the
 world:

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,

Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres:
 For who liv'd king, but I could dig his
 grave?

And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?

Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!

My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,

Even now forsake me; and of all my lands,

Is nothing left me, but my body's length!

Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

THE DUKE OF GLOSTER ON HIS DEFORMITY.

[From King Richard III.]

Now is the winter of our discontent

Made glorious summer by this sun of York;

And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house,

In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.

Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;

Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;

Our stern alarums, chang'd to merry meetings,

Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.

Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;

And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds,

To fright the souls of fearful adversaries, —

He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,

To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.

But I, that am not shaped for sportive tricks,

Nor made to court an amorous lookingglass;

I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,
 To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
 I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
 Cheated of feature by dissembling nature, Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my
 time
 Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
 And that so lamely and unfashionable,
 That dogs bark at me, as I halt by
 them; —
 Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
 Have no delight to pass away the time;
 Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
 And descant on mine own deformity;
 And therefore, — since I cannot prove a lover,
 To entertain these fair well spoken
 days, —
 I am determin'd to prove a villain,
 And hate the idle pleasures of these days.

CARDINAL WOLSEY ON THE VICISSITUDES OF LIFE.

[From King Henry VIII.]

FAREWELL, a long farewell, to all my greatness,
 This is the state of man; to-day he puts forth
 The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms,
 And bears his blushing honors thick upon him;
 The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
 And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
 His greatness is a ripening, — nips his root,
 And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
 Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
 This many summers in a sea of glory;

But far beyond my depth; my high-blown pride
 At length broke under me; and now has left me,
 Weary, and old with service, to the mercy
 Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me.
 Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye;
 I feel my heart new open'd: O, how wretched
 Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favors!
 There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
 That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
 More pangs and fears, than wars or women have;
 And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
 Never to hope again.

WOLSEY TO CROMWELL

[From King Henry VIII.]

THU'S far hear me, Cromwell;
 And — when I am forgotten, as I shall
 be,
 And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
 Of me more must be heard of — say, I taught thee, Say, Wolsey, — that once trod the wave of glory,
 And sounded all the depths and shoals of honor, —
 Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
 A sure and safe one, though thy master missed it.
 Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
 Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
 By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
 The image of his Maker, hope to rise
 by it?
 Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just,
and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at, be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's. Then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell, Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! — Serve the King,
And, — pr'ythee, lead me in;
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny, 'tis the King's: my robe,
And my integrity to Heaven, is all I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell!
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my King, he would not in mine
age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

TAKE, O TAKE THOSE LIPS
AWAY.

[From Measure for Measure.]

TAKE, O take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn
But my kisses bring again,
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain.

Hide, O hide those hills of snow,
Which thy frozen bosom bears,
On whose tops the pinks that grow
Are of those that April wears:
But first set my poor heart free,
Bound in those icy chains by thee.

LOVE AND LUST.

[From Venus and Adonis.]

LOVE comforteth like sunshine after rain;
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh
remain;
Lust's winter comes, ere summer half be done.
Love surfeits not; Lust like a glutton dies:
Love is all truth; Lust full of forged lies.

SUNRISE.

[From Venus and Adonis.]

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on
high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
The cedar-tops and hills seem bur-nish'd gold.

LUCRETIA SLEEPING.

[From Rape of Lucrece.]

HER lily hand her rosy cheek lie: under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entomb'd is;

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet, whose perfect
white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of
night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of
death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality.
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no
strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,

Save of their lord, no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honored.

WHAT WIN I IF I GAIN?

[From Rape of Lucrece.]

WHAT win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting
joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape, who will the wine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the
crown,
Would with the sceptre strait be struck-en down?

VENUS WITH THE DEAD BODY OF ADONIS.

[From Venus and Adonis.]

SHE looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is
cold;
She whispers in his ear a heavy tale,
As if he heard the woeful words she told:
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his
eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps burnt out in darkness lies!

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late ex-cell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect.
Wonder of time! (quoth she) this is my spite,
That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophecy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend;
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavory
end;

Ne'er settled equally, but high or low;
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
And shall be blasted in a breathing-
while,

The bottom poison, and the top o'er-straw'd

With sweets that shall the sharpest sight beguile.

The strongest body shall it make most weak,

Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

It shall be sparing, and too full of riot, Teaching decrepid age to tread the measures;

The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;

It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;

It shall not fear where it should most distrust;

It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most
just;

Perverse it shall be, when it seems most toward,

Put fear to valor, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissention 'twixt the son and
sire;

Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire.

Sith in his prime, death doth my love
destroy,

They that love best, their loves shall not enjoy.

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapor from her sight,
And in his blood, that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is rest from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

Poor flower! (quoth she) this was thy father's guise (Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling
sire),
For every little grief to wet his eyes,
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my
breast,
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right;
Low in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day
and night:
There shall not be one minute of an
hour,
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's
flower.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves, by whose swift aid
Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd; Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself, and not be seen.

SONNETS.

TO HIS LOVE.

18.

SHALL I compare thee to a summer's
day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:

Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd:
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd.

But thy eternal summer shall not fade
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall death brag thou wanderest in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou grow-est.

So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

ABSENCE.

57.

BEING your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend Nor services to do, till you require:

Nor dare I chide the world-without-end-
hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu:

Nor dare I question with my jealous
thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
Save, where you are, how happy you make those; —

So true a fool is love, that in your will,
Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

TIME AND LOVE.

64.

WHEN I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of out-worn buried
age;
When sometime lofty towers I see downrazed,
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;

When I have seen the hungry ocean
gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery
main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with
store;

When I have seen such interchange of
state,
Or state itself confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate —
That Time will come and take my Love
away: —

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

65.

SINCE brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?

O how shall summer's honey breath hold out Against the wreckful siege of battering
days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays?

O fearful meditation! where, alack!
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back,
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?

O! none, unless this miracle have
might,
That in black ink my love may still shine
bright.

SOUL AND BODY.

146.

POOR Soul, the centre of my sinful
earth,
Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee
array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer
dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?

Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's
end?

Then, Soul, live thou up on thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no
more: —

So shalt thou feed on death, that feeds on men,
And death once dead, there's no more dying then.

A MADRIGAL.

From The Passionate Pilgrim.]

Old Age and Youth cannot live together:
 Youth is full of pleasance,
 Age is full of care;
 Youth like summer morn,
 Age like winter weather,
 Youth like summer brave,
 Age like winter bare:

Youth is full of sport,
 Age's breath is short,
 Youth is nimble, Age is lame:
 Youth is hot and bold,
 Age is weak and cold,
 Youth is wild, and Age is tame: —
 Age, I do abhor thee,
 Youth, I do adore thee;
 O! my Love, my Love is young!
 Age, I do defy thee —
 O sweet shepherd, hie thee,
 For methinks thou stay'st too long.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

1552-1618.

BORN, 1552; executed, 1618. No early collected edition of his poems exists; such as were at all appeared for the most part in the Miscellanies of the time.]

THE SOUL'S ERRAND.

Soul, the body's guest,
 on a thankless errand!
 Not to touch the best;
 Truth shall be thy warrant.
 Since I needs must die,
 Give the world the lie.

Of the Court — it glows
 And shines like rotten wood;
 Of the Church — it shows
 What's good, and doth no good.
 Church and Court reply,
 Give them both the lie.

Of potentates — they live
 Ruled by others' action, Loved unless they give,
 Strong but by a faction.
 Potentates reply,
 Potentates the lie.

Men of high condition
 To rule affairs of state —
 Their purpose is ambition,
 In practice — only hate.
 They once reply,
 Give them all the lie.

Tell them that brave it most,
 They beg for more by spending
 Who, in their greatest cost,
 Seek nothing but commending.
 And if they make reply,
 Then give them all the lie.

Tell Zeal — it lacks devotion;
 Tell Love — it is but lust;
 Tell Time — it is but motion;
 Tell Flesh — it is but dust.
 And wish them not reply,
 For thou must give the lie.

Tell Age — it daily wasteth;
 Tell Honor — how it alters;
 Tell Beauty — how she blasteth;
 Tell Favor — how it falters.
 And as they shall reply,
 Give every one the lie.

Tell Wit — how much it wrangles
 In tickle points of niceness;
 Tell Wisdom — she entangles Herself in over-wiseness.
 And when they do reply,
 Straight give them both the lie.

Tell Physic — of her boldness;
 Tell Skill — it is pretension;
 Tell Charity — of coldness;
 Tell Law — it is contention.
 And as they do reply,
 So give them still the lie.

Tell Fortune — of her blindness;
 Tell Nature — of decay;
 Tell Friendship — of unkindness;
 Tell Justice — of delay.
 And if they will reply,
 Then give them all the lie.

Tell Arts — they have no soundness,
 But vary by esteeming;
 Tell Schools — they want profoundness,
 And stand too much on seeming.
 If Arts and Schools reply,
 Give Arts and Schools the lie.

Tell Faith — it's fled the City;
 Tell — how the Country erreth;
 Tell — Manhood shakes off pity;
 Tell — Virtue least preferreth.
 And if they do reply,
 Spare not to give the lie.

So when thou hast, as I Commanded thee, done blabbing,
 Although to give the lie
 Deserves no less than stabbing, Yet stab at thee who will,
 No stab the soul can kill.

DULCINA.

[Ascribed to Sir Walter Raleigh on doubtful authority.]

As at noon Dulcina rested
 In her sweet and shady bower,
 Came a shepherd, and requested
 In her lap to sleep an hour.
 But from her look
 A wound he took

So deep, that for a further boon
 The nymph he prays.
 Whereto she says,
 Forego me now, come to me soon.

But in vain she did conjure him
 To depart her presence so;
 Having a thousand tongues to allure h
 And but one to bid him go;
 Where lips invite,
 And eyes delight,
 And cheeks, as fresh as rose in Ju Persuade delay;
 What boots she say,
 Forego me now, come to me soon

He demands what time for pleasure
 Can there be more fit than now;
 She says, night gives love that leisure
 Which the day cannot allow.
 He says, the sight
 Improves delight;
 Which she denies: night's murky ne
 In Venus' plays Makes bold, she says;
 Forego me now, come to me soon.

But what promise or profession
 From his hands could purchase sco
 Who would sell the sweet possession
 Of such beauty for a hope?
 Or for the sight
 Of lingering night
 Forego the present joys of noon?
 Though ne'er so fair
 Her speeches were,
 Forego me now, come to me soon

How, at last, agreed these lovers?
 She was fair, and he was young:
 The tongue may tell what th' eye covers;
 Joys unseen are never sung.
 Did she consent,
 Or he relent;
 Accepts he night, or grants she no
 Left he her a maid,
 Or not; she said,
 Forego me now, come to me soon

GEORGE WITHER.

1588-1667.

WITHER was born at Brentworth in Hampshire, June 11, 1588, and died in the year of his greatest achievement, both in verse and prose, being proportioned to his length of years. His chief works are as follows: 1612, the Elegy on Prince Henry; 1613, Epithalamium; Stript and Whipt; 1615, Fidelia and Shepherd's Hunting. To the same year is ascribed his share in Browne's Shepherd's Pipe; 1618, the Motto; 1622, the Prayers; 1623, the Hymns and Songs of the Church; 1628, Britain's Remembrances; 1641, Hallelujah.

It is very far indeed from exhausting the complete catalogue of Wither's voluminous works. He was an ardent politician, and in the stirring times of the Civil War was perpetually publishing tracts and broadsheets in justification of the cause he had taken up. Probably no library possesses an absolutely complete collection of Wither's works. Certainly the Bodleian do not. The Rev. T. Corser, of Stand, near Manchester, is supposed to possess the fullest collection in existence, but that has been since dispersed. The poems were collected by the Spenser Society, but it is a matter for regret that they are not in an accessible form. It is one of the most striking blemishes of Chalmers' collection that it is utterly ignored in it. Of modern editors of portions of his works the chief is Sir John Galsworthy, who republished the Shepherd's Hunting and the Fidelia at the beginning of the present century, and so gave long extracts from Wither's other poems in his Censura Literaria. The Songs of the Church, and the Hallelujah were republished for Russell Smith

BABY, SLEEP!

Sleep! what ails my dear,
My darling thus to cry?
Hush, and lend thine ear,
I sing thy lullaby.
Forbear to weep;
Hush; sweet baby, sleep.

Alas, what canst thou fear?
What thee can mischief do?
Thy father dear,
And thy mother too.
Forbear to weep;
Hush; sweet baby, sleep.

Reception was in sin,
Which thou hast had;
Birth unclean hath been,
And thou now art made.
Forbear to weep;
Hush; sweet baby, sleep.

Lullaby I sing,
That blessings ripening be;
For thou art a king,
Whom God hath bought for thee.
Forbear to weep;
Hush; sweet baby, sleep.

Sweet baby, sleep, and nothing fear;
For whosoever thee offends
By thy protector threaten'd are,
And God and angels are thy friends.
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

When God with us was dwelling here,
In little babes He took delight;
Such innocents as thou, my dear,
Are ever precious in His sight.
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

A little infant once was He;
And strength in weakness then was laid
Upon His virgin mother's knee,
That power to thee might be convey'd.
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

In this thy frailty and thy need
He friends and helpers doth prepare,
Which thee shall cherish, clothe, and feed,
For of thy weal they tender are.
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

The King of kings, when He was born,
Had not so much for outward ease;
By Him such dressings were not worn,
Nor such like swaddling-clothes as these.

Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

Within a manger lodged thy Lord,
Where oxen lay, and asses fed:
Warm rooms we do to thee afford,
An easy cradle or a bed.
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

The wants that He did then sustain
Have purchased wealth, my babe, for thee;
And by His torments and His pain Thy rest and ease securèd be.
My baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

Thou hast, yet more, to perfect this,
A promise and an earnest got
Of gaining everlasting bliss,
Though thou, my babe, perceiv'st it not,
Sweet baby, then forbear to weep;
Be still, my babe; sweet baby, sleep.

SHALL I, WASTING IN DESPAIR.

SHALL I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
Or make pale my cheeks with care
'Cause another's rosy are?
Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flow'ry meads in May,
If she be not so to me,
What care I how fair she be?

Should my heart be griev'd or pin'd
'Cause I see a woman kind?
Or a well-disposèd nature
Joinèd with a lovely feature?
Be she meeker, kinder than Turtle-dove or pelican,
If she be not so to me,
What care I how kind she be?

Shall a woman's virtues move
Me to perish for her love?
Or her well-deservings, known,
Make me quite forget my own?
Be she with that goodness blest
Which may gain her name of best
If she be not such to me,
What care I how good she be!

'Cause her fortune seems too high Shall I play the fool and die?
Those that bear a noble mind,
Where they want of riches find,
Think what with them they woul
That without them dare to woo;
And unless that mind I see,
What care I how great she be!

Great, or good, or kind, or fair,
I will ne'er the more despair:
If she love me, this believe,
I will die ere she shall grieve:
If she slight me when I woo,
I can scorn and let her go,
For if she be not for me,
What care I for whom she be?

WHEN WE ARE UPON THE SEAS.

[From Hallelujah.]

ON those great waters now I am,
Of which I have been told,
That whosoever thither came
Should wonders there behold.
In this unsteady place of fear,
Be present, Lord, with me;
For in these depths of water here
I depths of danger see.

A stirring courser now I sit,
A headstrong steed I ride,
That champs and foams upon the b
Which curbs his lofty pride.
The softest whistling of the winds
Doth make him gallop fast;
And as their breath increased he fir
The more he maketh haste.

Take Thou, oh Lord! the reins in b Assume our Master's room;

Ife Thou at our helm to stand, Pilot to become.
 Thou the sails, and let good speed
 Accompany our haste;
 Thou the channels at our need,
 Anchor for us cast.

If favorable wind
 Rather us provide;
 If it wait on us behind,
 If key by our side. [sands,
 If sudden gusts, from storms, from
 From the raging wave;
 If allows, rocks, and pirates' hands,
 If goods, and vessel save.

If us from the wants, the fear,
 If sickness of the seas;
 If fly from our sins, which are
 If or worse than these.
 If let us also safe arrive
 If e we desire to be;
 If Thy mercies let us give
 If thanks and praise to Thee.

THE PRAYER OF OLD AGE.

[From third part of Hallelujah.]

As this my carnal robe grows old, Soil'd, rent, and worn by length of
 years,
 Let me on that by faith lay hold
 Which man in life immortal wears;
 So sanctify my days behind,
 So let my manners be refined,
 That when my soul and flesh must
 part,
 There lurk no terrors in my heart.

So shall my rest be safe and sweet
 When I am lodgèd in my grave;
 And when my soul and body meet,
 A joyful meeting they shall have;
 Their essence then shall be divine,
 This muddy flesh shall starlike shine,
 And God shall that fresh youth restore
 Which will abide for evermore.

SIR HENRY WOTTON.

1568-1639.

N, 1568; died, 1639. "How happy is he born and taught," said to have been printed in Courtly Poets, ed. Hannah, 1875. It was quoted to Drummond by Ben Jonson in 19: "Sir Edward [Henry] Wotton's verses of a happy life he hath by heart." "You auties of the night," printed with music in Est's Sixth Set of Books, 1624. It was written a few years before. In 1651, Reliquiae Wottonianae.]

CHARACTER OF A HAPPY LIFE.

Happy is he born and taught Whom serveth not another's will,
 Whom armor is his honest thought,
 Whom simple truth his utmost skill!

Whose passions not his master's are,
 Whose soul is still prepar'd for death,
 Whom into the world by care Whom public fame or private breath.

Whom no views none that chance doth raise,
 Whom no vice hath ever understood;
 Whom no pest wounds are given by praise,
 Whom no rules of state, but rules of good.

Who hath his life from rumors freed,
 Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
 Whose state can neither flatterers feed,
 Nor ruin make oppressors great.

Who God doth late and early pray
 More of his grace than gifts to lend,
 And entertains the harmless day
 With a religious book or friend.

This man is freed from servile hands,
 Of hope to rise, or fear to fall;
 Lord of himself, though not of lands,
 And having nothing, yet hath all.

YOU MEANER BEAUTIES.

You meaner beauties of the night,
That poorly satisfy our eyes
More by your number than your light, —
You common people of the skies,
What are you when the moon shall rise?

Ye violets that first appear,
By your pure purple mantles known,
Like the proud virgins of the year,
As if the spring were all your own, —
What are you when the rose is blown?

Ye curious chanters of the wood,
That warble forth dame Nature's lays,
Thinking your passion understood By your weak accents, — what's your praise
When Philomel her voice shall raise?

So when my mistress shall be seen,
In sweetness of her looks and mind,
By virtue first, then choice, a queen,
Tell me if she was not design'd
Th' eclipse and glory of her kind.

EDMUND WALLER.

1605-1687.

[EDMUND WALLER was born, March 3, 1605, at Coleshill, in Warwickshire. At seventeen years of age he was elected member of parliament for Agmondesham. He married early, and lost his wife soon; after her death he paid court to Lady Dorothy Sidney, daughter of the Earl of Leicester. He protracted his unsuccessful suit, celebrating the lady under the title of Sacharissa, until in 1639 she married the Earl of Sunderland. In 1640 he entered parliament again, and made himself remarkable by his opposition to the King's measures, but when the Civil War became imminent he took the Royalist side. In 1643 he was arrested as one of the leaders of a plot against the Parliament, and having with difficulty preserved his life, proceeded to France on his release. After some years he returned to England and made his peace with Cromwell; at the Restoration he eagerly laid his homage at the feet of Charles II. He was made Provost of Eton, and sat in several parliaments after the Restoration. He died of dropsy, at Beaconsfield, in Buckinghamshire, on the 21st of October, 1687. His poems, first published in 1645, were very frequently reprinted during his lifetime, and always with additions.]

OLD AGE.

THE seas are quiet when the winds give o'er;
So calm are we when passions are no
more;
For then we know how vain it was to boast
Of fleeting things too certain to be lost.
Clouds of affection from our younger eyes Conceal that emptiness which age de-scries.

The soul's dark cottage, batter'd and decay'd,
Lets in new light through chinks that time has made:
Stronger by weakness wiser men become
As they draw near to their eternal home:
Leaving the old, both worlds at once they view
That stand upon the threshold of the new.

ON A GIRDLE.

THAT which her slender waist confined Shall now my joyful temples bind:
It was my heaven's extremest sphere,
The pale which held that lovely dear.
My joy, my grief, my hope, my love,
Did all within this circle move! —
A narrow compass! and yet there Dwelt all that's good, and all that's fair.
Give me but what this ribbon bound,
Take all the rest the sun goes round.

GO, LOVELY ROSE!

Go, lovely Rose!
Tell her that wastes her time and me,
That now she knows,
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.

Tell her that's young,
And shuns to have her graces spied,
That had'st thou sprung
In deserts where no men abide,
Thou must have uncommended died.

Small is the worth
Of beauty from the light retired:
Bid her come forth,
Suffer herself to be desired,
And not blush so to be admired.

Then die! that she
The common fate of all things rare

May read in thee, —
How small a part of time they share
That are so wondrous sweet and fair.

ADDITIONAL STANZA BY KIRKE WHITE.

[Yet, though thou fade,
From thy dead leaves let fragrance
rise;
And teach the maid
That goodness Time's rude hand defies, —
That virtue lives when beauty dies.]

GEORGE HERBERT.

1593-1634.

[GEORGE HERBERT, born, 1592-3; died, 1634. He was Public Orator at Cambridge from 1619 to 1627, and was Rector of Bemerton, in Wiltshire, in 1631. His poems were first published, 1633.]

VIRTUE.

SWEET day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky,
Sweet dew shall weep thy fall to-night,
For thou must die.

Sweet rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie,
My music shows you have your closes,
And all must die.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives;
But when the whole world turns to coal,
Then chiefly lives.

THOMAS CAREW.

1589-1639.

[THOMAS CAREW, Sewer in Ordinary to Charles I., was born about 1589, and died in 1639. He published Coelum Britannicum, 1623, and Poems, 1640.]

MEDIOCRITY IN LOVE REJECTED.

GIVE me more love, or more disdain;
The torrid or the frozen zone
Brings equal ease unto my pain;
The temperate affords me none:
Either extreme, of love or hate,
Is sweeter than a calm estate.

Give me a storm; if it be love —
Like Danaë in a golden shower,
I swim in pleasure; if it prove Disdain, that torrent will devour
My vulture hopes; and he's possess'd Of heaven, that's but from hell re-leas'd.
Then crown my joys, or cure my pain;
Give me more love, or more disdain.

ON CELIA SINGING.

You that think love can convey
 No other way
 But through the eyes into the heart
 His fatal dart;
 Close up their casements, and but hear
 This syren sing,
 And on the wing
 Of her sweet voice it shall appear
 That love can enter at the ear.

Then unveil your eyes, behold
 The curious mould
 Where that voice dwells; and as we know
 When the cocks crow
 We freely may Gaze on the day,
 So may you, when the music's done,
 Awake and see the rising sun.

HE THAT LOVES A ROSY CHEEK.

HE that loves a rosy cheek,
 Or a coral lip admires,
 Or from star-like eyes doth seek Fuel to maintain its fires;
 As old Time makes these decay,
 So his flames must waste away.

But a smooth and steadfast mind,
 Gentle thoughts and calm desires,
 Hearts with equal love combin'd,
 Kindle never-dying fires;
 Where these are not, I despise Lovely cheeks, or lips, or eyes.

ASK ME NO MORE.

ASK me no more, where Jove bestows,
 When June is past, the fading rose;
 For in your beauties' orient deep,
 These flow'rs, as in their causes, sleep.

Ask me no more, whither do stray
 The golden atoms of the day;
 For, in pure love, heaven did prepare
 Those powders to enrich your hair.

Ask me no more, whither doth haste
 The nightingale, when May is past;
 For in your sweet dividing throat
 She winters, and keeps warm her note.

Ask me no more, where those stars light
 That downwards fall in dead of night;
 For, in your eyes they sit, and there
 Fix'd become, as in their sphere.

Ask me no more, if east or west,
 The phoenix builds her spicy nest;
 For unto you at last she flies,
 And in your fragrant bosom dies.

MURDERING BEAUTY.

I'LL gaze no more on her bewitching face,
 Since ruin harbors there in every place;
 For my enchanted soul alike she drowns
 With calms and tempests of her smiles and frowns.

I'll love no more those cruel eyes of hers,
 Which, pleas'd or anger'd, still are murderers:

For if she dart (like lightning) through the air

Her beams of wrath, she kills me with despair;

If she behold me with a pleasing eye,
 I surfeit with excess of joy, and die.

A PRAYER TO THE WIND.

Go, thou gentle whispering wind,
 Bear this sigh; and if thou find
 Where my cruel fair doth rest,
 Cast it in her snowy breast;
 So enflam'd by my desire,
 It may set her heart a-fire:
 Those sweet kisses thou shalt gain,
 Will reward thee for thy pain.
 Boldly light upon her lip,
 There suck odors, and thence skip
 To her bosom; lastly, fall Down, and wander over all;
 Range about those ivory hills
 From whose every part distils
 Amber dew; there spices grow,
 There pure streams of nectar flow:

perfume thyself, and bring Use sweets upon thy wing:
 Thou return'st change by thy pow'r
 Weed into a flow'r;
 Each thistle to a vine,
 The bramble eglantine;
 Rich a booty made,
 But this, and I am paid.
 Thou canst wit' thy pow'rful blast,
 Space, and cool as fast:
 Thou canst kindle hidden flame,
 And gain destroy the same:
 For pity, either stir
 The fire of love in her,
 Or like both flames may shine,
 Or quite extinguish mine.

INGRATEFUL BEAUTY.

O Celia, since thou art so proud,
 As I that gave thee thy renown:
 Thou hadst, in the forgotten crowd
 Among common beauties, liv'd unknown,
 Not my verse exhal'd thy name,
 With it impt the wings of Fame.

Thy killing power is none of thine,
 Give it to thy voice and eyes:
 Thy veets, thy graces, all are mine;
 Thou art my star, shin'st in my skies;
 Thou dart not from thy borrowed sphere
 Leaving on him that fix'd thee there.

Save me with such affrights no more,
 But what I made I uncreate:
 Thou dost thy mystic forms adore,
 I know thee in thy mortal state.
 Poets, that wrap truth in tales,
 Have her themselves through all her Veils.

RED AND WHITE ROSES.

In these roses the sad story,
 Of hard fate, and your own glory:
 The white you may discover
 Of paleness or a fainting lover;
 The red the flames still feeding
 Your heart with fresh wounds bleeding.
 The white will tell you how I languish,
 The red express my anguish:

The white my innocence displaying,
 The red my martyrdom betraying:
 The frowns that on your brow resided,
 Have those roses thus divided.
 O! let your smiles but clear the weather,
 And then they both shall grow together.

THE PRIMROSE.

ASK me why I send you here
 This firstling of the infant year;
 Ask me why I send to you
 This primrose all bepearl'd with dew;
 I straight will whisper in your ears,
 The sweets of love are wash'd with tears:
 Ask me why this flow'r doth show
 So yellow, green, and sickly too;
 Ask me why the stalk is weak,
 And bending, yet it doth not break;
 I must tell you, these discover
 What doubts and fevers are in a lover.

THE PROTESTATION.

No more shall the meads be deck'd with
 flowers,
 Nor sweetness dwell in rosy bowers;
 Nor greenest buds on branches spring,
 Nor warbling birds delight to sing;
 Nor April violets paint the grove;
 If I forsake my Celia's love.

The fish shall in the ocean burn,
 And fountains sweet shall bitter turn;
 The humble oak no flood shall know
 When floods shall highest hills o'erflow;
 Black Lethe shall oblivion leave;
 If e'er my Celia I deceive.

Love shall his bow and shaft lay by,
 And Venus' doves want wings to fly;
 The sun refuse to show his light,
 And day shall then be turn'd to night,
 And in that night no star appear;
 If once I leave my Celia dear.

Love shall no more inhabit earth,
 Nor lovers more shall love for worth;
 Nor joy above in heaven dwell,
 Nor pain torment poor souls in hell;
 Grim Death no more shall horrid prove;
 If e'er I leave bright Celia's love.

ABRAHAM COWLEY.

1618-1667.

[ABRAHAM COWLEY was the posthumous son of a London stationer, and was born in the latter part of the year 1618. He was educated at Westminster School and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he remained from 1636 to 1643. He took the royalist side during the Civil War, and helped the King's cause both at Oxford and afterwards as Secretary to the Queen in her exile in Paris. In 1655 he returned to England, where he remained under strict surveillance till Cromwell's death; then he rejoined his friends in France. At the Restoration he came back, and lived in retirement at Barnes and Chertsey till his death in 1667. His poems were published in the following order: Poetical Blossomes, 1633; Love's Riddle, a comedy, 1638; The Mistress, 1647; The Guardian (surreptitiously published), 1650; the first folio edition of the Works, 1656; other editions of the same followed with the addition of such new poems and essays as he produced from time to time. The most complete editions of his works are those which appeared in 1708 and 1721.]

LIBERTY.

WHERE honor, or where conscience does not bind,
No other law shall shackle me;
Slave to myself I will not be:
Nor shall my future actions be confin'd
By my own present mind.
Who by resolves and vows engag'd does stand
For days that yet belong to Fate, Does, like an unthrift, mortgage his'estate
Before it falls into his hand.
The bondman of the cloister so
All that he does receive does always owe;
And still as time comes in, it goes away,
Not to enjoy, but debts to pay.
Unhappy slave! and pupil to a hell!
Which his hour's work, as well as hours, does tell!
Unhappy to the last, the kind releasing knell.

ON THE DEATH OF CRASHAW.

POET and Saint! to thee alone are giv'n
The two most sacred names of earth and heav'n,
The hard and rarest union which can be,
Next that of Godhead with humanity.
Long did the Muses banished slaves abide,
And built vain pyramids to mortal pride;
Like Moses thou (tho' spells and charms withstand) Hast brought them nobly home back to their Holy Land.

Ah, wretched We! poets of earth!
but thou
Wert living the same poet which thou'rt
now.
Whilst angels sing to thee their airs
divine,
And join in an applause so great as
thine,
Equal society with them to hold, Thou need'st not make new songs, but say the old:
And they, kind Spirits! Shall all rejoice to see How little less than they exalted man may be.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

WHAT shall I do to be forever known,
And make the age to come my own?
I shall like beasts or common people
die,
Unless you write my elegy;
Whilst others great by being born are grown,
Their mother's labor, not their own.
In this scale gold, in th' other fame does
lie;
The weight of that mounts this so high.
These men are Fortune's jewels, moulded brigt,
Brought forth with their own fire and
light.
If I, her vulgar stone, for either look,
Out of myself it must be strook.
Yet I must on: What sound is't strikes mine ear?
Sure I Fame's trumpet hear:

like the last trumpet, for it can the bury'd man.

Alps stop me, but I'll cut ugh all,

THE SOUL.

eyes do e'er declare seen a second thing that's fair;
that they have music found,
thy voice, in any sound;
ste do ever meet,
y kiss with aught that's sweet;

If my abused touch allow Aught to be smooth or soft but thou!
If what seasonable springs,
Or the eastern summer brings,
Do my smell persuade at all Aught perfume but thy breath to call;
If all my senses objects be
Not contracted into thee,
And so through thee more pow'ful pass,
As beams do through a burning-glass;
If all things that in nature are Either soft, or sweet, or fair,
Be not in thee so epitomiz'd,
That nought material's not compris'd,
May I as worthless seem to thee,
As all but thou appear to me.

THE WISH.

WELL, then, I now do plainly see,
This busy world and I shall ne'er agree,
The very honey of all earthly joy
Does of all meats the soonest cloy:
And they (methinks) deserve my pity
Who for it can endure the stings,
The crowd, and buzz, and murmurings,
Of this great hive, the City.

Ah! yet, e'er I descend to the grave,
May I a small house and large garden
have!

And a few friends, and many books, both
true,

Both wise, and both delightful too!
And since Love ne'er will from me flee,
A mistress moderately fair,
And good as guardian angels are,
Only belov'd, and loving me!

LOVE IN HER SUNNY EYES.

LOVE in her sunny eyes does basking
play:

Love walks the pleasant mazes of her
hair;

Love does on both her lips for ever
stray,

And sows and reaps a thousand kisses
there;

In all her outward parts Love's always
seen,

But, Oh! he never went within.

THE SPRING.

[From The Mistress.]

THOUGH you be absent here, I needs must say
The trees as beauteous are, and flowers as gay,
As ever they were wont to be;
Nay the birds' rural music too
Is as melodious and free,
As if they sung to pleasure you:
I saw a rose-bud ope this morn; I'll swear
The blushing morning open'd not more
fair.

How could it be so fair, and you away?
How could the trees be beauteous, flowers so gay?

Could they remember but last year,
How you did them, they you delight,
The sprouting leaves which saw you
here,
And call'd their fellows to the sight,
Would, looking round for the same sight in vain,
Creep back into their silent barks again.

Where'er you walk'd trees were as reverend made,
As when of old gods dwelt in every shade.
Is't possible they should not know,
What loss of honor they sustain,
That thus they smile and flourish now,
And still their former pride retain?
Dull creatures! 'tis not without cause that she,
Who fled the god of wit, was made a tree.

In ancient times sure they much wiser were,
When they rejoic'd the Thracian verse
to hear;

In vain did nature bid them stay,
When Orpheus had his song begun,
They call'd their wondering roots away,
And bade them silent to him run.
How would those learned trees have followed you?

You would have drawn them, and their poet too.

But who can blame them now? for,
since you're gone,
They're here the only fair, and shine
alone.

You did their natural rights invade:
Where ever you did walk or sit,
The thickest boughs could make no
shade,

Although the Sun had granted it:
The fairest flowers could please no more, near you,
Than painted flowers, set next to them,
could do.

When e'er then you came hither, that shall be

The time, which this to others is, to me.
The little joys which here are now,
The name of punishments do bear,
When by their sight they let us know How we depriv'd of greater are.

'Tis you the best of seasons with you bring;

This is for beasts, and that for men the spring.

RICHARD LOVELACE.

1618-1658.

[RICHARD LOVELACE was born at Woolwich in 1618; he died in Gunpowder Alley, near Shoe Lane, London, in April, 1658. His Lucasta was published in 1649, and his Posthume Poems in 1659. He was the author of The Scholar, a comedy, written in 1634, and of The Soldier, a tragedy, written in 1640, but these dramas are lost.]

TO ALTHEA, FROM PRISON.

WHEN love with unconfined wings
Hovers within my gates,
And my divine Althea brings
To whisper at my grates;

When I lie tangled in her hair,
And fetter'd to her eye,
The birds that wanton in the air Know no such liberty.

g cups run swiftly round, laying Thames,
 heads with roses bound,
 with loyal flames;
 grief in wine we steep, this and draughts are free, — people in the deep such liberty.

like confinèd, I er throat shall sing s, mercy, majesty,
 s of my king:
 voice aloud how good great should be, — ds that curl the flood uch liberty.

o not a prison make,
 ars a cage;
 nt and quiet take hermitage:

If I have freedom in my love,
 And in my soul am free, —
 Angels alone that soar above
 Enjoy such liberty.

TO LUCASTA, ON GOING TO THE WARS.

TELL me not, sweet, I am unkind, —
 That from the nunnery
 Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind
 To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
 The first foe in the field;
 And with a stronger faith embrace
 A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
 As you, too, shall adore;
 I could not love thee, dear, so much,
 Loved I not honor more.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING.

1608-9-1642.

was born at Twickenham in 1608-9, and committed suicide in Paris in 1642. He wrote during his lifetime the drama of Aglaure, in 1638, and the Ballad of a Wedding, in 1641. His works were first collected posthumously in 1648, under the title of Fragmenta.

PALE AND WAN?

and wan, fond lover?
 why so pale?
 speaking well can't move her,
 will prevail?
 why so pale?

and mute, young sinner?
 why so mute?
 speaking well can't win her,
 nothing do't?
 why so mute?

shame, this will not move,
 not take her;
 she will not love,
 can make her.
 I take her!

I PRITHEE, SEND ME BACK MY
 HEART.

I PRITHEE, send me back my heart,
 Since I cannot have thine;
 For if from yours you will not part,
 Why, then, shouldst thou have mine?

Yet now I think on't, let it lie,
 To find it were in vain;
 For thou'st a thief in either eye
 Would steal it back again.

Why should two hearts in one breast lie,
 And yet not lodge together?
 O Love! where is thy sympathy,
 If thus our breasts thou sever?

But love is such a mystery,
I cannot find it out;
For when I think I'm best resolv'd,
Then I am most in doubt.

Then farewell care, and farewell woe;
I will no longer pine;
For I'll believe I have her heart,
As much as she has mine.

TRUE LOVE.

No, no, fair heretic, it needs must be
But an ill love in me,
And worse for thee:
For were it in my power
To love thee now this hour
More than I did the last;

'Twould then so fall,
I might not love at all;
Love that can flow, and can admit increase,
Admits as well an ebb, and may grow less.

True love is still the same; the torrid zones,

And those more frigid ones
It must not know:
For love grown cold or hot,
Is lust, or friendship, not
The thing we have.
For that's a flame would die
Held down, or up too high:
Then think I love more than I can express,
And would love more, could I but love thee less.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY.

1639-1701.

[SIR CHARLES SEDLEY was born at Aylesford in 1639, and died August 20, 1701. His most famous comedy, The Mulberry Garden, appeared in 1688; his poetical and dramatic works were collected in 1719.]

THE GROWTH OF LOVE.

[From The Mulberry Garden.]

AH, Chloris! that I now could sit As unconcerned, as when Your infant beauty could beget
No pleasure nor no pain.

When I the dawn used to admire,
And praised the coming day,
I little thought the growing fire
Must take my rest away.

Your charms in harmless childhood lay,
Like metals in the mine:
Age from no face took more away,
Than youth concealed in thine.

But as your charms insensibly
To their perfection pressed,
Fond love as unperceived did fly,
And in my bosom rest.

My passion with your beauty grew,
And Cupid at my heart,
Still, as his mother favored you,
Threw a new flaming dart.

Each gloried in their wanton part:
To make a lover, he Employed the utmost of his art —
To make a beauty she.

Though now I slowly bend to love,
Uncertain of my fate,
If your fair self my chains approve,
I shall my freedom hate.

Lovers, like dying men, may well
At first disordered be;
Since none alive can truly tell
What fortune they must see.

ANASIA; OR, THE HAPPY
DEATH.

'ST see blithe looks, fresh cheeks
Smile
Would'st see December smile?
Hast thou seen hosts of new roses grow
In the midst of reverend snow?
Thoughts, free spirits, flattering Thyself into a spring?
Would'st see a man that can
Be old, and still a man?
The latest and most leaden hours,
Thy soft wings stuck with soft
Wings;
When life's sweet fable ends,
And body part like friends;
Frets, murmurs, no delay —
A sigh, and so — away; —
Would'st thou see one, reader, would'st thou see?
Nay, rather! — and thyself be he.

EPITAPH.

He, whom death again did wed,
Have his second marriage-bed.
Though the hand of Fate could force,
Soul and body a divorce,
Not sunder man and wife,
They both lived but one life.
Good reader, do not weep;
The lovers are asleep;
(Sweet turtles) folded lie,
Fast knot love could tie.
Though they lie as they were dead,
In willow stone, their sheets of lead;
(Hard, and sheets not warm)
Made the bed, they'll take no harm.
In sleep, let them sleep on,
The stormy night be gone,
The eternal morrow dawn;
The curtains will be drawn,
They wake into that light
The day shall never die in night.

THE TEAR.

WHAT bright soft thing is this,
Sweet Mary, thy fair eyes expense?
A moist spark it is.
A wat'ry diamond; from whence
The very term I think was found,
The water of a diamond.

O 'tis not a tear,
'Tis a star about to drop
From thine eye its sphere,
The sun will stoop and take it up,
Proud will his sister be to wear
This thine eye's jewel in her ear.

O 'tis a tear,
Too true a tear; for no sad een
How sad soe'er
Rain so tear as thine;
Each drop leaving a place so dear,
Weeps for itself, as its own tear.

Such a pearl as this is (Slipt from Aurora's dewy breast)
The rosebud's sweet lip kisses;
And such the rose itself when vexed
With ungentle flames, does shed,
Sweating in too warm a bed.

Such the maiden gem,
By the wanton spring put on,
Peeps from her parent stem,
And blushes on the wat'ry sun;
This wat'ry blossom of thy een,
Ripe will make the richer wine.

Fair drop, why quak'st thou so?
'Cause thou straight must lay thy head
In the dust? O no,
The dust shall never be thy bed;
A pillow for thee will I bring,
Stuff'd with down of angel's wing:

Thus carried up on high,
 (For to heaven thou must go)
 Sweetly shalt thou lie,
 And in soft slumbers bathe thy woe,
 Till the singing orbs awake thee,
 And one of their bright chorus make thee.

There thyself shalt be
 An eye, but not a weeping one,
 Yet I doubt of thee, Whether th' hadst rather there have shone,
 An eye of heaven; or still shine here,
 In th' heaven of Mary's eye a tear.

O! THOU UNDAUNTED.

O! THOU undaunted daughter of desires,
 By all thy dower of lights and fires;

By all the eagle in thee, all the dove;
 By all thy lives and deaths of love;
 By thy large draughts of intellectual
 day;
 And by thy thirsts of love, more large than they;
 By all thy brim-fill'd bowls of fierce desire;
 By thy last morning's draught of liquid
 fire;
 By the full kingdom of that final kiss,
 That seal'd thy parting soul, and made thee his;
 By all the heavens thou hast in him,
 Fair sister of the seraphim;
 By all of him we have in thee,
 Leave nothing of myself in me;
 Let me so read thy life, that I
 Unto all life of mine may die.

 ROBERT HERRICK.

 shire, on the 15th of October, 1674. He published one volume, containing Hesperides, dated 1648, and Noble Numbers, dated 1647.]

A THANKSGIVING TO GOD.

LORD, thou hast given me a cell,
 Wherein to dwell;
 A little house, whose humble roof
 Is weather proof;
 Under the spars of which I lie
 Both soft and dry;
 Where thou, my chamber for to ward,
 Hast set a guard
 Of harmless thoughts, to watch and keep Me, while I sleep.
 Low is my porch, as is my fate;
 Both void of state;
 And yet the threshold of my door
 Is worn by th' poor,
 Who thither come, and freely get Good words, or meat.
 Like as my parlor, so my hall
 And kitchen's small;
 A little buttery, and therein
 A little bin,

Which keeps my little loaf of bread
 Unchipt, unfleat;
 Some brittle sticks of thorn or briar
 Make me a fire,
 Close by whose living coal I sit,
 And glow like it.
 Lord, I confess too, when I dine.
 The pulse is thine,
 And all those other bits that be
 There placed by thee;
 The worts, the purslain, and the mess
 Of water-cress,
 Which of thy kindness thou hast sent;
 And my content
 Makes those, and my belovèd beet,
 To be more sweet.
 'Tis thou that crown'st my glittering hearth
 With guiltless mirth,
 And giv'st me wassail bowls to drink,
 Spiced to the brink.

Lord, 'tis thy plenty-dropping hand
 That soils my land,
 And giv'st me, for my bushel sown,
 Twice ten for one;
 Thou mak'st my teeming hen to lay
 Her egg each day;
 Besides, my healthful ewes to bear
 Me twins each year;
 The while the conduits of my kine
 Run cream for wine:
 All these, and better, thou dost send Me, to this end, —
 That I should render, for my part,
 A thankful heart;
 Which, fired with incense, I resign,
 As wholly thine; —
 But the acceptance, that must be,
 My Christ, by Thee.

DELIGHT IN DISORDER.

A SWEET disorder in the dress
 Kindles in clothes a wantonness;
 A lawn about the shoulders thrown Into a fine distraction;
 An erring lace, which here and there Enthrals the crimson stomacher;
 A cuff neglectful, and thereby Ribbons to flow confusedly;
 A winning wave, deserving note,
 In the tempestuous petticoat;
 A careless shoe-string, in whose tie
 I see a wild civility; —
 Do more bewitch me, than when art
 Is too precise in every part.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE HESPERIDES.

I SING of brooks, of blossoms, birds, and
 bowers,
 Of April, May, of June, and July-flowers;
 I sing of May-poles, hock-carts, wassails,
 wakes,
 Of bride-grooms, brides, and of their bridal-cakes.
 I write of Youth, of Love; — and have access
 By these to sing of cleanly wantonness;
 I sing of dews, of rains, and, piece by piece,

Of balm, of oil, of spice, and ambergris.
 I sing of times trans shifting; and I write
 How roses first came red, and lilies white.
 I write of groves, of twilights, and I sing
 The court of Mab, and of the Fa'iry King.
 I write of Hell; I sing, and ever shall Of Heaven, — and hope to have it after all.

TO BLOSSOMS.

FAIR pledges of a fruitful tree,
 Why do ye fall so fast?
 Your date is not so past,
 But you may stay yet here awhile
 To blush and gently smile,
 And go at last.

What, were ye born to be,
 An hour or half's delight,
 And so to bid good-night?
 'Twas pity Nature brought ye forth,
 Merely to show your worth
 And lose you quite.

But you are lovely leaves, where we May read, how soon things have Their end, though ne'er so brave:
 And after they have shown their pride,
 Like you, awhile, they glide
 Into the grave.

TO PRIMROSES FILLED WITH MORNING DEW.

WHY do ye weep, sweet babes? can tears Speak grief in you,
 Who were but born
 Just as the modest morn
 Teem'd her refreshing dew?
 Alas, you have not known that shower
 That mars a flower,
 Nor felt th' unkind
 Breath of a blasting wind,
 Nor are ye worn with years;
 Or warp'd as we,
 Who think it strange to see,
 Such pretty flowers, like to orphans young,
 To speak by tears, before ye have a
 tongue.

Speak, whimp'ring younglings, and make known
 The reason why
 Ye droop and weep;
 Is it for want of sleep,
 Or childish lullaby?
 Or that ye have not seen as yet
 The violet?
 Or brought a kiss
 From that Sweet-heart, to this?
 — No, no, this sorrow shown By your tears shed,
 Would have this lecture read,
 That things of greatest, so of meanest
 worth,
 Conceived with grief are, and with tears brought forth.

NIGHT-PIECE TO JULIA.

HER eyes the glow-worm lend thee,
 The shooting stars attend thee;
 And the elves also,
 Whose little eyes glow
 Like the sparks of fire, befriend thee.
 No Will-o'-the-wisp mislight thee,
 Nor snake or slow-worm bite thee!
 But on, on thy way,
 Not making a stay,
 Since ghost there is none to affright thee.
 Let not the dark thee cumber;
 What though the moon does slumber?
 The stars of the night
 Will lend thee their light,
 Like tapers clear without number.
 Then Julia let me woo thee,
 Thus, thus to come unto me;
 And, when I shall meet Thy silvery feet,
 My soul I'll pour into thee.

THE MAD MAIDS SONG.

GOOD-MORROW to the day so fair,
 Good-morrow, sir, to you;
 Good-morrow to my own torn hair,
 Bedabbled all with dew.

Good-morrow to this primrose too;
 Good-morrow to each maid
 That will with flowers the tomb beset Wherein my love is laid.

Ah, woe is me; woe, woe is me;
 Alack and well-a-day!
 For pity, sir, find out that bee
 Which bore my love away.

I'll seek him in your bonnet brave
 I'll seek him in your eyes;
 Nay, now I think they've made his bed
 In the bed of strawberries.

I'll seek him there, I know ere this
 The cold, cold earth doth shake
 But I will go, or send a kiss
 By you, sir, to awake him.

Pray hurt him not; though he be dead
 He knows well who do love him
 And who with green turfs rear his bed
 And who so rudely move him.

He's soft and tender, pray take heed
 With bands of cowslips bind him
 And bring him home; but 'tis decreed
 That I shall never find him.

TO DAFFODILS.

FAIR daffodils, we weep to see
 You haste away so soon;
 As yet the early rising sun
 Has not attained his noon.
 Stay, stay,
 Until the hasting day
 Has run
 But to the even-song!
 And, having prayed together,
 Will go with you along.

We have short time to stay as you
 We have as short a spring,
 As quick a breath to meet decay
 As you, or any thing.

We die
 As your hours do, and dry
 Away,
 Like to the summer's rain,
 Or as the pearls of morning dew
 Ne'er to be found again.

JOHN MILTON.

1608-1674.

JOHN MILTON (1608-1674) was born in Bread Street, Cheapside, 9 Dec., 1608. Educated at St. Paul's School, and Christ's College, Cambridge, he was destined by his family for the Church. But, however, he was diverted, partly by his strong Puritan bias, partly by an ambition possessed him from a very early period, to compose a great work which should bring honor to his country and to the English language. Full of this lofty purpose, he retired to his father's residence at Horton, in the county of Bucks. Here he gave himself up to study, and meditation, in preparation for the work to which he had resolved to devote his life.

His residence at Horton constitutes Milton's first poetic period, 1632-1638. During these years he wrote L'Allegro and Il Penseroso, Arcades, Comus, and Lycidas. All these were regarded by their author as occasional pieces, exercises for practice, prelude to the labor of his great work which he was all the while meditating.

His journey to Italy, 1638-9, was undertaken as a portion of the poet's education which he was pursuing himself. He was recalled from his tour by the lowering aspect of public affairs at home. For the next twenty years his thoughts were diverted from poetry by the absorbing interest of the political struggle. His time was occupied, partly by official duties as Latin secretary to the Council of State, partly by the voluntary share he took in the controversies of the time.

When the public cause to which he had devoted himself being lost, and the ruin of his party conceded in 1660, Milton reverted to his long-cherished poetical scheme. During the twenty years of political agitation this scheme had never been wholly banished from his thoughts. After long hesitation, "long choosing and beginning late," both subject and form had been decided on. The subject was to be an epic, and was to treat of the fall and recovery of man. He had begun to work on this theme as early as 1658, and in 1665 Paradise Lost was completed. Owing to the outbreak of the Fire, it was not published till August, 1667. It was originally in ten books, which afterwards were made into twelve, as the normal epical number by subdividing books 7 and 10. The subject of the recovery of man had been dropped out of the plan at an early stage, and was afterwards made the subject of a second poem, Paradise Regained, on a hint given by Milton's Quaker friend, Ellwood. These years of disaster and distress, 1665-6, were specially fruitful, as is probable, both Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes were written during this time. The two poems came out in one vol. in 1671, and closed Milton's second poetic period. He lived three years longer, during which he occupied himself with carrying through the press a new edition of his Poems (the 1st ed. was 1645) as well as several compilations, which furnished mental occupation without requiring inventive power. He died, 8 Nov., 1674.]

THE INVOCATION AND INTRODUCTION.

[From Paradise Lost.]

Man's first disobedience, and the fruit
Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste Brought death into the world, and all our
Woe,
To the loss of Eden, till one greater Man
Restore us, and regain the blissful seat,
O heavenly Muse, that on the secret top
Of Sidon, or of Sinai, didst inspire
That shepherd, who first taught the chosen seed,
In the beginning, how the Heavens and Earth
Rose out of Chaos: or, if Sion hill Look thee more, and Siloa's brook that Washed
By the oracle of God; I thence

Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar
Above the Aonian mount, while it pursues Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.
And chiefly thou, O Spirit, that dost prefer Before all temples the upright heart and pure,
Instruct me, for thou know'st; thou from the first Wast present, and, with mighty wings out-spread,
Dove-like sat'st brooding on the vast abyss
And mad'st it pregnant: what in me is dark
Illumine; what is low raise and support;
That to the height of this great argument
I may assert eternal Providence,
And justify the ways of God to man.

Say first, for Heaven hides nothing from thy view,
 Nor the deep tract of Hell; say first,
 what cause
 Moved our grand parents, in that happy
 state,
 Favor'd of Heaven so highly, to fall off From their Creator, and transgress his will
 For one restraint, lords of the world besides?
 Who first seduced them to that foul revolt?
 The infernal serpent; he it was, whose
 guile,
 Stirr'd up with envy and revenge, deceived
 The mother of mankind, what time his
 pride
 Had cast him out of Heaven, with all his host
 Of rebel angels; by whose aid, aspiring
 To set himself in glory above his peers,
 He trusted to have equalled the Most
 High,
 If he opposed; and, with ambitious aim
 Against the throne and monarchy of God, Raised impious war in Heaven, and battle proud,
 With vain attempt. Him the Almighty
 power Hurl'd headlong flaming from the ethereal sky,
 With hideous ruin and combustion, down
 To bottomless perdition; there to dwell
 In adamant chains and penal fire,
 Who durst defy the Omnipotent to arms.

THE FALLEN ANGELS IN THE BURNING LAKE.

THE superior fiend
 Was moving toward the shore: his ponderous shield,
 Ethereal temper, massy, large and round,
 Behind him cast; the broad circumfer-ence
 Hung on his shoulder, like the moon, whose orb
 Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views

At evening from the top of Fesolé,
 Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands,
 Rivers, or mountains, in her spotty globe.
 His spear, to equal which the tallest pine Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast
 Of some great ammiral, were but a wand,
 He walk'd with, to support uneasy steps,
 Over the burning marle, not like those steps
 On Heaven's azure; and the torrid
 clime Smote on him sore besides, vaulted with
 fire:
 Nathless he so endured till on the beach
 Of that inflam'd sea he stood, and call'd His legions, angel forms, who lay in-tranced,
 Thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks
 In Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian
 shades,
 High over-arch'd, imbower; or scatter'd sedge Afloat, when with fierce winds Orion
 arm'd Hath vex'd the Red-Sea coast, whose waves o'erthrew
 Busiris and his Memphian chivalry, While with perfidious hatred they pursued
 The sojourners of Goshen, who beheld
 From the safe shore their floating ca-cases
 And broken chariot wheels: so thick bestrewn,
 Abject and lost lay these, covering the flood,
 Under amazement of their hideous
 change.
 He call'd so loud, that all the hollow deep Of Hell resounded. "Princes, poten-tates,
 Warriors, the flower of Heaven, once
 yours, now lost,
 If such astonishment as this can seize Eternal spirits; or have ye chosen this place,
 After the toil of battle to repose
 Your wearied virtue, for the case you find

to slumber here, as in the vales of
Heaven?
Or in this abject posture have ye sworn,
'adore the Conqueror? who now be-holds herub and seraph rolling in the flood With scatter'd arms and ensigns, till anon
His swift pursuers, from Heaven-gates, discern
h' advantage, and, descending, tread us down
Thus drooping, or with link'd thunderbolts
ransfix us to the bottom of this gulf.
Wake, arise, or be for ever fallen!"

ATAN PRESIDING IN THE IN-FERNAL COUNCIL.

LIGHT on a throne of royal state which far outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
Or where the gorgeous East with richest
hand howers on her kings barbaric pearl and
gold,
atan exalted sat, by merit raised
To that bad eminence: and, from despair
Thus high uplifted beyond hope, aspires beyond thus high, insatiate to pursue vain war with Heaven, and, by success untaught,
His proud imaginations thus display'd:
"Powers and dominions, deities of
Heaven;
Or since no deep within her gulf can hold Immortal vigor, though oppress'd and fall'n, give not Heaven for lost. From this descent Celestial virtues rising, will appear fore glorious and more dread than from no fall,
and trust themselves to fear no second
fate.
Be though just right, and the fix'd laws
of Heaven,

Did first create your leader; next, free
choice,
With what besides in counsel or in fight Hath been achieved of merit; yet this loss
Thus far at least recover'd, hath much
more Establish'd in a safe unenvied throne, Yielded with full consent. The happier
state
In Heaven, which follows dignity, might draw
Envy from each inferior; but who here Will envy whom the highest place exposes Foremost to stand against the Thunder-er's aim,
Your bulwark, and condemns to greatest share
Of endless pain? Where there is then no good
For which to strive, no strife can grow up there
From faction; for none sure will claim in Hell Precedence; none whose portion is so small
Of present pain, that with ambitious
mind
Will covet more. With this advantage
then
To union, and firm faith, and firm accord,
More than can be in heaven, we now return
To claim our just inheritance of old,
Surer to prosper than prosperity Could have assur'd us; and, by what best way,
Whether of open war, or covert guile,
We now debate: who can advise may speak."

ADDRESS TO LIGHT.

HAIL, holy Light, offspring of Heaven,
first-born,
Or of the Eternal coeternal beam,
May I express thee unblamed? since God is light,
And never but in unapproached light

Dwelt from eternity, dwelt then in thee, Bright effluence of bright essence incre-ate.

Or hear'st thou rather, pure ethereal
stream,

Whose fountain who shall tell? Before the Sun,

Before the Heavens thou wert, and at the voice

Of God, as with a mantle, didst invest The rising world of waters dark and deep,

Won from the void and formless infinite.

Thee I revisit now with a bolder wing, Escaped the Stygian pool, though long detain'd

In that obscure sojourn, while, in my flight,

Through utter and through middle darkness borne,

With other notes than to the Orphéan
lyre,

I sung of Chaos and eternal Night;
Taught by the heavenly Muse to venture
down

The dark descent, and up to re-ascend,
Though hard and rare: thee I revisit safe,

And feel thy sovran vital lamp: but thou Revisit'st not these eyes, that roll in vain
To find thy piercing ray, and find no dawn;

So thick a drop serene hath quench'd their orbs,

Or dim suffusion veil'd. Yet not the
more

Cease I to wander, where the Muses
haunt

Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny
hill,

Smit with the love of sacred song; but chief

Thee, Sion, and the flowery brooks beneath,

That wash thy hallowed feet, and warbling flow,

Nightly I visit: nor sometimes forget Those other two, equall'd with me in
fate

So were I equall'd with them in renown,
Blind Thamyras, and blind Mæonides,

And Tiresias, and Phineus, prophets
old:

Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary
move

Harmonious numbers; as the wakeful bird

Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid,

Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus with the year

Seasons return; but not to me returns Day, or the sweet approach of even or

morn,
Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's

rose,
Or flocks or herds, or human face divine;

But cloud instead, and ever-during dark Surrounds me, from the cheerful ways of

men
Cut off, and for the book of knowledge
fair

Presented with a universal blank
Of Nature's works, to me expunged and

razed,
And wisdom at one entrance quite shut

out.
So much the rather thou, celestial Light, Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate: there plant eyes, all mist from thence

Purge and disperse, that I may see and
-tell

Of things invisible to mortal sight.

THE ANGELIC WORSHIP.

No sooner had the Almighty ceased, but
all

The multitude of angels, with a shout Loud as from numbers without number,

sweet
As from the blest voices, uttering joy,
Heaven rung

With jubilee, and loud Hosannas fill'd
The eternal regions: lowly reverent

Towards either throne they bow, and to the ground

With solemn adoration down they cast

"Heaven rung
With jubilee, and loud hosannas filled
The eternal regions."

 Till pride and worse ambition threw me

 Warring in Heaven against Heaven's matchless king:
 Ah, wherefore! he deserved no such return
 From me, whom he created what I was In that bright eminence, and with his
 good Upbraided none; nor was his service
 hard.
 What could be less than to afford him
 praise,
 The easiest recompense, and pay him
 thanks,
 How due! yet all his good proved ill in
 me,
 And wrought but malice; lifted up so
 high
 I 'sdained subjection, and thought one step higher
 Would set me highest, and in a moment quit
 The debt immense of endless gratitude,
 So burthensome still paying, still to owe;
 Forgetful what from him I still received,
 And understood not that a grateful mind
 By owing owes not, but still pays, at once Indebted and discharged; what burden
 then?
 O, had his powerful destiny ordain'd
 Me some inferior angel, I had stood Then happy; no unbounded hope had raised Ambition! Yet why not? some other
 power
 As great might have aspired, and me, though mean,
 Drawn to his part; but other powers as great
 Fell not, but stand unshaken, from within
 Or from without, to all temptations arm'd.
 Hadst thou the same free will and power to stand?
 Thou hadst: whom hast thou then or what to accuse,
 But Heaven's free love dealt equally to
 all?
 Be then his love accursed, since, love or hate,

To me alike, it deals eternal woe.
 Nay, cursed be thou ; since against his thy will
 Chose freely what it now so justly rues.
 Me miserable ! which way shall I fly
 Infinite wrath and infinite despair ?
 Which way I fly is Hell ; myself am Hell ;
 And, in the lowest deep, a lower deep,
 Still threatening to devour me, opens
 wide,
 To which the Hell I suffer seems a
 Heaven.
 O, then, at last relent : is there no place Left for repentance, none for pardon left ?
 None left but by submission ; and that word Disdain forbids me, and my dread of
 shame
 Among the spirits beneath, whom I seduced
 With other promises and other vaunts
 Than to submit, boasting I could subdue
 The Omnipotent. Ay me ! they little know
 How dearly I abide that boast so vain.
 Under what torments inwardly I groan, While they adore me on the throne of Hell.
 With diadem and sceptre high advanced,
 The lower still I fall, only supreme
 In misery : such joy ambition finds.
 But say I could repent, and could obtain,
 By act of grace, my former state ; how soon
 Would height recall high thoughts, how soon unsay
 What feign'd submission swore ? Ease would recant
 Vows made in pain, as violent and void.
 For never can true reconciliation grow, Where wounds of deadly hate have pierced so deep ;
 Which would but lead me to a worse relapse
 And heavier fall : so should I purchase
 dear
 Short intermission bought with double smart.
 This knows my Punisher ; therefore as far From granting he, as I from begging
 peace :

All hope excluded thus, behold, instead
 Of us outcast, exiled, his new delight,
 Mankind, created, and for him this world.
 So farewell hope ; and with hope, farewell fear ;
 Farewell remorse ! all good to me is lost ;
 Evil, be thou my good ; by thee at least Divided empire with Heaven's King I
 hold,
 By thee, and more than half perhaps will reign ;
 As man ere long, and this new world,
 shall know.

PARADISE.

So on he fares, and to the border comes,
 Of Eden, where delicious Paradise,
 Now nearer, crowns with her enclosure
 green.
 As with a rural mound, the champain
 head
 Of a steep wilderness, whose hairy sides With thicket overgrown, grotesque and wild,
 Access denied ; and overhead upgrew
 Insuperable height of loftiest shade, Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm,
 A sylvan scene ; and, as the ranks ascend Shade above shade, a woody theatre Of stateliest view. Yet higher than their tops
 The verdurous wall of Paradise up-
 sprung :
 Which to our general sire gave prospect large
 Into his nether empire neighboring
 round.
 And higher than that wall a circling row
 Of goodliest trees, loaden with fairest fruit,
 Blossoms and fruits at once, of golden hue,
 Appeared, with gay enamell'd colors
 mix'd :
 On which the Sun more glad impress'd his beams
 Than in fair evening cloud, or humid bow,

When God hath shower'd the earth; so lovely seem'd that landscape: and of pure, now purer
 air
 meets his approach, and to the heart inspires eternal delight and joy, able to drive all sadness but despair: now gentle gales,
 fanning their odoriferous wings, dispense active perfumes, and whisper whence they stole those balmy spoils. As when, to them who sail beyond the Cape of Hope, and now are
 past
 the tropic, off at sea north-east winds blow
 Arabian odors from the spicy shore of Araby the blest; with such delay well pleased, they slack their course, and many a league,
 cheer'd with the grateful smell, old Ocean smiles.

EVE'S RECOLLECTIONS.

THAT day I oft remember, when from
 sleep
 first awaked, and found myself reposed under a shade on flowers, much wondering where and what I was, whence thither brought,
 and how.
 Not distant far from thence, a murmuring sound
 Of waters issued from a cave, and spread
 into a liquid plain, then stood unmoved, pure as the expanse of Heaven; I thither went
 With unexperienced thought, and laid me down on the green bank, to look into the clear smooth lake, that to me seem'd another
 sky.
 As I bent down to look, just opposite,

A shape within the watery gleam appear'd,
 Bending to look on me: I started back,
 It started back; but pleased I soon re-turn'd,
 Pleased it return'd as soon with answering looks
 Of sympathy and love.

EVENING IN PARADISE.

Now came still Evening on, and Twilight gray
 Had in her sober livery all things clad; Silence accompanied; for beast and
 bird,
 They to their grassy couch, these to their nests,
 Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale;
 She all night long her amorous descant
 sung;
 Silence was pleased: now glow'd the firmament
 With living sapphires: Hesperus, that led
 The starry host, rode brightest, till the Moon,
 Rising in clouded majesty, at length Apparent queen, unveil'd her peerless
 light,
 And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.

EVE'S CONJUGAL LOVE. *

My author and disposer, what thou bid'st,
 Unargued I obey: so God ordains;
 God is thy law, thou mine: to know no
 more
 Is woman's happiest knowledge, and her praise.
 With thee conversing I forget all time;
 All seasons and their change, all please alike.
 Sweet in the breath of Morn, her rising
 sweet,
 With charms of earliest birds: pleasant
 the Sun,

When first on this delightful land he spreads
 His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit,
 and flower,
 Glistering with dew; fragrant the fertile
 Earth
 After soft showers; and sweet the coming on
 Of grateful Evening mild; then silent
 Night,
 With this her solemn bird, and this fair
 Moon,
 And these the gems of Heaven, her starry train:
 But neither breath of Morn, when she ascends
 With charm of earliest birds; nor rising
 Sun
 On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit,
 flower,
 Glistering with dew; nor fragrance after showers;
 Nor grateful Evening mild; nor silent
 Night,
 With this her solemn bird; nor walk by
 moon,
 Or glittering star-light, without thee, is sweet.

*ADAM AND EVE'S MORNING
 HYMN.*

THESE are thy glorious works, Parent of
 good,
 Almighty! Thine this universal frame, Thus wondrous fair: Thyself how wondrous then!
 Unspeakable, who sit'st above these heavens
 To us invisible, or dimly seen In these thy lowest works; yet these declare Thy goodness beyond thought, and power divine.
 Speak, ye who best can tell, ye sons of
 light,
 Angels; for ye behold him, and with songs
 And choral symphonies, day without
 night,

Circle his throne rejoicing; ye, in
 Heaven:
 On Earth join all ye creatures to extol Him first, him last, him midst, and without end.
 Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
 If better thou belong not to the dawn, Sure pledge of day, that crown'st the smiling morn
 With thy bright circlet, praise him in thy sphere, While day arises, that sweet hour of prime.
 Thou Sun, of this great world both eye and soul,
 Acknowledge him thy greater; sound his praise
 In thy eternal course, both when thou climb'st,
 And when high noon hast gain'd, and when thou fall'st.
 Moon, that now meet'st the orient Sun,
 now fly'st,
 With the fix'd stars, fix'd in their orb that flies;
 And ye five other wandering fires, that
 move
 In mystic dance not without song, re-
 sound
 His praise, who out of darkness call'd up light.
 Air, and ye elements, the eldest birth
 Of Nature's womb, that in quaternion
 run
 Perpetual circle, multiform; and mix
 And nourish all things; let your ceaseless change
 Vary to our great Maker still new praise.
 Ye mists and exhalations, that now rise From hill or steaming lake, dusky, or gray,
 Till the Sun paint your fleecy skirts with
 gold,
 In honor to the world's great Author
 rise;
 Whether to deck with clouds the un-color'd sky,
 Or wet the thirsty Earth with falling
 showers,
 Rising or falling still advance his praise.
 His praise, ye winds, that from four quarters blow,

soft or loud; and wave your tops, ye pines, every plant, in sign of worship
 give.

And ye that warble as ye flow, your murmurs, warbling tune his
 praise.

Ye birds, all ye living souls: ye birds, rising up to Heaven-gate ascend, with your wings and in your notes
 his praise.

And ye that walk on earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep;

As if I be silent, morn or even,
 in the valley, fountain, or fresh rill, or by my song, and taught his
 praise.

Universal Lord, be bounteous still to us only good; and if the night hath shewn aught of evil or conceal'd, dispel it, as now light dispels the dark!

V, IN HIS EXPEDITION TO THE UPPER WORLD, MEETS AND DEATH.

WHILE, the adversary of God and
 man,
 with thoughts inflamed of highest sign,

With swift wings, and towards the gates of Hell

His solitary flight: sometimes turns the right hand coast, sometimes the left;

And waves with level wing the deep,
 when soars

The fiery concave towering high.
 When far off at sea, a fleet descried in the clouds, by equinoctial winds

Sailing from Bengala, or the isles of Spate and Tidore, whence merchants bring

Spicy drugs; they, on the trading road,

From the wide Ethiopian to the Cape, bounding nightly toward the pole:
 seem'd

Far off the flying fiend. At last appear Hell bounds, high reaching to the horrid roof,

And thrice threefold the gates; three folds were brass,

Three iron, three of adamant rock
 Impenetrable, impaled with circling fire, Yet unconsumed. Before the gates there sat

On either side a formidable shape;
 The one seem'd woman to the waist and
 fair;

But ended foul in many a scaly fold
 Voluminous and vast; a serpent arm'd With mortal sting: About her middle
 round

A cry of Hell-hounds, never ceasing, bark'd

With wide Cerberian mouths full loud, and rung

A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,

If aught disturb'd their noise, into her womb,

And kennel there; yet there still bark'd and howl'd,

Within unseen. Far less abhorr'd than these

Vex'd Scylla, bathing in the sea that parts Calabria from the hoarse Trinacrian
 shore;

Nor uglier follow the night-hag, when, call'd

In secret, riding through the air she comes,

Lured with the smell of infant blood, to dance

With Lapland witches, while the laboring Moon

Eclipses at their charms. The other
 shape,

If shape it might be call'd that shape had none

Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb;

(Or substance might be call'd that shadow
 seem'd,

For each seem'd either: black it stood as night,

Fierce as ten furies, terrible as Hell,
 And shook a dreadful dart; what seem'd his head

The likeness of a kingly crown had on.
 Satan was now at hand, and from his seat
 The monster moving onward came as fast
 With horrid strides; Hell trembled as he strode.
 The undaunted fiend what this might be admired, Admired, not feared; God and his son except,
 Created thing naught valued he, nor shunn'd:
 And with disdainful look thus first began:
 "Whence and what art thou, execrable
 shape,
 That darest, though grim and terrible,
 advance
 Thy miscreated front athwart my way To yonder gates? through them I mean to pass,
 That be assured, without leave ask'd of
 thee:
 Retire, or taste thy folly, and learn by proof
 Hell-born, not to contend with spirits of Heaven." To whom the goblin full of wrath replied:
 "Art thou that traitor-angel, art thou he,
 Who first broke peace in Heaven, and faith, till then Unbroken; and in proud rebellious arms Drew after him the third part of Heaven's sons
 Conjured against the Highest; for which both thou
 And they, outcast from God, are here condemn'd
 To waste eternal days in woe and pain?
 And reckon'st thou thyself with spirits
 of Heaven,
 Hell-doom'd, and breathe'st defiance
 here and scorn,
 Where I reign king, and, to enrage thee
 more,
 Thy king and lord? Back to thy punishment,
 False fugitive! and to thy speed add
 wings,
 Lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue Thy lingering, or with one stroke of this dart

Strange horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before."

So spake the grisly Terror, and in shape,
 So speaking and so threatening, grew tenfold
 More dreadful and deform. On the other side,
 Incensed with indignation, Satan stood Unterrified, and like a comet burn'd,
 That fires the length of Ophiuchus huge
 In the Arctic sky, and from his horrid
 hair
 Shakes pestilence and war. Each at the head
 Levell'd his deadly aim; their fatal
 hands
 No second stroke intend; and such a frown
 Each cast at the other, as when two black
 clouds,
 With Heaven's artillery fraught, come rattling on Over the Caspian, then stand front to front,
 Hovering a space, till winds the signal
 blow
 To join their dark encounter in mid air:
 So frown'd the mighty combatants, that
 Hell
 Grew darker at their frown; so match'd they stood;
 For never but once more was either like
 To meet so great a foe: and now great deeds
 Had been achieved, whereof all Hell had rung,
 Had not the snaky sorceress that sat
 Fast by Hell-gate, and kept the fatal key, Risen, and with hideous outcry rush'd between.

From her side the fatal key,
 Sad instrument of all our woe, she took;
 And, towards the gate rolling her bestial
 train,
 Forthwith the huge portcullis high up drew,
 Which but herself, not all the Stygian
 powers
 Could once have moved; then in the keyhole turns

and every bolt and id rock with ease
idden open fly,
il and jarring sound,
and on their hinges

the lowest bottom en'd, but to shut the gates wide open wings a banner'd is marching, might riots rank'd in loose and like a furnace

ing smoke and ruddy sudden view appear oary deep; a dark ithout bound,
n, where length,
ight,
e are lost; where

s of Nature, hold idst the noise
by confusion stand.
ist, and Dry, four
e,

is; they around the n their several clans,
ivy, sharp, smooth,

innumber'd as the s torrid soil, warring winds, and

. To whom these Chaos umpire sits,
re embroils the fray,
: next him high ar-

Chance governs all. Into this wild abyss,
The womb of Nature, and perhaps her
grave,
Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor
fire,
But all these in their pregnant causes
mix'd
Confusedly, and which thus must ever fight,
Unless the Almighty Maker them ordain
His dark materials to create more worlds;
Into this wild abyss the wary fiend Stood on the brink of Hell, and look'd a while,
Pondering his voyage.

L'ALLEGRO.

HENCE loathed Melancholy,
Of Cerberus, and blackest Midnight
born,
In Stygian cave forlorn,
'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sighs unholy,
Find out some uncouth cell, Where brooding Darkness spreads his jealous wings,
And the night raven sings;
There under ebon shades, and lowbrow'd rocks,
As ragged as thy locks,
In dark Cimmerian desert ever dwell.
But come, thou Goddess fair and free,
In Heav'n yclep'd Euphrosyne,
And by men, heart-easing Mirth,
Whom lovely Venus at a birth
With two sister Graces more
To ivy-crowned Bacchus bore:
Or whether (as some sages sing)
The frolic wind that breathes the spring, Zephyr, with Aurora playing,
As he met her once a maying,
There on beds of v'lets blue,
And fresh-blown roses wash'd in dew,
Fill'd her with thee a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonair.
Haste, thee, Nymph, and bring with
thee
Jest and youthful Jollity,

Quips, and cranks, and wanton wiles,
 Nods, and becks, and wreathed smiles,
 Such as hang on Hebe's cheek,
 And love to live in dimple sleek;
 Sport that wrinkled Care derides,
 And Laughter holding both his sides:
 Come, and trip it as you go
 On the light fantastic toe,
 And in thy right hand lead with thee,
 The mountain-nymph, sweet Liberty;
 And, if I give thee honor due,
 Mirth, admit me of thy crew,
 To live with her, and live with thee,
 In unreprieved pleasures free:
 To hear the lark begin his flight,
 And singing startle the dull night,
 From his watch-tow'r in the skies,
 Till the dappled dawn doth rise;
 Then to come, in spite of sorrow,
 And at my window bid good morrow
 Through the sweetbrier, or the vine,
 Or the twisted eglantine:
 While the cock with lively din
 Scatters the rear of darkness thin,
 And to the stack, or the barn door,
 Stoutly struts his dames before:
 Oft list'ning how the hounds and horn
 Cheerly rouse the slumb'ring morn,
 From the side of some hoar hill,
 Through the high wood echoing shrill:
 Some time walking not unseen
 By hedge-row elms, on hillocks green,
 Right against the eastern gate,
 Where the great Sun begins his state,
 Rob'd in flames, and amber light,
 The clouds in thousand liv'ries dight;
 While the ploughman, near at hand,
 Whistles o'er the furrow'd land,
 And the milk-maid singeth blithe,
 And the mower whets his scythe,
 And ev'ry shepherd tells his tale
 Under the hawthorn in the dale.

Straight mine eye hath caught new pleasures,
 While the landscape round it measures,
 Russet lawns, and fallows gray,
 Where the nibbling flocks do stray;
 Mountains on whose barren breast
 The lab'ring clouds do often rest;
 Meadows trim with daisies pied;
 Shallow brooks, and rivers wide:
 Tow'rs and battlements it sees

Bosom'd high in tufted trees,
 Where perhaps some beauty lies,
 The cynosure of neighb'ring eyes.
 Hard by, a cottage-chimney smokes,
 From betwixt two aged oaks,
 Where Corydon and Thyrsis met,
 Are at their sav'ry dinner set
 Of herbs, and other country messes,
 Which the neat-handed Phyllis dresses:
 And then in haste her bow'r she leaves
 With Thestylis to bind the sheaves;
 Or, if the earlier season lead,
 To the tann'd haycock in the mead.

Sometimes, with secure delight,
 The upland hamlets will invite,
 When the merry bells ring round,
 And the jocund rebecks sound
 To many a youth, and many a maid,
 Dancing in the chequer'd shade;
 And young and old come forth to play
 On a sunshine holiday.

Till the livelong daylight fail;
 Then to the spicy nut-brown ale,
 With stories told of many a feat,
 How fairy Mab the junkets ate;
 She was pinch'd, and pull'd, she said,
 And he by friar's lantern led:
 Tells how the drudging goblin sweat
 To earn his cream-bowl duly set,
 When in one night, ere glimpse of morn,
 His shad'wy flail had thresh'd the corn,
 That ten day-laborers could not end;
 Then lies him down the lubber fiend,
 And, stretch'd out all the chimney's length,

Basks at the fire his hairy strength,
 And, cropful, out of doors he flings,
 Ere the first cock his matin rings.
 Thus done the tales, to bed they creep,
 By whisp'ring winds soon lull'd asleep.

Tow'rd cities please us then,
 And the busy hum of men,
 Where throngs of knights and barons bold

In weeds of peace high triumphs hold,
 With store of ladies, whose bright eyes
 Rain influence, and judge the prize
 Of wit, or arms, while both contend
 To win her grace, whom all commend,
 There let Hymen oft appear
 In saffron robes, with taper clear,
 And pomp, and feast, and revelry, and antique pageantry, youthful poets dream,

 es, by haunted stream.

PENSEROSO.

cluding joys,

 idle brain,

 ay motes that people the pensioners of Morpheus' hou Goddess, sage and Melancholy!

 visage is too bright se of human sight, to our weaker view
 lack, staid Wisdom's hue:

Black, but such as in esteem
 Prince Memnon's sister might beseem,
 Or that starr'd Ethiop queen, that strove
 To set her beauty's praise above
 The sea-nymphs, and their pow'rs offended,
 Yet thou art higher far descended;
 Thee bright-hair'd Vesta long of yore
 To solitary Saturn bore;
 His daughter she (in Saturn's reign Such mixture was not held a stain).
 Oft in glim'ring bow'rs and glades
 He met her, and in secret shades
 Of woody Ida's inmost grove,
 While yet there was no fear of Jove.

Come, pensive nun, devout and pure,
 Sober, steadfast, and demure,
 All in a robe of darkest grain
 Flowing with majestic train,
 And sable stole of cypress lawn,
 Over thy decent shoulders drawn.
 Come, but keep thy wonted state,
 With even step and musing gait,
 And looks commercing with the skies,
 Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes:
 There, held in holy passion still,
 Forget thyself to marble, till
 With a sad leaden downward cast,
 Thou fix them on the earth as fast;
 And join with thee calm Peace and Quiet,
 Spare Fast, that oft with Gods doth diet,
 And hear the Muses in a ring
 Aye round about Jove's altar sing;
 And add to these retired Leisure,
 That in trim gardens takes his pleasure;
 But first and chiefest with thee bring Him that yon soars on golden wing, Guiding the fi'ry-wheeled throne,
 The cherub Contemplation;
 And the mute Silence hist along,
 'Less Philomel will deign a song,
 In his sweetest, saddest plight,
 Smoothing the rugged brow of Night,
 While Cynthia checks her dragon yoke,
 Gently o'er th' accusom'd oak;
 Sweet bird, that shunn'st the noise of folly,
 Most musical, most melancholy!
 Thee, chantress, oft the woods among,
 I woo to hear thy ev'ning song;
 And missing thee, I walk unseen

On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wand'ring Moon,
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the Heav'ns' wide pathless
way;

And oft, as if her head she bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.

Oft on a plat of rising ground
I hear the far-off curfew sound,
Over some wide-water'd shore,
Swinging, slow with sullen roar.

Or if the air will not permit,
Some still, removed place will fit,
Where glowing embers through the room
Teach light to counterfeit a gloom,
Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth,
Or the bellman's drowsy charm,
To bless the doors from nightly harm.

Or let my lamp at midnight hour
Be seen on some high lonely tow'r,
Where I may oft outwatch the Bear,
With thrice great Hermes, or unsphere
The spirit of Plato, to unfold
What worlds, or what vast regions hold
Th' immortal mind, that hath forsook
Her mansion in its fleshly nook;
And of those demons that are found
In fire, air, flood, or under ground,
Whose power hath a true consent
With planet, or with element.

Sometime let gorgeous Tragedy
In sceptred pall come sweeping by,
Presenting Thebes, or Pelops' line,
Or the tale of Troy divine,
Or what (though rare) of later age,
Ennobled hath the buskin'd stage.

But, O sad virgin! that thy pow'r Might raise Musæus from his bow'r,
Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek,
And made Hell grant what Love did seek;

Or call up him that left half told
The story of Cambuscan bold,
Of Camball, and of Algarsife,
And who had Canace to wife,
That own'd the virtuous ring and glass,
And of the wondrous horse of brass,
On which the Tartar king did ride;

And if aught else great bards besides
In sage and solemn tunes have sung.
Of tourneys and of trophies hung;
Of forests and enchantments drear,
Where more is meant than meets the ear
Thus Night oft see me in thy pale career,

Till civil-suited Morn appear,
Not trick'd and frounc'd as she wa wont

With the Attic boy to hunt,
But kerchief'd in a comely cloud,
While rocking winds are piping loud,
Or usher'd with a shower still,
When the gust hath blown his fill,
Ending on the rustling leaves,
With minute drops from off the eaves.

And when the sun begins to fling
His flaring beams, me, Goddess, bring
To arched walks of twilight groves,
And shadows brown, that Sylvan loves,
Of pine or monumental oak,
Where the rude axe with heaved stroke
Was never heard, the Nymphs to daunt, Or fright them from their hallow'd
haunt.

There in close covert by some brook,
Where no profaner eye may look,
Hide me from day's garish eye,
While the bee with honey'd thigh,
That at her flow'ry work doth sing,
And the waters murmuring,
With such concert as they keep,
Entice the dewy-feather'd Sleep:
And let some strange mysterious dream
Wave at his wings in airy stream
Of lively portraiture display'd,
Softly on my eyelids laid:

And as I wake, sweet music breathe
Above, about, or underneath,
Sent by some spirit to mortals good,
Or th' unseen Genius of the wood.

But let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloister's pale,
And love the high imbowed roof,
With antique pillars massy proof,
And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light.
There let the pealing organ blow,
To the full-voiced choir below,
In service high, and anthems clear,
As may with sweetness, through mine ear

e me into ecstasies, ng all Heav'n before mine eyes.
 may at last my weary age
 t the peaceful hermitage,
 ry gown and mossy cell,
 I may sit and rightly spell
 'star that Heav'n doth shew, ry herb that sips the dew; Experience do attain ething like prophetic strain.
 : pleasures, Melancholy, give,
 ith thee will choose to live.

 e were nursed upon the self-same same flock, by fountain, shade, l rill.

Together both, ere the high lawns appear'd
 Under the opening eyelids of the morn,
 We drove a-field, and both together
 heard
 What time the gray-fly winds her sultry
 horn,
 Battening our flocks with the fresh dews of night,
 Oft till the star, that rose at evening
 bright,
 Toward Heaven's descent had sloped his westering wheel.
 Meanwhile the rural ditties were not mute,
 Temper'd to the oaten flute;
 Rough satyrs danced, and fauns with cloven heel
 From the glad sound would not be absent long:
 And old Damætas loved to hear our
 song.
 But, oh! the heavy change, now thou art gone,
 Now thou art gone and never must return!
 Thee, shepherd, thee the woods, and desert caves,
 With wild thyme and the gadding vine
 o'ergrown,
 And all their echoes, mourn:
 The willows, and the hazel copses green,
 Shall now no more be seen Fanning their joyous leaves to thy soft lays.
 As killing as the canker to the rose,
 Or taint-worm to the weanling herds that graze,
 Or frost to flowers, that their gay wardrobe wear,
 When first the white-thorn blows;
 Such, Lycidas, thy loss to shepherd's ear.
 Where were ye, nymphs, when the remorseless deep Closed o'er the head of your loved Ly-cidas?
 For neither were ye playing on the steep,
 Where your old bards, the famous Druids,
 lie,
 Nor on the shaggy top of Mona high,
 Nor yet where Deva spreads her wizard
 stream:

Ah me! I fondly dream,
 Had ye been there: for what could that have done?
 What could the Muse herself that Orpheus bore,
 The Muse herself, for her enchanting son,
 Whom universal nature did lament,
 When, by the rout that made the hideous
 roar,
 His gory visage down the stream was sent,
 Down the swift Hebrus to the Lesbian
 shore?

Alas! what boots it with incessant care
 To tend the homely, slighted, shepherd's trade,
 And strictly meditate the thankless Muse?
 Were it not better done, as others use,
 To sport with Amaryllis, in the shade,
 Or with the tangles of Naxos's hair?
 Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise

(That last infirmity of noble minds)
 To scorn delights and live laborious days:
 But the fair guerdon when we hope to
 find,

And think to burst out into sudden blaze,
 Comes the blind Fury with the abhorred
 shears,

And slits the thin-spun life. "But not the praise,"

Phœbus replied, and touch'd my trembling ears;

"Fame is no plant that grows on mortal
 soil,

Nor in the glistening foil Set off to the world, nor in broad rumor
 lies,

But lives and spreads aloft by those pure
 eyes,

And perfect witness of all-judging Jove;
 As he pronounces lastly on each deed,
 Of so much fame in heaven expect thy meed."

O fountain Arethuse, and thou honor'd
 flood,

Smooth-sliding Mincius, crown'd with vocal reeds!

That strain I heard was of a higher mood:
 But now my oat proceeds,
 And listens to the herald of the sea
 That came in Neptune's plea;

He ask'd the waves, and ask'd the felon
 winds,

What hard mishap hath doom'd this gentle swain?

And question'd every gust, of rugged
 wings,

That blows from off each beaked promontory:

They knew not of his story;
 And sage Hippotades their answer
 brings,

That not a blast was from his dungeon
 stray'd:

The air was calm, and on the level brine
 Sleek Panope with all her sisters play'd.

It was that fatal and perfidious bark, Built in the eclipse, and rigg'd with curses dark,

That sunk so low that sacred head of thine.

Next, Camus, reverend sire, went footing slow,

His mantle hairy, and his bonnet sedge, Inwrought with figures dim, and on the edge

Like to that sanguine flower inscribed with woe.

"Ah! who hath rest," quoth he, "my dearest pledge?"

Last came, and last did go,
 The pilot of the Galilean lake;

Two massy keys he bore, of metals twain,
 (The golden opes, the iron shuts amain,)

He shook his mitred locks, and stern bespake:

"How well could I have spared for thee,
 young swain,

Enow of such as, for their bellies' sake, Creep, and intrude, and climb into the fold!

Of other care they little reckoning make Than how to scramble at the shearers'
 feast,

And shove away the worthy bidden guest;
 Blind mouths! that scarce themselves know how to hold

A sheep-hook, or have learn'd aught else the least

That to the faithful herdsman's art belongs!

What recks it them? What need they?
 They are sped;

list, their lean and flashy crannel pipes of wretched deep look up, and are not wind and the rank mist and foul contagion spread;
 the grim wolf, with privy space, and nothing said:
 inded engine at the door to smite once, and smite heus, the dread voice is y streams; return Sicilian des, and bid them hither flowerets of a thousand where the mild whispers wanton winds, and gushlap the swart star sparely ll your quaint enamell'd en turf suck the honey'd the ground with vernal
 : primrose that forsaken r-toe, and pale jessamine,
 , and the pansy freak'd olet,
 e, and the well-attired van that hang the pensive ver that sad embroidery
 s all his beauty shed, s fill their cups with tears, reate hearse where Lycid pose a little ease,

Let our frail thoughts dally with false surmise:
 Ah me! whilst thee the shores and sounding seas
 Wash far away, where'er thy bones are hurl'd,
 Whether beyond the stormy Hebrides,
 Where thou, perhaps, under the whelm-
 ing tide,
 Visit'st the bottom of the monstrous
 world;
 Or whether thou, to our moist vows denied,
 Sleep'st by the fable of Bellerus old,
 Where the great vision of the guarded mount Looks towards Namancos and Bayona's
 hold;
 Look homeward, angel, now, and melt with ruth:
 And O, ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth.
 Weep no more, woful shepherds,
 weep no more,
 For Lycidas, your sorrow, is not dead, Sunk though he be beneath the watery
 floor;
 So sinks the day-star in the ocean-bed,
 And yet anon repairs his drooping head,
 And tricks his beams, and, with new-spangled ore,
 Flames in the forehead of the morning
 sky:
 So Lycidas sunk low, but mounted
 high,
 Through the dear might of Him that walk'd the waves,
 Where, other groves and other streams
 along,
 With nectar pure his oozy locks he laves,
 And hears the unexpressive nuptial song
 In the blest kingdoms meek of joy and
 love.
 There entertain him all the saints above,
 In solemn troops and sweet societies
 That sing, and, singing, in their glory
 move,
 And wipe the tears for ever from his
 eyes.
 Now, Lycidas, the shepherds weep no
 more;

Henceforth thou art the genius of the
 shore,
 In thy large recompense, and shalt be
 good
 To all that wander in that perilous flood.
 Thus sang the uncouth swain to the oaks and rills, While the still morn went out with sandals gray;
 He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
 With eager thought warbling his Doric
 lay:
 And now the sun had stretch'd out all the hills,
 And now was dropt into the western bay:
 At last he rose, and twitch'd his mantle
 blue:
 To-morrow to fresh woods, and pastures new.

ON THE LATE MASSACRE IN PIEDMONT.

AVENGE, O Lord, thy slaughter'd saints, whose bones
 Lie scatter'd on the Alpine mountains
 cold;
 Even them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
 When all our fathers worshipp'd stocks and stones,
 Forget not: in thy book record their groans
 Who were thy sheep, and in their ancient fold
 Slain by the bloody Piedmontese, that roll'd
 Mother with infant down the rocks.
 Their moans
 The vales redoubled to the hills, and they
 To heaven. Their martyr'd blood and ashes sow O'er all the Italian fields, where still doth sway
 The triple tyrant: that from these may grow
 A hundred fold, who, having learn'd thy way,
 Early may fly the Babylonian woe.

O NIGHTINGALE.

O NIGHTINGALE, that on yon bloomy
 spray
 Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still,
 Thou with fresh hope the lover's heart does fill,
 While the jolly Hours lead on propitious May.
 Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,
 First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill, Portend success in love; O, if Jove's
 will Have link'd that amorous power to thy soft lay,
 Now timely sing, e'er the rude bird of hate Foretell my hopeless doom in some grove nigh;
 As thou from year to year hast sung too late
 For my relief, yet hadst no reason why:
 Whether the muse, or love call thee his mate,
 Both them I serve, and of their train am I.

CROMWELL OUR CHIEF OF MEN.

CROMWELL, our chief of men, who through a cloud
 Not of war only, but detractions rude, Guided by faith, and matchless fortitude,
 To peace and truth thy glorious way hast plough'd,
 And on the neck of crowned Fortune proud
 Hast rear'd God's trophies, and his work pursued,
 While Darwen stream with blood of Scots imbrued,
 And Dunbar field resounds thy praises loud,
 And Worcester's laureat wreath. Yet much remains To conquer still; Peace hath her victories
 No less renown'd than war: new foes arise

Threat'ning to bind our souls with secular chains:
 Help us to save free conscience from the paw
 Of hireling wolves, whose gospel is their maw.

ON HIS BLINDNESS.

WHEN I consider how my light is spent Ere half my days in this dark world and wide,
 And that one talent which is death to hide,
 Lodg'd with me useless, though my soul more bent
 To serve therewith my Maker, and present
 My true account, lest he returning chide;
 Doth God exact day labor, light deny'd,
 I fondly ask? but patience to prevent
 That murmur soon replies, God doth not need Either man's work or his own gifts;
 who best
 Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best: his state
 Is kingly; thousands at his bidding speed,
 And post o'er land and ocean without rest;
 \ They also serve who only stand and wait.

TO CYRIAC SKINNER.

CYRIAC, this three years' day these eyes, tho' clear
 To outward view, of blemish or of spot,
 Bereft of light, their seeing have forgot, Nor to their idle orbs doth sight appear
 Of sun, or moon, or star, throughout the year,
 Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not Against Heav'n's hand or will, nor bate a jot
 Of heart or hope; but still bear up, and steer

Right onward. What supports me?
 dost thou ask:
 The conscience, Friend, to have lost them overply'd
 In Liberty's defence, my noble task,
 Of which all Europe talks from side to side,
 This thought might lead me thro' the world's vain mask,
 Content though blind, had I no better guide.

ON HIS DECEASED WIFE.

METHOUGHT I saw my late espoused saint Brought to me like Alcestis from the grave, Whom Jove's great son to her glad husband gave,
 Rescued from death by force though pale and faint.
 Mine, as whom wash'd from spot of child-bed taint, Purification in the old law did save,
 And such, as yet once more I trust to have Full sight of her in Heav'n, without restraint, Came vested all in white, pure as her mind:
 Her face was veil'd, yet to my fancied sight
 Love, sweetness, goodness, in her person shin'd
 So clear, as in no face with more delight.
 But O, as to embrace me she inclin'd,
 I wak'd, she fled, and day brought back my night.

HYMN ON THE NATIVITY.

It was the winter wild,
 While the heaven-born child
 All meanly wrapt in the rude manger lies;
 Nature, in awe of him,
 Had doffed her gaudy trim,
 With her great Master so to sympathize:

It was no season then for her To wanton with the sun, her lusty paramour.

Only with speeches fair
She woos the gentle air,
To hide her guilty front with innocent
snow;
And on her naked shame,
Pollute with sinful blame,
The saintly veil of maiden-white to throw;
Confounded, that Her Maker's eyes Should look so near upon her foul deformities.

But he, her fears to cease,
Sent down the meek-ey'd Peace;
She, crown'd with olive green, came softly sliding Down through the turning sphere,
His ready harbinger,
With turtle wing the amorous clouds dividing;
And, waving wide her myrtle wand,
She strikes a universal peace through sea and land.

No war or battle's sound
Was heard the world around:
The idle spear and shield were high up hung;
The hookèd chariot stood Unstain'd with hostile blood;
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng;
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they surely knew their sov'reign lord was by.

But peaceful was the night,
Wherein the Prince of Light
His reign of peace upon the earth began:
The winds, with wonder whist,
Smoothly the waters kiss'd, Whispering new joys to the mild ocean,
Who now hath quite forgot to rave, While birds of calm sit brooding on the charmed wave.

The stars, with deep amaze,
Stand fix'd in steadfast gaze, Bending one way their precious influence;
And will not take their flight,
For all the morning light,
Or Lucifer had often warn'd them
thence;
But in their glimmering orbs did glow, Until their Lord himself bespoke, and bid them go.

And, though the shady gloom
Had given day her room,
The sun himself withheld his wonted speed,
And hid his head for shame,
As his inferior flame
The new-enlighten'd world no more should need;
He saw a greater sun appear Than his bright throne, or burning axle-tree, could bear.

The shepherds on the lawn,
Or ere the point of dawn,
Sat simply chatting in a rustic row;
Full little thought they then
That the mighty Pan
Was kindly come to live with them
below;
Perhaps their loves, or else their sheep,
Was all that did their silly thoughts so busy keep.

When such music sweet
Their hearts and ears did greet,
As never was by mortal fingers struck,
Divinely-warbled voice
Answering the stringed noise,
As all their souls in blissful rapture took:
The air, such pleasure loathe to lose,
With thousand echoes still prolongs each heavenly close.

Nature, that heard such sound,
Beneath the hollow round
Of Cynthia's seat, the airy region thrilling,
Now was almost won,
To think her part was done,

that her reign had here its last filling;
few such harmony alone hold all heaven and earth in prier union.

surrounds their sight of circular light,
with long beams the shame-fac'd ght array'd;
lmed cherubim,
orded seraphim,
seen in glittering ranks with wings play'd,
g in loud and solemn choir, inexpressive notes, to Heaven's w-born heir.

music, as 'tis said,
was never made,
when of old the sons of morning
ng.
the Creator great nstellations set,
the well-balanc'd world on hinges
ng,
st the dark foundations deep,
d the weltering waves their oozy annel keep.

ut, ye crystal spheres,
less our human ears, have power to touch oursenses so;
t your silver chime
n melodious time;
let the bass of Heaven's deep gan blow;
ith your ninefold harmony, up full concert to the angelic mphony.

such holy song
p our fancy long,
e will run back, and fetch the age
gold;
eckled Vanity
cken soon and die, leprous Sin will melt from earthly ould;
ell itself will pass away, ave her dolorous mansions to the ering day.

Yea, Truth and Justice then
Will down return to men, Orb'd in a rainbow; and, like glories wearing,
Mercy will sit between,
Thron'd in celestial sheen,
With radiant feet the tissued clouds down steering;
And Heaven, as at some festival,
Will open wide the gates of her high palace hall.

But wisest Fate says no,
This must not yet be so,
The babe yet lies in smiling infancy,
That on the bitter cross
Must redeem our loss,
So both himself and us to glorify:
Yet first, to those ychain'd in sleep,
The wakeful trump of doom must thunder through the deep,

With such a horrid clang
As on Mount Sinai rang, While the red fire and smould'ring clouds out brake;
The aged earth aghast,
With terror of that blast,
Shall from the surface to the centre shake;
When, at the world's last session,
The dreadful Judge in middle air shall spread his throne.

And then at last our bliss,
Full and perfect is,
But now begins: for, from this happy
day,
The old dragon, underground,
In straiter limits bound,
Not half so far casts his usurped sway;
And, wroth to see his kingdom fail,
Swinges the scaly horror of his folded tail.

The oracles are dumb;
No voice or hideous hum Runs through the arched roof in words deceiving.
Apollo from his shrine
Can no more divine,
With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving.

No nightly trance, or breathed spell, Inspires the pale-eyed priest from the prophetic cell.

The lonely mountains o'er,
And the resounding shore,
A voice of weeping heard and loud
lament;
From haunted spring and dale,
Edg'd with poplar pale,
The parting Genius is with sighing
sent;
With flower-inwoven tresses torn,
The nymphs in twilight shade of tangled thickets mourn.

In consecrated earth,
And on the holy hearth,
The Iars and Lemurs mourn with midnight plaint.
In urns and altars round,
A drear and dying sound Affrights the Flamens at their service quaint;
And the chill marble seems to sweat, While each peculiar power foregoes his wonted seat.

Peor and Baälim
Forsake their temples dim
With that twice-battered god of Palestine;
And mooned Ashtaroth,
Heaven's queen and mother both,
Now sits not girt with tapers' holy
shine;
The Libyac Hammon shrinks his horn;
In vain the Tyrian maids their wounded Thammuz mourn.

And sullen Moloch, fled,
Hath left in shadows dread
His burning idol all of blackest hue:
In vain with cymbals' ring
They call the grisly king,
In dismal dance about the furnace
blue:
The brutish gods of Nile as fast,
Isis, and Orus, and the dog Anubis, haste.

Nor is Osiris seen
In Memphian grove or green,

Trampling the unshowered grass with lowings loud;
Nor can he be at rest
Within his sacred chest, Nought but profoundest hell can be his shroud;
In vain with timbrell'd anthems dark
The sable-stoled sorcerers bear his worshipp'd ark.

He feels from Judah's land
The dreaded infant's hand,
The rays of Bethlehem blind his dusky
eyne;
Nor all the gods beside Longer dare abide,
Not Typhon huge ending in snaky twine:
Our babe, to show his Godhead true, Can in his swaddling bands control the damned crew.

So, when the sun in bed,
Curtain'd with cloudy red,
Pillows his chin upon an orient wave,
The flocking shadows pale,
Troop to the infernal jail,
Each fetter'd ghost slips to his several
grave;
And the yellow-skirted fays Fly after the night-steeds, leaving their moon-loved maze.

But see, the Virgin blest
Hath laid her babe to rest;
Time is, our tedious song should here have ending:
Heaven's youngest-teemed star
Hath fixed her polish'd car,
Her sleeping Lord with handmaid lamp attending;
And all about the courtly stable Bright-harness'd angels sit in order serviceable.

BEFORE THE STARRY THRESH-OLD OF JOVE'S COURT.

BEFORE the starry threshold of Jove's
court,
My mansion is, where those immortal shapes

Of bright ariel spirits live inspher'd
 In regions mild of calm and serene air, Above the smoke and stir of this dim spot
 Which men call Earth, and with low-thoughted care,
 Confin'd and pester'd in this pin-fold
 here,
 Strive to keep up a frail and feverish being,
 Unmindful of the crown that Virtue gives After this mortal change, to her true servants,
 Amongst the enthron'd gods on sainted seats.
 Yet some there be that by due steps aspire
 To lay their just hands on that golden key
 That opes the palace of Eternity:
 To such my errand is; and but for such,
 I would not soil these pure ambrosial weeds
 With the rank vapors of this sin-worn mould.

HOW CHARMING IS DIVINE PHILOSOPHY.

How charming is divine philosophy!
 Not harsh and crabbed, as dull fools suppose,
 But musical as is Apollo's lute.
 And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
 Where no crude surfeit reigns.

THE LADY'S SONG.

[From Comus.]

SWEET Echo, sweeter nymph, that liv'st
 unseen
 Within thy aery shell,
 By slow Meander's margent green,
 And in the violet-embroider'd vale
 Where the love-lorn nightingale Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth
 well;
 Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair
 That liketh thy Narcissus are?
 O, if thou have

Hid them in some flowery cave,
 Tell me but where,
 Sweet queen of parley, daughter of the sphere!
 So may'st thou be translated to the
 skies,
 And give resounding grace to all Heaven's harmonies.

THE SPIRIT'S EPILOGUE.

To the ocean now I fly,
 And those happy climes that lie
 Where Day never shuts his eye,
 Up in the broad fields of the sky:
 There I suck the liquid air,
 All amidst the garden fair
 Of Hesperus, and his daughters three,
 That sing about the golden tree:
 Along the crisped shades and bowers
 Revels the spruce and jocund spring,
 The Graces and the rosy-bosom'd hours,
 Thither all their bounties bring;
 That there eternal summer dwells,
 And west-winds with musky wing
 About the cedarn alleys fling Nard and cassia's balmy smells.
 Iris there with humid bow
 Waters the odorous banks, that blow Flowers of more mingled hue
 Than her purpled scarf can show,
 And drenches with Elysian dew (List, mortals, if your ears be true)
 Beds of hyacinths and roses,
 Where young Adonis oft reposes,
 Waxing well of his deep wound
 In slumbers soft, and on the ground
 Sadly sits th' Assyrian queen;
 But far above in spangled sheen Celestial Cupid, her fam'd son advanc'd Holds her dear Psyche sweet entranc'd,
 After her wand'ring labors long,
 Till free consent the gods among Make her his eternal bride,
 And from her fair unspotted side
 Two blissful twins are to be born,
 Youth and Joy; so Jove hath sworn.
 But now my task is smoothly done,
 I can fly or I can run,
 Quickly to the green earth's end,

Where the bow'd welkin slow doth bend
And from thence can soar as soon
To the corners of the moon.

Mortals that would follow me,
Love Virtue, she alone is free,
She can teach you how to climb
Higher than the sphery chime;
Or if Virtue feeble were,
Heaven itself would stoop to her.

CHASTITY.

So dear to Heav'n is saintly chastity,
That when a soul is found sincerely so,
A thousand liveried angels lacky her, Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt,
And in clear dream, and solemn vision,
Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear,
Till oft converse with heav'nly habitants Begin to cast a beam on th' outward
shape,
The unpolluted temple of the mind,
And turns it by degrees to the soul's essence,
Till all be made immortal; but when Lust,
By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk,

But most by lewd and lavish act of sin,
Lets in Defilement to the inward parts,
The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies and imbrutes, till she quite lose
The divine property of her first being.
Such are those thick and gloomy shadows damp,
Oft seen in charnel vaults and sepulchres, Ling'ring and sitting by a new-made
grave,
As loath to leave the body that it lov'd
And link'd itself by carnal sensuality
To a degenerate and degraded state.

SONG. MAY MORNING.

Now the bright morning star, day's harbinger,
Comes dancing from the East, and leads with her
The flow'ry May, who from her green lap throws
The yellow cowslip, and the pale primrose.
Hail bounteous May! that dost inspire
Mirth, and youth, and warm desire;
Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing.
Thus we salute thee with our early song,
And welcome thee and wish thee long.

SAMUEL BUTLER.

1612-1680.

[SAMUEL BUTLER was born at Strensham in Worcestershire, in 1612, and died in London, in 1680. After leaving Worcester Cathedral School he started in life as justice's clerk to a Mr. Jefferies, at Earl's Croome. He was next at Wrest in Bedfordshire, in the service of the Countess of Kent, and here he met and worked for John Selden. Finally he formed part of the household of Sir Samuel Luke, a Presbyterian Colonel, "scout-master for Bedfordshire and governor of Newport Pagnell." At the Restoration he was made secretary to the President of Wales and steward of Ludlow Castle, and in 1662, at full fifty years old, he published the first part of the immense lampoon whose authorship has given him his place in English letters. The second part of Hudibras was issued in 1663; the third in 1678. Two years afterwards Butler died.]

[From Hudibras, Part I.]

ARGUMENTATIVE THEOLOGY.

HE could raise scruples dark and nice,
And after solve 'em in a trice;
As if Divinity had caught

The itch on purpose to be scratched;
Or, like a mountebank, did wound
And stab herself with doubts profound,
Only to show with how small pain
The sores of faith are cured again.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

THAT stubborn crew of saints whom all men grant the true Church Militant.
 do build their faith upon the text of pike and gun;
 all controversies by the artillery;
 above their doctrine orthodox apostolic blows and knocks;
 the sword and sword and desolation by, thorough Reformation, always must be going on,
 still be doing, never done, religion were intended nothing else but to be mended:
 whose chief devotion lies in perverse antipathies, coming out with that or this ending somewhat still amiss; peevish, cross, and splenetic dog distract or monkey sick:
 with more care keep holyday wrong, than others the right way; bound for sins they are inclined to naming those they have no mind to. perverse and opposite they worshipped God for spite, the self-same thing they will abhor to-day and long another for;
 will they one way disavow, to-day, nothing else allow;
 duty consists therein
 in, in other men all sin.
 rather than fail they will defy which they love most tenderly; deal with mince-pies, and disparage the best and dearest friend plum-porridge;
 the gander and goose itself oppose,
 the aspersion custard through the nose.

HONOR.

He that is valiant and dares fight, though drubbed, can lose no honor by't.
 There's a lease for lives to come,
 cannot be extended from the legal tenant: 'Tis a chattel

Not to be forfeited in battle.
 If he that in the field is slain
 Be in the bed of honor lain,
 He that is beaten may be said
 To lie in honor's truckle-bed.
 For as we see the eclipsed sun
 By mortals is more gazed upon
 Than when, adorned with all his light,
 He shines in serene sky most bright,
 So valor in a low estate
 Is most admired and wondered at.

[From Hudibras, Part II.]

NIGHT.

THE sun grew low and left the skies,
 Put down, some write, by ladies' eyes,
 The moon pulled off her veil of light
 That hides her face by day from sight (Mysterious veil, of brightness made That's both her lustre and her shade!),
 And in the lantern of the night
 With shining hours hung out her light;
 For darkness is the proper sphere
 Where all false glories use to appear.
 The twinkling stars began to muster
 And glitter with their borrowed lustre,
 While sleep the wearied world relieved,
 By counterfeiting death revived.

MORNING.

THE sun had long since in the lap
 Of Thetis taken out his nap,
 And, like a lobster boiled, the morn
 From black to red began to turn.

SPIRITUAL TRIMMERS.

SOME say the soul's secure Against distress and forfeiture;
 Is free from action, and exempt
 From execution and contempt;
 And to be summoned to appear In the other world's illegal here;
 And therefore few make any account
 Into what encumbrances they run't.

For most men carry things so even Between this world and hell and heaven,
 Without the least offence to either
 They freely deal in all together,
 And equally abhor to quit
 This world for both, or both for it;
 And when they pawn and damn their souls
 They are but prisoners on paroles.

MARRIAGE.

[From Hudibras, Part III.]

THERE are no bargains driven;
 Nor marriages, clapped up in heaven,
 And that's the reason, as some guess,
 There is no heaven in marriages.
 Two things that naturally press
 Too narrowly to be at ease,
 Their business there is only love,
 Which marriage is not like to improve:
 Love that's too generous to abide
 To be against its nature tied;
 For where 'tis of itself inclined
 It breaks loose when it is confined,
 And like the soul, its harbinger,
 Debarred the freedom of the air,
 Disdains against its will to stay,
 And struggles out and flies away,
 And therefore never can comply
 To endure the matrimonial tie
 That binds the female and the male,
 Where the one is but the other's bail,
 Like Roman jailers, when they slept Chained to the prisoners they kept.

UPON THE WEAKNESS AND MISERY OF MAN.

[From Miscellanies.]

OUR pains are real things, and all
 Our pleasures but fantastical.
 Diseases of their own accord,
 But cures come difficult and hard.
 Our noblest piles and stateliest rooms
 Are but outhouses to our tombs;
 Cities though ne'er so great and brave
 But mere warehouses to the grave.

Our bravery's but a vain disguise
 To hide us from the world's dull eyes,
 The remedy of a defect
 With which our nakedness is decked,
 Yet makes us smile with pride and boast
 As if we had gained by being lost.

DISTICHS AND SAWS.

[From Hudibras and Miscellanies.]

RHYME the rudder is of verses, With which like ships they steer their courses.

In the hurry of a fray
 'Tis hard to keep out of harm's way.

Honor is like a widow, won
 With brisk attempt and putting on,
 With entering manfully and urging;
 Not slow approaches, like a virgin.

Great commanders always own
 What's prosperous by the soldier done

Great conquerors greater glory gain
 By foes in triumph led than slain.

Ay me! what perils do environ
 The man that meddles with cold iron!

Valor's a mousetrap, wit a gin,
 That women oft are taken in.

In all trade of war no feat
 Is nobler than a brave retreat,
 For those that run away and fly
 Take place at least of the enemy.

He that runs may fight again,
 Which he can never do that's slain.

Fools are known by looking wise,
 As men tell woodcocks by their eyes.

Night is the sabbath of mankind
 To rest the body and the mind.

As if artillery and edge-tools
 Were the only engines to save souls!

Money that, like the swords of kings,
 Is the last reason of all things.

at complies against his will se that write in rhyme still make ne verse for the other's sake.

one hand thrust the lady from,
with the other pull her home.

at is worth in anything much money as 'twill bring?

Public Faith, which every one and to observe, is kept by none.

the blind's leading of the blind.

worst of rebels never arm their king and country harm, oberest saints are more stiff-necked the hottest-headed of the wicked.

Wedlock without love, some say,
Is like a lock without a key.

Too much or too little wit
Do only render the owners fit
For nothing, but to be undone
Much easier than if they had none.

In little trades more cheats and lying
Is used in selling than in buying;
But in the great unjust dealing
Is used in buying than in selling.

Loyalty is still the same,
Whether it win or lose the game;
True as the dial to the sun,
Although it be not shined upon.

The suttler all things are,
They're but to nothing the more near.

Things said false and never meant
Do oft prove true by accident.

Authority is a disease and cure Which men can neither want nor well endure.

SIR JOHN DENHAM.

1615-1668.

SIR JOHN DENHAM was born in Dublin, in 1615. He took a prominent part in public affairs, for the King in several capacities; and after many vicissitudes of fortune he died at Ball, on the 10th of April, 1668. He published The Sophy, a tragedy, in 1641, and Cooper's anonymously, in the same year.]

THE THAMES.

ye, descending from the hill, surveys,
e Thames among the wanton valleys strays;
ies, the most loved of all the ocean's ons
s old sire, to his embraces runs, ng to pay his tribute to the sea, mortal life to meet eternity.
gh with those streams he no remembrance hold,

Whose foam is amber and their gravel
gold,
His genuine and less guilty wealth to explore,
Search not his bottom but survey his
shore,
O'er which he kindly spreads his spacious wing
And hatches plenty for the ensuing
spring,
And then destroys it with too fond a stay

Like mothers who their infants overlay;
 Nor with a sudden and impetuous
 wave,
 Like profuse kings, resumes the wealth he gave.
 No unexpected inundations spoil
 The mower's hopes, nor mock the plough-man's toil,
 But godlike his unwearied bounty flows;
 First loves to do, then loves the good he does.
 Nor are his blessings to his banks confined,
 But free or common as the sea or wind;
 When he to boast or to disperse her stores,
 Full of the tributes of his grateful shores,

Visits the world, and in his flying towers, Brings home to us, and makes both Indies ours:
 Finds wealth where 'tis, bestows it where it wants,
 Cities in deserts, woods in cities plants;
 So that to us no thing, no place is strange,
 While his fair bosom is the world's exchange.
 O, could I flow like thee, and make thy
 stream
 My great example, as it is my theme!
 Though deep, yet clear; though gentle,
 yet not dull;
 Strong without rage; without o'erflowing full!

ANDREW MARVELL.

1621-1678.

[BORN at Winestead, near Hull, March 31, 1621; died in London, 1678. His poems were first collected by his widow, and published in a folio volume, 1681, but since that time about twenty-five new poems have been discovered. Mr. Grosart has published the complete works in the Fuller Worthies' Library.]

YOUNG LOVE.

COME, little infant, love me now,
 While thine unsuspected years
 Clear thine aged father's brow
 From cold jealousy and fears.
 Pretty surely 'twere to see
 By young Love old Time beguil'd,
 While our sportings are as free
 As the nurse's with the child.
 Common beauties stay fifteen;
 Such as yours should swifter move,
 Whose fair blossoms are too green
 Yet for lust, but not love.
 Love as much the snowy lamb,
 Or the wanton kid, does prize
 As the lusty bull or ram
 For his morning sacrifice.
 Now then love me: Time may take Thee before thy time away;
 Of this need we'll virtue make,
 And learn love before we may.

So we win of doubtful fate,
 And, if good to us she meant,
 We that good shall antedate,
 Or, if ill, that ill prevent.
 Thus do kingdoms, frustrating
 Other titles to their crown,
 In the cradle crown their king,
 So all foreign claims to drown.
 So to make all rivals vain,
 Now I crown thee with my love:
 Crown me with thy love again,
 And we both shall monarchs prove.

A DROP OF DEW.

SEE, how the orient dew,
 Shed from the bosom of the morn,
 Into the blowing roses, (Yet careless of its mansion new,
 For the clear region where 'twas born,
 Round in itself incloses

n its little globe's extent, as it can, its native element.
 t the purple flower does slight,
 ice touching where it lies;
 zing back upon the skies,
 es with a mournful light,
 ike its own tear,
 so long divided from the sphere.
 ss it rolls, and unsecure, nbling, lest it grow impure;
 e warm sun pities its pain,
 he skies exhales it back again.
 he soul, that drop, that ray,
 ear fountain of eternal day,
 within the human flower be seen, nbering still its former height, the sweet leaves and blossoms reen,
 ecollecting its own light,

Does, in its pure and circling thoughts express
 The greater heaven in a heaven less.
 In how coy a figure wound,
 Every way it turns away,
 So the world excluding round,
 Yet receiving in the day,
 Dark beneath, but bright above,
 Here disdaining, there in love.
 How loose and easy hence to go;
 How girt and ready to ascend;
 Moving but on a point below,
 It all about does upward bend.
 Such did the manna's sacred dew distil,
 White and entire although congealed
 and chill;
 Congealed on earth; but does, dissolving, run
 Into the glories of the almighty sun.

JOHN DRYDEN.

1631-1700.

born in 1631, at Aldwincle All Saints, in the valley of the Nen in Northamptonshire, of parentage; and educated at Westminster School and Trinity College, Cambridge. He have become a Londoner about the middle of the year 1657. At the Restoration he into an ardent royalist, and towards the close of 1663 married the daughter of a royalist the Earl of Berkshire. In 1670 he was appointed Historiographer-Royal and Poet-After having hitherto been conspicuous as a dramatist and a panegyric poet, he in the publication of the First Part of Absalom and Achitophel, sprang into fame as a satirical verse. In December, 1683, he was appointed Collector of Customs in the port of London. His offices were renewed to him on the accession of King James II., but his pension was not renewed till rather more than a year later. About the same time Dryden became Catholic: and in April, 1687, he published The Hind and the Panther. Deprived of his office and pension by the Revolution of 1688, he again for a time wrote for the stage, but after wards finally abandoned dramatic composition for translation. Some of his greatest lyrics belong to his later years. He died at his house in Gerard Street, Soho, May 1, 1700, and was buried with great pomp in Westminster Abbey.]

ODE TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. ANNIE KILLIGREW.¹

Youngest virgin-daughter of the State,
 the last promotion of the blest;
 alms, new pluck'd from paradise,

Killigrew, maid of honor to the Duchess died of the small-pox in 1685, in the 17th year of her age. She was of a literary family, and herself a poetess as well as a Dryden's Ode was prefixed to a possition of her poems.

In spreading branches more sublimely
 rise,
 Rich with immortal green above the
 rest:
 Whether, adopted to some neighboring star,
 Thou roll'st above us, in thy wandering
 race,
 Or, in procession fix'd and regular,
 Mov'st with the heaven's majestic pace;
 Or, call'd to more superior bliss,

Thou tread'st, with seraphim, the vast abyss:

Whatever happy region is thy place,
Cease thy celestial song a little space;
Thou wilt have time enough for hymns
divine,

Since heaven's eternal year is thine.
Hear then a mortal muse thy praise rehearse,

In no ignoble verse:
But such as thy own voice did practise
here,

When thy first fruits of poesy were given,
To make thyself a welcome inmate there;
While yet a young probationer,
And candidate of heaven.

If by traduction came thy mind,
Our wonder is the less to find
A soul so charming from a stock so good;
Thy father was transfused into thy blood:
So wert thou born into a tuneful strain,
An early, rich, and inexhausted vein.

But if thy pre-existing soul
Was form'd, at first, with myriads
more,
It did through all the mighty poets roll,
Who Greek or Latin laurels wore,
And was that Sappho last, which once it was before.

If so, then cease thy flight, O heaven-
born mind!
Thou hast no dross to purge from thy rich ore:
Nor can thy soul a fairer mansion find,
Than was the beauteous frame she left behind:
Return to fill or mend the choir of thy celestial kind.

O gracious God! how far have we Profaned thy heavenly gift of poesy?
Made prostitute and profligate the muse, Debased to each obscene and impious
use,

Whose harmony was first ordain'd above
For tongues of angels, and for hymns of
love?

O wretched we! why were we hurried
down

This lubrique and adulterate age?

What can we say t' excuse our second
fall?

Let this thy vestal, heaven, atone for all:
Her Arethusian stream remains unsoil'd, Unmix'd with foreign filth, and unde-filed;

Her wit was more than man, her innocence a child.

Art she had none, yet wanted none;
For nature did that want supply:

So rich in treasures of her own,
She might our boasted stores defy:
Such noble vigor did her verse adorn,
That it seem'd borrow'd, where 'twas only born.

Her morals too were in her bosom bred,
By great examples daily fed.

Ev'n love (for love sometimes her muse express)

Was but a lambent flame which play'd about her breast:

Light as vapors of a morning dream,
So cold herself, while she such warmth
express,

'Twas Cupid bathing in Diana's stream.

When in mid-air the golden trump shall
sound

To raise the nations under ground;
When in the valley of Jehoshaphat,
The judging God shall close the book of
fate;

And there the last assizes keep,
For those who wake, and those who
sleep;

When rattling bones together fly,
From the four corners of the sky;
When sinews on the skeletons are spread.
Those clothed with flesh, and life inspire
the dead;

The sacred poets first shall hear the
sound,

And foremost from the tomb shall
bound,

For they are cover'd with the lightest
ground:

And straight, with inborn vigor, on the
wing,

Like mounting larks, to the new morning
sing.

There thou, sweet saint, before the choir shalt go,
 As harbinger of heaven, the way to show,
 The way which thou so well hast learned
 below.

THE CHARACTER OF THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY DELINE-ATED AS ACHITOPHEL.

[From Absalom and Achitophel, Part I.; 1681.]

OF these the false Achitophel was first;
 A name to all succeeding ages curst:
 For close designs and crooked counsels fit,
 Sagacious, bold, and turbulent of wit:
 Restless, unfix'd in principles and place;
 In power unpleased, impatient of disgrace;
 A fiery soul, which, working out its way,
 Fretted the pigmy body to decay,
 And o'er-inform'd the tenement of clay:
 A daring pilot in extremity;
 Pleased with the danger, when the waves went high
 He sought the storms; but, for a calm unfit,
 Would steer too nigh the sands to boast his wit.
 Great wits are sure to madness near allied,
 And thin partitions do their bounds
 divide;
 Else why should he, with wealth and honors blest,
 Refuse his age the needful hours of rest?
 Punish a body which he could not please;
 Bankrupt of life, yet prodigal of ease?

In friendship false, implacable in hate,
 Resolved to ruin or to rule the state.
 To compass this the triple bond he broke,¹
 The pillars of the public safety shook,
 And fitted Israel with a foreign yoke;
 Then, seized with fear, yet still affecting fame,

¹ The triple bond is the Triple Alliance of 1667, undone by the alliance concluded with France in 1670, when Shaftesbury was a member of the Cabal.

Usurp'd a patriot's all-atoning name;
 So easy still it proves, in factious times,²
 With public zeal to cancel private crimes.
 How safe is treason, and how sacred ill,
 Where none can sin against the people's will!

Where crowds can wink, and no offence be known,
 Since in another's guilt they find their
 own!

Yet fame deserved no enemy can grudge;
 The statesman we abhor, but praise the judge.

In Israel's courts ne'er sat an Abbethdin With more discerning eyes or hands more clean,

Unbribed, unsought, the wretched to redress;

Swift of despatch and easy of access.

Oh! had he been content to serve the crown

With virtues only proper to give the gown;

Or had the rankness of the soil been freed

From cockle, that oppress'd the noble seed;

David for him his tuneful harp had strung,

And heaven had wanted one immortal
 song.

But wild Ambition loves to slide, not stand;

And Fortune's ice prefers to Virtue's
 land.

Achitophel, grown weary to possess
 A lawful fame, and lazy happiness,

Disdain'd the golden fruit to gather
 free,

And lent the crowd his arm to shake the tree.

Now, manifest of crimes contrived long since,

He stood at bold defiance with his prince;

Held up the buckler of the people's cause Against the crown, and skulk'd behind the laws.

² This and the following lines, referring to Shaftesbury's conduct as Lord Chancellor, were inserted in the second edition. The Abbethdin was the Jewish Chief Justice.

VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, DELINEATED AS ZIMRI.

[From Absalom and Achitophel, Part I.]

A MAN so various that he seem'd to be Not one but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong,
Was everything by starts, and nothing
long;

But, in the course of one revolving moon,
Was chemist, fiddler, statesman, and buffoon.

Blest madman! who could every hour employ

With something new to wish or to enjoy.
Railing and praising were his usual themes,

And both, to show his judgment, in extremes.

So over-violent or over-civil,
That every man with him was god or devil.

In squandering wealth was his peculiar
art,

Nothing went unrewarded but desert;
Beggar'd by fools whom still he found
too late;

He had his jest, and they had his estate.
He laugh'd himself from court, then had relief,

By forming parties, but could ne'er be chief;

For, spite of him, the weight of business fell

On Absalom and wise Achitophel.

TRADITION.

[From Religio Laici; November, 1682.]

MUST all tradition then be set aside?
This to affirm were ignorance or pride.
Are there not many points, some needful sure

To saving faith, that Scripture leaves obscure,

Which every sect will wrest a several
way?

For what one sect interprets, all sects
may.

We hold, and say we prove from Scripture plain,

That Christ is GOD; the bold Socinian
From the same Scripture urges he's but
MAN.

Now what appeal can end the important suit?

Both parts talk loudly, but the rule is mute.

Shall I speak plain, and in a nation
free

Assume an honest layman's liberty?

I think, according to my little skill,
To my own mother Church submitting
still,

That many have been saved, and many
may,

Who never heard this question brought in play.

The unlettered Christian, who believes in gross,

Plods on to Heaven and ne'er is at a loss;

For the strait gate would be made strait-er yet,

Were none admitted there but men of wit.

The few by Nature formed, with learning fraught,

Born to instruct, as others to be taught,
Must study well the sacred page; and see Which doctrine, this or that, does best agree

With the whole tenor of the work divine,
And plainliest points to Heaven's revealed design;

Which exposition flows from genuine
sense,

And which is forced by wit and eloquence.

Not that tradition's parts are useless
here,

When general, old, disinterested, and
clear:

That ancient Fathers thus expound the page

Gives truth the reverend majesty of age,
Confirms its force by biding every test,

For best authorities, next rules, are best;
And still the nearer to the spring we go,

More limpid, more unsoiled, the waters
flow.

hus, first traditions were a proof alone, could we be certain such they were, so
 known :
 ut since some flaws in long descent
 may be,
 hey make not truth but probability.
 ven Arius and Pelagius durst provoke o what the centuries preceding spoke.
 ach difference is there in an oft-told tale, ut truth by its own sinews will prevail.
 radition written, therefore, more commends uthority than what from voice descends :
 nd this, as perfect as its kind can be,
 olls down to us the sacred history :
 hich, from the Universal Church received,
 s tried, and after for its self believed.

THE SECTS.

PRIVATE JUDGMENT.

From The Hind and the Panther, Part I.;
 April, 1687.]

PANTING and pensive now she ranged
 alone,
 and wandered in the kingdoms once
 her own.
 he common hunt, though from their rage restrained by sovereign power, her company disdained, rinned as they passed, and with a glaring eye
 ave gloomy signs of secret enmity.
 is true she bounded by and tripped so
 light,
 hey had not time to take a steady sight;
 or truth has such a face and such a mien
 As to be loved needs only to be seen.
 The bloody Bear an independent beast, nlicked to form, in groans her hate expressed.
 Among the timorous kind the quaking
 Hare
 rofessed neutrality, but would not swear.
 Next her the buffoon Ape, as atheists use, mimicked all sects and had his own to choose;

Still, when the Lion looked, his knees
 he bent,
 And paid at church a courtier's compliment.
 The bristled baptist Boar, impure as he,
 But whitened with the foam of sanctity,
 With fat pollutions filled the sacred place
 And mountains levelled in his furious
 race;
 So first rebellion founded was in grace.
 But, since the mighty ravage which he made
 In German forests¹ had his guilt betrayed,
 With broken tusks and with a borrowed
 name,
 He shunned the vengeance and concealed the shame,
 So lurked in sects unseen. With greater guile
 False Reynard fed on consecrated spoil;
 The graceless beast by Athanasius first Was chased from Nice, then by Socinus nursed,
 His impious race their blasphemy renewed,
 And Nature's King through Nature's optics viewed;
 Reversed they viewed him lessened to their eye,
 Nor in an infant could a God descry.
 New swarming sects to this obliquely
 tend,
 Hence they began, and here they all will end.
 What weight of ancient witness can prevail,
 If private reason hold the public scale?
 But, gracious God, how well dost Thou provide
 For erring judgments an unerring guide !
 Thy throne of darkness is the abyss of
 light,
 A blaze of glory that forbids the sight.
 O teach me to believe Thee thus concealed,
 And search no farther than Thyself revealed;
 But her alone for my director take,
 Whom Thou hast promised never to forsake !

The allusion is more especially to the Anabaptist doings at Münster.

My thoughtless youth was winged with vain desires;
My manhood, long misled by wandering
fires,
Followed false lights; and when their glimpse was gone,
My pride struck out new sparkles of her
own.
Such was I, such by nature still I am;
Be Thine the glory and be mine the
shame!

THE UNITY OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

[From The Hind and the Panther, Part II.]

"ONE in herself, not rent by schism, but sound,
Entire, one solid shining diamond,
Not sparkles shattered into sects like you:
One is the Church, and must be to be true,
One central principle of unity;
As undivided, so from errors free;
As one in faith, so one in sanctity.
Thus she, and none but she, the insulting rage
Of heretics opposed from age to age;
Still when the giant-brood invades her
throne,
She stoops from heaven and meets them half way down,
And with paternal thunder vindicates her crown.
But like Egyptian sorcerers you stand,
And vainly lift aloft your magic wand
To sweep away the swarms of vermin from the land.
You could like them, with like infernal force,
Produce the plague, but not arrest the course.
But when the boils and botches with disgrace
And public scandal sat upon the face, Themselves attacked, the Magi strove
no more,
They saw God's finger, and their fate
deplore,

Themselves they could not cure of the dishonest sore.

"Thus one, thus pure, behold her largely spread,
Like the fair ocean from her mother-bed;
From east to west triumphantly she rides,
All shores are watered by her wealthy tides.
The gospel-sound, diffused from pole to pole,
Where winds can carry and where waves can roll,
The self-same doctrine of the sacred page
Conveyed to every clime, in every age.

A SONG FOR ST. CECILIA'S DAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1687.

FROM harmony, from heavenly harmony
This universal frame began;
When Nature underneath a heap
Of jarring atoms lay,
And could not heave her head,
The tuneful voice was heard from high,
Arise, ye more than dead.

Then cold and hot and moist and dry
In order to their stations leap,
And Music's power obey.
From harmony, from heavenly harmony,
This universal frame began:
From harmony to harmony
Through all the compass of the notes it ran,
The diapason closing full in Man.

What passion cannot Music raise and quell?
When Jubal struck the chorœd shell,
His listening brethren stood around,
And, wondering, on their faces fell
To worship that celestial sound:
Less than a god they thought there could not dwell
Within the hollow of that shell,
That spoke so sweetly and so well.
What passion cannot Music raise and
quell?

The trumpet's loud clangor
Excites us to arms

With shrill notes of anger
 And mortal alarms.
 The double, double, double beat
 Of the thundering drum
 Cries, hark! the foes come;
 Charge, charge, 'tis too late to retreat.
 The soft complaining flute
 In dying notes discovers
 The woes of hopeless lovers,
 Whose dirge is whispered by the warbling lute.

Harp violins proclaim Jealous pangs and desperation,
 Frantic indignation,
 Torment of pains and height of passion,
 For the fair, disdainful dame.

But oh! what art can teach,
 What human voice can reach
 The sacred organ's praise?
 Notes inspiring holy love,
 That wing their heavenly ways
 To mend the choirs above.

Thus could lead the savage race,
 Trees uprooted left their place,
 Equivocal of the lyre:
 Right Cecilia raised the wonder Higher:
 To her organ vocal breath was
 Given,
 Angel heard, and straight appeared,
 Mistaking earth for heaven.

Grand Chorus.

In the power of sacred lays
 The spheres began to move, Singing the great Creator's praise
 To all the blessed above;
 When the last and dreadful hour
 Our rumbling pageant shall devour,
 The trumpet shall be heard on high,
 The dead shall live, the living die,
 And music shall untune the sky.

ANDER'S FEAST; OR, THE POWER OF MUSIC.

PERFORMED IN HONOR OF ST. CECILIA'S
 DAY, 1697.

As at the royal feast for Persia won
 By Philip's warlike son:

Aloft in awful state
 The godlike hero sate
 On his imperial throne:
 His valiant peers were placed
 Around;
 Their brows with roses and with myrtle
 bound,
 (So should desert in arms be crown'd):
 The lovely Thais, by his side,
 Sate, like a blooming Eastern bride,
 In flower of youth and beauty's pride.
 Happy, happy, happy pair!
 None but the brave,
 None but the brave,
 None but the brave deserves the fair.

Timotheus, placed on high Amid the tuneful choir,
 With flying fingers touch'd the lyre:
 The trembling notes ascend the sky,
 And heavenly joys inspire.
 The song began from Jove,
 Who left his blissful seats above (Such is the power of mighty Love!).
 A dragon's fiery form belied the god,
 Sublime on radiant spheres he rode,
 When he to fair Olympia press'd, And stamp'd an image of himself, a sovereign of the world.

The listening crowd admire the lofty
 sound,
 A present deity! they shout around:
 A present deity! the vaulted roofs rebound:

With ravish'd ears
 The monarch hears,
 Assumes the god,
 Affects to nod,
 And seems to shake the spheres.

The praise of Bacchus then the sweet musician sung:
 Of Bacchus ever fair and ever young:
 The jolly god in triumph comes;
 Sound the trumpets, beat the drums;
 Flush'd with a purple grace,
 He shows his honest face;
 Now give the hautboys breath: he comes! he comes!
 Bacchus, ever fair and young,
 Drinking joys did first ordain;

Bacchus' blessings are a treasure,
 Drinking is the soldier's pleasure :
 Rich the treasure,
 Sweet the pleasure;
 Sweet is pleasure after pain.

Soothed with the sound, the king grew vain;
 Fought all his battles o'er again;
 And thrice he routed all his foes, and thrice he slew the slain.
 The master saw the madness rise;
 His glowing cheeks, his ardent eyes;
 And, while he heaven and earth
 defied,
 Changed his hand, and check'd his
 pride.
 He chose a mournful Muse,
 Soft pity to infuse :
 He sung Darius great and good,
 By too severe a fate,
 Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen,
 Fallen from his high estate,
 And weltering in his blood;
 Deserted, at his utmost need,
 By those his former bounty fed :
 On the bare earth exposed he lies,
 With not a friend to close his eyes.
 With downcast looks the joyless victor sate,
 Revolving in his alter'd soul,
 The various turns of chance below;
 And now and then a sigh he stole,
 And tears began to flow.

The mighty master smiled to see That love was in the next degree :
 'Twas but a kindred sound to move,
 For pity melts the mind to love.
 Softly sweet, in Lydian measures, Soon he soothed his soul to pleasures.
 War, he sung, is toil and trouble;
 Honor, but an empty bubble;
 Never ending, still beginning,
 Fighting still, and still destroying;
 If the world be worth thy winning,
 Think, O think it worth enjoying !
 Lovely Thais sits beside thee, Take the good the gods provide
 thee !

The many rend the skies with loud plause;
 So love was crown'd, but music was cause.

The prince, unable to conceal his Gazed on the fair,
 Who caused his care,
 And sigh'd and look'd, sigh'd look'd,
 Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd a At length, with love and wine at oppress'd,
 The vanquish'd victor sunk upon
 breast.

Now strike the golden lyre again :
 A louder yet, and yet a louder strain
 Break his bands of sleep asunder, And rouse him, like a rattling pe-thunder.

Hark, hark, the horrid sound
 Has raised up his head !
 As awaked from the dead,
 And amazed, he stares around Revenge ! revenge ! Timotheus
 See the Furies arise;
 See the snakes that they rear,
 How they hiss in their hair,
 And the sparkles that flash from
 eyes !

Behold a ghastly band,
 Each a torch in his hand !
 Those are Grecian ghosts, that in were slain,

And unburied remain
 Inglorious on the plain :
 Give the vengeance due
 To the valiant crew !
 Behold how they toss their torch
 high,

How they point to the Persian altars
 And glittering temples of their gods !

The princes applaud with a furious
 And the king seized a flambeau zeal to destroy ;

Thais led the way,
 To light him to his prey,
 And, like another Helen, fired at Troy.

Thus, long ago,
 Ere heaving bellows learn'd to

While organs yet were mute;
 Timotheus to his breathing flute
 And sounding lyre, Awaken'd well the soul to rage, or kindle oft desire.
 At divine Cecilia came,
 Mistress of the vocal frame;
 Sweet enthusiast, from her sacred
 store,
 Expanded the former narrow bounds,
 Added length to solemn sounds, Nature's mother-wit, and arts unknown before.
 Would Timotheus yield the prize,
 Both divide the crown;
 He rais'd a mortal to the skies,
 He drew an angel down.

MANKIND.

From All for Love, Act IV.]

We but children of a larger growth;
 We're as apt to change as theirs,
 As craving too, and full as vain;
 The soul shut up in her dark room,
 So clear abroad, at home sees
 nothing;
 As a mole in earth, busy and blind,
 Turns all her folly up, and casts it outward
 world's open view.

HUMAN LIFE.

From Aureng-Zebe, Act IV.]

I consider life, 'tis all a cheat; I'm old with hope, men favor the deceit;
 I'm young, and think to-morrow will revenge;
 To-morrow's falser than the former day;
 It promises, and while it says we shall be blest
 It cuts off what we possessed.

Life is a cozenage! None would live it years again;
 It promises pleasure in what yet re-
 in;

And from the dregs of life think to receive
 What the first sprightly running could not give.

VENI CREATOR SPIRITUS.¹

CREATOR Spirit, by whose aid
 The world's foundations first were laid,
 Come, visit every pious mind;
 Come, pour Thy joys on human kind;
 From sin and sorrow set us free,
 And make Thy temples worthy Thee.

O source of uncreated light,
 The Father's promised Paraclete!
 Thrice holy fount, thrice holy fire,
 Our hearts with heavenly love inspire;
 Come, and Thy sacred unction bring,
 To sanctify us while we sing.

Plenteous of grace, descend from high,
 Rich in Thy sevenfold energy!
 Thou strength of His Almighty hand, Whose power does heaven and earth
 command;
 Proceeding Spirit, our defence,
 Who dost the gifts of tongues dispense,
 And crown'st Thy gifts with eloquence!

Refine and purge our earthly parts:
 But oh, inflame and fire our hearts!
 Our frailties help, our vice control,
 Submit the senses to the soul;
 And when rebellious they are grown,
 Then lay Thine hand, and hold them
 down.

Chase from our minds the infernal foe,
 And peace, the fruit of love, bestow;
 And, lest our feet should step astray,
 Protect and guide us in the way.

Make us eternal truths receive,
 And practise all that we believe:
 Give us Thyself, that we may see
 The Father, and the Son, by Thee.

¹ This paraphrase of the Latin hymn, popularly attributed to Charlemagne, was first printed in Tonson's folio edition of Dryden's Poems, 1701.

HYMN.

How are thy servants blest, O Lord!
 How sure is their defence!
 Eternal wisdom is their guide,
 Their help Omnipotence.

In foreign realms and lands remote,
 Supported by thy care,
 Through burning climes I passed unhurt,
 And breathed the tainted air.

Thy mercy sweetened every toil,
 Made every region please;
 The hoary Alpine hills it warmed,
 And smoothed the Tyrrhene seas.

Think, O my soul, devoutly think,
 How, with affrighted eyes,
 Thou saw'st the wide extended deep
 In all its horrors rise.

Confusion dwelt in every face,
 And fear in every heart;
 When waves on waves, and gulfs on gulfs,
 O'ercame the pilot's art.

Yet then from all my griefs, O Lord,
 Thy mercy set me free,
 Whilst in the confidence of prayer,
 My faith took hold on thee.

For, though in dreadful whirls we hung,
 High on the broken wave,
 I knew thou wert not slow to hear,
 Nor impotent to save.

The storm was laid, the winds retired Obedient to thy will;
 The sea, that roared at thy command,
 At thy command was still.

In midst of dangers, fears, and death,
 Thy goodness I'll adore,
 And praise thee for thy mercies past,
 And humbly hope for more.

My life, if thou preserv'st my life,
 Thy sacrifice shall be;
 And death, if death must be my doom,
 Shall join my soul to thee.

PARAPHRASE OF PSALM XXIII.

THE Lord my pasture shall prepare,
 And feed me with a shepherd's care;
 His presence shall my wants supply,
 And guard me with a watchful eye:
 My noon-day walks he shall attend,
 And all my midnight hours defend.

When in the sultry glebe I faint,
 Or on the thirsty mountain pant;
 To fertile vales and dewy meads
 My weary wandering steps he leads:
 Where peaceful rivers, soft and slow,
 Amid the verdant landscape flow.

Though in the paths of death I tread,
 With gloomy horrors overspread,
 My steadfast heart shall fear no ill,
 For thou, O Lord, art with me still;
 Thy friendly crook shall give me aid,
 And guide me through the dreadful
 shade.

Though in a bare and rugged way,
 Through devious lonely wilds I stray,
 Thy bounty shall my wants beguile,
 The barren wilderness shall smile,
 With sudden greens and herbage
 crown'd,
 And streams shall murmur all around.

ITALY.

FOR whereso'er I turn my ravished
 eyes,
 Gay, gilded scenes in shining prospect
 rise;
 Poetic fields encompass me around,
 And still I seem to tread on classic
 ground:
 For here the muse so oft her harp has strung,
 That not a mountain rears its head un-
 sung;
 Renown'd in verse each shady thicket grows,
 And every stream in heavenly numbers flows.

ROSAMOND'S SONG.

FROM walk to walk, from shade to
shade,

From stream to purling stream convey'd,

Through all the mazes of the grove,

Through all the mingling tracts I rove,

Turning,

Burning,

Changing,

Ranging,

Full of grief and full of love,

Impatient for my Lord's return

I sigh, I pine, I rave, I mourn,

Was ever passion cross'd like mine?

To rend my breast,

And break my rest,

A thousand thousand ills combine.

Absence wounds me,

Fear surrounds me,

Guilt confounds me,

Was ever passion cross'd like mine?

How does my constant grief deface

The pleasures of this happy place!

In vain the spring my senses greets,

In all her colors, all her sweets;

To me the rose

No longer glows,

Every plant

Has lost his scent;

The vernal blooms of various hue,

The blossoms fresh with morning dew,

The breeze that sweeps these fragrant
bowers,

Fill'd with the breath of op'ning flow'rs,

Purple scenes,

Winding greens,

Glooms inviting,

Birds delighting,

(Nature's softest, sweetest store)

Charm my tortur'd soul no more.

Ye powers, I rave, I faint, I die:

Why so slow! great Henry, why?

From death and alarms

Fly, fly to my arms,

Fly to my arms, my monarch, fly.

THOMAS PARNELL.

1679-1718.

[THOMAS PARNELL was born in Dublin in 1679, and was buried at Chester on the 18th of October, 1718. His Poems were first collected after his death, by Pope.]

FROM "A HYMN TO CONTENTMENT."

THE silent heart, which grief assails, Treads soft and lonesome o'er the vales,
Sees daisies open, rivers run,
And seeks, as I have vainly done,
Amusing thought; but learns to know
That solitude's the nurse of woe.
No real happiness is found
In trailing purple o'er the ground;
Or in a soul exalted high,
To range the circuit of the sky,
Converse with stars above, and know
All nature in its forms below;
The rest it seeks, in seeking dies,
And doubts at last, for knowledge, rise.

Lovely, lasting peace, appear!
This world itself, if thou art here,
Is once again with Eden blest,
And man contains it in his breast.

'Twas thus, as under shade I stood,
I sung my wishes to the wood,
And lost in thought, no more perceiv'd
The branches whisper as they wav'd:
It seem'd, as all the quiet place
Confess'd the presence of the Grace.
When thus she spoke—"Go rule thy
will,
Bid thy wild passions all be still,
Know God—and bring thy heart to
know
The joys which from religion flow:
Then every Grace shall prove its guest,
And I'll be there to crown the rest."

Oh! by yonder mossy seat,
In my hours of sweet retreat,
Might I thus my soul employ,
With sense of gratitude and joy!
Rais'd as ancient prophets were,
In heavenly vision, praise, and prayer;
Pleasing all men, hurting none,

Pleas'd and bless'd with God alone:
Then while the gardens take my sight,
With all the colors of delight;
While silver waters glide along,
To please my ear, and court my song;
I'll lift my voice, and tune my string,
And thee, great source of nature, sing.

The sun that walks his airy way,
To light the world, and give the day;
The moon that shines with borrow'd
light;
The stars that gild the gloomy night;
The seas that roll unnumber'd waves;
The wood that spreads its shady leaves;
The field whose ears conceal the grain,
The yellow treasure of the plain;
All of these, and all I see,
Should be sung, and sung by me:
They speak their maker as they can,
But want and ask the tongue of man.

Go search among your idle dreams,
Your busy or your vain extremes;
And find a life of equal bliss,
Or own the next begun in this.

THE HERMIT.

FAR in a wild, unknown to public view
From youth to age a reverend hermi
grew;
The moss his bed, the cave his humbl
cell,
His food the fruits, his drink the cryst
well:
Remote from man, with God he pass'
the days,
Prayer all his business, all his pleasur
praise.

A life so sacred, such serene repose, Seem'd heaven itself, till one suggestio
rose:

d triumph, virtue vice e doubt of Providence's ore a certain prospect r of his soul is lost :
 th expanse receives im-

 son," the reverend sire words, from question
 'd

And talk of various kind deceived the road;
 Till each with other pleased, and loth to
 part,
 While in their age they differ, join in
 heart :
 Thus stands an aged elm in ivy bound,
 Thus youthful ivy clasps an elm around.
 Now sunk the sun; the closing hour of
 day
 Came onward, mantled o'er with sober
 gray;
 Nature in silence had the world repose :
 When near the road a stately palace
 rose :
 There by the moon through ranks of trees they pass,
 Whose verdure crown'd their sloping sides of grass.
 It chanced the noble master of the dome, Still made his house the wandering stranger's home :
 Yet still the kindness, from a thirst of
 praise,
 Proved the vain flourish of expensive
 ease.
 The pair arrive: the liveried servants
 wait;
 Their lord receives them at the pompous gate.
 The table groans with costly piles of food,
 And all is more than hospitably good.
 Then led to rest, the day's long toil they drown,
 Deep sunk in sleep, and silk, and heaps of down.
 At length 'tis morn, and at the dawn of
 day,
 Along the wide canals the zephyrs
 play;
 Fresh o'er the gay parterres the breezes
 creep,
 And shake the neighboring wood to banish sleep.
 Up rise the guests, obedient to the call,
 An early banquet deck'd the splendid hall;
 Rich luscious wine a golden goblet graced,

Which the kind master forced the guests to taste.

Then, pleased and thankful, from the porch they go,

And, but the landlord, none had cause of woe;

His cup was vanish'd; for in secret guise

The younger guest purloin'd the glittering prize.

As one who spies a serpent in his way, Glistening and basking in the summer
ray,

Disorder'd stops to shun the danger near,
Then walks with faintness on, and looks with fear:

So seem'd the sire; when far upon the
road,

The shining spoil, his wily partner show'd.

He stopp'd with silence, walk'd with trembling heart,

And much he wish'd, but durst not ask to part:

Murmuring he lifts his eyes, and thinks it hard,

That generous actions meet a base reward.

While thus they pass, the sun his glory shrouds,

The changing skies hang out their sable clouds;

A sound in air presaged approaching
rain,

And beasts to covert scud across the plain.

Warn'd by the signs, the wandering pair retreat,

To seek for shelter at a neighboring seat.

'Twas built with turrets, on a rising
ground,

And strong, and large, and unimproved
around;

Its owner's temper, timorous and severe,
Unkind and griping, caused a desert
there.

As near the miser's heavy doors they drew,

Fierce rising gusts with sudden fury blew;

The nimble lightning mix'd with showers
began,

And o'er their heads loud rolling thunder ran.

Here long they knock, but knock or call in vain,

Driven by the wind, and batter'd by the rain.

At length some pity warm'd the master's
breast,

('Twas then his threshold first received a guest,)

Slow creaking turns the door with jealous care,

And half he welcomes in the shivering
pair;

One frugal fagot lights the naked walls.
And nature's fervor through their limbs recalls:

Bread of the coarsest sort, with eager wine,

(Each hardly granted,) served them both to dine,

And when the tempest first appear'd to cease,

A ready warning bid them part in peace.

With still remark the pondering hermit view'd

In one so rich, a life so poor and rude;
And why should such (within himself he cried)

Lock the lost wealth a thousand want beside?

But what new marks of wonder soon took place

In every settling feature of his face!

When from his vest the young companion bore

That cup, the generous landlord own'd
before,

And paid profusely with the precious bowl

The stinted kindness of his churlish soul!

But now the clouds in airy tumult fly,
The sun emerging opes an azure sky;

A fresher green the smelling leaves display,

And, glittering as they tremble, cheer
the day:

The weather courts them from the poor
retreat,

and the glad master bolts the wary gate.

While hence they walk, the pilgrim's bosom wrought
With all the travel of uncertain thought;
His partner's acts without their cause
appear,
'twas there a vice, and seem'd a madness here:
Detesting that, and pitying this, he goes, lost and confounded with the various shows.

Now night's dim shades again involve
the sky;
Again the wanderers want a place to lie,
Again they search, and find a lodging
nigh.
The soil improved around, the mansion neat,
And neither poorly low, nor idly great:
It seem'd to speak its master's turn of
mind,
Content, and not for praise, but virtue
kind.

Hither the walkers turn with weary feet,
Then bless the mansion, and the master greet:
Their greeting fair bestow'd, with modest
guise,
The courteous master hears, and thus replies:

"Without a vain, without a grudging
heart,
To Him who gives us all, I yield a part;
From Him you come, for Him accept it
here,
A frank and sober, more than costly cheer."
He spoke, and bid the welcome table
spread,
Then talk'd of virtue till the time of bed,
When the grave household round his hall repair,
Warn'd by a bell, and close the hours with prayer.

At length the world renew'd by calm repose

Was strong for toil, the dappled morn arose:

Before the pilgrims part, the younger crept
Near the closed cradle where an infant slept,
And writhed his neck: the landlord's little pride,
O strange return! grew black, and gasp'd, and died.
Horror of horrors! what! his only son!
How look'd our hermit when the fact was done?
Not hell, though hell's black jaws in sunder part,
And breathe blue fire, could more assault his heart.

Confused, and struck with silence at the deed,
He flies, but trembling fails to fly with speed.
His steps the youth pursues; the country
lay Perplex'd with roads, a servant show'd
the way;
A river cross'd the path; the passage o'er
Was nice to find; the servant trod before;
Long arms of oaks an open bridge supplied,
And deep the waves beneath the bending glide.
The youth, who seem'd to watch a time to sin,
Approach'd the careless guide, and thrust him in;
Plunging he falls, and rising lifts his head, Then flashing turns, and sinks among
the dead.

Wild, sparkling rage inflames the fathers
eyes,
He bursts the bands of fear, and madly
cries,
"Detested wretch!" — but scarce his speech began,
When the strange partner seem'd no longer man:
His youthful face grew more serenely
sweet;
His robe turn'd white, and flow'd upon his feet;

Fair rounds of radiant points invest his
hair;
Celestial odors breathe through purpled
air;
And wings, whose colors glitter'd on the
day,
Wide at his back their gradual plumes display.
The form ethereal bursts upon his sight,
And moves in all the majesty of light.

Though loud at first the pilgrim's passion
grew,
Sudden he gazed, and wist not what to do;
Surprise in secret chains his words suspends,
And in a calm his settling temper ends.
But silence here the beauteous angel broke,
(The voice of music ravish'd as he spoke).

"Thy prayer, thy praise, thy life to vice unknown,
In sweet memorial rise before the throne;
These charms, success in our bright region find,
And force an angel down, to calm thy
mind;
For this, commission'd, I forsook the
sky,
Nay, cease to kneel — thy fellow-servant I.

"Then know the truth of government
divine,
And let these scruples be no longer thine.

"The Maker justly claims that world He
made,
In this the right of Providence is laid;
Its sacred majesty through all depends On using second means to work His ends:
'Tis thus, withdrawn in state from human
eye,
The power exerts his attributes on high,
Your actions uses, nor controls your will,
And bids the doubting sons of men be
still.

"What strange events can strike with more surprise

Than those which lately struck thy wondering eyes?
Yet taught by these, confess th'
Almighty just,
And where you can't unriddle, learn to trust!

"The great, vain man, who fared on costly food,
Whose life was too luxurious to be good;
Who made his ivory stands with goblets
shine,
And forced his guests to morning
draughts of wine,
Has, with the cup, the graceless custom lost,
And still he welcomes, but with less of cost.

"The mean, suspicious wretch, whose bolted door
Ne'er moved in duty to the wandering
poor;
With him I left the cup, to teach his mind That Heaven can bless, if mortals will be
kind.
Conscious of wanting worth, he views
the bowl,
And feels compassion touch his grateful soul.
Thus artists melt the sullen ore of lead,
With heaping coals of fire upon its
head;
In the kind warmth the metal learns to
glow,
And loose from dross, the silver runs
below.

"Long had our pious friend in virtue trod,
But now the child half-wean'd his heart from God; (Child of his age,) for him he lived in
pain,
And measured back his steps to earth
again.
To what excesses had this dotage run?
But God, to save the father, took the son.
To all but thee, in fits he seem'd to go, (And 'twas my ministry to deal the blow).

rtal.

All men think all men mortal, but themselves;

Themselves, when some alarming shock of fate

Strikes through their wounded hearts the sudden dread.

But their hearts wounded, like the wounded air,

Soon close, where, past the shaft, no trace is found.

As from the wing, no scar the sky retains;

The parted wave no furrow from the keel; —

So dies in human hearts the thought of
death,

E'en with the tender tear which Nature sheds

O'er those we love, — we drop it in their
grave.

ALLAN RAMSAY.

1686–1758.

RAMSAY was born in 1686, in Lanarkshire. His father was the manager of Lord Mountrath's estates, but his great-grandfather was younger son of a "laird of Cockpen," and was of Dalhousie, and he took pride in his descent from this ancient stock. He was a boy to a wig-maker, but passed from writing poetry and editing poetical works to a bookseller. His earliest efforts were circulated among his "cronies" in manuscript, and he first came before the public in penny broad sheets. In 1716 he published an edition of The Green, with a second canto of his own composition, and soon after, another new canto. In 1719 he published a collection of Scots Songs; in 1721 a collection of poems in quarto; in 1722 his Fables and Tales and his Tale of Three Bonnets; in 1723 his Assembly; in 1724 a poem on Health; in the same year miscellaneous collections, Tea-Table Miscellany, and The Evergreen; and in 1725 the work with which his name is associated, The Gentle Shepherd. He died in 1758.]

JOHN GAY.

[JOHN GAY was born near Barnstaple in 1688. Fairly educated, he began life in London as a silk-mercator; but soon relinquished that occupation for literature. His first poem was Rural Sports, a Georgic "inscribed to Mr. Pope," 1713. In the following year he produced The Shepherd's Week, a set of six pastorals. His principal remaining works are the farce of The What-d'ye Call-it, 1715; the mock-heroic poem of Trivia, or the Art of Walking the Streets of London, 1716; Fables, 1726-38; and the famous Beggar's Opera, 1728. His Poems on Several Occasions, including the pastoral tragedy of Dione, were published in 1720. He was also concerned in, and bore the blame of, the unlucky comedy of Three Hours after Marriage, to which Pope and Arbuthnot had largely contributed. He died in London in December, 1732.]

THE PERSIAN, THE SUN, AND THE CLOUD.

Is there a hard whom genius fires,
 Whose every thought the god inspires?
 When Envy reads the nervous lines,
 She frets, she rails, she raves, she pines;
 Her hissing snakes with venom swell,
 She calls her venal train from hell;
 The servile fiends her nod obey,
 And all Curll's authors are in pay.
 Fame calls up Calumny and Spite;
 Thus Shadow owes its birth to Light.

As prostrate to the god of day
 With heart devout a Persian lay,
 His invocation thus begun:
 "Parent of light, all-seeing sun,
 Prolific beam, whose rays dispense
 The various gifts of Providence,
 Accept our praise, our daily prayer,
 Smile on our fields, and bless the year."

A Cloud, who mock'd his grateful
 tongue,

The day with sudden darkness hung;
 With pride and envy swell'd, aloud
 A voice thus thunder'd from the cloud:
 "Weak is this gaudy god of thine,
 Whom I at will forbid to shine.
 Shall I nor vows nor incense know?
 Where praise is due, the praise bestow."

With fervent zeal the Persian moved,
 Thus the proud calumny reproved:

"It was that God who claims my
 prayer,
 Who gave thee birth, and raised thee
 there;
 When o'er His beams the veil is thrown,
 Thy substance is but plainer shown:
 A passing gale, a puff of wind,
 Dispels thy thickest troops combined."

The gale arose; the vapor tossed,
 The sport of winds, in air was lost;
 The glorious orb the day refines;
 Thus envy breaks, thus merit shines.

Who tempt with doubts thy constant

They tell thee sailors, when away,
In every port a mistress find;
Yes, yes, believe them when they tell

For thou art present wheresoe'er I go.”

The boatswain gave the dreadful word,
The sails their swelling bosoms spread;
No longer she must stay on board, — They kiss'd, she sigh'd, he hung his
head:
Her lessening boat unwilling rows to
land, “Adieu!” she cried, and wav'd her lily
hand.

ALEXANDER POPE.

1688–1744.

POPE was born in Lombard Street, in the city of London, 1688. His father was a lawyer, who, having realized a modest competence, retired to the country to live. His youth was spent at Binfield in the skirts of Windsor Forest. Pope was brought up a Protestant, though the son of a beneficed clergyman of the Established Church, and converted to Catholicism during a residence on the continent. On the death of his father, he had largely increased his inheritance by the profits of his translation of Homer, published at Twickenham. Here he resided till his death, in 1744, employing himself in improving his grounds, of five acres, and in intercourse with most of the wits, and the best and women of his time, among whom Gay, Swift, Arbuthnot, and Lord Bolingbroke were special intimates. Pope was deformed, and sickly from childhood, and his constant morose temper fretful, waspish, and irritable. Notwithstanding these defects of person and temper, he had the warm attachment of his friends. Bolingbroke said of him that he never had so tender a heart for his particular friends. Warburton, after spending a year at Twickenham, said of him, “He is as good a companion as a poet, and, what is more, as good a man.” Pope's principal works are: Pastorals, published in 1709; Essay on Criticism, 1711; Pollio, 1712; Rape of the Lock, 1714; Translation of Homer's Iliad, 1715; Translation of Homer's Odyssey, 1720; Dunciad, 1727; Letter to the Earl of Burlington, 1731; On the Use of Riches, 1732; Essay on Criticism, 1733; Horace, Sat. 2. 1. imitated, 1733; Epistle to Lord Cobham, 1733; Epistle to the Earl of Burlington, 1733; Horace, Epistle 1. 1. imitated, 1737; Dunciad, altered and enlarged, 1743. His works were collected by his literary executor, Bishop Warburton, and published in nine

“ESSAY ON CRITICISM.”

it alone their taste con-

And glitt'ring thoughts struck out at ev'ry line;
Pleas'd with a work where nothing's just or fit;

One glaring Chaos and wild heap of wit.
 Poets, like painters, thus, unskill'd to trace
 The naked nature and the living grace,
 With gold and jewels cover ev'ry part,
 And hide with ornaments their want of art.
 True wit is nature to advantage dress'd;
 What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd;
 Something, whose truth convinc'd at sight we find,
 That gives us back the image of our mind.
 As shades more sweetly recommend the light,
 So modest plainness sets off sprightly wit.
 For works may have more wit than does 'em good,
 As bodies perish through excess of blood.
 Others for Language all their care express,
 And value books, as women men, for dress:
 Their praise is still,—the style is excellent;
 The sense, they humbly take upon content.
 Words are like leaves; and where they most abound,
 Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found:
 False eloquence, like the prismatic glass,
 Its gaudy colors spreads on ev'ry place;
 The face of nature we no more survey,
 All glares alike, without distinction gay:
 But true expression, like th' unchanging sun,
 Clears and improves whate'er it shines upon;
 It gilds all objects, but it alters none.
 Expression is the dress of thought, and still Appears more decent, as more suitable;
 A vile conceit in pompous words expressed
 Is like a clown in regal purple dressed:
 For different styles with different subjects sort,

As sev'ral garbs with country, town, and court.
 Some by old words to fame have made pretence,
 Ancients in phrase, mere moderns in their sense;
 Such labor'd nothings, in so strange a style,
 Amaze th' unlearn'd, and make the learn'd smile,
 Unlucky, as Fungoso in the play,
 These sparks with awkward vanity display
 What the fine gentleman wore yesterday;
 And but so mimic ancient wits at best,
 As apes our grandsires, in their doublets drest.
 In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold;
 Alike fantastic, if too new or old:
 Be not the first by whom the new are try'd,
 Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.
 But most by numbers judge a poet's song,
 And smooth or rough, with them, is right or wrong:
 In the bright muse, tho' thousand charms conspire,
 Her voice is all these tuneful fools admire;
 Who haunt Parnassus but to please their ear,
 Not mend their minds; as some to church repair,
 Not for the doctrine, but the music there.
 These equal syllables alone require,
 Tho' oft the ear the open vowels tire;
 While expletives their feeble aid do join;
 And ten low words oft creep in one dull line:
 While they ring round the same unvaried chimes,
 With sure returns of still expected rhymes;
 Where'er you find "the cooling western breeze,"
 In the next line, it "whispers through the trees":

crystal streams "with pleasing murmurs creep,"
 the reader's threaten'd (not in vain)
 with "sleep":
 then, at the last and only couplet fraught with some unmeaning thing they call a thought,
 a needless Alexandrine ends the song, that, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.
 Leave such to tune their own dull rhymes, and know What's roundly smooth, or languishingly slow;
 and praise the easy vigor of a line,
 Where Denham's strength and Waller's sweetness join.
 True ease in writing comes from art,
 not chance,
 as those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
 'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence,
 the sound must seem an echo to the
 sense:
 soft is the strain when Zephyr gently
 blows,
 and the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;
 but when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
 the hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent roar:
 When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw, the line too labors, and the words move slow:
 Not so, when swift Camilla scours the
 plain,
 Flies o'er th' unbending corn, and skims along the main.
 Hear how Timotheus' vary'd lays surprise,
 And bid alternate passions fall and
 rise!
 While at each change, the son of Libyan Jove
 now burns with glory, and then melts with love;
 now his fierce eyes with sparkling fury
 glow,

Now sighs steal out, and tears begin to
 flow:
 Persians and Greeks like turns of nature
 found,
 And the world's victor stood subdu'd by
 sound!
 The power of music all our hearts allow,
 And what Timotheus was, is Dryden
 now.
 Avoid extremes; and shun the fault of such,
 Who still are pleas'd too little or too much.
 At ev'ry trifle scorn to take offence,
 That always shows great pride, or little
 sense:
 Those heads, as stomachs, are not sure
 the best,
 Which nauseate all, and nothing can digest.
 Yet let not each gay turn thy rapture
 move;
 For fools admire, but men of sense approve:
 As things seem large which we through mists descry,
 Dulness is ever apt to magnify.
 Some foreign writers, some our own despise;
 The ancients only, or the moderns prize.
 Thus wit, like faith, by each man is apply'd
 To one small sect, and all are damn'd beside.
 Meanly they seek the blessing to confine,
 And force that sun but on a part to
 shine,
 Which not alone the southern wit sublimes,
 But ripens spirits in cold northern climes;
 Which from the first has shone on ages
 past, Enlights the present, and shall warm the
 last;
 Tho' each may feel increases and decays,
 And see now clearer and now darker
 days.
 Regard not, then, if wit be old or new,
 But blame the false, and value still the true.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

CANTO II.

NOT with more glories, in th' ethereal
 plain,
 The sun first rises o'er the purpled main,
 Than, issuing forth, the rival of his beams
 Launch'd on the bosom of the silver Thames.
 Fair nymphs, and well-drest youths around her shone,
 But every eye was fix'd on her alone.
 On her white breast a sparkling cross
 she wore,
 Which Jews might kiss, and infidels adore.
 Her lively looks a sprightly mind disclose,
 Quick as her eyes, and as unfix'd as those:
 Favors to none, to all she smiles extends;
 Oft she rejects, but never once offends.
 Bright as the sun, her eyes the gazers
 strike,
 And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.
 Yet graceful ease, and sweetness void of
 pride,
 Might hide her faults, if Belles had faults
 to hide:
 If to her share some female errors fall,
 Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em
 all.
 This nymph, to the destruction of man-
 kind,
 Nourish'd two locks which graceful hung behind
 In equal curls, and well conspired to deck
 With shining ringlets the smooth iv'ry neck.
 Love in these labyrinths his slave de-
 tains,
 And mighty hearts are held in slender chains.
 With hairy springs we the birds betray,
 Slight lines of hair surprise the finny prey,
 Fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare,
 And beauty draws us with a single hair.

Th' advent'rous Baron the bright locks admir'd:
 He saw, he wish'd, and to the prize aspir'd.
 Resolv'd to win, he meditates the way,
 By force to ravish, or by fraud betray:
 For when success a lover's toil attends,
 Few ask, if fraud or force attain'd his ends.
 For this, ere Phœbus rose, he had implor'd Propitious heav'n, and ev'ry pow'r ador'd,
 But chiefly Love—to Love an Altar built,
 Of twelve vast French romances, neatly gilt.
 There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves,
 And all the trophies of his former loves;
 With tender billet-doux he lights the pyre,
 And breathes three amorous sighs to raise the fire.
 Then prostrate falls, and begs with ardent eyes
 Soon to obtain, and long possess the prize:
 The Powers gave ear, and granted half his prayer,
 The rest the winds dispers'd in empty
 air.
 But now secure the painted vessel
 glides,
 The sunbeams trembling on the floating tides:
 While melting music steals upon the
 sky,
 And soften'd sounds along the waters
 die;
 Smooth flow the waves, the Zephyrs gently play,
 Belinda smil'd, and all the world was
 gay,
 All but the Sylph—with careful thoughts
 oppress'd,
 Th' impending woe sat heavy on his
 breast.
 He summons straight his denizens of
 air;
 The lucid squadrons round the sails repair:

oft o'er the shrouds ærial whispers
 breathe,
 that seemed but Zephyrs to the train beneath.
 Come to the sun their insect-wings unfold,
 float on the breeze, or sink in clouds
 of gold;
 transparent forms, too fine for mortal
 sight,
 their fluid bodies half dissolv'd in light, loose to the wind their airy garments flew,
 their glittering textures of the filmy
 dew,
 dipp'd in the richest tincture of the skies, where light disports in ever-mingling dyes;
 while every beam new transient colors
 flings,
 colors that change whene'er they wave their wings.
 Amid the circle, on the gilded mast, superior by the head, was Ariel plac'd;
 his purple pinions op'ning to the sun, he rais'd his azure wand, and thus begun.
 Ye Sylphs and Sylphids, to your chief give ear,
 I say, Fairies, Genii, Elves, and Demons,
 hear!
 Ye know the spheres, and various tasks assign'd
 by laws eternal to th' ærial kind.
 Come in the fields of purest æther play, and black and whiten in the blaze of
 day.
 Come guide the course of wand'ring orbs on high,
 or roll the planets through the boundless sky.
 Come less refin'd, beneath the moon's pale light pursue the stars that shoot athwart the
 night,
 or suck the mists in grosser air below,
 or dip their pinions in the painted bow, or brew fierce tempests on the wintry
 main,
 or o'er the glebe distil the kindly rain.
 Others on earth o'er human race pre-
 side,

Watch all their ways, and all their actions guide:
 Of these the chief the care of nations
 own,
 And guide with arms divine the British
 throne.
 Our humbler province is to tend the
 fair,
 Not a less pleasing, tho' less glorious
 care;
 To save the powder from too rude a
 gale,
 Nor let th' imprison'd essences exhale;
 To draw fresh colors from the vernal
 flow'rs;
 To steal from rainbows ere they drop in show'rs
 A brighter wash; to curl their waving hairs,
 Assist their blushes, and inspire their airs;
 Nay oft, in dreams, invention we bestow,
 To change a flounce, or add a furbelow.
 This day, black omens threat the brightest Fair
 That e'er deserv'd a watchful spirit's
 care;
 Some dire disaster, or by force, or flight;
 But what, or where, the fates have wrapt in night.
 Whether the nymph shall break Diana's law,
 Or some frail china jar receive a flaw;
 Or stain her honor, or her new brocade;
 Forget her pray'rs, or miss a masquerade;
 Or lose her heart, or necklace, at a ball;
 Or whether heaven has doom'd that Shock must fall.
 Haste then, ye spirits! to your charge
 repair:
 The flutt'ring fan be Zephyretta's care;
 The drops to thee, Brillante, we con-
 sign;
 And, Momentilla, let the watch be
 thine;
 Do thou, Crispissa, tend her fav'rite lock;
 Ariel himself shall be the guard of Shock.
 To fifty chosen Sylphs, of special note,

We trust th' important charge, the petticoat :
Oft have we known that seven-fold fence to fail, Tho' stiff with hoops and arm'd with ribs of whale,
Form a strong line about the silver
bound,
And guard the wide circumference
around.

Whatever spirit, careless of his charge,
His post neglects, or leaves the fair at large,
Shall feel sharp vengeance soon o'ertake his sins,
Be stopp'd in vials, or transfix'd with pins;
Or plung'd in lakes of bitter washes lie,
Or wedg'd whole ages in a bodkin's eye :
Gums and pomatums shall his slight restrain,
While clog'd he beats his silken wings
in vain;
Or alum styptics with contracting power Shrink his thin essence like a riv'd
flower :

Or, as Ixion fix'd, the wretch shall feel
The giddy motion of the whirling mill,
In fumes of burning chocolate shall
glow,
And tremble at the sea that froths below !

He spoke; the spirits from the sails descend;
Some, orb in orb, around the nymph extend;
Some thr'd the mazy ringlets of her
hair;
Some hang upon the pendants of her ear;
With beating hearts the dire event they wait,
Anxious, and trembling for the birth of Fate.

CANTO III.

Close by those meads, for ever crown'd
with flowers,
Where Thames with pride surveys his rising towers,
There stands a structure of majestic
frame,

Which from the neighboring Hampton takes its name.

Here Britain's statesmen oft the fall fore-doom

Of foreign tyrants, and of nymphs at
home;

Here thou, great ANNA ! whom three realms obey,

Dost sometimes counsel take — and sometimes tea.

Hither the heroes and the nymphs resort,

To taste awhile the pleasures of a court;
In various talk th' instructive hours they
past,

Who gave the ball, or paid the visit last;
One speaks the glory of the British Queen,

And one describes a charming Indian screen;

A third interprets motions, looks, and
eyes;

At ev'ry word a reputation dies.

Snuff, or the fan, supply each pause of chat,

With singing, laughing, ogling, and all that.

Meanwhile, declining from the noon
of day,

The sun obliquely shoots his burning ray;
The hungry judges soon the sentence
sign,

And wretches hang that jurymen may dine;

The merchant from th' Exchange returns in peace,

And the long labors of the toilet cease.
Belinda now, whom thirst of fame invites,

Burns to encounter two advent'rous
knights,

At ombre singly to decide their doom;
And swells her breast with conquests yet to come.

Straight the three bands prepare in arms to join,

Each band the number of the sacred nine.

Soon as she spreads her hand, th' aerial guard

Descend, and sit on each important card:
First Ariel perch'd upon a matadore,

Then each, according to the rank they bore;
For sylphs, yet mindful of their ancient race,
Are, as when women, wondrous fond of place.

Behold, four Kings in majesty rever'd,
With hoary whiskers and a forked beard;
And four fair Queens whose hands sustain a flower,

Th' expressive emblem of their softer power;

Four knaves in garbs succinct, a trusty band,

Caps on their heads, and halberts in their hand:

And particolor'd troops, a shining train,
Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain.

The skilful nymph reviews her force with care:

Let Spades be trumps! she said, and trumps they were.

Now move to war her sable matadores,

In show like leaders of the swarthy moors.

Spadillio first, unconquerable lord!
Led off two captive trumps, and swept the board.

As many more Manillio forc'd to yield,
And march'd a victor from the verdant field.

Him Basto follow'd, but his fate more hard

Gain'd but one trump and one plebeian card.

With his broad sabre next, a chief in years,

The hoary majesty of Spades appears,
Puts forth one manly leg, to sight reveal'd,

The rest, his many-color'd robe conceal'd.

The rebel Knave, who dares his prince engage,

Proves the just victim of his royal rage.

Ev'n mighty Pam, that kings and queens o'erthrew,

And mow'd down armies in the fights of Lu,

Sad chance of war! now destitute of aid,

Falls undistinguish'd by the victor spade!

Thus far both armies to Belinda yield;

Now to the baron fate inclines the field.

His warlike amazon her host invades,
Th' imperial consort of the crown of Spades.

The Club's black tyrant first her victim died,

Spite of his haughty mien, and barbarous pride:

What boots the regal circle on his head,
His giant limbs, in state unwieldy spread;

That long behind he trails his pompous robe,

And, of all monarchs, only grasps the globe?

The Baron now his Diamonds pours apace;

Th' embroider'd King who shows but half his face,

And his refulgent Queen, with powers combin'd

Of broken troops an easy conquest find.
Clubs, Diamonds, Hearts, in wild disorder seen,

With throngs promiscuous strow the level green.

Thus when dispers'd a routed army runs,

Of Asia's troops, and Afric's sable sons,
With like confusion different nations fly,

Of various habit, and of various dye,
The pierc'd battalions disunited fall,

In heaps on heaps; one fate o'erwhelms them all.

The Knave of Diamonds tries his wily arts,

And wins (oh shameful chance!) the Queen of Hearts.

At this the blood the virgin's cheek forsook,

A livid paleness spreads o'er all her look;

She sees, and trembles at th' approaching ill,

Just in the jaws of ruin, and Codille.

And now (as oft in some distemper'd
 state)
 On one nice trick depends the gen'ral
 fate.
 An Ace of Hearts steps forth: the King
 unseen
 Lurk'd in her hand, and mourn'd his captive queen:
 He springs to vengeance with an eager
 pace,
 And falls like thunder on the prostrate ace.
 The nymph exulting fills with shouts
 the sky;
 The walls, the woods, and long canals reply.
 Oh thoughtless mortals! ever blind to fate,
 Too soon dejected, and too soon elate.
 Sudden, these honors shall be snatch'd
 away,
 And curs'd for ever this victorious day.
 For lo! the board with cups and spoons is crown'd,
 The berries crackle, and the mill turns
 round;
 On shining altars of Japan they raise
 The silver lamp; the fiery spirits blaze:
 From silver spouts the grateful liquors
 glide,
 While China's earth receives the smoking tide:
 At once they gratify their scent and taste,
 And frequent cups prolong the rich repast.
 Straight hover round the fair her airy
 band;
 Some, as she sipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd,
 Some o'er her lap their careful plumes display'd,
 Trembling, and conscious of the rich cascade.
 Coffee, (which makes the politician
 wise,
 And see thro' all things with his halfshut eyes)
 Sent up in vapors to the Baron's brain New stratagems, the radiant lock to gain.
 Ah cease, rash youth! desist ere 'tis too
 late,

Fear the just gods, and think of Scylla's
 fate!
 Chang'd to a bird, and sent to flit in air,
 She dearly pays for Nisus' injur'd hair!
 But when to mischief mortals bend their will,
 How soon they find fit instruments of
 ill!
 Just then, Clarissa drew with tempting
 grace
 A two-edg'd weapon from her shining case:
 So ladies in romance assist their knight, Present the spear, and arm him for the fight.
 He takes the gift with rev'rence, and extends
 The little engine on his fingers' ends;
 This just behind Belinda's neck he
 spread,
 As o'er the fragrant steams she bends her head.
 Swift to the lock a thousand sprites repair,
 A thousand wings, by turns, blow back
 the hair;
 And thrice they twitch'd the diamond
 in her ear;
 Thrice she look'd back, and thrice the foe drew near.
 Just in that instant, anxious Ariel sought
 The close recesses of the virgin's
 thought;
 As on the nosegay in her breast reclin'd,
 He watch'd th' ideas rising in her
 mind,
 Sudden he view'd, in spite of all her art,
 An earthly lover lurking at her heart.
 Amaz'd, confus'd, he found his pow'r expir'd,
 Resign'd to fate, and with a sigh retir'd.
 The peer now spreads the glitt'ring forfex wide,
 T' enclose the lock; now joins it, to divide.
 Ev'n then, before the fatal engine
 clos'd,
 A wretched sylph too fondly interpos'd;
 Fate urg'd the shears, and cut the sylph in twain.

*FROM THE ILIAD. BOOK
VIII.*

THE troops exulting sat in order
round,
And beaming fires illumin'd all the ground.

As when the moon, refulgent lamp of
night!

O'er heaven's clear azure spreads her sacred light,

When not a breath disturbs the deep serene,

And not a cloud o'ercasts the solemn
scene;

Around her throne the vivid planets roll,
And stars unnumber'd gild the glowing pole,

O'er the dark trees a yellower verdure
shed,

And tip with silver every mountain's head;
Then shine the vales, the rocks in prospect rise,

A flood of glory bursts from all the
skies:

The conscious swains, rejoicing in the
sight,

Eye the blue vault, and bless the useful
light.

So many flames before proud Ilion blaze,
And lighten glimmering Xanthus with their rays:

The long reflections of the distant fires Gleam on the walls, and tremble on the spires.

A thousand piles the dusky horrors gild.
And shoot a shady lustre o'er the field.

Full fifty guards each flaming pile attend,

Whose umber'd arms, by fits, thick flashes send.

Loud neigh the coursers o'er their heaps of corn,

And ardent warriors wait the rising
morn.

ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF AN UNFORTUNATE LADY.

WHAT beck'ning ghost, along the moonlight shade,

Invites my steps, and points to yonder
glade?

'Tis she! — but why that bleeding bosom gor'd?

Why dimly gleams the visionary sword?

O, ever beauteous! ever friendly! tell,

Is it in Heav'n a crime to love too well?

To bear too tender, or too firm a heart,

To act a Lover's or a Roman's part?

Is there no bright reversion in the sky,
For those who greatly think or bravely
die?

Why bade ye else, ye pow'rs! her soul aspire

Above the vulgar flight of low desire?

Ambition first sprung from your blest
abodes,

The glorious fault of angels and of gods:

Thence to their images on earth it flows,

And in the breasts of kings and heroes glows.

Most souls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age,

Dull sullen pris'ners in the body's cage:

Dim lights of life, that burn a length of
years

Useless, unseen, as lamps in sepulchres;

Like Eastern kings, a lazy state they keep,

And, close confin'd to their own palace,
sleep.

From these perhaps (ere Nature bade her die)

Fate snatch'd her early to the pitying
sky.

As into air the purer spirits flow,

And sep'rate from their kindred dregs
below;

So flew the soul to its congenial place,

Nor left one virtue to redeem her race.

But thou, false guardian of a charge too good,

Thou, mean deserter of thy brother's
blood!

See on these ruby lips the trembling
breath,

These cheeks now fading at the blast of
death.

Cold is that breast that warmed the world before,

And those love-darting eyes must roll
no more.

Thus, if Eternal justice rules the ball, Thus shall your wives, and thus your children fall:

On all the line a sudden vengeance
waits,

And frequent hearses shall besiege your gates:

There passengers shall stand, and pointing say

(While the long fun'ral's blacken all the
way),

Lo! these were they, whose souls the Furies steel'd,

And curs'd with hearts unknowing how to yield.

Thus unlamented pass the proud away,
The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!

So perish all, whose breast ne'er learn'd to glow

For others' good, or melt at others' wo.

What can atone (O, ever-injur'd
shade!)

Thy fate unpitied, and thy rites unpaid?

No friend's complaint, no kind domestic tear

Pleas'd thy pale ghost, or grac'd thy mournful bier;

By foreign hands thy dying eyes were clos'd,

By foreign hands thy decent limbs compos'd,

By foreign hands thy humble grave
adorn'd,

By strangers honor'd, and by strangers mourn'd.

What though no friends in sable weeds
appear,

Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn
a year,

And bear about the mockery of wo
Tomidnight dances, and the public show:

What though no weeping Loves thy ashes grace,

Nor polish'd marble emulate thy face;

What though no sacred earth allow thee
room,

Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb;

Yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be dress'd,

And the green turf lie lightly on thy
breast:

There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow,
There the first roses of the year shall
blow :

While angels with their silver wings o'ershade
The ground, now sacred by thy relics
made.

So peaceful rests, without a stone, a
name,

What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame.

How lov'd, how honor'd once, avails thee not,

To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall
be !

Poets themselves must fall like those they sung,

Deaf the prais'd ear, and mute the tune-ful tongue.

Ev'n he, whose soul now melts in mournful lays,

Shall shortly want the gen'rous tear he pays;

Then from his closing eyes thy form shall part,

And the last pang shall tear thee from his heart;

Life's idle business at one gasp be o'er,
The Muse forgot, and thou belov'd no
more !

THE QUIET LIFE.

HAPPY the man, whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire;
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter, fire.

Blest, who can unconcern'dly find Hours, days, and years, slide soft away
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day,

Sound sleep by night; study and ease
Together mix'd; sweet recreation,
And innocence, which most does please
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown;
Thus unlamented let me die;
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie.

THE MESSIAH.

A SACRED ECLOGUE: IN IMITATION OF VIRGIL'S POLLIO.

YE nymphs of Solyma ! begin the song:
To heavenly themes sublimer strains belong.

The mossy fountains, and the sylvan
shades,

The dreams of Pindus and the Aonian maids,

Delight no more — O Thou my voice inspire

Who touched Isaiah's hallowed lips with fire !

Rapt into future times, the bard begun :
A Virgin shall conceive, a Virgin bear a Son !

From Jesse's root behold a branch arise, Whose sacred flower with fragrance fills the skies :

The ethereal spirit o'er its leaves shall
move,

And on its top descends the mystic dove.
Ye heavens ! from high the dewy nectar pour,

And in soft silence shed the kindly shower !

The sick and weak the healing plant shall aid,

From storms a shelter, and from heat a
shade.

All crimes shall cease, and ancient fraud shall fail;

Returning Justice lift aloft her scale;
Peace o'er the world her olive wand extend,

And white-robed Innocence from heaven descend.

Swift fly the years, and rise the expected
 morn!
 Oh spring to light, auspicious Babe, be born!
 See Nature hastes her earliest wreaths to bring,
 With all the incense of the breathing
 spring:
 See lofty Lebanon his head advance, See nodding forests on the mountains
 dance:
 See spicy clouds from lowly Saron
 rise,
 And Carmel's flowery top perfumes the
 skies!
 Hark! a glad voice the lonely desert cheers;
 Prepare the way! a God, a God appears:
 A God, a God! the vocal hills reply,
 The rocks proclaim the approaching Deity.
 Lo, earth receives him from the bending skies!
 Sink down, ye mountains, and, ye valleys, rise;
 With heads declined, ye cedars, homage
 pay;
 Be smooth, ye rocks; ye rapid floods,
 give way;
 The Saviour comes! by ancient bards foretold!
 Hear him, ye deaf, and all ye blind, be-
 hold!
 He from thick films shall purge the visual ray,
 And on the sightless eyeball pour the
 day:
 'Tis he the obstructed paths of sound shall clear,
 And bid new music charm the unfolding
 ear:
 The dumb shall sing, the lame his crutch forego,
 And leap exulting like the bounding roe.
 No sigh, no murmur the wide world shall hear,
 From every face he wipes off every tear.
 In adamant chains shall Death be
 bound,

And Hell's grim tyrant feel the eternal wound.
 As the good shepherd tends his fleecy
 care,
 Seeks freshest pasture and the purest
 air,
 Explores the lost, the wandering sheep directs,
 By day o'ersees them, and by night protects,
 The tender lambs he raises in his arms,
 Feeds from his hand, and in his bosom warms;
 Thus shall mankind his guardian care engage,
 The promised Father of the future age.
 No more shall nation against nation
 rise,
 Nor ardent warriors meet with hateful
 eyes,
 Nor fields with gleaming steel be covered o'er,
 The brazen trumpets kindle rage no
 more;
 But useless lances into scythes shall bend,
 And the broad falchion in a plough-share end.
 Then palaces shall rise; the joyful son Shall finish what his short-lived sire begun;
 Their vines a shadow to their race shall yield,
 And the same hand that sow'd, shall reap the field.
 The swain, in barren deserts with surprise
 See lilies spring, and sudden verdure
 rise;
 And start, amidst the thirsty wilds, to
 hear
 New falls of water murmuring in his ear.
 On rifted rocks, the dragon's late abodes,
 The green reed trembles, and the bulrush nods.
 Waste sandy valleys, once perplex'd with thorn,
 The spiry fir and shapely box adorn;
 To leafless shrubs the flowering palms succeed,

THE PRESENT CONDITION OF MAN VINDICATED.

[From The Essay on Man, Book I.]

HEAV'N from all creatures hides the book of Fate,
 All but the page prescrib'd, their present
 state;
 From brutes what men, from men what spirits know,
 Or who could suffer being here below?
 The lamb thy riot dooms to bleed to-day,
 Had he thy reason, would he skip and
 play?
 Pleas'd to the last, he crops the flow'ry
 food,
 And licks the hand just rais'd to shed his blood.
 O blindness to the future! kindly giv'n,
 That each may fill the circle marked by Heav'n;
 Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
 A hero perish, or a sparrow fall;
 Atoms or systems into ruin hurl'd,
 And now a bubble burst, and now a
 world.
 Hope humbly, then, with trembling pinions soar;
 Wait the great teacher, Death; and God adore.
 What future bliss, he gives not thee to
 know,
 But gives that Hope to be thy blessing
 now.
 Hope springs eternal in the human
 breast;
 Man never IS, but always TO BE blest:
 The soul, uneasy and confined from
 home,
 Rests and expatiates in a life to come.
 Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutor'd
 mind

Sees God in clouds, and hears him in the wind,
 His soul proud Science never taught to stray
 Far as the solar walk, or milky way;
 Yet simple Nature to his hope has giv'n,
 Behind the cloud-topp'd hill, a humbler heav'n,
 Some safer world in depth of woods embrac'd,
 Some happier island in the wat'ry waste,
 Where slaves once more their native land behold,
 No fiends torment, nor Christians thirst for gold.
 To be, contents his natural desire,
 He asks no angel's wing, no seraph's fire.
 But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
 His faithful dog shall bear him company.
 Go, wiser thou! and in thy scale of sense
 Weigh thy opinion against Providence;
 Call imperfection what thou fanciest such,
 Say, here he gives too little, there too much:
 Destroy all creatures for thy sport or gust,
 Yet cry, if Man's unhappy, God's unjust;
 If man alone engross not Heav'n's high care,
 Alone made perfect here, immortal there:
 Snatch from his hand the balance and the rod,
 Re-judge his justice, be the God of God.
 In Pride, in reasoning Pride, our error lies;
 All quit their sphere, and rush into the skies,
 Pride still is aiming at the blest abodes,
 Men would be Angels, Angels would be Gods
 Aspiring to be Gods, if Angels fell,
 Aspiring to be Angels, Men rebel:
 And who but wishes to revert the law
 Of order sars against th' Eternal Cause.

ON THE ORDER OF NATURE.

[From The Essay on Man, Book I.]

SEE through this air, this ocean, and this earth,
 All matter quick, and bursting into birth.
 Above, how high progressive life may go!
 Around, how wide! how deep extend below!
 Vast chain of Being! which from God began,
 Natures ethereal, human, angel, man,
 Beast, bird, fish, insect, what no eye can see,
 No glass can reach; from Infinite to thee,
 From thee to Nothing. On superior pow'rs
 Were we to press, inferior might on ours;
 Or in the full creation leave a void,
 Where one step broken the great scale destroy'd;
 From Nature's chain whatever link you strike,
 Tenth or ten thousandth, breaks the chain alike.
 And, if each system in gradation roll
 Alike essential to th' amazing whole,
 The least confusion but in one, not all
 That system only, but the whole must fall.
 Let earth unbalanc'd from her orbit fly,
 Planets and suns run lawless through the sky;
 Let ruling angels from their spheres be hurl'd,
 Being on being wreck'd, and world on world,
 Heav'n's whole foundations to the centre nod,
 And nature tremble to the throne of God:
 All this dread order break— from whom!
 for thee?
 Vile worm! — Oh madness! pride! impiety!
 What if the foot, ordain'd the dust to tread,
 Or hand to toil, aspir'd to be the head?
 What if the head, the eye, or ear, repin'd
 To serve mere engines to the ruling mind?
 Just as absurd for any part to claim
 To be another, in this gen'ral frame:

THE ORIGIN OF SUPERSTITION AND TYRANNY.

[From The Essay on Man, Book III.]

WHO first taught souls enslav'd and realms undone,
 Th' enormous faith of many made for one;
 That proud exception to all Nature's laws,
 T' invert the world, and counterwork its cause?
 Force first made conquest, and that conquest, law;
 Till Superstition taught the tyrant awe,
 Then shared the tyranny, then lent it aid,
 And Gods of conqu'rors, slaves of subjects made.
 She, 'midst the lightning's blaze, and thunder's sound,
 When rock'd the mountains, and when groan'd the ground,
 She taught the weak to bend, the proud to pray,
 To pow'rs unseen, and mightier far than they:
 She, from the rending earth and bursting skies,
 Saw Gods descend, and fiends infernal
 rise:
 Here fixed the dreadful, there the blest
 abodes;
 Fear made her Devils, and weak Hope her Gods;
 Gods partial, changeful, passionate, unjust,
 Whose attributes were Rage, Revenge, or Lust;
 Such as the souls of cowards might conceive,
 And, formed like tyrants, tyrants would believe.
 Zeal, then, not Charity, became the
 guide;
 And Hell was built on spite, and Heav'n on pride.
 Then sacred seem'd th' ethereal vault no
 more;
 Altars grew marble then, and reek'd with gore:
 Then first the flamen tasted living food;

Next his grim idol, smear'd with human blood;
 With Heav'n's own thunders shook the world below,
 And play'd the God an engine on his foe.
 So drives Self-love, through just and through unjust,
 To one Man's pow'r, ambition, lucre, lust:
 The same Self-love, in all, becomes the cause
 Of what restrains him, Government and Laws;
 For what one likes, if others like as well,
 What serves one will, when many wills rebel?
 How shall he keep, what sleeping or awake
 A weaker may surprise, a stronger take?
 His safety must his liberty restrain:
 All join to guard what each desires to gain.
 Forced into virtue thus by self-defence,
 Even kings learn'd justice and benevolence;
 Self-love forsook the path it first pursu'd,
 And found the private in the public good.
 'Twas then the studious head or gen'rous mind,
 Follow'r of God, or friend of human-kind,
 Poet or Patriot, rose but to restore
 The faith and moral Nature gave before;
 Relum'd her ancient light, not kindled new;
 If not God's image, yet his shadow drew;
 Taught pow'r's due use to people and to kings,
 Taught nor to slack nor strain its tender strings,
 The less or greater set so justly true,
 That touching one must strike the other too;
 Till jarring int'rests of themselves create
 Th' according music of a well-mix'd state.
 Such is the world's great harmony, that springs
 From order, union, full consent of things:
 Where small and great, where weak and mighty, made

To serve, not suffer, strengthen, not invade:
 More pow'rful each as needful to the rest,
 And, in proportion as it blesses, blest:
 Draw to one point, and to one centre bring Beast, Man, or Angel, Servant, Lord, or King.
 For Forms of Government let souls contest;
 Whate'er is best administer'd is best:
 For Modes of Faith let graceless zealots fight,
 His can't be wrong whose life is in the right;
 In Faith and Hope the world will disagree,
 But all Mankind's concern is Charity:
 All must be false that thwart this one great end,
 And all of God, that bless mankind or mend.
 Man, like the gen'rous vine, supported lives;
 The strength he gains is from the embrace he gives.
 On their own axis as the planets run,
 Yet make at once their circle round the sun;
 So two consistent motions act the soul,
 And one regards itself, and one the whole.
 Thus God and Nature link'd the gen'ral frame,
 And bade Self-love and Social be the same.

ON VIRTUE.

[From The Essay on Man, Book IV.]

KNOW thou this truth, enough for man to know,
 "Virtue alone is Happiness below"?
 The only point where human bliss stands still,
 And tastes the good without the fall to ill;
 Where only Merit constant pay receives,
 Is blest in what it takes, and what it gives;

All'd if its end it gain, attended with no pain:
 , though e'er so bless'd, relish'd as the more dis-mirth unfeeling Folly far than Virtue's very h object, from each place

 s'd, yet never tir'd;
 hile one man's oppress'd;
 while another's bless'd:

Are given in vain, but what they seek

 Wise is her present; she connects in this
 His greatest Virtue with his greatest
 Bliss;
 At once his own bright prospects to be
 blest,
 And strongest motive to assist the rest.
 Self-love thus push'd to social, to divine,
 Gives thee to make thy neighbor's blessing thine.
 Is this too little for the boundless heart?
 Extend it, let thy enemies have part:
 Grasp the whole worlds of Reason, Life,
 and Sense,
 In one close system of Benevolence:
 Happier as kinder, in whate'er degree,
 And height of Bliss but height of Charity.
 God loves from whole to parts: but human soul
 Must rise from individual to the whole.
 Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
 As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake;
 The centre mov'd, a circle straight succeeds,
 Another still, and still another spreads; Friend, parent, neighbor, first it will embrace;
 His country next; and next all human
 race;
 Wide and more wide th' o'erflowings of the mind
 Take ev'ry creature in of ev'ry kind;
 Earth smiles around, with boundless bounty blest,
 And Heav'n beholds its image in his
 breast.

ON HAPPINESS.

[From The Essay on Man, Book IV.]

O HAPPINESS! our being's end and aim!
 Good, Pleasure, Ease, Content! what-e'er thy name;
 That something still, which prompts th'
 eternal sigh;
 For which we bear to live, or dare to die;
 Which still so near us, yet beyond us
 lies,

Of all that seem to be by the hand
 wise,
 Plant of celestial seed! if dropp'd below,
 Say, in what mortal soil thou deign'st to grow?
 Fair op'ning to some court's propitious
 shine,
 Or deep with diamonds in the flaming
 mine?
 Twined with the wreaths Parnassian laurels yield,
 Or reaped in iron harvests of the field?
 Where grows?—where grows it not?
 If vain our toil,
 We ought to blame the culture, not the
 soil:
 Fix'd to no spot is happiness sincere,
 'Tis nowhere to be found, or ev'rywhere;
 'Tis never to be bought, but always free,
 And, fled from monarchs, St. John dwells with thee.
 Ask of the Learn'd the way, the Learn'd are blind,
 This bids to serve, and that to shun man-
 kind:
 Some place the bliss in action, some in
 ease,
 Those call it Pleasure, and Contentment
 these:
 Some, sunk to beasts, find pleasure end in pain,
 Some, swell'd to Gods, confess e'en virtue
 vain:
 Or indolent, to each extreme they fall,
 To trust in ev'rything, or doubt of all.
 Who thus define it say they, more or less Than this, that Happiness is Happiness?
 Take Nature's path, and mad Opinion's leave,
 All states can reach it, and all heads conceive;
 Obvious her goods, in no extremes they dwell;
 There needs but thinking right, and meaning well;
 And mourn our various portions as we
 please,
 Equal is common sense and common
 ease.
 Remember, Man, "The Universal Cause
 Acts not by partial, but by gen'ral
 laws;"

And makes what Happiness we just call Subsist not in the good of one, but all
 There's not a blessing individuals find,
 But some way leans and hearkens to the
 kind;
 No Bandit fierce, no Tyrant mad with
 pride,
 No cavern'd Hermit rests self-satisfied:
 Who most to shun or hate Mankind pretend,
 Seek an admirer, or would fix a friend:
 Abstract what others feel, what others think,
 All pleasures sicken, and all glories sink:
 Each has his share; and who would more obtain Shall find the pleasure pays not half the
 pain.
 Order is Heav'n's first law; and this confess'd,
 Some are, and must be, greater than the
 rest;
 More rich, more wise: but who infer from hence
 That such are happier shocks all common sense.
 Heav'n to mankind impartial we confess,
 If all are equal in their Happiness:
 But mutual wants this Happiness
 increase;
 All Nature's difference keeps all Nature's
 peace.
 Condition, circumstance, is not the thing;
 Bliss is the same in subject or in king;
 In who obtain defence, or who defend;
 In him who is, or him who finds a friend:
 Heav'n breathes through ev'ry member of the whole
 One common blessing, as one common
 soul.
 But Fortune's gifts if each alike possess'd,
 And all were equal, must not all contest?
 If then to all men Happiness was meant,
 God in externals could not place Content.
 Fortune her gifts may variously dispose,
 And these be happy call'd, unhappy
 those;
 But Heav'n's just balance equal will appear,

those are placed in Hope, and these in Fear;
Present good or ill, the joy or curse,
Nature views of better or of worse.
Ons of earth, attempt ye still to rise, Mountains pil'd on mountains, to the
skies?
'n still with laughter the vain toil
surveys,
buries madmen in the heaps they
raise.
Now, all the good that individuals
find,
God and Nature meant to mere man-
kind,
Man's whole pleasure, all the joys of
sense,
In three words, Health, Peace, and Competence.

FAME.

It's fame? a fancy'd life in others'
breath,
Lying beyond us, ev'n before our death.
What you hear, you have; and what's unknown,
Fame (my lord) if Tully's, or your own.
What we feel of it begins and ends
In a small circle of our foes or friends;
I beside as much an empty shade
As Eugene living as a Cæsar dead;
Or when, or where, they shone, or
shone,
On the Rubicon, or on the Rhine.
'Tis a feather, and a chief's a rod;
The honest man's the noblest work of
God.

Fame but from death a villain's name can save,
As justice tears his body from the grave;
When what t' oblivion better were re-
sign'd,
Is hung on high to poison half mankind.
All fame is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart:
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas;
And more true joy Marcellus exil'd feels Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels.

THE DYING CHRISTIAN TO HIS SOUL.

VITAL spark of heavenly flame!
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame:
Trembling, hoping, lingering, flying,
Oh the pain, the bliss of dying!
Cease, fond nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life.

Hark! they whisper; angels say,
"Sister spirit, come away."
What is this absorbs me quite?
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirits, draws my breath?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

The world recedes; it disappears!
Heaven opens on my eyes! my ears
With sounds seraphic ring:
Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy victory?
O Death! where is thy sting?

ROBERT BLAIR.

1699-1746.

ROBERT BLAIR was born at Edinburgh in 1699. He became a minister, and was presented to the living of Athelstaneford in Haddingtonshire, where most of his life was passed. He died there in 1746. The Grave was published at Edinburgh in 1743.]

OFT IN THE LONE CHURCH-YARD.

in the lone church-yard at night | By glimpse of moon-shine chequering
I've seen, | through the trees,

The school-boy with his satchel in his hand,
 Whistling aloud to bear his courage up,
 And lightly tripping o'er the long flat stones,
 (With nettles skirted, and with moss o'ergrown,)
 That tell in homely phrase who lie below.
 Sudden he starts, and hears, or thinks he hears,
 The sound of something purring at his heels;
 Full fast he flies, and dares not look behind him,
 Till out of breath he overtakes his fellows;
 Who gather round, and wonder at the tale.
 Of horrid apparition, tall and ghastly,
 That walks at dead of night, or takes his stand O'er some new-open'd grave; and (strange to tell!)
 Evanishes at crowing of the cock.

THE GRAVE.

DULL grave! thou spoil'st the dance of youthful blood,
 Strik'st out the dimple from the cheek of mirth,
 And ev'ry smirking feature from the face;
 Branding our laughter with the name of madness.
 Where are the jesters now? the men of health Complexionally pleasant? Where the droll, Whose ev'ry look and gesture was a joke
 To chapping theatres and shouting crowds,
 And made ev'n thick-lipp'd musing melancholy
 To gather up her face into a smile
 Before she was aware? Ah! sullen now,
 And dumb as the green turf that covers them.

BEAUTY IN THE GRAVE.

BEAUTY—thou pretty plaything, dear deceit,
 That steals so softly o'er the stripling's heart,
 And gives it a new pulse, unknown before,
 The grave discredits thee: thy charms expung'd,
 Thy roses faded, and thy lilies soil'd,
 What hast thou more to boast of? Will thy lovers
 Flock round thee now, to gaze and do thee homage?
 Methinks I see thee with thy head low laid,
 Whilst surfeited upon thy damask cheek
 The high-fed worm, in lazy volumes roll'd, Riots unscared. — For this, was all thy caution?
 For this, thy painful labors at thy glass?
 T' improve those charms, and keep them in repair,
 For which the spoiler thanks thee not.
 Foul feeder,
 Coarse fare and carrion please thee full as well,
 And leave as keen a relish on the sense.
 Look how the fair one weeps! — the conscious tears
 Stand thick as dew-drops on the bells of flowers:
 Honest effusion! the swoll'n heart is vain
 Works hard to put a gloss on its distress.

STRENGTH IN THE GRAVE.

STRENGTH too — thou surly, and less gentle boast
 Of those that loud laugh at the village ring;
 A fit of common sickness pulls thee down
 With greater ease, than e'er thou didst the stripling
 That rashly dared thee to th' unequal fight.

was that I heard? — deep deed! heavy laden; let me trace bed it comes, where the man, arm belabor'd, gasps for l-hunted beast. How his art his roomy chest by far too ungs full play. — What now uilt sinewy limbs, and well- houlders; ugs for life, and lays about	Mad with his pain! Eager he catches hold Of what comes next to hand, and grasps it hard, Just like a creature drowning; hideous sight! Oh! how his eyes stand out, and stare full ghastly! While the distemper's rank and deadly venom Shoots like a burning arrow cross his bowels, And drinks his marrow up. — Heard you that groan? It was his last. — See how the great Goliah, Just like a child that brawl'd itself to rest, Lies still.

SNOW SCENE.

[From Winter.]

tempests come: and fuming

all their fleecy world along;
saddens with the gathered hushed air the whitening lescends, wavering; till at last the nd wide, and fast, dimming nual flow. The cherished

Put on their winter-robe of purest
white.

'Tis brightness all; save where the new snow melts

Along the mazy current. Low, the woods

Bow their hoar head; and, ere the languid sun

Faint from the west emits his evening
ray,

Earth's universal face, deep-hid and chill,

Is one wild dazzling waste, that buries
wide

The works of man. Drooping, the laborer-ox

Stands covered o'er with snow, and then demands

The fruit of all his toil. The fowls of
heaven,

Tamed by the cruel season, crowd around

The winnowing store, and claim the little boon
 Which Providence assigns them. One
 alone,
 The redbreast, sacred to the household
 gods,
 Wisely regardful of the embroiling sky,
 In joyless fields and thorny thickets
 leaves
 His shivering mates, and pays to trusted
 man
 His annual visit. Half-afraid, he first Against the window beats; then, brisk, alights
 On the warm hearth; then, hopping o'er the floor,
 Eyes all the smiling family askance,
 And pecks, and starts, and wonders where he is —
 Till, more familiar grown, the table-crumbs Attract his slender feet. The foodless wilds Pour forth their brown inhabitants. The hare,
 Though timorous, of heart, and hard beset
 By death in various forms, dark snares,
 and dogs,
 And more un pitying men, the garden seeks,
 Urged on by fearless want. The bleat-ing kind Eye the black heaven, and next the glistening earth,
 With looks of dumb despair; then, sad dispersed,
 Dig for the withered herb through heaps of snow.

THE SHEEP-WASHING.

[From Summer.]

OR rushing thence, in one diffusive
 band,
 They drive the troubled flocks, by many a dog Compelled, to where the mazy-running brook Forms a deep pool; this bank abrupt
 and high,

And that, fair-spreading, in a pebbled
 shore.
 Urged to the giddy brink, much is the toil,
 The clamor much, of men, and boys,
 and dogs,
 Ere the soft fearful people to the flood Commit their woolly sides. And oft the swain,
 On some impatient seizing, hurls them
 in :
 Emboldened then, nor hesitating more,
 Fast, fast, they plunge amid the flashing
 wave,
 And panting labor to the farthest shore.
 Repeated this, till deep the well-washed fleece
 Has drunk the flood, and from his lively haunt
 The trout is banished by the sordid
 stream,
 Heavy and dripping, to the breezy brow Slow move the harmless race; where, as they spread
 Their swelling treasures to the sunny
 ray,
 Inly disturbed, and wondering what this wild Outrageous tumult means, their loud complaints
 The country fill — and, tossed from rock to rock,
 Incessant bleatings run around the hills.
 At last, of snowy white, the gathered flocks
 Are in the wattled pen innumerable pressed,
 Head above head; and ranged in lusty rows
 The shepherds sit, and whet the sounding shears.
 The housewife waits to roll her fleecy
 stores,
 With all her gay-drest maids attending
 round.
 One, chief, in gracious dignity enthroned, Shines o'er the rest, the pastoral queen, and rays
 Her smiles, sweet-beaming, on her shepherd-king;
 While the glad circle round them yield their souls

To festive mirth, and wit that knows no gall.
Meantime, their joyous task goes on apace:
Some mingling stir the melted tar, and some,
Deep on the new-shorn vagrant's heaving side,
To stamp his master's cypher ready
stand;
Others the unwilling wether drag along;
And, glorying in his might, the sturdy boy
Holds by the twisted horns the indignant ram.
Behold where bound, and of its robe
bereft,
By needy man, that all-depending lord,
How meek, how patient, the mild creature lies!
What softness in its melancholy face,
What dumb complaining innocence appears!
Fear not, ye gentle tribes, 'tis not the knife
Of horrid slaughter that is o'er you waved;
No, 'tis the tender swain's well-guided shears,
Who having now, to pay his annual
care,
Borrowed your fleece, to you a cumbrous load,
Will send you bounding to your hills
again.

STORM IN HARVEST.

[From Autumn.]

DEFEATING oft the labors of the year,
The sultry south collects a potent blast.
At first, the groves are scarcely seen to stir
Their trembling tops, and a still murmur runs Along the soft-inclining fields of corn;
But as the aerial tempest fuller swells,
And in one mighty stream, invisible,
Immense, the whole excited atmosphere Impetuous rushes o'er the sounding
world,

Strained to the root, the stooping forest pours
A rustling shower of yet untimely leaves.
High-beat, the circling mountains eddy
in,
From the bare wild, the dissipated
storm,
And send it in a torrent down the vale.
Exposed, and naked, to its utmost rage,
Through all the sea of harvest rolling
round,
The billowy plain floats wide; nor can evade,
Though pliant to the blast, its seizing force—
Or whirled in air, or into vacant chaff Shook waste. And sometimes too a burst of rain,
Swept from the black horizon, broad, descends
In one continuous flood. Still over head
The mingling tempest weaves its gloom, and still
The deluge deepens; till the fields
around
Lie sunk, and flatted, in the sordid wave.
Sudden, the ditches swell; the meadows swim.
Red, from the hills, innumerable streams Tumultuous roar; and high above its bank
The river lift; before whose rushing tide,
Herds, flocks, and harvests, cottages,
and swains,
Roll mingled down: all that the winds had spared,
In one wild moment ruined; the big hopes,
And well-earned treasures, of the painful year.
Fled to some eminence, the husband-
man,
Helpless, beholds the miserable wreck
Driving along; his drowning ox at once Descending, with his labors scattered
round,
He sees; and instant o'er his shivering
thought
Comes Winter unprovided, and a train Of clamant children dear. Ye masters,
then,

Be mindful of the rough laborious hand That sinks you soft in elegance and
ease;
Be mindful of those limbs, in russet
clad,
Whose toil to yours is warmth and graceful pride;
And, oh, be mindful of that sparing board
Which covers yours with luxury profuse, Makes your glass sparkle, and your sense rejoice!
Nor cruelly demand what the deep rains
And all-involving winds have swept
away.

THE COMING OF THE RAIN.

[From Spring.]

AT first a dusky wreath they seem to
rise,
Scarce staining ether; but by fast degrees,
In heaps on heaps, the doubling vapor sails
Along the loaded sky, and mingling
deep,
Sits on the horizon round a settled
gloom:
Not such as wintry storms on mortals
shed,
Oppressing life; but lovely, gentle, kind,
And full of every hope and every joy,
The wish of Nature. Gradual sinks the breeze
Into a perfect calm; that not a breath
Is heard to quiver through the closing
woods,
Or rustling turn the many twinkling
leaves
Of aspen tall. The uncurling floods, diffused
In glassy breadth, seem through delusive lapse Forgetful of their course. 'Tis silence
all,
And pleasing expectation. Herds and flocks
Drop the dry sprig, and, mute-imploring,
eye

The fallen verdure. Hushed in short suspense,
The plummy people streak their wings with oil,
To throw the lucid moisture trickling
off;
And wait the approaching sign to strike,
at once,
Into the general choir. Even mountains, vales,
And forests seem, impatient, to demand
The promised sweetness. Man superior walks
Amid the glad creation, musing praise,
And looking lively gratitude. At last,
The clouds consign their treasures to the fields;
And, softly shaking on the dimpled pool Prelusive drops, let all their moisture
flow,
In large effusion, o'er the freshened
world.

THE CASTLE OF INDOLENCE.

[From Book I.]

IN lowly dale, fast by a river's side,
With woody hill o'er hill encompass'd
round,
A most enchanting wizard did abide,
Than whom a fiend more fell is no where found,
It was, I ween, a lovely spot of ground:
And there a season atween June and
May,
Half prankt with spring, with summer half imbrown'd,
A listless climate made, where sooth
to say,
No living wight could work, ne cared ev'n for play.

Was nought around but images of
rest:
Sleep-soothing groves, and quiet lawns
between;
And flowery beds that slumberous influence kest,
From poppies breath'd; and beds of pleasant green,

Where never yet was creeping creature seen.
 Meantime unnumber'd glittering streamlets play'd
 And purled everywhere their waters sheen;
 That as they bicker'd through the sunny glade,
 Though restless still themselves, a lulling murmur made.

Join'd to the prattle of the purling rills,
 Were heard the lowing herds along the vale,
 And flocks loud-bleating from the distant hills;
 And vacant shepherds piping in the dale:
 And now and then sweet Philomel would wail,
 Or stock-doves 'plain amid the forest deep,
 That drowsy rustled to the sighing gale;
 And still a coil the grasshopper did keep;
 Yet all these sounds yblent inclined all to sleep.

Full in the passage of the vale above,
 A sable, silent, solemn forest stood;
 Where nought but shadowy forms were seen to move,
 As Idless fancy'd in her dreaming mood:
 And up the hills, on either side, a wood
 Of blackening pines, ay waving to and fro,
 Sent forth a sleepy horror through the blood;
 And where this valley winded out, below,
 The murmuring main was heard, and scarcely heard, to flow.

A pleasing land of drowsy-head it was,
 Of dreams that wave before the half-shut eye;
 And of gay castles in the clouds that pass,

For ever flushing round a summer sky:
 There eke the soft delights, that witchingly
 Instil a wanton sweetness through the breast,
 And the calm pleasures always hover'd nigh;
 But whate'er smack'd of noyance, or unrest,
 Was far far off expell'd from this delicious nest.

ODE.

TELL me, thou soul of her I love,
 Ah! tell me, whither art thou fled;
 To what delightful world above,
 Appointed for the happy dead.

Or dost thou, free, at pleasure, roam,
 And sometimes share thy lover's woe;
 Where, void of thee, his cheerless home
 Can now, alas! no comfort know?

Oh! if thou hover'st round my walk,
 While, under every well-known tree,
 I to thy fancy'd shadow talk,
 And every tear is full of thee.

Should then the weary eye of grief,
 Beside some sympathetic stream,
 In slumber find a short relief,
 Oh, visit thou my soothing dream:

RULE BRITANNIA.

WHEN Britain first, at Heaven's command,
 Arose from out the azure main,
 This was the charter of the land,
 And guardian angels sang the strain:
 Rule Britannia, Britannia rules the waves;
 Britons never will be slaves.

The nations, not so blest as thee,
Must in their turn, to tyrants fall; Whilst thou shalt flourish, great and
free,
The dread and envy of them all:
Rule Britannia, etc.

Still more majestic shalt thou rise,
More dreadful from each foreign stroke;
As the loud blast that tears the skies
Serves but to root thy native oak:
Rule Britannia, etc.

Thee haughty tyrants ne'er shall tame;
All their attempts to hurl thee down

Will but arouse thy gen'rous flame,
And work their woe — but thy renown:

Rule Britannia, etc.

To thee belongs the rural reign;
Thy cities shall with commerce shine:
All thine shall be the subject main,
And every shore encircle thine:
Rule Britannia, etc.

The Muses, still with Freedom found,
Shall to thy happy coast repair;
Blest isle! with matchless beauty crown'd,
And manly hearts to guard the fair:
Rule Britannia, etc.

DAVID MALLET.

1700-1765.

[SON of a small inn-keeper in Crieff Perthshire, where he was born in the year 1700. Attended the College of Aberdeen, and became a tutor in the family of the Duke of Montrose. By his very considerable talents, management, and address, he soon rose in the world. In his latter days he held the office of Keeper of the Book of Entries for the port of London. He died on the 21st of April, 1765.]

WILLIAM AND MARGARET.

'TWAS at the silent, solemn hour,
When night and morning meet;
In glided Margaret's grimly ghost,
And stood at William's feet.

Her face was like an April morn,
Clad in a wintry cloud;
And clay-cold was her lily hand,
That held her sable shroud.

So shall the fairest face appear,
When youth and years are flown:
Such is the robe that kings must wear,
When death has reft their crown.

Her bloom was like the springing flower,
That sips the silver dew;
The rose was budded in her cheek,
Just opening to the view.

But love had, like the canker-worm,
Consumed her early prime;
The rose grew pale, and left her cheek —
She died before her time.

"Awake," she cried, "thy true love calls,
Come from her midnight grave;
Now let thy pity hear the maid,
Thy love refused to save.

"This is the dark and dreary hour,
When injured ghosts complain;
When yawning graves give up their dead,
To haunt the faithless swain.

"Bethink thee, William, of thy fault,
Thy pledge and broken oath!
And give me back my maiden vow,
And give me back my troth.

"Why did you promise love to me,
And not that promise keep?
Why did you swear my eyes were bright,
Yet leave those eyes to weep?

"How could you say my face was fair,
And yet that face forsake?
How could you win my virgin heart,
Yet leave that heart to break?

Did you say my lip was sweet,
 Made the scarlet pale?
 Why did I, young witless maid!
 Hear the flatt'ring tale?

Alas! no more is fair,
 My lips no longer red;
 My eyes, now closed in death,
 Every charm is fled.

Hungry worm my sister is;
 Winding-sheet I wear:
 And weary lasts our night,
 That last morn appear.

Mark! the cock has warn'd me
 Of his fall;
 And last adieu!
 See, false man, how low she lies,
 Died for love of you."

As sung loud; the morning smiled
 In beams of rosy red;
 William quaked in every limb,
 Raving left his bed.

Laid him to the fatal place,
 Where Margaret's body lay;
 Stretched him on the green grass turf,
 Wrapt her breathless clay.

Once he called on Margaret's name,
 Thrice he wept full sore;
 Laid his cheek to her cold grave,
 And word spake never more.

EDWIN AND EMMA.

In the windings of a vale,
 By a shelt'ring wood,
 A retreat of health and peace,
 A noble cottage stood.

Beauteous Emma flourish'd fair
 Under her mother's eye,
 The only wish on earth was now
 To see her blest, and die.

The first blush that nature spreads
 Color to her cheek;

Such orient color smiles through heav'n
 When May's sweet mornings break.

Nor let the pride of great ones scorn
 The charmers of the plains;
 The sun which bids their diamond blaze
 To deck our lily deigns.

Long had she fired each youth with love,
 Each maiden with despair,
 And though by all a wonder own'd,
 Yet knew not she was fair;

Till Edwin came, the pride of swains,
 A soul that knew no art;
 And from whose eyes serenely mild,
 Shone forth the feeling heart.

A mutual flame was quickly caught,
 Was quickly too reveal'd;
 For neither bosom lodged a wish,
 Which virtue keeps conceal'd.

What happy hours of heart-felt bliss,
 Did love on both bestow!
 But bliss too mighty long to last,
 Where fortune proves a foe.

His sister, who, like envy form'd,
 Like her in mischief joy'd,
 To work them harm with wicked skill
 Each darker art employ'd.

The father, too, a sordid man,
 Who love nor pity knew,
 Was all unfeeling as the rock
 From whence his riches grew.

Long had he seen their mutual flame,
 And seen it long unmoved;
 Then with a father's frown at last
 He sternly disapproved.

In Edwin's gentle heart a war
 Of differing passions strove;
 His heart, which durst not disobey,
 Yet could not cease to love.

Denied her sight, he oft behind
 The spreading hawthorn crept,
 To snatch a glance, to mark the spot
 Where Emma walk'd and wept.

Oft, too, in Stanemore's wintry waste,
Beneath the moonlight shade,
In sighs to pour his soften'd soul,
The midnight mourner stray'd.

His cheeks, where love with beauty glow'd,
A deadly pale o'ercast;
So fades the fresh rose in its prime,
Before the northern blast.

The parents now, with late remorse,
Hung o'er his dying bed,
And wearied Heav'n with fruitless pray'rs,
And fruitless sorrows shed.

"'Tis past," he cried, "but if your souls
Sweet mercy yet can move,
Let these dim eyes once more behold
What they must ever love."

She came; his cold hand softly touch'd,
And bathed with many a tear:
Fast falling o'er the primrose pale,
So morning dew appears.

But oh, his sister's jealous care (A cruel sister she!)

Forbade what Emma came to say,
"My Edwin, live for me."

Now homeward as she hopeless went,
The churchyard path along,
The blast grew cold, the dark owl scream'd
Her lover's fun'ral song.

Amid the falling gloom of night,
Her startling fancy found
In ev'ry bush his hov'ring shade,
His groan in every sound.

Alone, appall'd, thus had she pass'd
The visionary vale,
When lo! the deathbell smote her ear,
Sad sounding in the gale.

Just then she reach'd with trembling
steps
Her aged mother's door:
"He's gone," she cried, "and I shall see That angel face no more!

"I feel, I feel this breaking heart Beat high against my side!"
From her white arm down sunk her head,
She shiver'd, sigh'd, and died.

SAMUEL JOHNSON.

1709-1784.

[SAMUEL JOHNSON was born at Lichfield on the 18th of September, 1709. The first of his noteworthy poems, London, was published in 1738, at a period of his life when he was in great poverty, and for the copyright of the poem he only obtained ten guineas. It appeared on the same morning as Pope's Satire, "1738," and surpassed the latter in popularity. In 1747 he wrote his celebrated Prologue for the opening of Drury Lane Theatre. At this theatre was exhibited in 1749 his tragedy of Irene, which, though acted for thirteen nights, failed to secure the public favor. The Vanity of Human Wishes was published earlier in the same year with a view to excite an interest in the author of the play. These were his last important poetical works. He wrote, however, three Prologues: one to Comus in 1750, when that play was acted for the benefit of Milton's granddaughter; another to Goldsmith's Good-natured Man, in 1769; and a third to the revived Word to the Wise, in 1777. He died on the 13th of December, 1784.]

CHARLES XII.

ON what foundation stands the warrior's
 pride,

How just his hopes let Swedish Charles decide;

A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
 No dangers fright him, and no labors

O'er love, o'er fear, extends his wide domain,

Unconquer'd lord of pleasure and of
 pain;

No joys to him pacific sceptres yield, War sounds the trump, he rushes to the field;

Behold surrounding kings their pow'rs
 combine,

And one capitulate, and one resign;
 Peace courts his hand, but spreads her charms in vain:

"Think nothing gain'd," he cries, "till naught remain;

On Moscow's walls till Gothic standards
 fly,

And all be mine beneath the polar sky."

The march begins in military state,
 And nations on his eye suspended wait;
 Stern famine guards the solitary coast,
 And Winter barricades the realms of
 frost;

He comes, not want and cold his course
 delay;

Hide, blushing Glory, hide Pultowa's
 day:

The vanquish'd hero leaves his broken
 bands,

And shows his miseries in distant lands;
 Condemn'd a needy suppliant to wait;
 While ladies interpose, and slaves debate.

But did not chance at length her error mend?

Did no subverted empire mark his end?
Or hostile millions press him to the ground?

His fall was destin'd to a barren strand,
A petty fortress, and a dubious hand:
He left the name, at which the world grew pale,
To point a moral, or adorn a tale.

PROLOGUE SPOKEN AT THE OPENING OF THE DRURY LANE THEATRE, 1747.

WHEN Learning's triumph o'er her barbarous foes
First reared the stage immortal Shakespeare rose:
Each change of many-colored life he drew,
Exhausted worlds and then imagined new:
Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,
And panting Time toiled after him in vain:
His powerful strokes presiding Truth impressed,
And unresisted Passion stormed the breast.

Then Jonson came, instructed from the school,
To please in method and invent by rule;
His studious patience and laborious art,
By regular approach assailed the heart:
Cold approbation gave the lingering bays,
For those who durst not censure scarce could praise.
A mortal born, he met the general doom,
But left, like Egypt's kings, a lasting tomb.

The wits of Charles found easier ways to fame,
Nor wished for Jonson's art or Shakespeare's flame;
Themselves they studied, as they felt they writ;
Intrigue was plot, obscenity was wit.

Vice always found a sympathetic friend;
They pleased their age and did not aim to mend.

Yet bards like these aspired to lasting praise,
And proudly hoped to pimp in future days.

Their cause was general, their supports were strong,

Their slaves were willing and their reign was long,

Till Shame regained the post that Sense betrayed,

And Virtue called Oblivion to her aid.

Then crushed by rules, and weakened as refined,

For years the power of Tragedy declined:

From hard to hard the frigid caution crept,

Till Declamation roared, whilst Passion slept.

Yet still did Virtue deign the stage to tread,

Philosophy remained though Nature fled.
But forced at length her ancient reign to quit,

She saw great Faustus lay the ghost of Wit;

Exulting Folly hailed the joyful day,
And Pantomime and Song confirmed her sway.

But who the coming changes can pre-sage,

And mark the future periods of the Stage?

Perhaps if skill could distant times explore,

New Behns, new Durfoys yet remain in store;

Perhaps, where Lear has raved, and Hamlet died,

On flying cars new sorcerers may ride:
Perhaps (for who can guess th' effects of chance?)

Here Hunt may box, or Mahomet may dance.

Hard is his lot that, here by Fortune plac'd,

Must watch the wild vicissitudes of taste;
With ev'ry meteor of caprice must play, ease the new-blown bubbles of the ty.

 et not Censure term our fate our voice,
 age but echoes back the public
 voice;
 rama's laws, the drama's patrons ve,
 : that live to please, must please
 live.
 n prompt no more the follies you ecry, ants doom their tools of guilt to e;
 ours, this night, to bid the reign commence cued Nature and reviving Sense; use the charms of sound, the pomp f show,
 eful mirth and salutary woe;
 enic Virtue form the rising age, ruth diffuse her radiance from the age.

LOGUE TO THE COMEDY
 A WORD TO THE WISE.

night presents a play which public
 age,
 ght, or wrong, once hooted from ie stage,

From zeal or malice now no more we dread,
 For English vengeance wars not with
 the dead.

A generous foe regards with pitying eye
 The man whom fate has laid where all must lie.

To wit reviving from its author's dust
 Be kind, ye judges, or at least be just.

For no renewed hostilities invade
 Th' oblivious grave's inviolable shade.

Let one great payment every claim appease,

And him, who cannot hurt, allow to please,

To please by scenes unconscious of
 offence,

By harmless merriment, or useful sense,
 Where aught of bright or fair the piece displays,

Approve it only — 'tis too late to praise.

If want of skill or want of care appear,

Forbear to hiss — the poet cannot hear.

By all like him must praise and blame be found

At best a fleeting gleam, or empty sound.

Yet then shall calm reflection bless the
 night,

When liberal pity dignified delight;

When pleasure fir'd her torch at virtue's flame,

And mirth was bounty with an humbler
 name.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE.

1714-1763.

SHENSTONE was born at the Leasowes, near Hales Owen, in 1714: he died at the same place
 . In 1737, while still at Pembroke College, Oxford, he published some miscellaneous poems ously. The Judgment of Hercules appeared in 1741, The Schoolmistress next year.
 rks, prose and verse, were published in 1764, the year after his death.]

THE SCHOOLMISTRESS.

very village mark'd with little pire, wer'd in trees and hardly known o fame,
 dwells, in lowly shed and mean ttire,

A matron old, whom we Schoolmistress
 name,

Who boasts unruly brats with birch to tame;

They griev'd sore, in piteous durance pent,

Aw'd by the power of this relentless dame,
And oft times, on vagaries idly bent,
For unkempt hair, or task unconn'd, are sorely shent.

Near to this dome is found a patch so
green,
On which the tribe their gambols do dis-
play,
And at the door imprisoning board is
seen,
Lest weakly wights of smaller size should
stray,
Eager, perdie, to bask in sunny day!
The noises intermix'd, which thence re-
sound,
Do learning's little tenement betray,
Where sits the dame, disguis'd in look profound,
And eyes her fairy throng, and turns her wheel around.

Her cap, far whiter than the driven snow, Emblem right meet of decency does
yield;
Her apron dy'd in grain, as blue, I trow,
As is the harebell that adorns the field;
And in her hand, for sceptre, she does wield
'Tway birchen sprays, with anxious fear
entwin'd,
With dark distrust, and sad repentance
fill'd,
And steadfast hate, and sharp affliction join'd,
And fury uncontroul'd, and chastisement unkind.

A russet stole was o'er her shoulders
thrown,
A russet kirtle fenc'd the nipping air;
'Twas simple russet, but it was her own;
'Twas her own country bred the flock so
fair;
'Twas her own labour did the fleece prepare;
And, sooth to say, her pupils rang'd
around,
Through pious awe did term it passing rare,
For they in gaping wonderment abound,

And think, no doubt, she been the greatest wight on ground.

Albeit, ne flattery did corrupt her truth,
Ne pompous title did debauch her ear, Goody, good-woman, gossip, n'aunt, forsooth,
Or dame, the sole additions she did hear;
Yet these she challeng'd, these she held right dear;
Ne would esteem him act as mough behave
Who should not honour'd eld with these revere:
For never title yet so mean could prove But there was eke a mind which did that title love.

Herbs too she knew, and well of each could speak
That in her garden sipp'd the silvery dew,
Where no vain flower disclos'd a gaudy streak,
But herbs for use and physic, not a few
Of gray renown, within those borders
grew;
The tufted basil, pun-provoking thyme,
Fresh baum, and marygold of cheerful
hue,
The lowly gill, that never dares to climb,
And more I fain would sing, disdaining here to rhyme.

Yet euphrasy may not be left unsung,
That gives dim eyes to wander leagues
around,
And pungent radish, biting infant's
tongue,
And plantain ribb'd, that heals the reaper's wound,
And marjoram sweet, in shepherd's posy found,
And lavender, whose spikes of azure
bloom
Shall be, erewhile, in arid bundles
bound,
To lurk amidst the labours of her loom,
And crown her kerchiefs clean with mickle rare perfume.

Here oft the dame, on sabbath's decent
eve,

Hymned such psalms as Sternhold forth did mete;
 If winter 'twere, she to her hearth did
 cleave,
 But in her garden found a summer-seat:
 Sweet melody! to hear her then repeat How Israel's sons, beneath a foreign
 king,
 While taunting foe-men did a song en-
 treat,
 All for the nonce untuning every string,
 Upon their useless lyres — small heart had they to sing.

For she was just, and friend to virtuous lore,
 And pass'd much time in truly virtuous
 deed;
 And in those elms' ears would oft deplore
 The times when Truth by Popish rage did bleed,
 And tortuous death was true Devotion's
 meed;
 And simple Faith in iron chains did
 mourn,

That n' ould on wooden image place her creed;
 And lawny saints in smouldering flames did burn:
 Ah! dearest Lord! forefend, thilk days should e'er return.

Right well she knew each temper to descry,
 To thwart the proud, and the submiss
 to raise,
 Some with vile copper prize exalt on
 high,
 And some entice with pittance small of
 praise,
 And other some with baleful sprig she
 'frays:
 Ev'n absent, she the reins of power doth
 hold,
 While with quaint arts the giddy crowd
 she sways;
 Forewarn'd, if little bird their pranks
 behold,
 'Twill whisper in her ear, and all the scene unfold.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT.

1720-1771.

[BORN in 1720 at Dalquhurn, in the County of Dumbarton; educated under a surgeon in Glasgow, where he attended the medical lectures of the University; married a lady of Jamaica; died in the neighborhood of Leghorn, Oct., 1771.]

THE TEARS OF SCOTLAND.

MOURN, hapless Caledonia, mourn
 Thy banish'd peace, thy laurels torn!
 Thy sons, for valor long renown'd,
 Lie slaughter'd on their native ground;
 Thy hospitable roofs no more Invite the stranger to the door;
 In smoky ruins sunk they lie,
 The monuments of cruelty.

The wretched owner sees afar
 His all become the prey of war;
 Bethinks him of his babes and wife,
 Then smites his breast, and curses
 life.

Thy swains are famish'd on the rocks,
 Where once they fed their wanton flocks:
 Thy ravish'd virgins shriek in vain;
 Thy infants perish on the plain.

What boots it, then, in every clime, Through the wide-spreading waste of
 time,
 Thy martial glory, crown'd with praise,
 Still shone with undiminish'd blaze!
 Thy tow'ring spirit now is broke,
 Thy neck is bended to the yoke.
 What foreign arms could never quell
 By civil rage and rancor fell.

The rural pipe and merry lay
 No more shall cheer the happy day :
 No social scenes of gay delight
 Beguile the dreary winter night :
 No strains but those of sorrow flow,
 And nought be heard but sounds of woe,
 While the pale phantoms of the slain
 Glide nightly o'er the silent plain.

O baneful cause ! oh, fatal morn !
 Accursed to ages yet unborn !
 The sons against their fathers stood,
 The parent shed his children's blood.
 Yet, when the rage of battle ceased,
 The victor's soul was not appeased :
 The naked and forlorn must feel Devouring flames and murd'ring steel !

The pious mother, doom'd to death,
 Forsaken wanders o'er the heath ;
 The bleak wind whistles round her head,
 Her helpless orphans cry for bread ;
 Bereft of shelter, food, and friend,
 She views the shades of night descend ;
 And stretch'd beneath th' inclement skies,
 Weeps o'er her tender babes, and dies.

While the warm blood bedews my veins,
 And unimpair'd remembrance reigns,
 Resentment of my country's fate,
 Within my filial breast shall beat ;
 And, spite of her insulting foe,
 My sympathizing verse shall flow :
 " Mourn, hapless Caledonia, mourn Thy banish'd peace, thy laurels torn "

INDEPENDENCE.

STROPHE.

THY spirit, Independence, let me share,
 Lord of the lion-heart and eagle-eye,
 Thy steps I follow with my bosom bare, Nor heed the storm that howls along the
 sky.

Deep in the frozen regions of the north,
 A goddess violated brought thee forth,
 Immortal Liberty, whose look sublime Hath bleach'd the tyrant's cheek in every varying clime.

What time the iron-hearted Gaul,

With frantic superstition for his guide,
 Arm'd with the dagger and the pall,
 The sons of Woden to the field defied:
 The ruthless hag, by Weser's flood,
 In Heaven's name urged the infernal
 blow,
 And red the stream began to flow :
 The vanquish'd were baptized with blood !

ANTISTROPHE.

The Saxon prince in horror fled
 From altars stain'd with human gore ;
 And Liberty his routed legions led
 In safety to the bleak Norwegian shore.
 There in a cave asleep she lay,
 Lull'd by the hoarse-responding main ;
 When a bold savage past that way,
 Impell'd by destiny, his name Disdain.
 Of ample front the portly chief appear'd :
 The hunted bear supplied a shaggy vest ;
 The drifted snow hung on his yellow
 beard ;
 And his broad shoulders braved the furious blast.
 He stopt : he gazed ; his bosom glow'd,
 And deeply felt the impression of her charms :
 He seized the advantage fate allow'd,
 And straight compressed her in his vigorous arms.

STROPHE.

The curlew scream'd, the tritons blew
 Their shells to celebrate the ravish'd rite ;
 Old Time exulted as he flew ;
 And Independence saw the light.
 The light he saw in Albion's happy
 plains,
 Where under cover of a flowering thorn, While Philomel renew'd her warbled strains,
 The auspicious fruit of stol'n embrace was born.
 The mountain dryads seized with joy,
 The smiling infant to their care con-
 sign'd ;
 The Doric muse caress'd the favorite
 boy ;
 The hermit Wisdom stored his opening
 mind.
 As rolling years matured his age, e flourish'd bold and sinewy as his

 sire;
 While the mild passions in his breast assuage
 the fiercer flames of his maternal fire.

ANTISTROPHE.

accomplish'd thus, he wing'd his way,
 and zealous roved from pole to pole,
 the rolls of right eternal to display, and warm with patriot thoughts the aspiring soul.
 In desert isles 'twas he that raised those spires that gild the Adriatic
 wave,
 Where tyranny beheld amazed fair freedom's temple, where he mark'd her grave.
 He steel'd the blunt Batavian's arms to burst the Iberian's double chain;
 and cities rear'd, and planted farms, Von from the skirts of Neptune's wide domain.
 He with the generous rustics sate,
 In Uri's rocks in close divan;
 and wing'd that arrow sure as fate,
 Which ascertain'd the sacred rights of man.

STROPHE.

Arabia's scorching sands he cross'd,
 Where blasted nature pants supine,
 Conductor of her tribes adust,
 To freedom's adamantine shrine;
 And many a Tartar horde forlorn, aghast!
 He snatch'd from under fell oppres-sion's wing,
 And taught amidst the dreary waste
 The all-cheering hymns of liberty to sing.
 He virtue finds, like precious ore,
 Diffused through every baser mould;
 Even now he stands on Calvi's rocky
 shore,
 And turns the dross of Corsica to gold:
 He, guardian genius, taught my youth
 Pomp's tinsel livery to despise:
 My lips by him chastised to truth, Ne'er paid that homage which my heart denies.

ANTISTROPHE.

Those sculptur'd halls my feet shall never tread,
 Where varnish'd vice and vanity combined,
 To dazzle and seduce, their banners
 spread,
 And forge vile shackles for the free-
 born mind;
 While insolence his wrinkled front up-
 rears,
 And all the flowers of spurious fancy
 blow;
 And tittle his ill-woven chaplet wears,
 Full often wreathed around the mis-creant's brow:
 Where ever-dimpling falsehood, pert
 and vain,
 Presents her cup of stale profession's froth;
 And pale disease, with all his bloated
 train,
 Torments the sons of gluttony and sloth.

STROPHE.

In fortune's car behold that minion ride,
 With either India's glittering spoils opprest;
 So moves the sumpter-mule, in harness'd
 pride,
 That bears the treasure which he cannot taste.
 For him let venal bards disgrace the bay,
 And hireling minstrels wake the tinkling string;
 Her sensual snares let faithless pleasure
 lay;
 And jingling bells fantastic folly ring;
 Disquiet, doubt, and dread shall intervene;
 And nature, still to all her feelings just,
 In vengeance hang a damp on every
 scene,
 Shook from the baleful pinions of disgust.

ANTISTROPHE.

Nature I'll court in her sequester'd haunts,

By mountain, meadow, streamlet, grove,
 or cell,
 Where the poised lark his evening ditty chaunts,
 And health, and peace, and contemplation dwell.
 There study shall with solitude recline;
 And friendship pledge me to his fellowswains;
 And toil and temperance sedately twine
 The slender cord that fluttering life sustains:
 And fearless poverty shall guard the door;
 And taste unspoil'd the frugal table
 spread;
 And industry supply the humble store;
 And sleep^{er} unbribed his dews refreshing
 shed;
 White-mantled innocence, ethereal
 sprite,
 Shall chase far off the goblins of the
 night;
 And Independence o'er the day preside, Propitious power! my patron and my
 pride.

ODE TO LEVEN WATER.

ON Leven's banks, while free to rove,
 And tune the rural pipe to love,

I envied not the happiest swain
 That ever trod the Arcadian plain.
 Pure stream, in whose transparent
 wave
 My youthful limbs I wont to lave;
 No torrents stain thy limpid source,
 No rocks impede thy dimpling course,
 That sweetly warbles o'er its bed,
 With white round polish'd pebbles
 spread;
 While, lightly poised, the scaly brood
 In myriads cleave thy crystal flood;
 The springing trout in speckled pride,
 The salmon, monarch of the tide;
 The ruthless pike, intent on war,
 The silver eel, and mottled par.
 Devolving from thy parent lake,
 A charming maze thy waters make,
 By bowers of birch and groves of
 pine,
 And hedges flower'd with eglantine.
 Still on thy banks so gaily green,
 May numerous herds and flocks be
 seen:
 And lasses chanting o'er the pail,
 And shepherds piping in the dale;
 And ancient faith that knows no guile,
 And industry embrown'd with toil;
 And hearts resolved and hands prepared
 The blessings they enjoy to guard!

MARK AKENSIDE.

1721-1770.

[BORN November 9, 1721; studied medicine at Edinburgh and Leyden; practised as a physician at Northampton; received from his friend Jeremiah Dyson an annual allowance of £300; removed to London, 1748; appointed one of the Physicians to the Queen; wrote various medical tracts and lectures; died June 23, 1770. The Pleasures of Imagination was published in January, 1744; Odes on Several Subjects, 1745. The unfinished recast of The Pleasures of Imagination appeared after Akenside's death in his Poems, 1772.]

THE MINGLED PAIN AND PLEAS-URE ARISING FROM VIRTU-OUS EMOTIONS.

[From Pleasures of the Imagination.]

BEHOLD the ways
 Of Heaven's eternal destiny to man,
 For ever just, benevolent, and wise:
 That Virtue's awful steps, how'er pursued

By vexing Fortune and intrusive Pain,
 Should never be divided from her chaste,
 Her fair attendant, Pleasure. Need I urge Thy tardy thought through all the various round
 Of this existence, that thy soft'ning soul
 At length may learn what energy the
 hand
 Of Virtue mingles in the bitter tide

"Pure stream in whose transparent wave."

When rooted from the base, heroic states Mourn in the dust, and tremble at the frown
Of curs'd Ambition; — when the pious band
Of youths that fought for freedom and their sires
Lie side by side in gore; — when ruffian
Pride Usurps the throne of Justice, turns the pomp
Of public pow'r the majesty of rule,
The sword, the laurel, and the purple

To slavish empty pageants, to adorn
A tyrant's walk, and glitter in the eyes
Of such as bow the knee; — when hon-or'd urns

And storied arch, to glut the coward

Of regal envy, strew the public way
With hallow'd ruins! — when the muse's haunt,
The marble porch where Wisdom, wont to talk
With Socrates or Tully, hears no more,

Save the hoarse jargon of contentious monks,
 Or female Superstition's midnight pray'r; —
 When ruthless Rapine from the hand of Time
 Tears the destroying scythe, with surer blow
 To sweep the works of Glory from their base;
 Till Desolation o'er the grass-grown street
 Expands his raven wings, and up the wall,
 Where senates once the pride of monarchs doom'd,
 Hisses the gliding snake through hoary weeds,
 That clasp the mould'ring column: — thus defac'd,
 Thus widely mournful when the prospect thrills
 Thy beating bosom, when the patriot's tear Starts from thine eye, and thy extended arm
 In fancy hurls the thunderbolt of Jove,
 To fire the impious wreath on Philip's brow,
 Or dash Octavius from the trophied car; —
 Say, does thy secret soul repine to taste
 The big distress? or wouldst thou then exchange
 Those heart-ennobling sorrows for the lot
 Of him who sits amid the gaudy herd
 Of raute barbarians bending to his nod,
 And bears aloft his gold-invested front,
 And says within himself, "I am a king,
 And wherefore should the clam'rous voice of Woe Intrude upon mine ear?" — The baleful dregs
 Of these late ages, this inglorious draught
 Of servitude and folly, have not yet,
 Blest be th' Eternal Ruler of the world!
 Defil'd to such a depth of sordid shame
 The native honors of the human soul,
 Nor so effac'd the image of its sire.

ON TASTE.

[From Pleasures of the Imagination.]

SAY, what is Taste, but the internal pow'rs
 Active and strong, and feelingly alive
 To each fine impulse? a discerning sense
 Of decent and sublime, with quick disgust
 From things deform'd, or disarrang'd or gross
 In species? This nor gems, nor store of gold,
 Nor purple state, nor culture can bestow
 But God alone, when first his active hand
 Imprints the sacred bias of the soul.
 He, Mighty Parent! wise and just in all Free as the vital breeze, or light of heav'n, Reveals the charms of Nature. Ask the swain Who journeys homeward from a summer-day's Long labor, why, forgetful of his toils
 And due repose, he loiters to behold
 The sunshine gleaming as through amber clouds O'er all the western sky! Full soon, ween,
 His rude expression, and untutor'd air
 Beyond the pow'r of language, will unfold
 The form of Beauty smiling at his hear How lovely! how commanding! But though Heav'n
 In every breast hath sown these early seeds
 Of love and admiration, yet in vain,
 Without fair Culture's kind parental aid
 Without enliv'ning suns and genial show'rs,
 And shelter from the blast, in vain will hope
 The tender plant should rear its blooming head,
 Or yield the harvest promis'd in its spring
 Nor yet will ev'ry soil with equal store
 Repay the tiller's labor; or attend
 His will, obsequious, whether to produce
 The olive or the laurel. Different minds Incline to different objects: one pursues lone, the wonderful, the wild;

 ights for harmony and grace, est beauty. Hence when light-fires
 of heav'n, and thunders rock
 round;
 ous whirlwinds rend the howlr, i, groaning from his lowest bed, s tempestuous billows to the mighty uproar, while below as tremble, Shakespeare looks

 d e high cliff, superior, and enjoys ental war. But Waller longs, margin of some flow'ry stream, his careless limbs, amid the ie shades, and to the list'ning of slighted vows and Love's

 in soft warbling, all the livelong

 g Zephyr sighs; the weeping is plaint, melodious; mute the

 s;
 nd dale with all their echoes
 n. o various are the tastes of men.

PLEASURES OF A CULTI-TED IMAGINATION.

Pleasures of the Imagination. of Heav'n, whom not the lan-songs
 , the siren! not the bribes
 Wealth, nor all the gaudy

Of pageant Honor, can seduce to leave Those everblooming sweets, which from the store
 Of Nature fair Imagination culls, To charm th' enliven'd soul! What though not all
 Of mortal offspring can attain the height
 Of envied life; though only few possess
 Patrician treasures, or imperial state:
 Yet Nature's care to all her children just,
 With richer treasures and an ampler state Endows at large whatever happy man Will deign to use them. His the city's pomp,
 The rural honors his. What'er adorns The princely dome, the column, and the arch,
 The breathing marbles, and the sculptur'd
 gold,
 Beyond the proud possessor's narrow claim,
 His tuneful breast enjoys. For him the Spring
 Distils her dew, and from the silken gem
 Its lucid leaves unfolds; for him the
 hand
 Of Autumn tinges every fertile branch
 With blooming gold, and blushes like the morn.
 Each passing hour sheds tribute from her wing;
 And still new beauties meet his lonely
 walk,
 And loves unfelt attract him. Not a breeze
 Flies o'er the meadow, not a cloud imbibes
 The setting sun's effulgence, not a strain
 From all the tenants of the warbling
 shade
 Ascend, but whence his bosom can partake
 Fresh pleasure unreprieved.

WILLIAM COLLINS.

1721-1759.

[WILLIAM COLLINS was born at Chichester on Christmas Day, 1721. It is believed that he went for a time to the Prebendal School of that city; and in 1733 he entered Winchester College, then under Dr. Burton. Before he left school he had written the Persian Eclogues (which in their later editions are called Oriental Eclogues); and he had printed a so-called sonnet in the "Gentleman's Magazine." In 1740 he entered as commoner of Queen's College, Oxford, there being no vacancy at New College; and next year he obtained a demyship at Magdalen. The Persian Eclogues were published in 1742; next year came the Epistle to Sir T. Hanmer; and in 1744 he seems to have left Oxford for London, where he found a true friend in Johnson. His Odes, which he once meant to have published jointly with those of his old schoolfellow Joseph Warton, appeared alone in 1747. After this he went to live at Richmond, where he saw much of Thomson, Armstrong, and others of that company. In 1749 he wrote the Ode on the Death of Thomson, and the Ode on the Popular Superstitions of the Highlands. Soon afterwards he was attacked by the brain-disease from which, with certain intervals of partial recovery, he suffered for the rest of his life. His last years were spent at Chichester under the care of his sister, Mrs. Sempill. He died in 1759.]

THE DEATH OF THE BRAVE.

[Written in the beginning of the year 1746.]

How sleep the brave, who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
When spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung:
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And Freedom shall awhile repair,
To dwell a weeping hermit there.

ODE TO FEAR.

THOU, to whom the world unknown,
With all its shadowy shapes is shown;
Who seest appall'd th' unreal scene, While Fancy lifts the veil between:
Ah Fear! ah frantic Fear!
I see, I see thee near.
I know thy hurried step, thy haggard
eye!
Like thee I start, like thee disorder'd fly;
For lo, what monsters in thy train appear!
Danger, whose limbs of giant mould
What mortal eye can fix'd behold?
Who stalks his round, a hideous form,
Howling amidst the midnight storm,

Or throws him on the ridgy steep
Of some loose hanging rock to sleep:
And with him thousand phantoms join'd,
Who prompt to deeds accurs'd the mind:
And those the fiends, who, near allied,
O'er Nature's wounds and wrecks pre-
side;

While Vengeance in the lurid air
Lifts her red arm, expos'd and bare:
On whom that ravening brood of Fate,
Who lap the blood of Sorrow, wait;
Who, Fear, this ghastly train can see,
And look not madly wild, like thee?

Thou, who such weary lengths has
pass'd,
Where wilt thou rest, mad Nymph, at
last?

Say, wilt thou shroud in haunted cell,
Where gloomy Rape and Murder dwell?
Or in some hollow'd seat,
'Gainst which the big waves beat,
Hear drowning seamen's cries in tempests brought,

Dark pow'r, with shudd'ring meek submitted Thought?

Be mine, to read the visions old,
Which thy awak'ning bards have told,
And, lest thou meet my blasted view,
Hold each strange tale devoutly true;
Ne'er be I found, by thee o'eraw'd,
In that thrice hallow'd eve abroad,
When ghosts, as cottage-maids believe,
The pebbled beds permitted leave,
And goblins haunt, from fire, or fen,
Or mine, or flood, the walks of men!

O thou whose spirit most possess'd
The sacred seat of Shakespeare's breast !
By all that from thy prophet broke,
In thy divine emotions spoke !
Hither again thy fury deal,
Teach me but once like him to feel;
His cypress wreath my meed decree,
And I, O Fear ! will dwell with thee.

ODE TO EVENING.

If aught of oaten stop, or pastoral song,
May hope, chaste Eve, to soothe thy modest ear,
Like thy own solemn springs,
Thy springs, and dying gales;

Onymph reserved, while now the brighthair'd Sun
Sits in yon western tent, whose cloudy skirts,
With braid ethereal wove,
O'erhang his wavy bed :

Now air is hush'd, save where the weak-eyed bat,
With short shrill shriek flits by on leathern wing;
Or where the beetle winds
His small but sullen horn,

As oft he rises 'midst the twilight path,
Against the pilgrim borne in heedless hum ;

Now teach me, maid composed
To breathe some soften'd strain,

Whose numbers, stealing through thy darkening vale
May not unseemly with its stillness suit ;
As, musing slow, I hail Thy genial loved return !

For when thy folding-star arising shows his paly circlet, at his warning lamp,
The fragrant Hours, and Elves
Who slept in buds the day.

And many a Nymph who wreathes her brows with sedge,¹

¹ The water-nymphs, Naiads, are so crowned.

And sheds the freshening dew, and,
lovelier still,
The pensive Pleasures sweet,
Prepare thy shadowy car.

Then let me rove some wild and heathy
scene ;
Or find some ruin 'midst its dreary dells,
Whose walls more awful nod
By thy religious gleams.

Or, if chill blustering winds, or driving
rain,
Prevent my willing feet, be mine the hut,
That from the mountain's side,
Views wilds, and swelling floods,

And hamlets brown, and dim-discover'd
spires ;
And hears their simple bell, and marks o'er all
Thy dewy fingers draw
The gradual dusky veil.

While Spring shall pour his showers, as oft he wont,
And bathe thy breathing tresses, meekest
Eve !
While summer loves to sport
Beneath thy lingering light ;

While fallow Autumn fills thy lap with
leaves :
Or Winter yelling through the troublous
air,
Affrights thy shrinking train,
And rudely rends thy robes ;

So long, regardless of thy quiet rule, Shall Fancy, Friendship, Science, smiling Peace,
Thy gentlest influence own,
And love thy favorite name !

THE PASSIONS.

WHEN music, heavenly maid, was young,
While yet in early Greece she sung,
The Passions oft to hear her shell,
Throng'd around her magic cell,

Exulting, trembling, raging, fainting,
 Possess'd beyond the Muse's painting:
 By turns they felt the glowing mind
 Disturb'd, delighted, raised, refined;
 Till once, 'tis said, when all were fired,
 Fill'd with fury, rapt, inspired,
 From the supporting myrtles round They snatch'd their instruments of
 sound;

And, as they oft had heard apart,
 Sweet lessons of her forceful art,
 Each (for Madness ruled the hour)
 Would prove his own expressive power.

First, Fear, his hand, its skill to try,
 Amid the chords bewilder'd laid,
 And back recoil'd, he knew not why,
 E'en at the sound himself had made.

Next, Anger rush'd: his eyes on fire
 In lightnings own'd his secret stings:
 In one rude clash he struck the lyre,
 And swept with hurried hand the strings.

With woeful measures wan Despair
 Low, sullen sounds his grief beguiled;
 A solemn, strange, and mingled air,
 'Twas sad by fits, by starts 'twas wild.

But thou, O Hope, with eyes so fair,
 What was thy delighted measure?
 Still it whisper'd promised pleasure,
 And bade the lovely scenes at distance hail!

Still would her touch the strain prolong;
 And from the rocks, the woods, the
 vale,

She call'd on Echo still, through all the
 song:

And, where her sweetest theme she chose,

A soft responsive voice was heard at every close,

And Hope enchanted smiled, and waved her golden hair.

And longer had she sung; — but with a frown,

Revenge impatient rose:

He threw his blood-stain'd sword, in thunder, down;

And, with a withering look,

The war-denouncing trumpet took,

And blew a blast so loud and dread,
 Were ne'er prophetic sounds so full of woe!

And, ever and anon, he beat
 The doubling drum, with furious heat;
 And though sometimes, each dreary pause between,

Dejected Pity, at his side,
 Her soul-subduing voice applied,
 Yet still he kept his wild unalter'd mien, While each strain'd ball of sight seem'd bursting from his head.

Thy numbers, Jealousy, to nought were fix'd;

Sad proof of thy distressful state;
 Of differing themes the veering song was mix'd;

And now it courted Love, now raving call'd on Hate,

With eyes upraised, as one inspired,
 Pale Melancholy sate retired,
 And from her wild sequester'd seat,
 In notes by distance made more sweet, Pour'd through the mellow horn her pensive soul:

And, dashing soft from rocks around,
 Bubbling runnels join'd the sound;
 Through glades and glooms the mingled measure stole,

(Or o'er some haunted stream, with fond delay,

Round an holy calm diffusing,
 Love of peace, and lonely musing,

In hollow murmurs died away,
 But O! how alter'd was its sprightlier tone,

When Cheerfulness, a nymph of healthiest hue,

Her bow across her shoulder flung,
 Her buskins gemm'd with morning
 dew,

Blew an inspiring air, that dale and thicket rung,

The hunter's call to Faun and Dryad
 known!

The oak-crown'd sisters, and their chaste-eyed Queen,¹

Satyrs and Sylvan Boys were seen,
 Peeping from forth their alleys green:

exercise rejoiced to hear;
 port leapt up and seized his new spear.

— Joy's ecstatic trial:
 shiny crown advancing,
 to the lively pipe his hand advanced;

he saw the brisk-awakening sweet entrancing voice: he felt the best;

could have thought who heard
 train

now, in Tempé's vale, her native
 shades,

the festal sounding shades,
 unwearied minstrel dancing, as his flying fingers kiss'd the
 strings,

am'd with Mirth a gay fantasy-sound:

were her tresses seen, her zone und;

, amidst his frolic play,
 could the charming air repay, thousand odors from his dewy lips.

c! sphere-descended maid,
 of Pleasure, Wisdom's aid!
 oddess, why, to us denied,
 how thy ancient lyre aside?
 what loved Athenian bower, turn'd an all-commanding power,
 my soul, O Nymph endear'd, will recall what then it heard;

is thy native simple heart, to Virtue, Fancy, Art?

as in that elder time, energetic, chaste, sublime!

enders, in that god-like age, recording Sister's page —

and I believe the tale, noblest reed could more prevail,

ore of strength, diviner rage, all which charms this laggard at once together found, a mingled world of sound —

our vain endeavor cease;
 the just designs of Greece:

in all thy simple state!
 in the tales her sons relate!

DIRGE IN CYMBELINE.

To fair Fidele's grassy tomb
 Soft maids and village hinds shall bring Each opening sweet of earliest bloom,
 And rifle all the breathing spring.

No wailing ghost shall dare appear
 To vex with shrieks this quiet grove;
 But shepherd lads assemble here,
 And melting virgins own their love.

No wither'd witch shall here be seen,
 No goblins lead their nightly crew;
 But female fays shall haunt the green,
 And dress thy grave with pearly dew.

The redbreast oft at evening hours
 Shall kindly lend his little aid,
 With hoary moss and gather'd flowers
 To deck the ground where thou art
 laid.

When howling winds and beating rain
 In tempests shake the sylvan cell,
 Or 'midst the chase upon the plain,
 The tender thought on thee shall dwell.

Each lonely scene shall thee restore,
 For thee the tear be duly shed;
 Beloved till life can charm no more,
 And mourn'd till Pity's self be dead.

ODE TO MERCY.

STROPHE.

O THOU, who sit'st a smiling bride
 By Valor's arm'd and awful side, Gentlest of sky-born forms, and best
 adored;

Who oft with songs, divine to hear,
 Win'st from his fatal grasp the spear,
 And hid'st in wreaths of flowers his bloodless sword!

Thou who, amidst the deathful field,
 By god-like chiefs alone beheld,
 Oft with thy bosom bare art found, Pleading for him the youth who sinks to
 ground:

See, Mercy, see, with pure and loaded
hands,
Before thy shrine my country's genius stands,
And decks thy altar still, though pierced with many a wound!

ANTISTROPHE.

When he whom ev'n our joys provoke,
The fiend of nature join'd his yoke,
And rush'd in wrath to make our isle his prey;
Thy form, from out thy sweet abode,
O'ertook him on his blasted road,
And stopp'd his wheels, and look'd his rage away.
I see recoil his sable steeds,
That bore him swift to savage deeds,
Thy tender melting eyes they own;
O maid, for all thy love to Britain shown,
Where Justice bars her iron tower,
To thee we build a roseate bower, Thou, thou shalt rule our queen, and share our monarch's throne!

ON THE DEATH OF THOMSON.

In yonder grave a Druid lies
Where slowly winds the stealing wave!
The year's best sweets shall duteous rise,
To deck its poet's sylvan grave!

In yon deep bed of whispering reeds
His airy harp shall now be laid,
That he whose heart in sorrow bleeds,
May love through life the soothing
shade.

Then maids and youths shall linger here,
And, while its sounds at distance swell,
Shall sadly seem in pity's ear
To hear the woodland pilgrim's knell.

Remembrance oft shall haunt the shore
When Thames in summer wreaths is
drest,
And oft suspend the dashing oar
To bid his gentle spirit rest!

And oft as ease and health retire
To breezy lawn, or forest deep,
The friend shall view yon whitening
spire,
And 'mid the varied landscape weep.

But thou, who own'st that earthy bed,
Ah! what will every dirge avail?
Or tears with love and pity shed,
That mourn beneath the gliding sail!

Yet lives there one, whose heedless eye Shall scorn thy pale shrine glimmering
near?
With him, sweet bard, may fancy die,
And joy desert the blooming year.

But thou, lorn stream, whose sullen
tide
No sedge-crown'd sisters now attend,
Now waft me from the green hill's side Whose cold turf hides the buried
friend!

And sec, the fairy valleys fade,
Dun night has veil'd the solemn view!
Yet once again, dear parted shade,
Meek nature's child, again adieu!

The genial meads assign'd to bless Thy life, shall mourn thy early doom!
Their hinds and shepherd girls shall dress
With simple hands thy rural tomb.

Long, long, thy stone, and pointed clay
Shall melt the musing Briton's eyes,
O! vales, and wild woods, shall he say,
In yonder grave your Druid lies!

THOMAS GRAY.

1716-1771.

was born in London on the 26th of December, 1716. His father is described "a money-scrivener"; we should say nowadays, he was on the stock-exchange. He was a selfish, extravagant, and violent man. Mr. Antrobus, Gray's uncle on the one of the assistant masters at Eton, and at Eton, under his care, Gray was when he formed a friendship with Horace Walpole, and with Richard West, whose Chancellor of Ireland. At Cambridge Gray did not read mathematics and took no interest in himself with classical literature, history, and modern languages; several of his Latin poems date from this time. He intended to read law; but a few months after his arrival at Cambridge, Horace Walpole invited him to be his companion on a tour through France. The friends visited Paris, Florence, and Rome, and remained abroad together several months. Gray saw and noted much; on this journey were produced the best of his poetry, however, the son of the Prime Minister, and rich, gave himself airs; a quarrel made Gray separate from him and return alone to England. He was at Eton a year or two later; but meanwhile his father died, in 1741; his mother died, near Windsor; and Gray, with a narrow income of his own, gave up the law and returned to college at Cambridge. In 1742 he lost his friend West; the Ode to the Memory of Mr. West was written just before West's death; the Ode on the Prospect of Eton, the Hymn to St. Peter, and the Elegy written in a Country Churchyard, were written not long after. The first poem which appeared in print was the Ode on the Prospect of Eton, published in 1747; "little notice," says Warton, "was taken of it." The Elegy was in manuscript before its publication in 1750; it was popular instantly, and made Gray famous. In 1753 Gray lost his mother, to whom he owed everything, and whom he had loved dearly. In 1755 The Progress of Poesy was finished, and The Bard begun. The post of secretary was offered to Gray in 1757, and declined by him. He applied to Lord Bute, in the hope of obtaining a professorship of modern history at Cambridge, but in vain. Six years afterwards the post became vacant, and the Duke of Grafton gave it to Gray without his applying for it. Afterwards the Duke of Grafton was elected Chancellor of the University, and at his installation the well-known Ode for Music. It was the last of his works. He gave lectures as professor of history, but his health was bad, and his spirits were not temperate of men, but he was full of hereditary gout. Travelling amused him; he had made with much enjoyment journeys to Scotland, Wales, and the Continent. In the last year of his life, 1771, he entertained a project of visiting Switzerland. He intended to make the attempt, and he remained at Cambridge. On the 24th of July, in the College hall, he was seized with illness; convulsions came on, and on the next day, at the age of fifty-four, Gray died. He was never married.]

GRESS OF POESY.

DARIC ODE.

I.
 In lyre, awake,
 Capture all thy trembling
 's harmonious springs
 Lulls their mazy progress
 Flowers that round them
 Fragrance as they flow.
 Stream of music winds
 ; smooth, and strong,
 ant vales, and Ceres'
 sign:
 own the steep amain, petuous, see it pour:

The rocks, and nodding groves, rebel-low to the roar.

Oh! sovereign of the willing soul,
 Parent of sweet and solemn-breathing
 airs,
 Enchanting shell! the sullen cares,
 And frantic passions, hear thy soft control:
 On Thracia's hills the lord of war
 Has curb'd the fury of his car,
 And dropp'd his thirsty lance at thy
 command:
 Perching on the scepter'd hand
 Of Jove, thy magic lulls the feather'd
 king
 With ruffled plumes, and flagging
 wing: Quench'd in dark clouds of slumber
 lie

The terror of his beak, and lightning of his eye.

Thee the voice, the dance, obey,
Temper'd to thy warbled lay,
O'er Idalia's velvet-green
The rosy-crown'd Loves are seen,
On Cytherea's day,
With antic Sports and blue-eyed Pleasures,
Frisking light in frolic measures;
Now pursuing, now retreating,
Now in circling troops they meet:
To brisk notes in cadence beating,
Glance their many-twinkling feet.
Slow-melting strains their queen's approach declare.
Where'er she turns the Graces homage pay,
With arms sublime that float upon
the air;
In gliding state she wins her easy
way:
O'er her warm cheek and rising bosom move
The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love.

II.

Man's feeble race what ills await,
Labor and Penury, the racks of Pain,
Disease, and Sorrow's weeping train,
And Death, sad refuge from the storms of Fate!
The fond complaint, my song, dis-prove,
And justify the laws of Jove.
Say, has he given in vain the heavenly Muse?
Night and all her sickly dews,
Her spectres wan, and birds of boding
cry,
He gives to range the dreary sky:
Till down the eastern cliffs afar Hyperion's march they spy, the glittering shafts of war.

In climes beyond the solar road,
Where shaggy forms o'er ice-built mountains roam,
The Muse has broke the twilight
gloom

To cheer the shivering native abode.

And oft, beneath the odorous shade
Of Chili's boundless forests laid
She deigns to hear the savage repeat,
In loose numbers wildly sweet,
Their feather-cinctured chiefs dusky loves.
Her track, where'er the goddess
Glory pursue, and generous Shal-Th' unconquerable mind, and Free holy flame.

Woods, that wave o'er Delphi's
Isles, that crown'd th' Ægean Fields, that cool Ilissus laves,
Or where Mæander's amber wave
In lingering labyrinths creep,
How do your tuneful Echoes guish

Mute, but to the voice of anguish
Where each old poetic mountain Inspiration breathed around Every shade and hallow'd fount
Murmur'd deep a solemn sonnet Till the sad Nine, in Greece
hour,
Left their Parnassus, for the plains.
Alike they scorn the pomp of
power,
And coward Vice, that rears her chains.
When Latium had her lofty
lost,
They sought, oh Albion! next the encircled coast.

III.

Far from the Sun and summer
In thy green lap was Nature's
laid,
What time, where lucid Avon
To him the mighty mother veil
Her awful face: the dauntless Stretch'd forth his little arm smiled.
"This pencil take," she said, "the colors clear

Paint the vernal year :
 Too these golden keys, immortal boy !
 Can unlock the gates of Joy ;
 Horror that, and thrilling fears,
 The sacred source of sympathetic
 Is."

Second he, that rode sublime
 On the seraph-wings of Ecstasy,
 To secrets of th' abyss to spy.
 Diss'd the flaming bounds of place
 And time :
 Living throne, the sapphireblaze,
 The angels tremble, while they Gaze,
 Aw; but, blasted with excess of
 Light,
 D his eyes in endless night.
 Id, where Dryden's less presum-uous car,
 O'er the field of Glory bear
 Coursers of ethereal race,
 Checks in thunder clothed, and G-resounding pace.

, his hands the lyre explore !
 At-eyed Fancy, hovering o'er,
 Ghts that breathe, and words Hat burn.
 H ! 'tis heard no more — Lyre divine, what daring spirit Is thee now? Though he in-Herit
 He pride, nor ample pinion,
 At the Theban eagle bear,
 G with supreme dominion
 Rough the azure deep of air :
 Ft before his infant eyes would Un
 Forms as glitter in the Muse's
 Ray
 Orient hues, unborrow'd of the
 Sun :
 Shall he mount, and keep his dis-Ant way
 And the limits of a vulgar fate,
 In the good how far! — but far Ove the great.

HYMN TO ADVERSITY.

DAUGHTER of Jove, relentless pow'r,
 Thou tamer of the human breast,
 Whose iron scourge and tort'ring hour
 The bad affright, afflict the best !
 Bound in thy adamantine chain,
 The proud are taught to taste of pain,
 And purple tyrants vainly groan
 With pangs unfelt before, unpitied and
 Alone.

When first thy sire to send on earth
 Virtue, his darling child, design'd,
 To thee he gave the heav'nly birth,
 And bade thee form her infant mind.
 Stern rugged nurse ! thy rigid lore
 With patience many a year she bore :
 What sorrow was, thou bad'st her know
 And from her own she learn'd to melt
 At others' woe.

Scared at thy frown terrific, fly
 Self-pleasing Folly's idle brood, Wild Laughter, Noise, and thoughtless
 Joy,
 And leave us leisure to be good.
 Light they disperse, and with them go
 The summer Friend the flatt'ring Foe ;
 By vain Prosperity received,
 To her they vow their truth, and are Again believed.

Wisdom in sable garb array'd,
 Immersed in rapt'rous thought profound,
 And Melancholy, silent maid,
 With leaden eye, that loves the ground,
 Still on thy solemn steps attend :
 Warm Charity, the gen'ral friend,
 With Justice, to herself severe,
 And Pity, dropping soft the sadly pleas-Ing tear.

O, gently on thy suppliant's head,
 Dread Goddess lay thy chast'ning hand !
 Not in thy Gorgon terrors clad,
 Nor circled with the vengeful band
 (As by the impious thou art seen)
 With thund'ring voice, and threat'ning
 Mien,
 With screaming Horror's funeral cry,
 Despair, and fell Disease, and ghastly Poverty.

Thy form benign, O Goddess! wear,
 Thy milder influence impart,
 Thy philosophic train be there,
 To soften, not to wound my heart.
 The gen'rous spark extinct revive,
 Teach me to love and to forgive,
 Exact my own defects to scan,
 What others are, to feel, and to know myself a man.

ODE ON A DISTANT PROSPECT OF ETON COLLEGE.

YE distant spires, ye antique tow'rs,
 That crown the wat'ry glade,
 Where grateful Science still adores
 Her Henry's holy shade;
 And ye, that from the stately brow
 Of Windsor's heights th' expanse below
 Of grove, of lawn, of mead survey, Whose turf, whose shade, whose flow'rs among Wanders the hoary Thames along
 His silver winding way.

Ah, happy hills! ah, pleasing shade!
 Ah, fields beloved in vain!
 Where once my careless childhood
 stray'd,
 A stranger yet to pain!
 I feel the gales, that from ye blow,
 A momentary bliss bestow,
 As waving fresh their gladsome wing,
 My weary soul they seem to sooth,
 And, redolent of joy and youth,
 To breathe a second spring.

Say, Father Thames (for thou hast
 seen
 Full many a sprightly race,
 Disporting on thy margent green,
 The paths of pleasure trace),
 Who foremost now delight to cleave
 With pliant arm thy glassy wave?
 The captive linnet which enthrall?
 What idle progeny succeed
 To chase the rolling circle's speed,
 Or urge the flying ball?

While some, on earnest business bent,
 Their murm'ring labors ply
 'Gainst graver hours, that bring constraint

To sweeten liberty:
 Some bold adventurers disdain
 The limits of their little reign,
 And unknown regions dare descry,
 Still as they run they look behind,
 They hear a voice in every wind,
 And snatch a fearful joy.

Gay hope is theirs by Fancy fed,
 Less pleasing when possess'd;
 The tear forgot as soon as shed,
 The sunshine of the breast;
 Theirs buxom Health of rosy hue,
 Wild Wit, Invention ever new,
 And lively Cheer, of Vigor born;
 The thoughtless day, the easy night,
 The spirits pure, the slumbers light,
 That fly th' approach of morn.

Alas! regardless of their doom,
 The little victims play!
 No sense have they of ills to come,
 No care beyond to-day:
 Yet see how all around them wait
 The ministers of human fate,
 And black Misfortune's baleful train!
 Ah, show them where in ambush stand,
 To seize their prey, the murd'rous band,
 Ah, tell them they are men!

These shall the fury passions tear,
 The vultures of the mind,
 Disdainful Anger, pallid Fear,
 And Shame that skulks behind:
 Or pining Love shall waste their youth,
 Or Jealousy with rankling tooth,
 That inly gnaws the secret heart,
 And Envy wan, and faded Care,
 Grim visaged comfortless Despair,
 And Sorrow's piercing dart.

Ambition this shall tempt to rise,
 Then whirl the wretch from high,
 To bitter Scorn a sacrifice,
 And grinning Infamy.
 The stings of Falsehood those shall try,
 And hard Unkindness' alter'd eye,
 That mocks the tear it forced to flow;

Remorse with blood defiled, dy Madness laughing wild erest woe.

the vale of years beneath roop are seen,
 ul family of Death,
 ous than their queen;
 s the joints, this fires the veins,
 y lab'ring sinew strains,
 the deeper vitals rage:
 rty, to fill the band,
 ibs the soul with icy hand, consuming Age.

h his sufferings: all are men,
 'd alike to groan;
 er for another's pain,
 ling for his own.
 why should they know their row never comes too late,

 piness too swiftly flies;
 would destroy their Paradise.
 ; where ignorance is bliss,
 to be wise.

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew

 Where heaves the turf in many a mould'ring heap,
 Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
 The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

The breezy call of incense-breathing
 Morn,
 The swallow twitt'ring from the straw-built shed,
 The cock's shrill clarion, or the echoing
 horn,
 No more shall rouse them from their lowly bed.

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
 Or busy housewife ply her ev'ning care:
 No children run to lisp their sire's return,
 Or climb his knees the envied kiss to share.

Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield,
 Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke:
 How jocund did they drive their team afield!
 How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!

Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
 Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
 Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful
 smile
 The short and simple annals of the poor.

The boast of Heraldry, the pomp of

 And all that Beauty, all that Wealth e'er gave,
 Await alike th' inevitable hour,
 The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Nor you, ye proud, impute to these the fault,
 If Mem'ry o'er their tombs no trophies
 raise,

Where through the long drawn aisle,
and fretted vault,
The pealing anthem swells the note of
praise.

Can storied urn, or animated bust,
Back to its mansion call the fleeting
breath?
Can Honor's voice provoke the silent
dust,
Or Flatt'ry sooth the dull cold ear of
death?

Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid Some heart once pregnant with celestial
fire;
Hands, that the rod of empire might have sway'd,
Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.

But Knowledge to their eyes her ample
page,
Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'er
unroll;
Chill Penury repress'd their noble rage,
And froze the genial current of the soul.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean
bear;
Full many a flow'r is born to blush un-
seen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert
air.

Some village Hampden, that with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood;
Some mute inglorious Milton here may
rest,
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

Th' applause of list'ning senates to command,
The threats of pain and ruin to despise,
To scatter plenty o'er a smiling land,
And read their hist'ry in a nation's eyes,
Their lot forbade: nor circumscrib'd
alone
Their growing virtues, but their crimes confin'd;

Forbade to wade through slaughter
a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy on man-
kind;

The struggling pangs of conscious truth
to hide,
To quench the blushes of ingenuous
shame,
Or heap the shrine of Luxury and Pride
With incense kindled at the Muse's flame.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble
strife
Their sober wishes never learn'd to
stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their
way.

Yet ev'n these bones from insult to protect,
Some frail memorial still erected nigh,
With uncouth rhymes and shapeless sculpture deck'd,
Implores the pleasing tribute of a sigh.

Their names, their years, spelt by th'
unletter'd Muse,
The place of fame and elegy supply;
And many a holy text around she strews,
That teach the rustic moralist to die.

For who, to dumb forgetfulness a prey,
This pleasing anxious being e'er re-
sign'd,
Left the warm precincts of the cheerful
day,
Nor cast one longing, ling'ring look behind?

On some fond breast the parting soul relies,
Some pious drops the closing eye requires;
Ev'n from the tomb the voice of Nature
cries,
Ev'n in our ashes live their wonted fires
For thee, who, mindful of th' unhosor'd dead,

On these lines their artless tale relate;
 chance, by lonely Contemplation led,
 Some kindred spirit shall inquire thy fate,

Or some hoary-headed swain may say,
 Oft have we seen him at the peep of dawn,
 Rushing with hasty steps the dew away,
 To meet the sun upon the upland lawn.

"There at the foot of yonder nodding beech,
 That wreathes its old fantastic roots so high,
 His listless length at noontide would he stretch,
 And pore upon the brook that babbles by.

"Hard by yon wood, now smiling as in scorn, Mutt'ring his wayward fancies he would rove;
 Now drooping, woful, wan, like one forlorn,
 Or craz'd with care, or cross'd in hopeless love.

"One morn, I miss'd him on th' accustomed hill,
 Along the heath, and near his fav'rite tree;
 Another came, nor yet beside the rill,
 Nor up the lawn, nor at the wood was he;

The next, with dirges due, in sad array,
 Slow through the churchway path we saw him borne,
 Approach and read (for thou canst read) the lay,
 Grav'd on the stone beneath yon aged thorn."

THE EPITAPH.

HERE rests his head upon the lap of Earth,
 Youth to Fortune and to Fame unknown:
 Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
 And Melancholy mark'd him for her own.

Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
 Heav'n did a recompense as largely send:
 He gave to Mis'ry all he had, a tear;
 He gain'd from Heav'n, 'twas all he wish'd, a friend.

No farther seek his merits to disclose,
 Or draw his frailties from their dread abode:
 (There they alike in trembling hope repose)
 The bosom of his Father and his God.

THE BARD.

I. I.

"RUIN seize thee, ruthless King!
 Confusion on thy banners wait;
 Tho' fann'd by Conquest's crimson wing,
 They mock the air with idle state.
 Helm, nor hauberk's twisted mail,
 Nor e'en thy virtues, Tyrant, shall avail
 To save thy secret soul from nightly fears,
 From Cambria's curse, from Cambria's tears!"
 Such were the sounds that o'er the crested pride
 Of the first Edward scatter'd wild dismay,
 As down the steep of Snowdon's shaggy side
 He wound with toilsome march his long array.
 Stout Glo'ster stood aghast in speechless trance:
 "To arms!" cried Mortimer, and crouch'd his quiv'ring lance.

I. 2.

On a rock, whose haughty brow
 Frowns o'er cold Conway's foaming flood,
 Robed in the sable garb of woe,
 With haggard eyes the poet stood;
 (Loose his beard, and hoary hair Stream'd, like a meteor, to the troubled air)

And with a master's hand, and prophet's
fire,
Struck the deep sorrows of his lyre.
"Hark, how each giant oak, and desert
cave,
Sighs to the torrent's awful voice
beneath!
O'er thee, O King! their hundred arms
they wave,
Revenge on thee in hoarser murmurs
breathe;
Vocal no more, since Cambria's fatal
day,
To high-born Hoel's harp, or soft Llewellyn's lay.

I. 3.

"Cold is Cadwallo's tongue,
That hush'd the stormy main:
Brave Urien sleeps upon his craggy bed:
Mountains, ye mourn in vain
Modred, whose magic song Made huge Plinlimmon bow his cloudtopt head.
On dreary Arvon's shore they lie,
Smear'd with gore, and ghastly pale:
Far, far aloof th' affrighted ravens sail;
The famish'd eagle screams, and passes by.
Dear lost companions of my tuneful art,
Dear as the light that visits these sad
eyes,
Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my
heart,
Ye died amidst your dying country's cries —
No more I weep. They do not sleep.
On yonder cliffs, a grisly band,
I see them sit, they linger yet,
Avengers of their native land:
With me in dreadful harmony they join,
And weave with bloody hands the tissue of thy line.

II. I.

"Weave the warp, and weave the woof,
The winding-sheet of Edward's race.
Give ample room, and verge enough
The characters of hell to trace.
Mark the year, and mark the night,
• When Severn shall re-echo with affright

The shrieks of death, thro' B roof that ring,
Shrieks of an agonizing king.
She-wolf of France, with unfangs,
That tear'st the bowels of thy mate,
From thee be born, who country hangs
The scourge of Heav'n. What round him wait!
Amazement in his van, with Flig
bin'd,
And Sorrow's faded form, and behind.

II. 2.

"Mighty victor, mighty lord!
Low on his funeral couch he lie
No pitying heart, no eye, affo
A tear to grace his obsequies.
Is the sable warrior fled?
Thy son is gone. He rests am
dead.
The swarm, that in thy noon-tic were born.
Gone to salute the rising morn.
Fair laughs the morn, and soft th
blows,
While proudly riding o'er th realm
In gallant trim the gilded vesse Youth on the prow, and Ple
the helm:
Regardless of the sweeping wh
sway,
That, hush'd in grim repose, ex ev'ning prey.

II. 3.

"Fill high the sparkling bow
The rich repast prepare, Reft of a crown, he yet may s
feast:
Close by the regal chair
Fell Thirst and Famine scow
A baleful smile upon their guest.
Heard ye the din of battle bray Lance to lance, and horse to Long years of havoc urge th
tined course,

And thro' the kindred squadrons mow their way.

Ye towers of Julius, London's lasting
shame,

With many a foul and midnight murder fed,

Revere his consort's faith, his father's fame,

And spare the meek usurper's holy head.

Above, below, the rose of snow,

Twin'd with her blushing foe, we
spread:

The bristled Boar in infant-gore

Wallows beneath the thorny shade.

Now, brothers, bending o'er the accursed loom,

Stamp we our vengeance deep, and ratify his doom.

III. 1.

"Edward, lo! to sudden fate Weave we the woof. The thread is spun.)

Half of thy heart we consecrate.

(The web is wove. The work is done.)

Stay, oh stay! nor thus forlorn

Leave me unblest'd, unpitied, here to mourn:

In yon bright track, that fires the western skies,

They melt, they vanish from my eyes.

But oh! what solemn scenes on Snow-don's height

Descending slow their glittering skirts
unroll?

Visions of glory, spare my aching sight!

Ye unborn ages, crowd not on my soul!

No more our long-lost Arthur we bewail.

All hail, ye genuine kings, Britannia's issue, hail!

III. 2.

"Girt with many a baron bold sublime their starry fronts they rear;

And gorgeous dames, and statesmen
old

in bearded majesty, appear.

In the midst a form divine!

Her eye proclaims her of the Britonline;

Her lion-port, her awe-commanding
face,

Attemper'd sweet to virgin-grace.

What strings symphonious tremble in
the air,

What strains of vocal transport round her play!

Hear from the grave, great Taliessin,
hear;

They breathe a soul to animate thy clay.

Bright Rapture calls, and soaring as she sings,

Waves in the eye of heav'n her many-color'd wings.

III. 3.

"The verse adorn again

Fierce War, and faithful Love,

And Truth severe, by fairy fiction drest.

In buskin'd measures move

Pale Grief, and pleasing Pain,

With Horror, tyrant of the throbbing
breast.

A voice, as of the cherub-choir,

Gales from blooming Eden bear;

And distant warblings lessen on my ear,

That lost in long futurity expire.

Fond impious man, think'st thou yon sanguine cloud,

Rais'd by thy breath, has quench'd the orb of day?

To-morrow he repairs the golden flood,

And warms the nations with redoubled
ray.

Enough for me; with joy I see

The different doom our fates assign.

Be thine Despair, and sceptred Care,

To triumph, and to die, are mine."

He spoke, and headlong from the mountain's height

Deep in the roaring tide he plunged to endless night.

ODE ON THE SPRING.

Lo! where the rosy-bosom'd Hours,

Fair Venus' train, appear,

Disclose the long-expecting flowers,

And wake the purple year!

The Attic warbler pours her throat,

Responsive to the cuckoo's note,

The untaught harmony of spring:

While, whispering pleasure as they fly,
Cool Zephyrs thro' the clear blue sky
Their gathered fragrance fling.

Where'er the oak's thick branches stretch

A broader, browner shade,
Where'er the rude and moss-grown beech
O'er-canopies the glade,
Beside some water's rushy brink
With me the Muse shall sit, and think (At ease reclined in rustic state)
How vain the ardor of the crowd,
How low, how little are the proud,
How indigent the great!

Still is the toiling hand of Care;
The panting herds repose:
Yet hark, how thro' the peopled air
The busy murmur glows!
The insect-youth are on the wing,
Eager to taste the honied spring,
And float amid the liquid noon:
Some lightly o'er the current skim,

Some show their gaily-gilded trim
Quick-glancing to the sun.

To Contemplation's sober eye
Such is the race of Man:
And they that creep, and they that fly,
Shall end where they began.
Alike the Busy and the Gay
But flutter thro' life's little day,
In Fortune's varying colors drest:
Brushed by the hand of rough Mischance
Or chilled by Age, their airy dance
They leave, in dust to rest.

Methinks I hear, in accents low,
The sportive kind reply:
Poor moralist! and what art thou?
A solitary fly!
Thy joys no glittering female meets,
No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets,
No painted plumage to display:
On hasty wings thy youth is flown;
Thy sun is set, thy spring is gone—
We frolic while 'tis May.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE.

SWEET Auburn! loveliest village of the plain,
Where health and plenty cheer'd the laboring swain,
Where smiling spring its earliest visit paid
And parting summer's ling'ring blooms delay'd;
Dear lovely bowers of innocence and
ease,
Seats of my youth, when every sport could please;
How often have I loiter'd o'er thy green,
Where humble happiness endear'd each
scene;

How often have I paus'd on every charm,
The shelter'd cot, the cultivated farm,
The never-failing brook, the busy mill,
The decent church that topt the neigh-b'ring hill,
The hawthorn bush, with seats beneath the shade,
For talking age and whisp'ring lovers
made!
How often have I blest the coming day,
When toil remitting lent its turn to play,
And all the village train, from labor free,
Led up their sports beneath the spreading tree,

"Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the plain."

 all,
 And the long grass o'ertops the mould'r-

 And, trembling, shrinking from the Far, far away thy children leave the

 land.

Ill fares the land, to hast'ning ills a prey,
 Where wealth accumulates, and men
 decay;
 Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
 A breath can make them, as a breath has made;
 But a bold peasantry, their country's
 pride,
 When once destroy'd, can never be supplied.

A time there was, ere England's griefs
 began,
 When every rood of ground maintain'd its man;
 For him light labor spread her wholesome store,
 Just gave what life required, but gave
 no more:
 His best companions, innocence and health,
 And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.

But times are alter'd; trade's unfeeling train
 Usurp the land, and dispossess the swain;
 Along the lawn, where scatter'd hamlets
 rose,
 Unwieldy wealth and cumb'rous pomp
 repose:
 And every want to luxury allied,
 And every pang that folly pays to pride.
 Those gentle hours that plenty bade to
 bloom,
 Those calm desires that ask'd but little room,
 Those healthful sports that graced the peaceful scene,
 Lived in each look, and brighten'd all the green;

These, far departing, seek a kinder
shore,
And rural mirth and manners are no
more.

RECOLLECTIONS OF HOME AND INFANCY.

SWEET Auburn! parent of the blissful
hour,
Thy glades forlorn confess the tyrant's
power.
Here, as I take my solitary rounds, Amidst thy tangling walks, and ruin'd grounds,
And, many a year elapsed, return to view
Where once the cottage stood, the hawthorn grew,
Remembrance wakes with all her busy
train,
Swells at my breast, and turns the past to pain.

In all my wand'rings round this world of care,
In all my griefs—and God has giv'n
my share—
I still had hopes my latest hours to
crown,
Amidst these humble bowers to lay me
down;
To husband out life's taper at the close,
And keep the flame from wasting by repose:
I still had hopes, for pride attends us
still,
Amidst the swains to show my booklearn'd skill,
Around my fire an evening group to draw,
And tell of all I felt, and all I saw;
And, as an hare whom hounds and horns pursue,
Pants to the place from whence at first he flew,
I still had hopes, my long vexations
past,
Here to return—and die at home at
last.

O blest retirement, friend decline, Retreats from care that never
mine,
How blest is he who crowns it like these,
A youth of labor with an age of Who quits a world where strong tions try,
And, since 'tis hard to combat, I
fly!
For him no wretches, born to w
weep,
Explore the mine, or tempt the ous deep;
No surly porter stands in guilty
To spurn imploring famine fr
gate;
But on he moves to meet his lat
Angels around befriending
friend;
Sink to the grave with unperceive
While resignation gently slopes t
And, all his prospects bright'nin
last,
His heaven commences ere th be past!

Sweet was the sound, when ev'ning's close,
Up yonder hill the village murmur
There, as I past with careless st
slow,
The mingling notes came softer
below;
The swain, responsive as the n
sung,
The sober herd that low'd to m
young,
The noisy geese that gabbled pool,
The playful children just let lo school,
The watch-dog's voice that b whispering wind,
And the loud laugh that spoke cant mind;
These all in sweet confusion so
shade,
And fill'd each pause the nig had made.
But now the sounds of populati

No cheerful murmurs fluctuate in the
gale,
No busy steps the grass-grown foot-way
tread,
But all the blooming flush of life is fled.
All but yon widow'd, solitary thing,
That feebly bends beside the plashy
spring;
She, wretched matron, forced in age,
For bread,
To strip the brook with mantling cresses
spread,
To pick her wint'ry faggot from the thorn,
To seek her nightly shed, and weep till
morn;
She only left of all the harmless train,
The sad historian of the pensive plain.

THE VILLAGE PASTOR.

NEAR yonder copse, where once the garden smiled
And still where many a garden flower grows wild;
There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose,
The village preacher's modest mansion
rose.
A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly
race,
Nor e'er had chang'd, nor wish'd to change his place;
Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power,
By doctrines fashion'd to the varying
hour;
For other aims his heart had learn'd to
prize,
More bent to raise the wretched than to
rise.
His house was known to all the vagrant
train,
He chid their wand'rings, but relieved their pain;
The long remember'd beggar was his guest,
Whose beard descending swept his aged
breast;

The ruin'd spendthrift, now no longer
proud,
Claim'd kindred there, and had his claims allow'd;
The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away;
Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done, Shoulder'd his crutch, and show'd how fields were won.
Pleased with his guests, the good man
learn'd to glow,
And quite forgot their vices in their woe; Careless their merits or their faults to scan,
His pity gave ere charity began.

Thus to relieve the wretched was his
pride,
And even his failings lean'd to virtue's
side;
But in his duty prompt at every call,
He watch'd and wept, he pray'd and felt for all;
And, as a bird each fond endearment tries,
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the
skies;
He tried each art, reproved each dull
delay,
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the
way.

Beside the bed where parting life was laid,
And sorrow, guilt, and pain, by turns dismay'd,
The rev'rend champion stood. At his control,
Despair and anguish fled the struggling
soul;
Comfort came down the trembling wretch
to raise,
And his last falt'ring accents whisper'd
praise.

At church, with meek and unaffected
grace,
His looks adorn'd the venerable place;
Truth from his lips prevail'd with double
sway,
And fools, who came to scoff, remained
to pray.

The servant just, and the pious man,
 With ready zeal, each honest rustic ran;
 Even children follow'd, with endearing
 wile,
 And pluck'd his gown, to share the good man's smile.
 His ready smile a parent's warmth ex-
 prest,
 Their welfare pleased him, and their cares distrest;
 To them his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
 But all his serious thoughts had rest in
 heaven.
 As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form, Swells from the vale, and midway leaves
 the storm,
 Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
 Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

THE VILLAGE SCHOOLMASTER AND THE VILLAGE INN.

BESIDE yon straggling fence that skirts
 the way,
 With blossom'd furze unprofitably gay,
 There, in his noisy mansion, skill'd to rule,
 The village master taught his little school;
 A man severe he was, and stern to view,
 I knew him well, and every truant knew;
 Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace
 The day's disasters in his morning face;
 Full well they laugh'd with counter-feited glee
 At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
 Full well the busy whisper circling
 round,
 Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd;
 Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
 The love he bore to learning was in
 fault;
 The village all declared how much he knew;
 'Twas certain he could write, and cypher too;

For he could measure, terms and presage,
 And even the story ran that he could gauge:
 In arguing, too, the parson own'd his skill,
 For even though vanquish'd, he could argue still;
 While words of learned length, and thund'ring sound,
 Amazed the gazing rustics ranged
 around,
 And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
 That one small head could carry all he knew.

But past is all his fame. The very spot
 Where many a time he triumph'd, is forgot.
 Near yonder thorn, that lifts its head on
 high,
 Where once the sign-post caught the passing eye,
 Low lies that house where nut-brown draughts inspired,
 Where gray-beard mirth and smiling toil retired,
 Where village statesmen talk'd with looks profound,
 And news much older than their ale went round.
 Imagination fondly stoops to trace
 The parlor splendors of that festive
 place;
 The white-wash'd wall, the nicely sanded
 floor,
 The varnish'd clock that click'd behind
 the door;
 The chest contrived a double debt to
 pay,
 A bed by night, a chest of drawers by
 day;
 The pictures placed for ornament and
 use,
 The twelve good rules, the royal game of goose;
 The hearth, except when winter chill'd
 the day,
 With aspen boughs and flowers and fennel gay,

“ And shuddering still to face the distant deep Returned and wept and still return'd to weep ! ”

The rattling chariots clash, the torches

Sure scenes like these no troubles e'er annoy!

Sure these denote one universal joy! —
 Are these thy serious thoughts? ah, turn thine eyes

Where the poor houseless shivering female lies.

She once, perhaps, in village plenty
 bless'd,

Has wept at tales of innocence distress'd;
 Her modest looks the cottage might adorn,

Sweet as the primrose peeps beneath the thorn.

Now lost to all, her friends, her virtue fled,

Near her betrayer's door she lays her
 head,

And, pinch'd with cold, and shrinking from the shower

With heavy heart deplores that luckless
 hour,

When, idly first, ambitious of the town,
 She left her wheel, and robes of country brown.

Do thine, sweet Auburn, thine, the loveliest train,

Do thy fair tribes participate her pain?
 Even now, perhaps, by cold and hunger
 led,

At proud men's doors they ask a little bread!

Ah, no. To distant climes, a dreary
 scene,

Where half the convex world intrudes
 between,

Through torrid tracts with fainting steps
 they go,

Where wild Altama murmurs to their
 woe.

Far different there from all that charm'd
 before,

The various terrors of that horrid shore;
 Those blazing suns that dart a downward ray,

 And fiercely shed intolerable day;

Those matted woods where birds forget to sing,

But silent jets of deadly clusters cling;
 Those poisonous fields with rank luxuriance crown'd,
 Where the dark scorpion gathers death
 around;
 Where at each step the stranger fears to wake
 The rattling terrors of the vengeful snake;
 Where crouching tigers wait their hapless prey,
 And savage men more murderous still
 than they;
 While oft in whirls the mad tornado flies, Ming'ling the ravaged landscape with the
 skies.
 Far different these from every former
 scene,
 The cooling brook, the grassy-vested
 green;
 The breezy covert of the warbling grove,
 That only shelter'd thefts of harmless
 love.

Good Heaven! what sorrows gloom'd that parting day,
 That call'd them from their native walks
 away;
 When the poor exiles, every pleasure
 past,
 Hung round the bowers, and fondly look'd their last,
 And took a long farewell, and wish'd in vain
 For seats like these beyond the western
 main;
 And shuddering still to face the distant
 deep,
 Return'd and wept, and still return'd to
 weep!
 The good old sire, the first, prepared to
 go
 To new-found worlds, and wept for others' woe:
 But for himself, in conscious virtue brave,
 He only wish'd for worlds beyond the
 grave.
 His lovely daughter, lovelier in her tears,
 The fond companion of his helpless
 years,
 Silent went next, neglectful of her charms,

And left a lover's for a father's arms.
 With louder plaints the mother spoke her woes,
 And bless'd the cot where every pleasure
 rose;
 And kiss'd her thoughtless babes with many a tear,
 And clasp'd them close, in sorrow doubly
 dear;
 Whilst her fond husband strove to lend relief
 In all the silent manliness of grief.—
 O luxury; thou cursed by Heaven's decree,
 How ill exchanged are things like these
 for thee!
 How do thy potions, with insidious joy,
 Diffuse their pleasures only to destroy!
 Kingdoms by thee, to sickly greatness
 grown,
 Boast of a florid vigor not their own;
 At every draught more large and large they grow,
 A bloated mass of rank unwieldy woe;
 Till sapp'd their strength, and every part unsound,
 Down, down they sink, and spread a ruin round.

Even now the devastation is begun,
 And half the business of destruction
 done;
 Even now, methinks, as pondering here
 I stand,
 I see the rural Virtues leave the land.
 Down where yon anchoring vessel spreads the sail,
 That idly waiting flaps with every gale, Downward they move, a melancholy
 band,
 Pass from the shore, and darken all the strand.
 Contented Toil, and hospitable Care, And kind connubial Tenderness, are
 there:
 And Piety with wishes placed above,
 And steady Loyalty and faithful Love.

THE TRAVELLER.

, unfriended, melancholy, slow,
 e lazy Scheld, or wandering Po;
 rd, where the rude Carinthian
 :
 he houseless stranger shuts the
 ;
 : Campania's plain forsaken lies,
 waste expanding to the skies:
 r I roam, whatever realms to see,
 t, untravell'd, fondly turns to
 :
 y brother turns, with ceaseless
 ,
 gs at each remove a lengthenchain.

il blessings crown my earliest
 id,
 nd his dwelling guardian saints nd;
 be that spot, where cheerful sts retire
 : from toil, and trim their eve-
 ; fire:
 hat abode, where want and pain ur,
 ry stranger finds a ready chair;
 e those feasts with simple plenty rn'd, ll the ruddy family around t the jests or pranks that never with pity at some mournful tale;
 the bashful stranger to his food,
 n the luxury of doing good.

But me, not destined such delights to
 share,
 My prime of life in wandering spent and
 care;
 Impell'd with steps unceasing to pursue Some fleeting good, that mocks me with the view:
 That, like the circle bounding earth and
 skies,
 Allures from far, yet, as I follow, flies;
 My fortune leads to traverse realms
 alone,
 And find no spot of all the world my
 own.

Even now, where Alpine solitudes
 ascend,
 I sit me down a pensive hour to spend:
 And, placed on high, above the storm's
 career,
 Look downward where an hundred realms appear;
 Lakes, forests, cities, plains extending
 wide,
 The pomp of kings, the shepherd's humbler pride.

When thus creation's charms around
 combine,
 Amidst the store, should thankless pride repine?
 Say, should the philosophic mind disdain
 That good which makes each humbler bosom vain?
 Let school-taught pride dissemble all it can,
 These little things are great to little
 man;
 And wiser he, whose sympathetic mind
 Exults in all the good of all mankind.
 Ye glittering towns, with wealth and splendor crown'd;
 Ye fields, where summer spreads profusion round;
 Ye lakes, whose vessels catch the busy
 gale;
 Ye bending swains, that dress the flowery
 vale;
 For me your tributary stores combine; Creation's heir, the world, the world is mine!

As some lone miser, visiting his store,
 Bends at his treasure, counts, recounts it o'er:
 Hoards after hoards his rising raptures fill,
 Yet still he sighs, for hoards are wanting still;
 Thus to my breast alternate passions
 rise,
 Pleased with each good that Heaven to man supplies;
 Yet oft a sigh prevails, and sorrows fall,
 To see the hoard of human bliss so
 small;
 And oft I wish, amidst the scene, to find
 Some spot to real happiness consign'd, Where my worn soul, each wandering hope at rest,
 May gather bliss, to see my fellows
 bless'd.

But where to find that happiest spot
 below,
 Who can direct, when all pretend to
 know?
 The shuddering tenant of the frigid zone Boldly proclaims that happiest spot his
 own;
 Extols the treasures of his stormy seas,
 And his long nights of revelry and
 ease:
 The naked negro, panting at the line,
 Boasts of his golden sands and palmy
 wine,
 Basks in the glare, or stems the tepid
 wave,
 And thanks his gods for all the good they gave.
 Such is the patriot's boast where'er we roam,
 His first, best country, ever is at home.
 And yet, perhaps, if countries we compare,
 And estimate the blessings which they
 share,
 Though patriots flatter, still shall wisdom
 find
 An equal portion dealt to all mankind:
 As different good, by art or nature given,
 To different nations makes their blessings even.

CHARACTER OF THE ITALIANS

FAR to the right, where Appennine
 ascends,
 Bright as the summer, Italy extends:
 Its uplands sloping deck the mountain's
 side,
 Woods over woods in gay theatric pride:
 While oft some temple's mouldering tops
 between
 With venerable grandeur mark the scene

 Could Nature's bounty satisfy the
 breast,
 The sons of Italy were surely bless'd.
 Whatever fruits in different climes are
 found,
 That proudly rise, or humbly court the
 ground;
 Whatever blooms in torrid tracts appear,
 Whose bright succession decks the varied year;
 Whatever sweets salute the northern
 sky
 With vernal lives, that blossom but to
 die;
 These here disporting, own the kindred
 soil,
 Nor ask luxuriance from the planter's
 toil;
 While sea-born gales their gelid wings expand
 To winnow fragrance round the smiling
 land.

But small the bliss that sense alone bestows,
 And sensual bliss is all the nation knows.
 In florid beauty groves and fields appear,
 Man seems the only growth that dwindles here.
 Contrasted faults through all his manners
 reign;
 Though poor, luxurious; though submissive, vain;
 Though grave, yet trifling; zealous, yet untrue;
 And even in penance planning sins
 anew.
 All evils here contaminate the mind,
 That opulence departed leaves behind;
 For wealth was theirs, not far removed the date,

Then commerce proudly flourish'd through the state;
 Her command the palace learn'd to
 rise,
 Gain the long-fall'n column sought the
 skies,
 The canvas glow'd, beyond e'en Nature
 warm,
 The pregnant quarry teem'd with human
 form:
 Till, more unsteady than the southern
 gale,
 Commerce on other shores display'd her sail;
 While nought remain'd of all that riches
 gave,
 But towns unmann'd, and lords without a slave:
 And late the nation found, with fruitless
 skill,
 Its former strength was but plethoric ill.

Yet, still the loss of wealth is here supplied
 By arts, the splendid wrecks of former
 pride;
 From these the feeble heart and long-fall'n mind
 An easy compensation seem to find.
 Here may be seen, in bloodless pomp array'd,
 The pasteboard triumph and the cavalcade:
 By sports like these are all their cares beguiled;
 The sports of children satisfy the child:
 Each nobler aim repress'd by long control,
 Now sinks at last, or feebly mans the soul;
 While low delights, succeeding fast behind,
 In happier meanness occupy the mind:
 As in those domes, where Cesars once bore sway,
 Defaced by time, and tottering in decay,
 There in the ruin, heedless of the dead,
 The shelter-seeking peasant builds his
 shed;
 And, wondering man could want the larger pile, Exults, and owns his cottage with a
 smile.

CHARACTER OF THE SWISS.

My soul turn from them; — turn we to survey
 Where rougher climes a nobler race display,
 Where the bleak Swiss their stormy mansion tread,
 And force a churlish soil for scanty
 bread;
 No product here the barren hills afford But man and steel, the soldier and his sword:
 No vernal blooms their torpid rocks
 array,
 But winter lingering chills the lap of
 May;
 No zephyr fondly sues the mountain's
 breast,
 But meteors glare, and stormy glooms invest.

Yet still, even here, content can spread a charm,
 Redress the clime, and all its rage disarm.
 Though poor the peasant's hut, his feasts though small,
 He sees his little lot the lot of all;
 Sees no contiguous palace rear its head,
 To shame the meanness of his humble
 shed;
 No costly lord the sumptuous banquet deal,
 To make him loathe his vegetable meal;
 But calm, and bred in ignorance and
 toil,
 Each wish contracting, fits him to the soil.
 Cheerful at morn, he wakes from short
 repose,
 Breathes the keen air, and carols as he goes;
 With patient angle trolls the finny deep,
 Or drives his venturous ploughshare to the steep;
 Or seeks the den where snow-tracks
 mark the way,
 And drags the struggling savage into
 day.
 At night returning, every labor sped,
 He sits him down the monarch of a
 shed;

Smiles by his cheerful fire, and round surveys
His children's looks, that brighten at the blaze;
While his loved partner, boastful of her hoard,
Displays her cleanly platter on the board:
And, haply too, some pilgrim thither
led,
With many a tale repays the nightly bed.

Thus every good his native wilds im-
part,
Imprints the patriot passion on his heart;
And ev'n those hills, that round his mansion rise,
Enhance the bliss his scanty fund supplies:
Dear is that shed to which his soul conforms,
And dear that hill which lifts him to the storms;
And as a child, when scaring sounds molest,
Clings close and closer to the mother's
breast,
So the loud torrent, and the whirlwind's
roar,
But bind him to his native mountains
more.

CHARACTER OF THE FRENCH.

To kinder skies, where gentler manners
reign,
I turn; and France displays her bright domain.
Gay sprightly land of mirth and social
ease,
Pleased with thyself, whom all the world can please.
How often have I led thy sporting choir,
With tuneless pipe, beside the murmuring Loire,
Where shading elms along the margin
grew,
And freshen'd from the wave the zephyr
flew;
And haply, though my harsh touch falt'ring still,

But mock'd all tune, and marr'd dancers' skill, Yet would the village praise my drous power,
And dance forgetful of the noon-tide Alike all ages. Dames of ancient Have led their children through mirthful maze;
And the gay grandsire, skill'd in
lore,
Has frisk'd beneath the burden of score.

So blest a life these thoughtless
display,
Thus idly busy rolls their world aw Theirs are those arts that mind to endear,
For honor forms the social temper Honor, that praise which real gains,
Or even imaginary worth obtains,
Here passes current; paid from h
hand,
It shifts in splendid traffic roun
land:
From courts to camps, to cottag strays,
And all are taught an avarice of p
They please, are pleased, they g get esteem,
Till, seeming blest, they grow to they seem.

But while this softer art their supplies,
It gives their follies also room to r
For praise too dearly loved, or w
sought,
Enfeebles all internal strength of the
And the weak soul, within itself un
Leans for all pleasure on another's l
Hence ostentation here, with tawd Pants for the vulgar praise which impart;
Here vanity assumes her pert grin
And trims her robe of frieze with c lace;
Here beggar pride defrauds her
cheer,
To boast one splendid banque. c
year;

Vain, very vain, my weary search to find
That bliss which only centres in the
mind;
Why have I stray'd, from pleasure and
repose,
To seek a good each government bestows?
In every government, though terrors
reign,
Though tyrant kings, or tyrant laws restrain,
How small of all that human hearts endure,
That part which laws or kings can cause or cure!
Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find.
With secret course, which no loud storms
annoy,
Glides the smooth current of domestic
joy.
The lifted axe, the agonizing wheel, Luke's iron crown, and Damien's bed of steel,
To men remote from power but rarely
known,
Leave reason, faith, and conscience, all our own.

EDWIN AND ANGELINA.

"TURN, gentle hermit of the dale,
And guide my lonely way
To where yon taper cheers the vale
With hospitable ray.

"For here forlorn and lost I tread,
With fainting steps and slow;
Where wilds, unmeasurably spread,
Seem lengthening as I go."

"Forbear, my son," the hermit cries,
"To tempt the dangerous gloom;
For yonder faithless phantom flies
To lure thee to thy doom.

"Here to the houseless child of want My door is open still;
And though my portion is but scant,
I give it with good will.

"Then turn to-night, and freely share
Whate'er my cell bestows;
My rushy couch and frugal fare,
My blessing, and repose.

"No flocks that range the valley free
To slaughter I condemn;
Taught by that Power that pities me,
I learn to pity them.

"But from the mountain's grassy side
A guiltless feast I bring;
A scrip with herbs and fruits supplied,
And water from the spring.

"Then, pilgrim, turn, thy cares forego,
All earth-born cares are wrong;
Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

Soft as the dew from heaven descends,
His gentle accents fell;
The modest stranger lowly bends,
And follows to the cell.

Far in a wilderness obscure
The lonely mansion lay;
A refuge to the neighboring poor,
And strangers led astray.

No stores beneath its humble thatch Required a master's care;
The wicket, opening with a latch,
Received the harmless pair.

And now, when busy crowds retire
To take their evening rest,
The hermit trimm'd his little fire,
And cheer'd his pensive guest:

And spread his vegetable store,
And gaily press'd, and smiled;
And, skill'd in legendary lore,
The lingering hours beguiled.

Around, in sympathetic mirth,
Its tricks the kitten tries;

The cricket chirrups in the hearth,
The crackling faggot flies.

But nothing could a charm impart
To soothe the stranger's woe;
For grief was heavy at his heart,
And tears began to flow.

His rising cares the hermit spied,
With answering care opprest:
"And whence, unhappy youth," he cried,
"The sorrows of thy breast?"

"From better habitations spurn'd, Reluctant dost thou rove?
Or grieve for friendship unreturn'd,
Or unregarded love?"

"Alas! the joys that fortune brings
Are trifling, and decay;
And those who prize the paltry things,
More trifling still than they.

"And what is friendship but a name,
A charm that lulls to sleep:
A shade that follows wealth or fame,
But leaves the wretch to weep?"

"And love is still an emptier sound,
The modern fair one's jest;
On earth unseen, or only found
To warm the turtle's nest.

"For shame, fond youth, thy sorrows hush,
And spurn the sex," he said:
But while he spoke, a rising blush
His love-lorn guest betrayed.

Surprised he sees new beauties rise,
Swift mantling to the view;
Like colors o'er the morning skies,
As bright, as transient too.

The bashful look, the rising breast,
Alternate spread alarms;
The lovely stranger stands confest
A maid in all her charms!

And, "Ah, forgive a stranger rude,
A wretch forlorn," she cried;
"Whose feet unhallow'd thus intrude
Where heaven and you reside.

Importunate and vain:

And while his passion touch'd my heart,
I triumph'd in his pain.

"Till quite dejected with my scorn,
He left me to my pride;
And sought a solitude forlorn,
In secret, where he died.

"But mine the sorrow, mine the fault,
And well my life shall pay;
I'll seek the solitude he sought,
And stretch me where he lay.

"And there forlorn, despairing, hid,
I'll lay me down and die;
'Twas so for me that Edwin did,
And so for him will I."

"Forbid it, Heaven!" the hermit cried,
And clasp'd her to his breast:
The wond'ring fair one turn'd to chide —
'Twas Edwin's self that prest!

"Turn, Angelina, ever dear,
My charmer, turn to see Thy own, thy long-lost Edwin here, Restored to love and thee!

"Thus let me hold thee to my heart,
And every care resign:
And shall we never, never part,
My life — my all that's mine?

"No, never from this hour to part,
We'll live and love so true;
The sigh that rends thy constant heart,
Shall break thy Edwin's too."

1731-1800.

WILLIAM COWPER was born at the rectory, Great Berkhamstead, Nov. 26, 1731. His father, rector of the parish, was a nephew of Lord Chancellor Cowper; his mother was Ann Donne, of the family of Dr. John Donne, the celebrated Dean of St. Paul's. Cowper was educated at a day-school, and afterwards at Westminster, where Vincent Bourne was a master, and Warren Hastings, Robert Lloyd, Colman, and Churchill were among the boys. After leaving Westminster he became a member of the Middle Temple, and was articled to a solicitor, a Mr. Chapman, one of the lower-clerks being Thurlow, afterwards Lord Chancellor. During his three years under Mr. Chapman he saw much of the family of his uncle, Ashley Cowper, with one of whose daughters, Anne, he formed a deep attachment. Another daughter, Harriet, afterwards Lady Hesketh, was in the latter years of his life one of his warmest friends. The engagement of marriage with Theodora was not sanctioned by her father; and this disappointment, with other troubles, seems to have greatly affected Cowper, and to have prepared the way for the first attack of insanity, which took place in 1763. The immediate cause was the excitement occasioned by his appointment to two clerkships in the House of Lords, at the hands of his uncle, Major Cowper. His malady was intensified by the injudicious handling he received from his cousin, Martin Madan, a strong Calvinist, and it was only after a stay of fifteen months under the care of the amiable physician and verse-writer, Dr. Nathaniel Cotton, at St. Albans, that he recovered. He did not resume work in London, but went to live at Huntingdon. There he fell in with the Unwins, and there began their lifelong intimacy. After Mr. Unwin's death (1767) Cowper removed with Mrs. Unwin to Olney, where they remained till 1786. The peace of Cowper's life at Olney was shaken in 1773 by a second attack of melancholia, which lasted for sixteen months. Before and after that time he corresponded freely with many friends; he joined with John Newton, curate-in-charge at Olney, in composing the Olney Hymns (published, 1779); but it was not till December, 1780, that he began seriously to write poetry, having deserted the art since the days of his early love-verses to "Delia." His first volume, containing Table Talk, Conversation, Retirement, and the other didactic poems, was published in 1782; his second, containing The Task, Tirocinium, and among others the ballad of John Gilpin (which had been published in a newspaper, and had become famous through the recitations of Henderson, the actor), appeared in 1785. The subjects of both John Gilpin and The Task were suggested to Cowper by Lady Austen, a fascinating person, who for some years was on intimate terms with him and Mrs. Unwin. Afterwards he began his translation of Homer, which was completed and published in 1791. The last years of his life, from 1791 to 1800, were years of great misery. Mrs. Unwin was paralytic from 1791 to her death in 1796; he himself was suffering from hopeless dejection, regarding himself, as he had done since his first attack, as an outcast from God. He died at East Dereham, in Norfolk, April 25, 1800.]

RELISH OF FAIR PROSPECT.

[From The Task, Book I. The Sofa.]

OH! may I live exempted (while I live Guiltless of pampered appetite obscene)
 From pangs arthritic that infest the toe
 Of libertine excess. The Sofa suits
 The gouty limb, 'tis true; but gouty limb, Though on a Sofa, may I never feel:
 For I have loved the rural walk through lanes
 Of grassy swarth, close cropped by nibbling sheep
 And skirted thick with intertexture firm
 Of thorny boughs; have loved the rural walk O'er hills, through valleys, and by rivers' brink,
 E'er since a truant boy I passed my bounds
 To enjoy a ramble on the banks of Thames;
 And still remember, nor without regret,
 Of hours that sorrow since has much endeared,
 How oft, my slice of pocket store consumed,
 Still hungering, penniless, and far from
 home,
 I fed on scarlet hips and stony haws,
 Or blushing crabs, or berries that em-boss

The bramble, black as jet, or sloes austere.

Hard fare! but such as boyish appetite
 Disdains not, nor the palate undepraved
 By culinary arts, unsavory deems.

No Sofa then awaited my return,
 Nor Sofa then I needed. Youth repairs
 His wasted spirits quickly, by long toil Incurring short fatigue; and though our
 years,

As life declines, speed rapidly away,
 And not a year but pilfers as he goes,
 Some youthful grace that age would gladly keep,

A tooth or auburn lock, and by degrees
 Their length and color from the locks they spare,

The elastic spring of an unwearied foot
 That mounts the stile with ease, or leaps the fence,

That play of lungs, inhaling and again
 Respiring freely the fresh air, that makes Swift pace or steep ascent no toil to me, Mine have not pilfered yet; nor yet impaired

My relish of fair prospect: scenes that soothed

Or charmed me young, no longer young,
 I find

Still soothing and of power to charm me still.

And witness, dear companion of my walks,

whose arm this twentieth winter I perceive fast locked in mine, with pleasure such as love, confirmed by long experience of thy worth
 and well-tried virtues, could alone inspire, Witness a joy that thou hast doubled long.
 Thou knowest my praise of nature most sincere,
 And that my raptures are not conjured up to serve occasions of poetic pomp, but genuine, and art partner of them all.
 How oft upon yon eminence our pace has slackened to a pause, and we have borne the ruffling wind, scarce conscious that it blew, While admiration, feeding at the eye,
 And still unsated, dwelt upon the scene.
 Thence with what pleasure have we just discerned the distant plough slow moving, and beside his laboring team, that swerved not from the track,
 The sturdy swain diminished to a boy.
 Here Ouse, slow winding through a level plain
 Of spacious meads with cattle sprinkled o'er,
 Conducts the eye along his sinuous course Delighted. There, fast rooted in their bank,
 Stand, never overlooked, our favorite elms,
 That screen the herdsman's solitary hut;
 While far beyond, and overthwart the stream,
 That, as with molten glass, inlays the vale,
 The sloping land recedes into the clouds;
 Displaying on its varied side the grace
 Of hedge-row beauties numberless, square tower, tall spire, from which the sound of cheerful bells

Just undulates upon the listening ear;
 Groves, heaths, and smoking villages remote.
 Scenes must be beautiful which, daily viewed,
 Please daily, and whose novelty survives
 Long knowledge and the scrutiny of years:
 Praise justly due to those that I describe.

CRAZY KATE. THE GIPSIES.

THERE often wanders one, whom better days
 Saw better clad, in cloak of satin trimmed
 With lace, and hat with splendid riband bound.
 A serving-maid was she, and fell in love
 With one who left her, went to sea, and died.
 Her fancy followed him through foaming waves
 To distant shores, and she would sit and weep
 At what a sailor suffers; fancy too, Delusive most where warmest wishes are,
 Would oft anticipate his glad return,
 And dream of transports she was not to know.
 She heard the dolcful tidings of his death,
 And never smiled again. And now she roams
 The dreary waste; there spends the livelong day,
 And there, unless when charity forbids,
 The livelong night. A tattered apron hides,
 Worn as a cloak, and hardly hides, a gown
 More tattered still; and both but ill conceal
 A bosom heaved with never-ceasing sighs.
 She begs an idle pin of all she meets,
 And hoards them in her sleeve; but needful food,
 Though pressed with hunger oft, or comelier clothes,

Though pinched with cold, asks never. — Kate is crazed.

I see a column of slow-rising smoke O'ertop the lofty wood that skirts the wild.

A vagabond and useless tribe there eat
Their miserable meal. A kettle, slung Between two poles upon a stick transverse,

Receives the morsel; flesh obscene of
dog,

Or vermin, or, at best, of cock purloined
From his accustomed perch. Hard-faring race!

They pick their fuel out of every hedge,
Which, kindled with dry leaves, just saves unquenched

The spark of life. The sportive wind blows wide

Their fluttering rags, and shows a tawny skin,

The vellum of the pedigree they claim.
Great skill have they in palmistry, and
more

To conjure clean away the gold they touch,

Conveying worthless dross into its
place;

Loud when they beg, dumb only when they steal.

Strange! that a creature rational, and cast

In human mould, should brutalize by choice

His nature, and, though capable of arts
By which the world might profit and himself,

Self banished from society, prefer
Such squalid sloth to honorable toil!
Yet even these, though, feigning sickness
oft,

They swathe the forehead, drag the limping limb,

And vex their flesh with artificial sores,
Can change their woe into a mirthful
note

When safe occasion offers; and with dance,

And music of the bladder and the bag, Beguile their woes, and make the woods resound.

Such health and gaiety of heart enjoy

The houseless rovers of the sylvan world;
And breathing wholesome air, and wardering much,

Need other physic none to heal the effects

Of loathsome diet, penury, and cold.

ENGLAND.

[From Book II. The Task.]

ENGLAND, with all thy faults, I love thee still,

My country! and, while yet a nook is left

Where English minds and manners may be found,

Shall be constrained to love thee.
Though thy clime

Be fickle, and thy year, most part, deformed

With dripping rains, or withered by a frost,

I would not yet exchange thy sullen skies
And fields without a flower, for warmer France

With all her vines; nor for Ausonia's groves

Of golden fruitage, and her myrtle
bowers.

To shake thy senate, and from heights sublime

Of patriot eloquence to flash down fire
Upon thy foes, was never meant my task:

But I can feel thy fortunes, and partake Thy joys and sorrows with as true a
heart

As any thundrer there. And I can feel Thy follies too, and with a just disdain Frown at effeminate, whose very looks Reflect dishonor on the land I love.

How, in the name of soldiership and
sense,

Should England prosper, when such things, as smooth

And tender as a girl, all-essenced o'er
With odors, and as profligate as sweet,

Who sell their laurel for a myrtle wreath,
And love when they should fight,— when such as these Presume to lay their hand upon the ark

Of her magnificent and awful cause?

Time was when it was praise and boast enough
 In every clime, and travel where we might,
 That we were born her children; praise
 enough
 To fill the ambition of a private man,
 That Chatham's language was his mother
 tongue,
 And Wolfe's great name compatriot with his own.
 Farewell those honors, and farewell with
 them
 The hope of such hereafter! They have fallen
 Each in his field of glory: one in arms,
 And one in council—Wolfe upon the lap
 Of smiling Victory that moment won,
 And Chatham, heart-sick of his country's shame!
 They made us many soldiers. Chatham
 still Consulting England's happiness at home,
 Secured it by an unforgiving frown
 If any wronged her. Wolfe, where'er he fought,
 Put so much of his heart into his act,
 That his example had a magnet's force,
 And all were swift to follow whom all loved.
 Those suns are set. Oh, rise some other such!
 Or all that we have left is empty talk
 Of old achievements, and despair of new.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL.

[From Book III., The Garden.]

I WAS a stricken deer that left the herd
 Long since; with many an arrow deep infixed
 My panting side was charged, when I withdrew
 To seek a tranquil death in distant shades.
 There was I found by One who had Himself
 Been hurt by the archers. In His side He bore,

And in His hands and feet, the cruel scars.
 With gentle force soliciting the darts,
 He drew them forth, and healed and bade me live.
 Since then, with few associates, in remote And silent woods I wander, far from those
 My former partners of the peopled scene;
 With few associates, and not wishing
 more.
 Here much I ruminate, as much I may,
 With other views of men and manners
 now
 Than once, and others of a life to come.
 I see that all are wanderers, gone astray
 Each in his own delusions; they are lost
 In chase of fancied happiness, still wooed
 And never won. Dream after dream ensues,
 And still they dream that they shall still succeed,
 And still are disappointed. Rings the
 world
 With the vain stir. I sum up half man-
 kind,
 And add two-thirds of the remaining half,
 And find the total of their hopes and fears Dreams, empty dreams.

THE POST. THE FIRESIDE IN WINTER.

[From Book IV., The Winter Evening.]

HARK! 'tis the twanging horn! O'er yonder bridge,
 That with its wearisome but needful length
 Bestrides the wintry flood, in which the moon
 Sees her unwrinkled face reflected
 bright,
 He comes, the herald of a noisy world,
 With spattered boots, strapped waist,
 and frozen locks,
 News from all nations lumbering at his back.
 True to his charge, the close-packed load behind,
 Yet careless what he brings, his one concern

Is to conduct it to the destined inn,
And having dropped the expected bag — pass on.

He whistles as he goes, light-hearted wretch,

Cold and yet cheerful: messenger of grief

Perhaps to thousands, and of joy to some,

To him indifferent whether grief or joy.

Houses in ashes, and the fall of stocks,

Births, deaths, and marriages, epistles wet

With tears that trickled down the writer's cheeks

Fast as the periods from his fluent quill,

Or charged with amorous sighs of absent
swains,

Or nymphs responsive, equally affect

His horse and him, unconscious of them
all.

But oh the important budget! ushered in

With such heart-shaking music, who can say

What are its tidings? have our troops awaked?

Or do they still, as if with opium drugged,

Snore to the murmurs of the Atlantic
wave?

Is India free? and does she wear her plumed

And jewelled turban with a smile of
peace,

Or do we grind her still? The grand debate,

The popular harangue, the tart reply,

The logic, and the wisdom, and the wit,

And the loud laugh—I long to know them all;

I burn to set the imprisoned wranglers
free,

And give them voice and utterance once
again.

Now stir the fire, and close the shutters
fast,

Let fall the curtains, wheel the sofa
round,

And while the bubbling and loud hissing urn

Throws up a steamy column, and the cups

That cheer but not inebriate, wait on each,

So let us welcome peaceful evening in.

O Winter! ruler of the inverted year, Thy scattered air with sleet like ashes filled,

Thy breath congealed upon thy lips, thy cheeks

Fringed with a beard made white with other snows

Than those of age, thy forehead wrapt in clouds,

A leafless branch thy sceptre, and thy throne

A sliding car, indebted to no wheels,
But urged by storms along its slippery
way;

I love thee, all unlovely as thou seemest,
And dreaded as thou art. Thou holdest

the sun

A prisoner in the yet undawning east, Shortening his journey between morn and noon,

And hurrying him, impatient of his stay,
Down to the rosy west; but kindly still

Compensating his loss with added hours
Of social converse and instructive ease,

And gathering, at short notice, in one group

The family dispersed, and fixing thought,
Not less dispersed by daylight and its cares.

I crown thee King of intimate delights, Fireside enjoyments, homeborn happi-

ness,

And all the comforts that the lowly roof
Of undisturbed retirement, and the hours

Of long uninterrupted evening know.

No rattling wheels stop short before these gates;

No powdered pert, proficient in the art
Of sounding an alarm, assaults these doors

Till the street rings; no stationary steeds Cough their own knell, while, heedless of the sound,

The silent circle fan themselves, and quake:

But here the needle plies its busy task,
The pattern grows, the well-depicted
flower,

Wrought patiently into the snowy lawn,
 Unfolds its bosom; buds, and leaves,
 and sprigs,
 And curling tendrils, gracefully disposed,
 Follow the nimble finger of the fair;
 A wreath that cannot fade, of flowers that blow
 With most success when all besides
 decay.
 The poet's or historian's page, by one Made vocal for the amusement of the
 rest;
 The sprightly lyre, whose treasure of sweet sounds
 The touch from many a trembling chord shakes out;
 And the clear voice symphonious, yet distinct,
 And in the charming strife triumphant
 still;
 Beguile the night, and set a keener edge
 On female industry: the threaded steel Flies swiftly, and unfelt the task proceeds.

SNOW.

I SAW the woods and fields at close of
 day
 A variegated show; the meadows green, Though faded; and the lands, where lately waved
 The golden harvest, of a mellow brown,
 Uprturned so lately by the forceful share:
 I saw far off the weedy fallows smile
 With verdure not unprofitable, grazed
 By flocks, fast feeding, and selecting each
 His favorite herb; while all the leafless groves
 That skirt the norizon, wore a sable hue, Scarce noticed in the kindred dusk of
 eve.
 To-morrow brings a change, a total
 change!
 Which even now, though silently performed
 And slowly, and by most unfelt, the face
 Of universal nature undergoes.
 Fast falls a fleecy shower: the downy flakes

Descending, and, with never-ceasing
 lapse,
 Softly alighting upon all below,
 Assimilate all objects. Earth receives Gladly the thickening mantle, and the
 green
 And tender blade that feared the chilling blast
 Escapes unhurt beneath so warm a veil.
 In such a world, so thorny, and where none
 Finds happiness unblighted, or, if found,
 Without some thistly sorrow at its side,
 It seems the part of wisdom, and no sin
 Against the law of love, to measure lots
 With less distinguished than ourselves, that thus
 We may with patience bear our moderate ills,
 And sympathize with others, suffering
 more.
 Ill fares the traveller now, and he that stalks
 In ponderous boots beside his reeking team.
 The wain goes heavily, impeded sore
 By congregated loads adhering close To the clogged wheels; and in its sluggish pace
 Noiseless appears a moving hill of snow.
 The toiling steeds expand the nostril
 wide,
 While every breath, by respiration
 strong
 Forced downward, is consolidated soon Upon their jutting chests. He, formed to bear
 The pelting brunt of the tempestuous
 night,
 With half-shut eyes and puckered cheeks, and teeth
 Presented bare against the storm, plods
 on.
 One hand secures his hat, save when with both
 He brandishes his pliant length of whip, Resounding oft, and never heard in
 vain.
 O happy! and in my account, denied That sensibility of pain with which Refinement is endued, thrice happy
 thou.

Thy frame, robust and hardy, feels indeed
 The piercing cold, but feels it unimpaired.
 The learned finger never need explore Thy vigorous pulse; and the unhealthful east,
 That breathes the spleen, and searches every bone
 Of the infirm, is wholesome air to thee.
 Thy days roll on exempt from household care;
 The wagon is thy wife; and the poor beasts
 That drag the dull companion to and fro,
 Thine helpless charge, dependent on thy care.
 Ah, treat them kindly! rude as thou appearest,
 Yet show that thou hast mercy, which the great,
 With needless hurry whirled from place to place,
 Humane as they would seem, not always show.

EARLY LOVE OF THE COUNTRY AND OF POETRY.

BUT slighted as it is, and by the great Abandoned, and, which still I more regret,
 Infected with the manners and the modes
 It knew not once, the country wins me still.
 I never framed a wish, or formed a plan,
 That flattered me with hopes of earthly bliss,
 But there I laid the scene. There early strayed
 My fancy, ere yet liberty of choice
 Had found me, or the hope of being free.
 My very dreams were rural, rural too
 The firstborn efforts of my youthful muse, Sportive, and jingling her poetic bells

Ere yet her ear was mistress of their powers.
 No bard could please me but whose lyre was tuned
 To Nature's praises. Heroes and their feats Fatigued me, never weary of the pipe
 Of Tityrus, assembling, as he sang,
 The rustic throng beneath his favorite beech.
 Then Milton had indeed a poet's charms:
 New to my taste, his Paradise surpassed
 The struggling efforts of my boyish tongue
 To speak its excellence; I danced for joy.
 I marvelled much that, at so ripe an age
 As twice seven years, his beauties had then first Engaged my wonder, and admiring still,
 And still admiring, with regret supposed
 The joy half lost because not sooner found.
 Thee too, enamored of the life I loved,
 Pathetic in its praise, in its pursuit Determined, and possessing it at last
 With transports such as favored lovers feel,
 I studied, prized, and wished that I had known,
 Ingenious Cowley! and though now reclaimed
 By modern lights from an erroneous taste, I cannot but lament thy splendid wit
 Entangled in the cobwebs of the schools;
 I still revere thee, courtly though retired,
 Though stretched at ease in Chertsey's silent bowers,
 Not unemployed, and finding rich amends
 For a lost world in solitude and verse.

MEDITATION IN WINTER.

[From Book VI. The Winter Walk at Noon.]

THE night was winter in his roughest mood, ing sharp and clear. But now

 on, e southern side of the slant ere the woods fence off the ern blast,
 on smiles, resigning all its rage, the warmth of May. The is blue a cloud, and white without a c ing splendor of the scene bee harmony comes o'er the vale, ough the trees I view the em-ed tower all the music. I again per-
 :
 hing influence of the wafted
 is,
 e in soft musings as I tread
 , still verdant, under oaks and
 itspread branches overarch the e. though moveable through all nd sways it, has yet well sufght.

 east warbles still, but is content ider notes, and more than half ressed:
 with his solitude, and flitting ay to spray, where'er he rests akes ny a twig the pendant drops of le in the withered leaves be-accompanied with sounds so ore than silence. Meditation ak down hours to moments.
 e the heart
 a useful lesson to the head,

And learning wiser grow without his books.
 Knowledge and wisdom, far from being one,
 Have oft times no connexion. Knowledge dwells
 In heads replete with thoughts of other
 men,
 Wisdom in minds attentive to their own.
 Knowledge, a rude unprofitable mass,
 The mere materials with which wisdom builds,
 Till smoothed and squared and fitted to its place,
 Does but encumber whom it seems to enrich.
 Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much;
 Wisdom is humble that he knows no
 more.
 Books are not seldom talismans and spells,
 By which the magic art of shrewder wits Holds an unthinking multitude enthralled.
 Some to the fascination of a name
 Surrender judgment hoodwinked
 Some the style Infatuates, and through labyrinths and wilds
 Of error leads them, by a tune entranced.
 While sloth seduces more, too weak to bear
 The insupportable fatigue of thought,
 And swallowing therefore, without pause or choice,
 The total grist unsifted, husks and all.
 But trees, and rivulets whose rapid course
 Defies the check of winter, haunts of deer,
 And sheepwalks populous with bleating lambs,
 And lanes in which the primrose ere her
 time
 Peeps through the moss that clothes the hawthorn root,
 Deceive no student. Wisdom there,
 and Truth,
 Not shy as in the world, and to be won
 By slow solicitation, seize at once
 The roving thought, and fix it on themselves.

THE POET IN THE WOODS.

HERE unmolested, through whatever sign
 The sun proceeds, I wander; neither mist,
 Nor freezing sky nor sultry, checking me,
 Nor stranger intermeddling with my joy.
 Even in the spring and playtime of
 the year,
 That calls the unwonted villager abroad
 With all her little ones, a sportive train,
 To gather kingcups in the yellow mead,
 And prink their hair with daisies, or to pick
 A cheap but wholesome salad from the brook,
 These shades are all my own. The timorous hare,
 Grown so familiar with her frequent
 guest,
 Scarce shuns me; and the stockdove unalarmed
 Sits cooing in the pine-tree, nor suspends
 His long love-ditty for my near approach.
 Drawn from his refuge in some lonely elm
 That age or injury has hollowed deep,
 Where on his bed of wool and matted
 leaves
 He has outslept the winter, ventures
 forth
 To frisk awhile, and bask in the warm
 sun,
 The squirrel, slippant, pert, and full of
 play.
 He sees me, and at once, swift as a bird, Ascends the neighboring beech; there whisks his brush,
 And perks his ears, and stamps and scolds aloud.
 With all the prettiness of feigned alarm,
 And anger insignificantly fierce.

EPITAPH ON A HARE.

HERE lies, whom hound did ne'er pursue,
 Nor swifter greyhound follow,
 Whose foot ne'er tainted morning dew,
 Nor ear heard huntsman's halloo;

Old Tiney, surliest of his kind,
 Who, nursed with tender care,
 And to domestic bounds confined,
 Was still a wild Jack hare.

Though duly from my hand he took His pittance every night,
 He did it with a jealous look,
 And, when he could, would bite.

His diet was of wheaten bread,
 And milk, and oats, and straw;
 Thistles, or lettuces instead,
 With sand to scour his maw.

On twigs of hawthorn he regaled,
 On pippins' russet peel,
 And, when his juicy salads failed,
 Sliced carrot pleased him well.

A Turkey carpet was his lawn,
 Whereon he loved to bound,
 To skip and gambol like a fawn,
 And swing his rump around.

His frisking was at evening hours,
 For then he lost his fear,
 But most before approaching shower
 Or when a storm drew near.

Eight years and five round-rolls moons
 He thus saw steal away,
 Dozing out all his idle noons,
 And every night at play.

I kept him for his humor's sake,
 For he would oft beguile
 My heart of thoughts that made ache,
 And force me to a smile.

But now beneath this walnut shade
 He finds his long last home,
 And waits, in snug concealment laid
 Till gentler Puss shall come.

He, still more aged, feels the shocks
 From which no care can save,
 And, partner once of Tiney's box,
 Must soon partake his grave.

THE DEATH OF MRS.
MORTON'S BULLFINCH.

Just then, by adverse fate impressed,
A dream disturbed poor Bully's rest;
In sleep he seemed to view
A rat fast clinging to the cage,
And screaming at the sad presage,
Awoke and found it true.

For, aided both by ear and scent,
Right to his mark the monster went, —
Ah, Muse! forbear to speak
Minute the horrors that ensued;
His teeth were strong, the cage was wood. —
He left poor Bully's beak.

Oh, had he made that too his prey!
That beak, whence issued many a lay
Of such mellifluous tone,
Might have repaid him well, I wote,
For silencing so sweet a throat,
Fast stuck within his own.

Maria weeps, — the Muses mourn; —
So, when by Bacchanalians torn,
On Thracian Hebrus' side
The tree-enchanted Orpheus fell,
His head alone remained to tell
The cruel death he died.

ON THE LOSS OF THE ROYAL GEORGE.

[Written when the news arrived.]

TOLL for the brave!
The brave that are no more!
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore!

Eight hundred of the brave,
Whose courage well was tried,
Had made the vessel heel,
And laid her on her side.

A land-breeze shook the shrouds,
And she was overset;
Down went the Royal George,
With all her crew complete.

Toll for the brave!
Brave Kempenfelt is gone;
His last sea-fight is fought;
His work of glory done.

It was not in the battle;
No tempest gave the shock;
She sprang no fatal leak;
She ran upon no rock.

His sword was in its sheath;
His fingers held the pen,
When Kempenfelt went down
With twice four hundred men.

Weigh the vessel up,
Once dreaded by our foes!
And mingle with our cup
The tears that England owes.

Her timbers yet are sound,
And she may float again
Full charged with England's thunder,
And plough the distant main.

But Kempenfelt is gone,
His victories are o'er;
And he and his eight hundred Shall plough the wave no more.

THE ACQUIESCENCE OF PURE LOVE.

[From the French of Madame Guyon.]

LOVE! if Thy destined sacrifice am I,
Come, slay thy victim, and prepare Thy fires;
Plunged in the depths of mercy, let me die
The death which every soul that lives desires!

I watch my hours, and see them fleet
away;
The time is long that I have languished
here;
Yet all my thoughts Thy purposes obey,
With no reluctance, cheerful and sincere.

To me 'tis equal, whether Love ordain My life or death, appoint me pain or
ease:
My soul perceives no real ill in pain;
In ease or health no real good she sees.

One Good she covets, and that
alone;
To choose Thy will, from selfish
free;
And to prefer a cottage to a throne
And grief to comfort, if it please
Thee.

That we should bear the cross in command,
Die to the world, and live to serve
more;
Suffer, unmoved, beneath the
hand,
As pleased when shipwrecked and safe on shore.

ON THE RECEIPT OF MY MOTHER'S PICTURE.

Oh, that those lips had language!
has passed
With me but roughly since I heard
last.
Those lips are thine—thy own smile I see,
The same that oft in childhood smiled
me;
Voice only fails, else how distinct
say,
"Grieve not, my child, chase all thoughts
away!"
The meek intelligence of those days (Blessed be the art that can immortalize,
The art that baffles Time's tyrannical To quench it) here shines on me the same.
Faithful remembrancer of one so dear
O welcome guest, though unexpected
here!
Who bidst me honor with an artless
Affectionate, a mother lost so long
I will obey, not willingly alone,
But gladly, as the precept were heard And, while that face renews my grief,
Fancy shall weave a charm for me
Shall steep me in Elysian reveries
A momentary dream that thou art when I learnt that thou ' conscious of the tears I spirit o'er thy sorrowing then life's journey just gavest me, though un-

 ? — It was. — Where thou urewells are a sound un-et thee on that peaceful ord shall pass my lips no

 omise of thy quick return.
 I wished I long believed,
 ited still, was still deceived.
 every day beguiled,
 from even from a child.
 sad to-morrow came and ck of infant sorrow spent,
 st submission to my lot;
 less deplored thee, ne'er e we dwelt our name is ine have trod my nursery e gardener Robin, day by hool along the public way, h my bauble coach, and antle warm, and velvet me a history little known,

That once we called the pastoral house
 our own.
 Short-lived possession ! but the record
 fair
 That memory keeps, of all thy kindness
 there,
 Still outlives many a storm that has effaced
 A thousand other themes less deeply traced.
 Thy nightly visits to my chamber made,
 That thou mightst know me safe and warmly laid;
 Thy morning bounties ere I left my home,
 The biscuit, or confectionary plum;
 The fragrant waters on my cheek bestowed
 By thy own hand, till fresh they shone and glowed;
 All this, and more endearing still than
 all,
 Thy constant flow of love, that knew no
 fall,
 Ne'er roughened by those cataracts and brakes
 That humor interposed too often makes;
 All this still legible in memory's page,
 And still to be so to my latest age,
 Adds joy to duty, makes me glad to pay Such honors to thee as my numbers
 may;
 Perhaps a frail memorial, but sincere,
 Not scorned in heaven, though little noticed here.
 Could Time, his flight reversed, restore the hours,
 When, playing with thy vesture's tissued
 flowers,
 The violet, the pink, and jessamine,
 I pricked them into paper with a pin (And thou wast happier than myself the while,
 Wouldst softly speak, and stroke my head and smile),
 Could those few pleasant days again
 appear,
 Might one wish bring them, would I wish them here?
 I would not trust my heart — the dear
 delight
 Seems so to be desired, perhaps I might. —

But no — what here we call our life is such

So little to be loved, and thou so much,
That I should ill requite thee to constrain
Thy unbound spirit into bonds again.

Thou, as a gallant bark from Albion's coast

(The storms all weathered and the ocean crossed)

Shoots into port at some well-havened isle,

Where spices breathe, and brighter seasons smile,

There sits quiescent on the floods that show

Her beauteous form reflected clear
below,

While airs impregnated with incense
play

Around her, fanning light her streamers
gay;

So thou, with sails how swift! hast reached the shore,

"Where tempests never beat nor billows
roar."

And thy loved consort on the dangerous tide

Of life long since has anchored by thy
side.

But me, scarce hoping to attain that rest, Always from port withheld, always distressed —

Me howling blasts drive devious, tempest tost,

Sails ripped, seams opening wide, and compass lost,

And day by day some current's thwart-ing force

Sets me more distant from a prosperous course.

Yet, oh, the thought that thou art safe, and he!

That thought is joy, arrive what may to
me.

My boast is not, that I deduce my birth From loins enthroned and rulers of the
earth;

But higher far my proud pretensions
rise —

The son of parents passed into the skies!
And now, farewell — Time unrevoked
has run

His wonted course, yet what I wished is done.

By contemplation's help, not sought in
vain,

I seem to have lived my childhood o'er
again;

To have renewed the joys that once were
mine,

Without the sin of violating thine:

And, while the wings of Fancy still are
free,

And I can view this mimic show of thee,
Time has but half succeeded in his theft —

Thyself removed, thy power to soothe me left.

THE POPLAR FIELD.

THE poplars are felled; farewell to the
shade,

And the whispering sound of the cool colonnade;

The winds play no longer and sing in the leaves,

Nor Ouse on his bosom their image receives.

Twelve years have elapsed since I first took a view

Of my favorite field, and the bank where they grew;

And now in the grass behold they are
laid,

And the tree is my seat that once lent me a shade!

The blackbird has fled to another retreat,

Where the hazels afford him a screen from the heat,

And the scene where his melody charmed me before

Resounds with his sweet-flowing ditty no
more.

My fugitive years are all hasting away,
And I must ere long lie as lowly as they,

With a turf on my breast, and a stone at my head,

Ere another such grove shall arise in its stead.

 tered the last stanza in the following
 range both my heart and my fancy em-
 s, on the frailty of man and his joys;
 ed as we are, yet our pleasures, we see, till shorter date, and die sooner than we."

For, could I view nor them nor thee,
 What sight worth seeing could I see?
 The sun would rise in vain for me,
 My Mary!

Partakers of thy sad decline,
 Thy hands their little force resign;
 Yet, gently prest, press gently mine,
 My Mary!

Such feebleness of limbs thou provest.
 That now at every step thou movest Upheld by two, yet still thou lovest,
 My Mary!

And still to love, though prest with ill,
 In wintry age to feel no chill,
 With me is to be lovely still,
 My Mary!

But ah! by constant heed I know,
 How oft the sadness that I show
 Transforms thy smiles to looks of woe,
 My Mary!

And should my future lot be cast
 With much resemblance of the past,
 Thy worn-out heart will break at last,
 My Mary!

THE CAST-AWAY.

OBSCUREST night involved the sky,
 The Atlantic billows roared,
 When such a destined wretch as I,
 Washed headlong from on board,
 Of friends, of hope, of all bereft,
 His floating home for ever left.

No braver chief could Albion boast
 Than he with whom he went,
 Nor ever ship left Albion's coast
 With warmer wishes sent.
 He loved them both, but both in vain.
 Nor him beheld, nor her again.

Not long beneath the whelming brine,
 Expert to swim, he lay;
 Nor soon he felt his strength decline,
 Or courage die away;
 But waged with death a lasting strife,
 Supported by despair of life.

He shouted: nor his friends had failed
 To check the vessel's course,
 But so the furious blast prevailed,
 That, pitiless perforce,
 They left their outcast mate behind,
 And scudded still before the wind.

Some succor yet they could afford;
 And such as storms allow,
 The cask, the coop, the floated cord,
 Delayed not to bestow.
 But he (they knew) nor ship nor shore,
 Whate'er they gave, should visit more.

Nor, cruel as it seemed, could he
 Their haste himself condemn,
 Aware that flight, in such a sea,
 Alone could rescue them;
 Yet bitter felt it still to die
 Deserted, and his friends so nigh.

He long survives, who lives an hour
 In ocean, self-upheld;
 And so long he, with unspent power,
 His destiny repelled;
 And ever, as the minutes flew,
 Entreated help, or cried "Adieu!"

At length, his transient respite past,
 His comrades, who before
 Had heard his voice in every blast,
 Could catch the sound no more:
 For then, by toil subdued, he drank
 The stifling wave, and then he sank.

No poet wept him; but the page
 Of narrative sincere,
 That tells his name, his worth, his age,
 Is wet with Anson's tear:
 And tears by bards or heroes shed
 Alike immortalize the dead.

I therefore purpose not, or dream,
 Descanting on his fate,
 To give the melancholy theme
 A more enduring date:
 But misery still delights to trace
 Its semblance in another's case.

No voice divine the storm allayed,
 No light propitious shone,
 When, snatched from all effectual aid,
 We perished, each alone:
 But I beneath a rougher sea,
 And whelmed in deeper gulfs than he.

THE DOVES.

REAS'NING at every step he treads,
 Man yet mistakes his way,
 While meaner things, whom instinct leads,
 Are rarely known to stray.

One silent eve I wander'd late,
 And heard the voice of love;
 The turtle thus address'd her mate,
 And sooth'd the list'ning dove:

Our mutual bond of faith and truth
 No time shall disengage,
 Those blessings of our early youth
 Shall cheer our latest age.

While innocence without disguise,
 And constancy sincere,
 Shall fill the circles of those eyes,
 And mine can read them there;

Those ills that wait on all below,
 Shall ne'er be felt by me,
 Or gently felt and only so,
 As being shared with thee.

When lightnings flash among the trees,
 Or kites are hov'ring near,
 I fear lest thee alone they seize,
 And know no other fear.

'Tis then I feel myself a wife,
 And press thy wedded side,
 Resolved an union form'd for life.
 Death never shall divide.

But oh! if fickle and unchaste (Forgive a transient thought)
 Thou couldst become unkind at last,
 And scorn thy present lot,

No need of lightnings from on high,
 Or kites with cruel beak,
 Denied th' endearments of thine eye
 This widow'd heart would break.

Thus sang the sweet sequester'd bird,
 Soft as the passing wind,
 And I recorded what I heard,
 A lesson for mankind.

ALEXANDER SELKIRK.

I AM monarch of all I survey,
 My right there is none to dispute;
 From the centre all round to the sea,
 I am lord of the fowl and the brute.
 O Solitude, where are the charms
 That sages have seen in thy face?
 Better dwell in the midst of alarms
 Than reign in this horrible place.

I am out of humanity's reach;
 I must finish my journey alone;
 Never hear the sweet music of speech —
 I start at the sound of my own.
 The beasts that roam over the plain
 My form with indifference see;
 They are so unacquainted with men,
 Their tameness is shocking to me.

Society, friendship, and love,
 Divinely bestow'd upon man,
 O had I the wings of a dove,
 How soon would I taste you again!
 My sorrows I then might assuage
 In the ways of religion and truth;
 Might learn from the wisdom of age,
 And be cheer'd by the sallies of youth.

Religion! what treasure untold Resides in that heavenly word!
 More precious than silver and gold,
 Or all that this earth can afford.
 But the sound of the church-going bell
 These valleys and rocks never heard —
 Never sigh'd at the sound of a knell,
 Or smiled when a Sabbath appear'd.

Ye winds that have made me your sport,
 Convey to this desolate shore
 Some cordial endearing report
 Of a land I shall visit no more.
 My friends, do they now and then send
 A wish or a thought after me?
 O tell me I yet have a friend,
 Though a friend I am never to see.

How fleet is a glance of the mind !
 Compared with the speed of its flight,
 The tempest itself lags behind,
 And the swift-winged arrows of light.
 When I think of my own native land,
 In a moment I seem to be there;
 But, alas ! recollection at hand
 Soon hurries me back to despair.

But the sea-fowl is gone to her nest
 The beast is laid down in his lair
 Even here is a season of rest,
 And I to my cabin repair.
 There's mercy in every place;
 And mercy, encouraging thought
 Gives even affliction a grace,
 And reconciles man to his lot.

JAMES BEATTIE.

1735-1803.

[JAMES BEATTIE was born at Laurencekirk in 1735, and died at Aberdeen in 1803. He published his first volume of poems in 1761, The Judgment of Paris in 1765, and Some Lines Proposed Monument to Churchill in 1766. The first part of The Minstrel appeared in 1774, the second in 1774.]

EDWIN.

[From The Minstrel.]

THERE liv'd in gothic days, as legends
 tell,
 A shepherd-swain, a man of low degree;
 Whose sires, perchance, in Fairyland might dwell,
 Sicilian groves, or vales of Arcady.
 But he, I ween, was of the north coun-trie :
 A nation fam'd for song, and beauty's
 charms;
 Zealous, yet modest; innocent, though
 free;
 Patient of toil; serene amidst alarms;
 Inflexible in faith; invincible in arms.
 The shepherd-swain of whom I mention
 made,
 On Scotia's mountains fed his little flock;
 The sickle, scythe, or plough, he never sway'd;
 An honest heart was almost all his stock;
 His drink the living water from the rock :
 The milky dams supplied his board,
 and lent
 Their kindly fleece to baffle winter's
 shock;

And he, though oft with dusky sweat besprent,
 Did guide and guard their wa-ings, wheresoe'er they went.

From labor health, from health coment springs,
 Contentment opes the source of
 joy;
 He envied not, he never thought
 kings;
 Nor from those appetites su-
 annoy,
 That chance may frustrate, or inducloy :
 Nor Fate his calm and humble
 beguil'd;
 He mourn'd no recreant friend,
 mistress coy,
 For on his vows the blameless smil'd,
 And her alone he lov'd, and lov'd from a child.

No jealousy their dawn of love o-Nor blasted were their wedde-with strife;
 Each season, look'd delightful,
 past,
 To the fond husband, and the wife;
 Beyond the lowly vale of shephe-

They never roam'd; secure beneath the storm
Which in ambition's lofty land is rife, Where peace and love are canker'd by the worm
Of pride, each bud of joy industrious to deform.

He wight, whose tales these artless lines unfold,
Was all the offspring of this humble
pair :

His birth no oracle or seer foretold :
No prodigy appear'd in earth or air,
For aught that might a strange event declare.

You guess each circumstance of Ed-win's birth;
The parent's transport, and the parent's
care;
The gossip's prayer for wealth, and wit, and worth;
And one long summer-day of indolence and mirth.

And yet poor Edwin was no vulgar boy; Deep thought oft seem'd to fix his infant eye :

Sainties he heeded not, nor gaude, nor toy,
Save one short pipe of rudest minstrelsy.

Silent, when glad; affectionate, though shy;

And now his look was most demurely
sad,

And now he laugh'd aloud, yet none knew why;

The neighbors star'd and sigh'd, yet
bless'd the lad;

Some deem'd him wondrous wise, and some believ'd him mad.

But why should I his childish feats display?

Concourse, and noise, and toil he ever
fled;

For car'd to mingle in the clamorous fray

Of squabbling imps, but to the forest
sped,

For roam'd at large the lonely mountain's
head;

Or, where the maze of some bewilder'd
stream

To deep untrodden groves his footsteps
led,

There would he wander wild, till Phœbus' beam,

Shot from the western cliff, releas'd the weary team.

Th' exploit of strength, dexterity, or speed,

To him nor vanity nor joy could bring :

His heart, from cruel sport estrang'd, would bleed

To work the woe of any living thing,
By trap or net, by arrow or by sling;

These he detested, those he scorn'd to wield;

He wish'd to be the guardian, not the
king,

Tyrant far less, or traitor of the field :
And sure the sylvan reign unbloody joy might yield.

Lo! where the stripling, wrapt in wonder, roves

Beneath the precipice o'erhung with pine;

And sees, on high, amidst th' encircling
groves,

From cliff to cliff the foaming torrents shine :

While waters, woods, and winds, in concert join,

And Echo swells the chorus to the
skies.

Would Edwin this majestic scene resign
For aught the huntsman's puny craft supplies?

Ah! no: he better knows great Nature's charms to prize.

And oft he trac'd the uplands, to
survey,

When o'er the sky advanc'd the kind-ling dawn,

The crimson cloud, blue main, and mountain gray,

And lake, dim gleaming on the smoky lawn;

Far to the west the long long vale withdrawn,

Where twilight loves to linger for a while;
And now he faintly kens the bounding fawn,
And villager abroad at early toil. —
But lo! the sun appears! and heaven, earth, ocean, smile.

And oft the craggy cliff he lov'd to climb,
When all in mist the world below was lost:
What dreadful pleasure! there to stand sublime,
Like shipwreck'd mariner on desert coast,
And view th' enormous waste of vapor tost
In billows, lengthening to th' horizon round,
Now scoop'd in gulfs, with mountains now emboss'd!
And hear the voice of mirth and song rebound,
Flocks, herds, and waterfalls, along the hoar profound!

In truth he was a strange and wayward wight,
Fond of each gent! and each dreadful scene:
In darkness, and in storm, he found delight;
Nor less, than when on ocean-wave serene
The southern sun diffus'd his dazzling shene,
Even sad vicissitude amus'd his soul:
And if a sigh would sometimes intervene,
And down his cheek a tear of pity roll,
A sigh, a tear so sweet, he wish'd not to control.

EDWIN'S MEDITATIONS IN AUTUMN.

"O YE wild groves, O where is now your bloom!"
(The Muse interprets thus his tender thought)

"Your flowers, your verdure, and balmy gloom,
Of late so grateful in the b drought!
Why do the birds, that song and brought
To all your bowers, their m now forsake?
Ah! why has fickle chance thi
wrought?
For now the storm howls m through the brake,
And the dead foliage flies in r shapeless flake.

"Where now the rill, melodious and cool,
And meads, with life, and mir beauty crown'd!
Ah! see, th' unsightly slime, an gish pool,
Have all the solitary vale imbr Fled each fair form, and mut melting sound,
The raven croaks mourn on
spray:
And, hark! the river, bursting mound,
Down the vale thunders; ar wasteful sway, Uproots the grove, and rolls t ter'd rocks away.

"Yet such the destiny of all on So flourishes and fades
man!
Fair is the bud his vernal morn
forth,
And fostering gales a while th ling fan:
O smile, ye heavens, serene;
dews wan,
Ye blighting whirlwinds, sp balmy prime,
Nor lessen of his life the little s Borne on the swift, though silen of Time,
Old age comes on apace to ra the clime.

"And be it so. Let those depl
doom.

Whose hope still grovels in this dark sojourn:
But lofty souls, who look beyond the tomb,
Can smile at Fate, and wonder how they mourn.
Shall Spring to these sad scenes no more return?
'Is yonder wave the sun's eternal
bed? —
Soon shall the orient with new lustre
burn,
And spring shall soon her vital influence shed,
Again attune the grove, again adorn the mead.

"Shall I be left abandon'd in the dust, When Fate, relenting, lets the flower revive,
Shall Nature's voice, to man alone unjust, Bid him, though doom'd to perish, hope to live?
Is it for this fair Virtue oft must strive With disappointment, penury, and
pain? —
No: Heaven's immortal spring shall yet arrive
And man's majestic beauty bloom again, Bright through th' eternal year of Love's triumphant reign."

This truth sublime his simple sire had taught,
In sooth, 'twas almost all the shepherd
knew,
No subtle nor superfluous lore he sought,
Nor ever wish'd his Edwin to pursue: —

"Let man's own sphere" (quoth he)
"confine his view;
Be man's peculiar work his sole de-
light."
And much, and oft, he warn'd him to eschew Falsehood and guile, and aye maintain the right,
By pleasure uneduc'd, unaw'd by lawless might.

"And from the prayer of Want, and plaint of Woe,

O never, never turn away thine ear;
Forlorn in this bleak wilderness below,
Ah! what were man, should Heaven refuse to hear!
To others do (the law is not severe)
What to thyself thou wishest to be done.
Forgive thy foes; and love thy parents
dear,
And friends, and native land; nor those alone;
All human weal and woe learn thou to make thine own."

MORNING.

BUT who the melodies of morn can tell?
The wild-brook babbling down the mountain side;
The lowing herd; the sheepfold's simple bell;
The pipe of early shepherd dim described
In the lone valley; echoing far and wide
The clamorous horn along the cliffs
above;
The hollow murmur of the ocean-tide;
The hum of bees, and linnet's lay of love,
And the full choir that wakes the universal grove.

The cottage-curs at early pilgrim bark;
Crown'd with her pail the tripping milkmaid sings;
The whistling ploughman stalks afield;
and, hark!
Down the rough slope the ponderous wagon rings;
Thro' rustling corn the hare astonish'd springs;
Slow tolls the village-clock the drowsy
hour;
The partridge bursts away on whirr-
ing wings;
Deep mourns the turtle in sequester'd
bower,
And shrill lark carols clear from her aërial tower.

EDWIN'S FANCIES AT EVENING.

When the long-sounding curfew from afar

Loaded with loud lament the lonely
 gate,

Young Edwin, lighted by the evening
 star,

Lingering and listening wander'd down the vale.

There would he dream of graves, and corpses pale;

And ghosts, that to the charnel-dungeon
 throng,

And drag a length of clanking chain,
 and wail,

Till silenced by the owl's terrific song,
 Or blast that shrieks by fits the shuddering aisles along.

Or when the setting moon, in crimson
 died,

Hung o'er the dark and melancholy
 deep,

To haunted stream, remote from man
 he hied,

Where Fays of yore their revels wont to keep;

And there let Fancy roam at large, till
 sleep

A vision brought to his entranced sight.

And first, a wildly-murmuring wind
 'gan creep

Shrill to his ringing ear; then tapers
 bright,

With instantaneous gleam, illumed the vault of Night.

Anon in view a portal's blazon'd arch Arose; the trumpet bids the valves unfold;

And forth a host of little warriors march Grasping the diamond lance, and targe
 of gold.

Their look was gentle, their demeanor
 bold,

And green their helms, and green their silk attire.

And here and there, right venerably old,
 The long-robed minstrels wake the warbling wire,

And some with mellow breath the martial pipe inspire.

With merriment, and song, and timbrels
 clear,

A troop of dames from myrtle bowers
 advance:

The little warriors doff the targe and spear,

And loud enlivening strains provoke the dance.

They meet, they dart away, they wheel askance

To right, to left, they thrid the flying maze;
 Now bound aloft with vigorous spring, then glance

Rapid along; with many-color'd rays
 Of tapers, gems, and gold, the echoing forests blaze.

THOMAS CHATTERTON.

1752-1770.

[BORN at Bristol, 1752. Son of a sexton and parish schoolmaster, and died by suicide before he had completed his eighteenth year, London, 1770. In this brief interval he gave proof of powers unsurpassed in one so young, and executed a number of forgeries almost without parallel for ingenuity and variety. His avowed compositions are very inferior to the forgeries, a fact that Scott explains by supposing that in the forgeries all his powers must have been taxed to the utmost to support the deception.]

ON RESIGNATION.

O God, whose thunder shakes the sky,
 Whose eye this atom globe surveys,
 To thee, my only rock, I fly,
 Thy mercy in thy justice praise.

The mystic mazes of thy will,
 The shadows of celestial light,
 Are past the powers of human skill;
 But what the Eternal acts is right.

O teach me in the trying hour,
When anguish swells the dewy tear,
To still my sorrows, own thy power,
Thy goodness love, thy justice fear.

If in this bosom aught but thee,
Encroaching sought a boundless sway, Omniscience could the danger see,
And mercy look the cause away.

Then, why, my soul, dost thou complain?
Why drooping seek the dark recess?
Shake off the melancholy chain,
For God created all to bless.

But, ah! my breast is human still;
The rising sigh, the falling tear,
My languid vitals' feeble rill,
The sickness of my soul declare.

But yet, with fortitude resign'd,
I'll thank the infliction of the blow,
Forbid the sigh, compose my mind
Nor let the gush of misery flow.

The gloomy mantle of the night,
Which on my sinking spirit steals,
Will vanish at the morning light,
Which God, my East, my Sun, reveals.

ODE TO SPRING.

SWEET daughter of a rough and stormy
sire,
Hoar Winter's blooming child; delightful Spring!
Whose unshorn locks with leaves
And swelling buds are crowned;

From the green islands of eternal youth, Crowned with fresh blooms and ever springing shade;
Turn, hither turn thy step,
O thou, whose powerful voice

More sweet than softest touch of Doric reed,
Or Lydian flute, can soothe the madding
winds,
And through the stormy deep
Breathe thine own tender calm.

Thee, best beloved! the virgin train await With songs and festal rites, and joy to rove

Thy blooming wilds among,
And vales and dewy lawns,

With untired feet; and cull thy earliest
sweet,
To weave fresh garlands for the glowing brow
Of him, the favored youth
That prompts their whispered sigh.

Unlock thy copious stores, — those tender showers
That drop their sweetness on the infant buds;
And silent dews that swell
The milky ear's green stem,

And feed the flowering osier's early shoots;
And call those winds which through the whispering boughs
With warm and pleasant breath
Salute the blowing flowers.

Now let me sit beneath the whitening
thorn
And mark thy spreading tints steal o'er the dale,
And watch with patient eye
Thy fair unfolding charms.

O nymph, approach! while yet the temperate sun
With bashful forehead through the cool moist air
Throws his young maiden beams,
And with chaste kisses woos

The earth's fair bosom; while the streaming veil
Of lucid clouds with wind and frequent
shade
Protects thy modest blooms
From his severer blaze.

Sweet is thy reign, but short: — the red dog-star
Shall scorch thy tresses, and the mower's scythe
Thy greens, thy flowerets all Remorseless shall destroy.

Reluctant shall I bid thee then fare-
well:
For O not all that Autumn's lap contains,
Nor Summer's ruddiest fruits,
Can aught for thee atone,

Fair Spring! whose simplest promise more delights
Than all their largest wealth, and through the heart
Each joy and new-born hope
With softest influence breathes.

LIFE.

"Animula, vagula, blandula.

LIFE! I know not what thou art,
But know that thou and I must part
And when, or how, or where we
I own to me's a secret yet.
But this I know, when thou art fled Where'er they lay these limbs, this No clod so valueless shall be
As all that then remains of me.
O whither, whither dost thou fly,
Where bend unseen thy trackless
And in this strange divorce, Ah, tell where I must seek this pound I?

To the vast ocean of empyreal fire
From whence thy essence came Dost thou thy flight pursue,
freed
From matter's base encumbered weed?
Or dost thou, hid from sight
Wait, like some spell-bound Through blank oblivious years pointed hour
To break thy trance and reassume
power?
Yet canst thou without thought being be?
O say what art thou when no more
thee?

Life! we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends
dear;
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear
Then steal away, give little wa-
Choose thine own time;
Say not Good night, but in some be-clime
Bid me Good morning.

SIR WILLIAM JONES.

1746-1794.

[An Indian judge and learned oriental writer. Born in London in 1746, and died at Calcutta, 1794. In 1764 entered University College, Oxford, where he made great acquirements in oriental languages and literature; in 1783 appointed a judge in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, where he attained to great distinction, and gained the admiration of the most learned men in India; in 1799 his works were collected and published in six volumes, and his life by Lord Teignmouth in the volume in 1804.]

AN ODE, IN IMITATION OF ALCÆUS.

WHAT constitutes a state?
 Not high-raised battlement or labor'd
 mound,
 Thick wall or moated gate;
 Not cities proud with spires and turrets
 crown'd:
 Not bays and broad-arm'd ports,
 Where, laughing at the storm, rich navies
 ride;
 Not starr'd and spangled courts, Where low-brow'd baseness wafts perfume to pride.
 No: men, high-minded men,
 With powers as far above dull brutes endued
 In forest, brake, or den,
 As beasts excel cold rocks and brambles rude;
 Men who their duties know,
 But know their rights, and, knowing,
 dare maintain,
 Prevent the long-aim'd blow,
 And crush the tyrant while they rend
 the chain:
 These constitute a state,
 And sovereign Law, that state's collected
 will,
 O'er thrones and globes elate
 Its empress, crowning good, repressing
 ill;
 Smit by her sacred frown,
 The fiend Discretion like a vapor sinks,
 And e'en the all-dazzling Crown Slides his faint rays, and at her bidding shrinks.
 Such was this heaven-loved isle,
 Than Lesbos fairer, and the Cretan
 shore!

No more shall Freedom smile?
 Shall Britons languish, and be men no
 more?
 Since all must life resign,
 Those sweet rewards, which decorate the brave,
 'Tis folly to decline,
 And steal inglorious to the silent grave.

A PERSIAN SONG OF HAFIZ.

SWEET maid, if thou would'st charm my
 sight,
 And bid these arms thy neck enfold;
 That rosy cheek, that lily hand,
 Would give thy poet more delight
 Than all Bocara's vaunted gold,
 Than all the gems of Samarcand.
 Boy, let yon liquid ruby flow,
 And bid thy pensive heart be glad,
 Whate'er the frowning zealots say:
 Tell them, their Eden cannot show
 A stream so clear as Rocnabad,
 A bower so sweet as Mosellay.
 O! when these fair perfidious maids
 Whose eyes our secret haunts infest,
 Their dear destructive charms display,
 Each glance my tender breast invades:
 And robs my wounded soul of rest,
 As Tartars seize their destined prey.
 In vain with love our bosoms glow:
 Can all our tears, can all our sighs,
 New lustre to those charms impart?
 Can cheeks, where living roses blow,
 Where nature spreads her richest dyes,
 Require the borrow'd gloss of art?

Speak not of fate: ah! change the theme,
 And talk of odors, talk of wine,
 Talk of the flowers that round us bloom:
 'Tis all a cloud, 'tis all a dream;
 To love and joy thy thoughts confine,
 Nor hope to pierce the sacred gloom.

Beauty has such resistless power,
 That even the chaste Egyptian dame
 Sigh'd for the blooming Hebrew boy:
 For her how fatal was the hour,
 When to the banks of Nilus came
 A youth so lovely and so coy!

But ah! sweet maid, my counsel hear (Youth should attend when those advise Whom long experience renders sage):

While music charms the ravish'd ear;
 While sparkling cups delight our eyes,
 Be gay, and scorn the frowns of age.

What cruel answer have I heard?
 And yet, by heaven, I love thee still:
 Can aught be cruel from thy lip?
 Yet say, how fell that bitter word
 From lips which streams of sweetness fill,
 Which nought but drops of honey sip?

Go boldly forth, my simple lay,
 Whose accents flow with artless ease,
 Like orient pearls at random strung:
 Thy notes are sweet, the damsels say:
 But oh! far sweeter, if they please
 The nymph for whom these notes are sung!

 But saving a crown, he had naething else beside.

To make the crown a pound, my Jamie gaed to sea;
 And the crown and the pound were baith for me.

He hadna been awa' a week but only twa,

When my father brak his arm, and the cow was stown awa';

My mother she fell sick, and my Jamie at the sea,

And auld Robin Gray came a-courtin'
 me.

My father couldna work, and my mother
 couldna spin;

I toiled day and night, but their bread
 I couldna win;

Auld Rob maintained them baith, and,
 wi' tears in his e'e,

Said, Jennie, for their sakes, oh marry me!

My heart it said nay; I looked for Jamie back;

But the wind it blew high, and the ship
 it was a wrack;

His ship it was a wrack — why didna
 Jamie dee?

Or why do I live to cry, Wae's me?

My father urgit sair: my mother didna
 speak;

He looked in my face till my heart was like to break :
He gie'd him my hand, but my heart was at the sea ;
Auld Robin Gray he was gudeman
to me.

Hadna been a wife a week but only four,
I'm en mournfu' as I sat on the stane at
the door,
I w my Jamie's wraith, for I couldna think it he —
He said, I'm come hame to marry
thee.

O sair, sair did we greet, and muckle did we say ;
We took but ae kiss, and I bade him gang away :
I wish that I were dead, but I'm no like to dee ;
And why was I born to say, Wae's me ?

I gang like a ghaist, and I carena to spin ;
I daurna think on Jamie, for that wad be a sin ;
But I'll do my best a gude wife aye to be,
For auld Robin Gray he is kind unto
me.

GEORGE CRABBE.

1754-1832.

[GEORGE CRABBE was born at Aldborough in Suffolk, of poor parents, on the 24th of December, 1754. He was apprenticed in his fourteenth year to a surgeon at Wickham Brook, near Bury Edmunds, and after completing his term, actually practised at Aldborough. He was not how- successful in his profession, and being reduced to great extremities, he determined to go to London, and to devote himself to literature, for which he had at an early age discovered a strong taste. For a long time he sought in vain for patronage, but was at length fortunate enough to attract the attention of Burke, through whose kindly influence The Library (1781) was favorably received by the public. In the same year he took orders, and two years later published The Village, his first submitting it to the revision of Johnson. This work at once established his reputation: instead of following up his success, for the period of twenty-four years he published but one poem, The Newspaper (1785), and devoted himself almost entirely to parish work. In 1807 appeared The Parish Register, which was succeeded in 1810 by The Borough, in 1812 by Tales in Verse, in 1819 by Tales of the Hall. This was his last poetical work, though his death did not take place till February 3, 1832, thirteen years later.]

THE VILLAGE AS IT IS.

[From The Village, Book I.]

ED are those times, when in harmonious strains,
The rustic poet praised his native plains :
The shepherds now, in smooth alternate
verse,
Describe their country's beauty, or their nymph's rehearse ;
And still for these we frame the tender
strain,
And in our lays fond Corydons complain,
And shepherd's boys their amorous pains reveal,

The only pains, alas ! they never feel.
On Mincio's banks, in Cæsar's bounteous reign,
If Tityrus found the golden age again,
Must sleepy bards the flattering dream prolong,
Mechanic echoes of the Mantuan song ?
From Truth and Nature shall we widely
stray,
Where Virgil, not where fancy, leads the way ?

No ; cast by fortune on a frowning
coast,
Which neither groves nor happy valleys
boast ;

Where other cares than those the Muse relates,
 And other shepherds dwell with other
 mates;
 By such examples taught, I paint the cot,
 As Truth will paint it and as bards will not:
 Nor you, ye poor, of lettered scorn complain,
 To you the smoothest song is smooth in
 vain;
 O'ercome by labor, and bowed down
 by time,
 Feel you the barren flattery of a rhyme?
 Can poets soothe you, when you pine
 for bread,
 By winding myrtles round your ruin'd
 shed? —
 Can their light tales your weighty griefs o'erpower,
 Or glad with airy mirth the toilsome
 hour?
 Lo! where the heath, with withering brake grown o'er,
 Lends the light turf that warms the neighboring poor;
 From thence a length of burning sand appears,
 Where the thin harvest waves its withered ears;
 Rank weeds, that every art and care defy,
 Reign o'er the land and rob the blighted rye:
 There thistles stretch their prickly arms
 afar,
 And to the ragged infant threaten war;
 There poppies nodding, mock the hope of toil;
 There the blue bugloss paints the sterile
 soil;
 Hardy and high, above the tender sheaf,
 The slimy mallow waves her silky leaf;
 O'er the young shoot the charlock throws a shade,
 And clasping tares cling round the sickly blade;
 With mingled tints the rocky coasts abound,
 And a sad splendor vainly shines
 around.

THE CONVICT'S DREAM.

[From The Borough, Letter xxii

YES! e'en in sleep the impressi
 remain,
 He hears the sentence and he fe
 chain:
 He sees the judge and jury — w shakes,
 And loudly cries "Not guilty!
 awakes:
 Then chilling tremblings o'er hi
 creep,
 Till worn-out nature is compel
 sleep.
 Now comes the dream aga shows each scene
 With each small circumstance that between,
 The call to suffering, and the
 deed —
 There crowds go with him, follo precede;
 Some heartless shout, some pi condemn,
 While he in fancied envy looks at He seems the place for that sad
 see,
 And dreams the very thirst whic will be:
 A priest attends — it seems the
 knew
 In his best days, beneath whose
 grew.
 At this his terrors take a sudder
 He sees his native village with d
 The home, the chamber, where h arrayed
 His youthful person; where he and prayed:
 Then too the comfort he enjo
 home,
 The days of joy; the joys ther are come; —
 The hours of innocence; the tim
 Of his loved maid, when first he he took,
 And told his hope; her trembl
 appears,
 Her forced reserve and his ret
 fears.

All now is present; 'tis a moment's gleam, former sunshine — stay delightful dream!
 At them within his pleasant garden walk,
 Give him her arm, of blessings let them talk.
 Yes! all are with him now, and all the while
 His early prospects and his Fanny's smile:
 When come his sister and his village friend,
 And he will now the sweetest moments spend
 He has to yield; — No! never will he find Gain on earth such pleasure in his mind:
 He goes through shrubby walks these friends among,
 We in their looks and honor on the tongue:
 Why, there's a charm beyond what nature shows,
 The bloom is softer and more sweetly glows.
 Urged by no crime and urged by no desire
 More than true and honest hearts require,
 They feel the calm delight, and thus proceed
 Through the green lane — then linger in the mead;
 They o'er the heath in all its purple bloom,
 And pluck the blossoms where the wild bees hum;
 When through the broomy bound with ease they pass,
 And press the sandy sheep-walk's slender grass,
 Here dwarfish flowers among the gorse are spread,
 And the lamb browses by the linnet's bed;
 When 'cross the bounding brook they make their way
 Over its rough bridge — and there behold the bay!

The ocean smiling to the fervid sun —
 The waves that faintly fall and slowly run —
 The ships at distance and the boats at hand;
 And now they walk upon the seaside sand,
 Counting the number and what kind they be,
 Ships softly sinking in the sleepy sea;
 Now arm in arm, now parted, they behold
 The glittering waters on the shingles rolled;
 The timid girls, half dreading their design,
 Dip the small foot in the retarded brine,
 And search for crimson weeds, which spreading flow,
 Or lie like pictures on the sand below;
 With all those bright red pebbles, that the sun
 Through the small waves so softly shines upon.
 And those live lucid jellies which the eye Delights to trace as they swim glittering by:
 Pearl shells and rubied star-fish they admire,
 And will arrange above the parlor fire —
 Tokens of bliss! Oh! horrible! a wave
 Roars as it rises — Save me, Edward! save!
 She cries: — Alas! the watchman on his way
 Calls, and lets in — truth, terror, and the day!

STROLLING PLAYERS.

[From The Borough, Letter xii.]

SAD happy race! Soon raised and soon depressed,
 Your days all passed in jeopardy and jest;
 Poor without prudence, with afflictions vain,
 Not warned by misery, not enriched by gain:
 Whom justice, pitying, chides from place to place,

A wandering, careless, wretched, merry
 race,
 Who cheerful looks assume, and play the parts
 Of happy rovers with repining hearts;
 Then cast off care, and, in the mimic
 pain
 Of tragic woe, feel spirits light and vain, Distress and hope—the mind's, the body's, wear,
 The man's affliction and the actor's
 tear:
 Alternate times of fasting and excess
 Are yours, ye smiling children of distress.
 Slaves though ye be, your wandering freedom seems,
 And with your varying views and restless schemes,
 Your griefs are transient, as your joys are dreams.

THE FOUNDER OF THE ALMS-
 HOUSE.

[From The Borough, Letter xiii.]

LEAVE now our streets, and in yon plain behold
 Those pleasant seats for the reduced and old;
 A merchant's gift, whose wife and children died;
 When he to saving all his powers applied;
 He wore his coat till bare was every thread,
 And with the meanest fare his body fed.
 He had a female cousin, who with care Walked in his steps, and learned of him to spare;
 With emulation and success they strove,
 Improving still, still seeking to improve,
 As if that useful knowledge they would
 gain—
 How little food would human life sus-tain:
 No pauper came their table's crumbs to crave;
 Scraping they lived, but not a scrap they gave:

When beggars saw the frugal man
 pass,
 It moved their pity and they said ' Hard is thy fate, my brother," and felt
 A beggar's pride as they that pity
 The dogs, who learn of man to the poor,
 Barked him away from every
 door;
 While they who saw him bar thought him rich,
 To show respect or scorn they knew which.

But while our merchant seen base and mean,
 He had his wanderings, sometimes
 unseen;
 To scenes of various woe he went,
 And serious sums in healing spent;
 Oft has he cheered the wretched rate
 For which he daily might have dis-plate;
 He has been seen—his hair all
 white,
 Shaking and shivering—as he sat
 night,
 To feed unenvied on his still delicious
 A twofold taste he had; to give spare,
 Both were his duties, and had
 care,
 It was his joy to sit at home and Then send a widow and her boys;
 Tears in his eyes would spite of him
 pear,
 But he from other eyes has known
 tear:
 All in a wintry night from far he
 To soothe the sorrows of a su-
 dame,
 Whose husband robb'd him, and whom he meant
 A lingering but reforming
 ment:
 Home then he walked, and for anger rise
 When fire and rushlight met his
 eyes;

tinguished, and his prayer sed
n hope, he calmly sank to Far off the petrel in the troubled way Swims with her brood, or flutters in the

spray;
She rises often, often drops again,
And sports at ease on the tempestuous
main.
High o'er the restless deep, above the reach
Of gunners' hope, vast flocks of wild duck stretch;
Far as the eye can glance on either side.
In a broad space and level line they
glide;
All in their wedge-like figures from the north
Day after day, flight after flight, go
forth.
In-shore their passage tribes of sea-gull-
urge,
And drop for prey within the sweeping surge;
Oft in the rough opposing blast they fly Far back, then turn and all their force apply,
While to the storm they give their complaining cry;
Or clap the sleek white pinion on the
breast,
And in the restless ocean dip for rest.
Darkness begins to reign; the louder
wind Appals the weak, and awes the firmer
mind;
But frights not him whom evening and the spray
In part conceal — yon prowler on his
way;
Lo, he has something seen; he runs
apace,
As if he fear'd companion in the chase;
He sees his prize, and now he turns
again,
Slowly and sorrowing — "Was your search in vain?"
Gruffly he answers, "'Tis a sorry sight!
A seaman's body: there'll be more tonight!"

CHARLES DIBDIN.

1745-1814.

[BORN at Southampton, 1745. An English actor, dramatist, and distinguished sea-singer. He was educated for the church, but going to London at the age of sixteen, he produced an opera called Shepherd's Artifice, which was brought out at Covent Garden. In 1778 he was a musical manager at Covent Garden. He wrote no less than 900 songs according to some, according to others, many of which became very popular. In 1805 he retired from public life and received a pension of £200 per annum. Died at Pentonville in 1814.]

BLOW HIGH, BLOW LOW.

BLOW high, blow low, let tempests tear,
The main-mast by the board;
My heart, with thoughts of thee, my
dear,
And love well stored,
Shall brave all danger, scorn all fear,
The roaring winds, the raging sea,
In hopes on shore
To be once more Safe moored with thee!

Aloft while mountains high we go,
The whistling winds that scud along,
And surges roaring from below,
Shall my signal be,
To think on thee;
And this shall be my song:
Blow high, blow low, &c.

And on that night when all the crew
The memory of their former lives
O'er flowing cans of flip renew,
And drink their sweethearts and their wives,
I'll heave a sigh, and think on thee;
And as the ship rolls on the sea,
The burden of my song shall be —
Blow high, blow low, &c.

THE TAR FOR ALL WEATHERS.

I SAIL'D from the Downs in the "Nancy," My jib how she smack'd through the breeze!
She's a vessel as tight to my fancy
As ever sail'd on the salt seas.
So adieu to the white cliffs of Britain,

Our girls and our dear native
For if some hard rock we should
on,
We shall never see them any
But sailors were born for all weathers
Great guns let it blow, high or low
Our duty keeps us to our tethers
And where the gale drives we
go.

When we enter'd the Straits of Gibraltar
I verily thought she'd have sunk
For the wind began so far to alter
She yaw'd just as tho' she was The squall tore the mainsail to shreds Helm a-weather, the hoarse boys
cries;

Brace the foresail athwart, she quivers,
As through the rough tempest
flies.

But sailors were born for all weathers
Great guns let it blow, high or low
Our duty keeps us to our tethers
And where the gale drives we
go.

The storm came on thicker and
As black just as pitch was the
When truly a doleful disaster Befel three poor sailors and I
Ben Buntline, Sam Shroud, and Handsail,

By a blast that came furious and Just while we were furling the net
Were every soul swept from the deck
But sailors were born for all weathers
Great guns let it blow, high or low
Our duty keeps us to our tethers
And where the gale drives we
go.

I, Sam, and Dick cried peccavi,
 I, at the risk of my neck,
 They sank down in peace to old Navy,
 At a rope, and so landed on deck.
 What would you have? We were Branded,
 Out of a fine jolly crew
 One hundred that sail'd, never Branded
 And, I think, twenty-two.
 Ships were born for all weathers,
 Guns let it blow, high or low,
 It keeps us to our tethers,
 Where the gale drives we must
 Go.

LOVELY NAN.

As the ship that under sail
 Her white bosom to the gale;
 Oh! sweet's the flowing can;
 To poise the laboring oar,
 As us to our native shore,
 The boatswain pipes the barge
 To man;
 Sailing with a favoring breeze;
 Much sweeter than all these,
 His delight — his lovely Nan.

Ode, faithful to the north,
 Of constancy the worth,
 A lesson teaches man;
 Ode, time may rust — a squall
 The binnacle and all,
 Seaman'ship do all it can;
 In worth shall higher rise:
 We shall rust, nor squalls capsize
 With and truth to lovely Nan.

At the bilboes I was penned
 Of a worthless friend,
 Every creature from me ran;
 Performing quarantine
 Or so deserted seen;
 Healed me — woman, child, or
 Man:

But though false friendship's sails were Furl'd,
 Though cut adrift by all the world,
 I'd all the world in lovely Nan.

I love my duty, love my friend,
 Love truth and merit to defend,
 To moan their loss who hazard ran;
 I love to take an honest part,
 Love beauty with a spotless heart,
 By manners love to show the man;
 To sail through life by honor's breeze:
 'Twas all along of loving these
 First made me doat on lovely Nan.

TOM BOWLING.

HERE, a sheer hulk, lies poor Tom Bowling,
 The darling of our crew;
 No more he'll hear the tempest howling,
 For Death has broach'd him to.
 His form was of the manliest beauty,
 His heart was kind and soft;
 Faithful below he did his duty,
 But now he's gone aloft.

Tom never from his word departed,
 His virtues were so rare;
 His friends were many and true-hearted,
 His Poll was kind and fair:
 And then he'd sing so blithe and jolly,
 Ah, many's the time and oft!
 But mirth is turned to melancholy,
 For Tom is gone aloft.

Yet shall poor Tom find pleasant weather,
 When He, who all commands,
 Shall give, to call life's crew together,
 The word to pipe all hands.
 Thus Death, who kings and tars dispatches,
 In vain Tom's life has doffed;
 For though his body's under hatches,
 His soul is gone aloft.

WILLIAM BLAKE.

1757-1827.

[WILLIAM BLAKE was born in London at No. 28, Broad Street, Golden Square, on the 28th November, 1757; he died in Fountain Court, Strand, on the 12th of August, 1827. His Portico Sketches were published in 1783, and the Songs of Innocence in 1787. In 1787 was also published The Book of Thel; and this was followed in 1790 by The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, in 1791 by The French Revolution, and in 1793 by The Gates of Paradise, the Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and the America. To the year 1794 belong the Europe and The Book of Urizen; in 1795 appeared The Song of Los and The Book of Ahania, and in 1804 the Jerusalem and the Milton.]

TO THE EVENING STAR.

THOU fair-haired Angel of the Evening,
Now whilst the sun rests on the mountains, light
Thy bright torch of love—thy radiant crown
Put on, and smile upon our evening
bed!
Smile on our loves; and while thou drawest the Blue curtains of the sky, scatter thy silver dew
On every flower that shuts its sweet eyes In timely sleep. Let thy West Wind sleep on The lake; speak silence with thy glimmering eyes
And wash the dusk with silver.— Soon, full soon,
Dost thou withdraw; then the wolf rages wide,
And the lion glares through the dun forest,
The fleeces of our flocks are covered with Thy sacred dew; protect them with thine influence!

SONG.

How sweet I roamed from field to field,
And tasted all the summer's pride;
Till I the Prince of Love beheld,
Who in the sunny beams did glide.
He showed me lilies for my hair,
And blushing roses for my brow;

And led me through his gardens fair,
Where all his golden pleasures grow.

With sweet May-dews my wings were wet,

And Phoebus fired my vocal rage;
He caught me in his silken net,
And shut me in his golden cage.

He loves to sit and hear me sing,
Then laughing sports and plays with
me,
Then stretches out my golden wing,
And mocks my loss of liberty.

SONG.

My silks and fine array,
My smiles and languished air,
By love are driven away;
And mournful lean Despair
Brings me yew to deck my grave:
Such end true lovers have.

His face is fair as heaven
When springing buds unfold;
Oh, why to him was't given Whose heart is wintry cold?
His breast is love's all-worshipped tomb
Where all love's pilgrims come.

Bring me an axe and spade,
Bring me a winding sheet;
When I my grave have made,
Let winds and tempest beat;
Then down I'll lie as cold as clay.
True love doth pass away!

SONG.

her come

 ing lovers dream, fancies as they pass atery glass.

he clear stream,
 he linnet's song,
 I lie and dream

 for woe,
 ing the darkened valley, melancholy.

THE MUSES.

Ida's shady brow, chambers of the East,
 s of the Sun that now
 ent melody have ceased;

Heaven ye wander fair, en corners of the Earth,
 egions of the air, e melodious winds have crystal rocks ye rove ie bosom of the sea, n many a coral grove;

 forsaking Poetry:

ou left your ancient love
 : of old enjoyed in you!
 strings do scarcely move, is forced, the notes are few.

INTRODUCTION.

[Songs of Innocence.]

wn the valleys wild, igs of pleasant glee,
 I saw a child,
 oughing said to me:—

"Pipe a song about a lamb:"
 So I piped with merry cheer.
 "Piper, pipe that song again:"
 So I piped; he wept to hear.

"Drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe, Sing thy songs of happy cheer:"
 So I sung the same again,
 While he wept with joy to hear.

"Piper, sit thee down and write In a book that all may read"—
 So he vanished from my sight;
 And I plucked a hollow reed,

And I made a rural pen,
 And I stained the water clear,
 And I wrote my happy songs,
 Every child may joy to hear.

NIGHT.

THE sun descending in the west,
 The evening star does shine;
 The birds are silent in their nest,
 And I must seek for mine.
 The moon, like a flower
 In heaven's high bower,
 With silent delight
 Sits and smiles on the night.

Farewell, green fields and happy grove,
 Where flocks have ta'en delight;
 Where lambs have nibbled, silent move
 The feet of angels bright:
 Unseen they pour blessing,
 And joy without ceasing,
 On each bud and blossom,
 On each sleeping bosom.

They look in every thoughtless nest,
 Where birds are covered warm;
 They visit caves of every beast,
 To keep them all from harm.
 If they see any weeping
 That should have been sleeping,
 They pour sleep on their head,
 And sit down by their bed

When wolves and tigers howl for prey
 They pitying stand and weep,

Seeking to drive their thirst away,
And keep them from the sheep.
But if they rush dreadful
The angels most heedful Receive each mild spirit
New worlds to inherit.

And there the lion's ruddy eyes
Shall flow with tears of gold:
And pitying the tender cries,
And walking round the fold, Saying: "Wrath by His meekness,
And by His health sickness,
Are driven away
From our immortal day.

And now beside thee, bleating lamb,
I can lie down and sleep,
Or think on Him who bore thy name,
Graze after thee, and weep.
For, washed in life's river,
My bright mane for ever Shall shine like the gold
As I guard o'er the fold."

THE LAMB.

LITTLE lamb, who made thee?
Dost thou know who made thee,
Gave thee life and bade thee feed
By the stream and o'er the mead;
Gave thee clothing of delight,
Softest clothing, woolly, bright;
Gave thee such a tender voice,
Making all the vales rejoice?

Little lamb, who made thee?
Dost thou know who made thee?

Little lamb, I'll tell thee;
Little lamb, I'll tell thee.
He is called by thy name,
For He calls himself a Lamb;
He is meek and He is mild,
He became a little child.

I a child and thou a lamb,
We are called by His name.
Little lamb, God bless thee!
Little lamb, God bless thee!

THE TIGER.

TIGER, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder, and what art,
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand? and what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? What dread grasp Dare its deadly terrors clasp?

When the stars threw down the spears,
And watered heaven with their tears,
Did He smile His work to see?
Did He who made the lamb, make
thee?

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

THE ANGEL.

I DREAMT a dream! What can mean?

And that I was a maiden queen,
Guarded by an angel mild;
Witless woe was ne'er beguiled.

And I wept both night and day,
And he wiped my tears away;
And I wept both day and night,
And hid from him my heart's delight —

"Ye banks and braes o' bonnie Doon, How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair!"

ROBERT BURNS.

1759-1796.

BURNS was born 25th January, 1759 "the hindmost year but one" of George the Third, in a cottage built by his father, two miles south of Ayr, and close to Alloway Kirk, a descriptive architecture to which his genius has lent almost as worldwide an interest as the Vaucluse a place of pilgrimage to all nations. Eldest son of William Burnes, a pure family of small farmers, market gardener and overseer of a small estate in the Ayr, and afterwards tenant of Lochlie and Mount Oliphant, small Ayrshire farms, his education which ultimately included a sound acquaintance with English grammar, mensuration, French, and a smattering of Latin. At work on his father's farm till he was twenty-three, he tried then to establish himself in business as a wine merchant, but returned in a short time to his father's house with empty pockets and a reputation hitherto blameless deteriorated by some new companionships. After the death of his father, his industry and integrity never rewarded in this life, his brother Gilbert and he Moss-gael near Mauchline (1784), which also turned out to be a bad bargain. To him in which his youthful and characteristic follies involved him, especially with the late partner in life. "Bonnie Jean," he accepted an appointment to a clerkship in the office of the point of starting on the voyage he had his footsteps turned towards Edinburgh of his volume of poems (Kilmarnock, 1786), and by the patronage, literary and financial, it immediately secured for him. With the proceeds of a second edition of the poems (1787), amounting to £500 or £600, he established himself on the farm of Dumsfries. Unsuccessful once more in this tenancy he became an excise-man to the Government, and finally in that capacity, unfortunately both for his health and for his reputation, he died in 1796.]

MARY MORISON.

O MARY, at thy window be,
It is the wish'd, the trysted hour!
Those smiles and glances let me see
That make the miser's treasure poor:
How blythely wad I hide the stoure,
A weary slave frae sun to sun,
Could I the rich reward secure,
The lovely Mary Morison.

Yestreen when to the trembling string
The dance gaed thro' the lighted ha',
To thee my fancy took its wing, —

I sat, but neither heard nor saw;
 Tho' this was fair, and that was braw,
 And yon the toast of a' the town,
 I sigh'd, and said amang them a',
 "Ye are na Mary Morison."

O Mary, canst thou wreck his peace
 Wha for thy sake wad gladly dee?
 Or canst thou break that heart of his,
 Whase only faut is loving thee?
 If love for love thou wilt nae gie,
 At least be pity to me shown;
 A thought ungentle canna be
 The thought o' Mary Morison.

HIGHLAND MARY.

YE banks and braes and streams around
 The castle o' Montgomery, Green be your woods, and fair your
 flowers,
 Your waters never drumlie!
 There simmer first unfauld her robes,
 And there the langest tarry;
 For there I took the last fareweel
 O' my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloom'd the gay green birk,
 How rich the hawthorn's blossom,
 As underneath their fragrant shade
 I clasp'd her to my bosom!
 The golden hours on angel wings
 Flew o'er me and my dearie;
 For dear to me as light and life
 Was my sweet Highland Mary.

Wi' mony a vow and lock'd embrace
 Our parting was fu' tender;
 And pledging aft to meet again,
 We tore oursels asunder;
 But, O! fell Death's untimely frost,
 That nipt my flower sae early!
 Now green's the sod, and cauld's the
 clay,
 That wraps my Highland Mary!

O pale, pale now, those rosy lips,
 I aft hae kiss'd sae fondly!

And closed for aye the sparkling glance
 That dwelt on me sae kindly;
 And mouldering now in silent dust
 That heart that lo'ed me dearly!
 But still within my bosom's core Shall live my Highland Mary.

EPISTLE TO A YOUNG FRIEND.

May, 1786.

I LANG hae thought, my youthfu' friend,
 A something to have sent you,
 Tho' it should serve nae ither end
 Than just a kind memento;
 But how the subject-theme may gang,
 Let time and chance determine;
 Perhaps it may turn out a sang,
 Perhaps turn out a sermon.

Ye'll try the world soon, my lad,
 And Andrew dear, believe me,
 Ye'll find mankind an unco squad,
 And muckle they may grieve ye:
 For care and trouble set your thought,
 Ev'n when your end's attained;
 And a' your views may come to nought,
 Where ev'ry nerve is strained.

I'll no say, men are villains a';
 The real, hardened wicked,

 It's rarely right adjusted!

 Their fate we shouldna censure,

 The lassie I lo'e best;
 There wild woods grow, and rivers row,
 And mony a hill between;
 By day and night my fancy's flight
 Is ever wi' my Jean.

I see her in the dewy flowers,
 I see her sweet and fair;

 There's not a bonnie bird that sings,

WHEN chapman billies¹ leave the stre
 And drouthy neebors, neebors meet,
 As market-days are wearing late,
 An' folk begin to tak the gate;²
 While we sit bousing at the nappy,³
 An' getting fou and unco happy,
 We thinkna on the lang Scots miles,
 The mosses, waters, slaps,⁴ and styles
 That lie between us and our hame,
 Where sits our sulky, sullen dame, Gathering her brows like gatherin'
 storm,

Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.

This truth fand honest Tam o' Shant:
 As he frae Ayr ae night did canter:
 (Auld Ayr, whom ne'er a town surpass For honest men and bonnie lasses).

O Tam! hadst thou but been sae wi-
 As ta'en thy ain wife Kate's advice!

 Despising wind, and rain, and fire;
 Whiles holding fast his gude blue bon-

 Whiles crooning o'er some auld Scots
 sonnet;
 Whiles glow'ring round wi' prudent
 cares,
 Lest bogles catch him unawares;
 Kirk Alloway was drawing nigh,
 Whare ghaists and houlets nightly cry.

By this time he was cross the ford,
 Where in the snaw the chapman smoored;²

And past the birks³ and meikle⁴ stane, Where drunken Charlie brak's neck-bane;

And thro' the whins, and by the cairn,
 Where hunters fand the murdered bairn;
 And near the thorn, aboon the well.

Whare Mungo's mither hanged hersel.
 Before him Doon pours all his floods;
 The doubling storm roar thro' the woods;
 The lightnings flash from pole to pole;
 Near and more near the thunders roll:
 When, glimmering thro' the groaning trees,

Kirk Alloway seemed in a bleeze;
 Thro' ilka bore⁵ the beams were glancing;
 And loud resounded mirth and dancing.

Inspiring bold John Barleycorn!
 What dangers thou canst make us scorn!
 Wi' tippenny, we fear nae evil;
 Wi' usquebae, we'll face the devil!

Fair play, he car'd na deils a boddle.
 But Maggie stood right sair astonished,
 Till, by the heel and hand admonished,
 She ventured forward on the light;
 And, wow! Tam saw an unco sight!
 Warlocks and witches in a dance;
 Nae cotillion brent new frae France,
 But hornpipes, jigs, strathspeys, and reels,

Put life and mettle in their heels.
 At winnock-bunker⁶ in the east,
 There sat old Nick, in shape o' beast;

To gie them music was his charge:
He screw'd the pipes and gart² them

Till roof and rafters a' did dirl. —
Coffins stood round, like open presses,
That shaw'd the dead in their last dresses;
And by some devilish cantrip⁴ slight
Each in its cauld hand held a light, —
By which heroic Tam was able To note upon the haly table,
A murderer's banes in gibbet airns;⁵
Twa span-lang, wee, unchristen'd bairns;
A thief, new-cutted frae a rape,
Wi' his last gasp his gab did gape;
Five tomahawks, wi' blude red rusted;
Five scymitars, wi' murder crusted;
A garter, which a babe had strangled;
A knife, a father's throat had mangled,
Whom his ain son o' life bereft,
The gray hairs yet stack to the heft;
Wi' mair of horrible and awfu',
Which ev'n to name wad be unlawfu'.

As Tammie glowr'd, amazed and curious,
The mirth and fun grew fast and furious:
The piper loud and louder blew;
The dancers quick and quicker flew;
They reeled, they set, they crossed, they cleekit,

Till ilka carlin swat and reekit,
And coost her duddies⁶ to the wark,

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT.

INSCRIBED TO ROBERT AIKEN, ESQ., OF AYR.

*Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
 Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
 Nor Grandeur hear, with a disdainful
 smile,
 The short but simple annals of the Poor.*
 GRAY.

My loved, my honoured, much respected
 friend!
 No mercenary bard his homage pays:
 With honest pride, I scorn each selfish
 end,
 My dearest meed, a friend's esteem and
 praise:
 To you I sing, in simple Scottish lays,
 The lowly train in life's sequestered
 scene;
 The native feelings strong, the guileless
 ways;
 What Aiken in a cottage would have
 been;
 Ah! though his worth unknown, far happier there I ween.

November chill blaws loud wi' angry
 sugh¹;
 The short'ning winter-day is near a
 close;
 The miry beasts retreating frae the pleugh;
 The black'ning trains o' craws to their repose;
 The toil-worn Cotter frae his labor goes,—
 This night his weekly moil is at an end, Collects his spades, his mattocks, and his hoes,
 Hoping the morn in ease and rest to spend,
 And weary, o'er the moor, his course does hameward bend.

At length his lonely cot appears in view,
 Beneath the shelter of an aged tree;
 Th' expectant wee-things, toddlin, stacher² thro',
 To meet their Dad, wi' flichterin³ noise an' glee.

His wee bit ingle, blinkin bonnilie,
His clean hearth-stane, his thrifty wife's
 smile,
The lispin infant prattling on his knee,
Does a' his weary carking cares beguile,
An' makes him quite forget his labor an' his toil.

Belyve,¹ the elder bairns come drapping
 in,
At service out, amang the farmers roun';²
Some ca' the pleugh, some herd, some tentie³ rin
A cannie errand to a neebor town:
Their eldest hope, their Jenny, woman
 grown,
In youthfu' bloom, love sparkling in her e'e,
Comes hame, perhaps, to show a braw
 new gown,
Or deposite her sair-won penny-fee,
To help her parents dear, if they in hardship be.

Wi' joy unfeigned brothers and sisters
 meet,
An' each for other's welfare kindly spiers:⁴
The social hours, swift-winged, unnoticed
 fleet;
Each tells the uncos⁵ that he sees or hears;
The parents, partial, eye their hopeful
 years,
Anticipation forward points the view.
The mother, wi' her needle an' her sheers,
Gars⁶ auld claes look amaist as weel's the new;
The father mixes a' wi' admonition due.

² Although the "Cotter," in the Saturday Night, is an exact copy of my father in his manners, his family devotions, and exhortations, yet the other parts of the description do not apply to our family. None of us ever were "At service out amang the neebors roun'." Instead of our depositing our "sair-won penny-fee" with our parents, my father labored hard, and lived with the most rigid economy, that he might be able to keep his children at home. — Gilbert Burns to Dr. Currie, Oct. 24, 1800.

And "Let us worship God!" he says,

They tune their hearts, by far the

The tickled ears no heart-felt raptures
raise;

Nae unison hae they with our Creator's
praise.

The priest-like father reads the sacred
page,

How Abram was the friend of God on
high;

Or Moses bade eternal warfare wage
With Amalek's ungracious progeny;

Or how the royal Bard did groaning lie
Beneath the stroke of Heaven's aveng-

Or Job's pathetic plaint, and wailing

Or rapt Isaiah's wild, seraphic fire;
Or other holy seers that tune the sacred

Perhaps the Christian volume is the theme,
How guiltless blood for guilty man was
shed;
How He, who bore in Heaven the second name,
Had not on earth whereon to lay His
head:
How His first followers and servants
sped;
The precepts sage they wrote to many a
land:

How he, who lone in Patmos banished,
Saw in the sun a mighty angel stand;
And heard great Babylon's doom pronounced by Heaven's command.

Then kneeling down, to Heaven's Eternal King,
The saint, the father, and the husband prays:
Hope "springs exulting on triumphant wing,"¹
That thus they all shall meet in future
days:
There ever bask in uncreated rays,
No more to sigh, or shed the bitter tear,
Together hymning their Creator's praise,
In such society, yet still more dear; While circling time moves round in an eternal sphere.

Compared with this, how poor Religion's
pride,
In all the pomp of method, and of art,
When men display to congregations
wide
Devotion's every grace, except the heart!
The Power, incensed, the pageant will desert,
The pompous strain, the sacerdotal

But haply, in some cottage far apart, May hear, well pleased, the language of the soul;
And in His book of life the inmates

And decks the lily fair in flowery pride Would, in the way His wisdom sees the

From scenes like these old Scotia grandeur springs,
That makes her loved at home, revered abroad:

Princes and lords are but the breath
kings;
"An honest man's the noblest work
God:"
And certes, in fair virtue's heaven
road,
The cottage leaves the palace far behind
What is a lordling's pomp? a cumbrous load, Disguising oft the wretch of human
kind,
Studied in arts of hell, in wickedness refined!

O Scotia! my dear, my native soil!
For whom my warmest wish to Heaven is sent!

Long may thy hardy sons of rustic
tongue
Be blest with health, and peace, and sweet content!

And, oh, may Heaven their simple lives prevent From luxury's contagion, weak and
vain
Then, howe'er crowns and coronets rent,

A virtuous populace may rise the wall
And stand a wall of fire around the much-loved Isle.

O Thou! who poured the patriotic That streamed thro' Wallace's undaunted
heart;

FAREWELL TO NANCY.

Ae fond kiss, and then we sever!
Ae farewell, alas, for ever!
Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge
thee!
Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.
Who shall say that fortune grieves him,
While the star of hope she leaves him?
Me, nae cheerful twinkle lights me;
Dark despair around benights me.

I'll ne'er blame my partial fancy,
Naething could resist my Nancy;
But to see her, was to love her;
Love but her, and love for ever.
Had we never loved sae kindly,
Had we never loved sae blindly,
Never met — or never parted,
We had ne'er been broken-hearted!

Fare thee weel, thou first and fairest!
Fare thee weel, thou best and dearest!
Thine be ilka joy and treasure,
Peace, enjoyment, love, and pleasure.
Ae fond kiss, and then we sever;
Ae fareweel, alas, for ever!
Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge
thee,
Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.

LAMENT OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS, ON THE APPROACH OF SPRING.

Now nature hangs her mantle green
On every blooming tree,
And spreads her sheets o' daisies white
Out o'er the grassy lea:
Now Phœbus cheers the crystal streams,
And glads the azure skies;
But nought can glad the weary wight
That fast in durance lies.

Now lav'rocks wake the merry morn,
Aloft on dewy wing;
The merle, in his noontide bow'r,
Makes woodland echoes ring;
The mavis mild wi' many a note,
Sings drowsy day to rest:

In love and freedom they rejoice,
Wi' care nor thrall opprest.

Now blooms the lily by the bank,
The primrose down the brae;
The hawthorn's budding in the glen,
And milk-white is the slae;
The meanest hind in fair Scotland
May rove their sweets amang;
But I, the Queen of a' Scotland,
Maun lie in prison strang.

I was the Queen o' bonnie France,
Where happy I hae been;
Fu' lightly rase I in the morn,
As blythe lay down at e'en:
And I'm the sovereign of Scotland,
And monie a traitor there;
Yet here I lie in foreign bands,
And never ending care.

My son! my son! may kinder stars
Upon thy fortune shine;
And may those pleasures gild thy reign,
That ne'er wad blink on mine!
God keep thee frae thy mother's faes,
Or turn their hearts to thee:
And where thou meet'st thy mother's friend
Remember him for me!

Oh! soon, to me, may summer suns
Nae mair light up the morn!
Nae mair, to me, the autumn winds Wave o'er the yellow corn!
And in the narrow house o' death
Let winter round me rave;
And the next flowers that deck the
spring
Bloom on my peaceful grave!

TO A MOUNTAIN DAISY,

ON TURNING ONE DOWN WITH THE PLOUGH, IN APRIL, 1786.

WEE, modest, crimson-tipped flow'r, Thou's met me in an evil hour;
For I maun crush amang the stoure
Thy slender stem:
To spare thee now is past my pow'r,
Thou bonnie gem.

Alas! it's no thy neebor sweet,
The bonnie Lark, companion meet!
Bending thee 'mang the dewy weet!
Wi' spreckl'd breas
When upward-springing, blythe, to gre
The purpling east.

Cauld blew the bitter-biting north
Upon thy early, humble birth;
Yet cheerfully thou glinted forth
Amid the storm,
Scarce rear'd above the parent-earth
Thy tender form.

The flaunting flow'rs our gardens yield High shelt'ring woods and wa's maushield,
But thou, beneath the random bield¹
O' clod, or stane,
Adorns the histie² stibble-field,
Unseen, alane.

There, in thy scanty mantle clad,
Thy snawy bosom sunward spread,
Thou lifts thy unassuming head
In humble guise;
But now the share uptears thy bed,
And low thou lies!

Such is the fate of artless Maid,
Sweet flow'ret of the rural shade!
By love's simplicity betray'd,
And guileless trust,
Till she, like thee, all soil'd, is laid Low i' the dust.

Such is the fate of simple Bard,
On life's rough ocean luckless starr'd!
Unskilful he to note the card
Of prudent lore,
Till billows rage, and gales blow hard,
And whelm him o'er

Such fate to suffering worth is giv'n,
Who long with wants and woes has striv'n,
By human pride or cunning driv'n
To mis'ry's brink,
Till, wrench'd of ev'ry stay but Heav'n,
He, ruin'd, sink!

THE BARD'S EPITAPH.

Is there a whim-inspired fool,
Owre fast for thought, owre hot for rule,
Owre blate to seek, owre prood to snool,
Let him draw near;
And owre this grassy heap sing dool,
And drap a tear.

Is there a Bard of rustic song,
Who, noteless, steals the crowds among
That weekly this area throng, O, pass not by!
But, with a frater-feeling strong,
Here, heave a sigh.

Is there a man whose judgment clear,
Can others teach the course to steer,
Yet runs, himself, life's mad career
Wild as the wave;
Here pause — and, thro' the starting tear,
Survey this grave.

The poor Inhabitant below
Was quick to learn, and wise to know,
And keenly felt the friendly glow,
And softer flame;
But thoughtless follies laid him low,
And stain'd his name!

Reader, attend — whether thy soul
 Soars fancy's flights beyond the pole,
 Or darkling grubs this earthly hole,
 In low pursuit;
 Know, prudent, cautious, self-control
 Is wisdom's root.

TO MARY IN HEAVEN.

THOU ling'ring star, with less'ning ray,
 Thou lov'st to greet the early morn,
 Again thou usher'st in the day
 My Mary from my soul was torn.
 O Mary! dear departed shade!
 Where is thy place of blissful rest?
 See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
 Hear'st thou the groans that rend his
 breast?

That sacred hour can I forget,
 Can I forget the hallow'd grove,
 Where by the winding Ayr we met,
 To live one day of parting love?
 Eternity will not efface
 Those records dear of transports past;
 Thy image at our last embrace;
 Ah! little thought we 'twas our last!

Ayr gurgling kiss'd his pebbled shore, O'erhung with wild woods, thick'ning
 green;
 The fragrant birch, and hawthorn hoar, Twined amorous round the raptured
 scene.
 The flowers sprang wanton to be prest,
 The birds sang love on every spray,—
 Till too, too soon, the glowing west
 Proclaim'd the speed of winged day.

Still o'er these scenes my memory
 wakes,
 And fondly broods with miser care!
 Time but th' impression deeper makes As streams their channels deeper wear.
 My Mary, dear departed shade!
 Where is thy place of blissful rest?
 See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
 Hear'st thou the groans that rend his
 breast?

FOR A' THAT, AND A' THAT.

Is there, for honest poverty,
 That hangs his head, and a' that?
 The coward-slave, we pass him by,
 And dare be poor for a' that!
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Our toils obscure, and a' that;
 The rank is but the guinea stamp
 The man's the gowd for a' that.

What tho' on hamely fare we dine,
 Wear hodden-gray and a' that;
 Gie fools their silks, and knaves their
 wine,
 A man's a man, for a' that.
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Their tinsel show, and a' that:
 The honest man, tho' ne'er sae poor,
 Is King o' men for a' that.

Ye see yon birkie, ca'd a lord,
 Wha struts, and stares, and a' that;
 Tho' hundreds worship at his word,
 He's but a coof for a' that:
 For a' that, and a' that,
 His riband, star, and a' that,
 The man, of independent mind,
 He looks and laughs at a' that.

A king can mak a belted knight,
 A marquis, duke, and a' that;
 But a honest man's aboon his might,
 Guid faith, he maunna fa' that!
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Their dignities, and a' that,
 Their pith o' sense, and pride o'
 worth,
 Are higher ranks than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may,
 As come it will for a' that,
 That sense and worth, o'er a' th
 earth,
 May bear the gree, and a' that;
 For a' that, and a' that,
 It's coming yet, for a' that;
 That man to man, the world o'er,
 Shall brother be for a' that.

AFTON WATER.

FLOW gently, sweet Afton, among the green braes,
 Flow gently, I'll sing thee a song in thy
 praise:
 My Mary's asleep by thy murmuring
 stream,
 Flow gently, sweet Afton, disturb not her dream.

Thou stock-dove whose echo resounds thro' the glen,
 Ye wild-whistling blackbirds in yon thorny den,
 Thou green-crested lapwing, thy screaming forbear;
 I charge you disturb not my slumbering
 fair.

How lofty, sweet Afton, thy neighboring hills,
 Far mark'd by the courses of clear,
 winding rills;
 There daily I wander, as noon rises
 high,
 My flocks and my Mary's sweet cot in my eye.

How pleasant thy banks and green valleys below,
 Where wild in the woodlands the primroses blow;

There, oft as the mild evening weeps over the lea,
The sweet-scented birk shades my Mary and me.

Thy crystal stream, Afton, how gently it
glides,
And winds by the cot where my Mary resides:
How wanton thy waters her snowy feet
lave,
As, gath'ring sweet flow'rets, she stems thy clear wave.

Flow gently, sweet Afton, among thy
green braes,
Flow gently, sweet river, the theme of my lays;
My Mary's asleep by thy murmuring
stream;
Flow gently, sweet Afton, disturb not
her dream.

O WERE MY LOVE YON LILAC FAIR.

O WERE my love yon lilac fair,
Wi' purple blossoms to the spring;
And I a bird to shelter there,
When wearied on my little wing:

How I wad mourn, when it was torn
By autumn wild, and winter rude!
But I wad sing on wanton wing,
When youthfu' May its bloom re-

O gin my love were yon red rose
That grows upon the castle wa',
And I mysel' a drap o' dew,

Tells bughtin-time is near, my jo;
And owsen frae the furrow'd field
Return sae dowf and wearie, O!
Down by the burn, where scented birks Wi' dew are hanging clear, my jo,
I'll meet thee on the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O!

In mirkest glen, at midnight hour,
I'd rove, and ne'er be eerie, O,
If thro' that glen I gaed to thee,
My ain kind dearie, O!
Altho' the night were ne'er sae wild,
And I were ne'er sae wearie, O,
I'd meet thee on the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O!

The hunter lo'es the morning sun,
To rouse the mountain deer, my jo;
At noon the fisher seeks the glen,
Along the burn to steer, my jo;
Gie me the hour o' gloamin' gray,
It maks my heart sae cheery, O,
To meet thee on the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O!

WILLIAM LISLE BOWLES.

1762-1850.

[THE REV. WILLIAM LISLE BOWLES was born at King's Sutton in 1762. His chief work is his Sonnets, first published in 1789. He died at Salisbury in 1850.]

THE CLIFF.

As slow I climb the cliff's ascending side, Much musing on the track of terror
 past,
 When o'er the dark wave rode the howling blast,
 Pleased I look back, and view the tranquil tide
 That laves the pebbled shores; and now the beam
 Of evening smiles on the gray battle-
 ment,
 And yon forsaken tow'r that time has rent:
 The lifted oar far off with silver gleam
 Is touched, and the hushed billows seem to sleep.
 Soothed by the scene e'en thus on sorrow's breast
 A kindred stillness steals, and bids her rest;
 Whilst sad airs stilly sigh along the
 deep,
 Like melodies that mourn upon the lyre,
 Waked by the breeze, and as they mourn, expire.

BAMBOROUGH CASTLE.

'E holy tow'rs that shade the wave-worn steep,
 Long may ye rear your aged brows
 sublime,
 Though hurrying silent by, relentless
 time assail you, and the wintry whirlwind sweep.
 Or, far from blazing grandeur's crowded
 halls,
 Here Charity has fixed her chosen
 seat;

Oft listening tearful when the wild winds beat
 With hollow bodings round your ancient walls;
 And Pity, at the dark and stormy hour
 Of midnight, when the moon is hid on high,
 Keeps her lone watch upon the topmost tow'r,
 And turns her ear to each expiring cry, Blest if her aid some fainting wretch might save,
 And snatch him cold and speechless from the grave.

EVENING.

EVENING, as slow thy placid shades
 descend,
 Veiling with gentlest touch the landscape still,
 The lonely battlement, and farthest
 hill
 And wood — I think of those that have no friend.
 Who now perhaps by melancholy led,
 From the broad blaze of day, where pleasure flaunts, Retiring, wander mid thy lonely
 haunts
 Unseen, and mark the tints that o'er thy bed
 Hang lovely; oft to musing Fancy's eye Presenting fairy vales, where the tired
 mind Might rest, beyond the murmurs of mankind,
 Nor hear the hourly moans of misery.
 Ah! beauteous views, that Hope's fair gleams the while Should smile like you, and perish as they smile!

DOVER CLIFFS.

ON these white cliffs, that calm above
 the flood Uplift their shadowy heads, and at their feet Scarce hear the surge that has for ages beat,
 Sure many a lonely wanderer has stood;
 And while the distant murmur met his ear,
 And o'er the distant billows the still eve Sailed slow, has thought of all his heart must leave
 To-morrow; of the friends he loved most dear;
 Of social scenes from which he wept to
 part.
 But if, like me, he knew how fruitless
 all
 The thoughts that would full fain the past recall;
 Soon would he quell the risings of his
 heart,
 And brave the wild winds and unhear-
 ing tide,
 The world his country, and his God his guide.

ON THE RHINE.

'Twas morn, and beauteous on the mountain's brow (Hung with the blushes of the bending vine)
 Streamed the blue light, when on the sparkling Rhine
 We bounded, and the white waves round the prow
 In murmurs parted; varying as we go, Lo! the woods open and the rocks retire;
 Some convent's ancient walls, or glistening spire
 Mid the bright landscape's tract unfolding slow.
 Here dark with furrowed aspect, like
 despair,
 Hangs the bleak cliff, there on the woodland's side

The shadowy sunshine pours its
 ing tide;
 Whilst Hope, enchanted with a s
 fair,
 Would wish to linger many a su
 day,
 Nor heeds how fast the prospec
 away.

WRITTEN AT OSTEND

How sweet the tuneful bells res peal!
 As when, at opening morn, the l
 breeze
 Breathes on the trembling s wan disease,
 So piercing to my heart their
 feel!
 And hark! with lessening cader
 they fall,
 And now along the white ar
 tide
 They fling their melancholy
 wide,
 Bidding me many a tender thought
 Of summer days, and those de
 years,
 When by my native streams, fair prime,
 The mournful magic of their n chime
 First waked my wondering childh
 tears;
 But seeming now, when all tho are o'er,
 The sounds of joy, once hea heard no more.

TO TIME.

O TIME, who knowest a lenier to lay,
 Softest on sorrow's wounds, an thence (Lulling to sad repose the sense)
 The faint pang stealest unperceive
 On thee I rest my only hopes at Wink when thou hast dried the bitter tear, flows in vain o'er all my soul

 old dear,
 look back on many a sorrow past, at life's peaceful evening with a smile —

 hour,

Sings in the sunshine of the transient
 shower,
 Forgetful, though its wings be wet the
 while.
 But ah! what ills must that poor heart
 endure,
 Who hopes from thee, and thee alone, a cure.

CHOUGH AND CROW.

ough and Crow to roost are and sits on the tree — and winds wail with feeble moan, infant charity.

 fire dances o'er the fen —
 and star sheds its ray;

 at our op'ning day.

old and nurse are fast asleep,
 and los'd is ev'ry flower;
 king tapers faintly peep,
 from my lady's bower.
 and hind with shorten'd ken,
 on their murky way:
 ye then, my merry men,
 at our op'ning day.

and, nor garner own we now, roof, nor latched door,
 our mate bound by holy vow as a good man's store.
 leads us in a gloomy den,
 night is grown our day:
 ye then, my merry men,
 use it as we may.

SONG.

THE bride she is winsome and bonny,
 Her hair it is snooded sae sleek,
 And faithfu' and kind is her Johnny,
 Yet fast fa' the tears on her cheek.
 New pearlins¹ are cause of her sorrow,
 New pearlins and plenishing too;
 The bride that has a' to borrow
 Has e'en right mickle ado.
 Woo'd and married and a'!
 Woo'd and married and a'!
 Is na' she very weel aff
 To be woo'd and married at a'?

Her mither then hastily spak,
 "The lassie is glaikit² wi' pride;
 In my pouch I had never a plack
 On the day when I was a bride.
 E'en tak to your wheel and be clever,
 And draw out your thread in the sun;
 The gear that is gifted it never Will last like the gear that is won.
 Woo'd and married and a'!
 Wi' havins and tocher³ sae sma'!
 I think ye are very weel aff

¹ finery, lace. ² silly. ³ goods and dowry.

"Toot, toot," quo' her gray-headed faither,

"She's less o' a bride than a bairn,
She's ta'en like a cout¹ frae the heather,
Wi' sense and discretion to learn.

• Half husband, I trow, and half daddy,
As humor inconstantly leans,
The chiel maun be patient and steady
That yokes wi' a mate in her teens.
A kerchief sae douce and sae neat O'er her locks that the wind used to blaw!

I'm baith like to laugh and to greet
When I think of her married at a'!"

Then out spak the wily bridegroom, Weel waled were his wordies, I ween,
"I'm rich, though my coffer be toom,² Wi' the blinks o' your bonny blue e'en.

I'm prouder o' thee by my side
Though thy ruffles or ribbons be few,
Than if Kate o' the Croft were my bride
Wi' purples and pearlins enow.
Dear and dearest of ony!
Ye're woo'd and buikit and a'!
And do ye think scorn o' your Johnny,
And grieve to be married at a'?"

She turn'd, and she blush'd, and she
smiled,
And she looked sae bashfully down;
The pride o' her heart was beguiled,
And she played wi' the sleeves o' her gown.

She twirled the tag o' her lace,
And she nipped her bodice sae blue,
Sync blinkit sae sweet in his face,
And aff like a maukin³ she flew.
Woo'd and married and a'!
Wi' Johnny to roose her and a'!
She thinks hersel very weel aff
To be woo'd and married at a'!

THE HIGHLAND SHEPHERD.

THE gowan glitters on the sward,
The lavrock's in the sky,
And Colley in my plaid keeps ward,
And time is passing by.

Oh, no! sad and slow!
I hear no welcome sound,
The shadow of our trysting bush,
It wears so slowly round.

My sheep bells tinkle frae the west,
My lambs are bleating near;
But still the sound that I lo'e best,
Alack! I canna hear.

Oh, no! sad and slow!
The shadow lingers still,
And like a lanely ghaist I stand,
And croon upon the hill.

I hear below the water roar,
The mill wi' clacking din,
And Luckey scolding frae her door,
To bring the bairnies in.

Oh, no! sad and slow!
These are nae sounds for me;
The shadow of our trysting bush,
It creeps sae drearily.

I coft yestreen, frae Chapman Tam,
A snood of bonnie blue,
And promised when our trysting cam',
To tie it round her brow!

Oh, no! sad and slow!
The time it winna pass:
The shadow of that weary thorn
Is tether'd on the grass.

O, now I see her on the way,
She's past the witches' knowe,
She's climbing up the brownie's brae;
My heart is in a lowe.

Oh, no! 'tis not so!
'Tis glamrie I ha'e seen!
The shadow of that hawthorn bush
Will move nae mair till e'en.

SAMUEL ROGERS.

1763-1855.

[SAMUEL ROGERS born at Newington Green, near London, 1763; died, 1855. An eminent English poet, son of a London banker, in whose house of business he was placed after having received an efficient private education. At the age of twenty-three his first volume of poems was produced under the title of An Ode to Superstition and other Poems; his second volume The Pleasures of Memory was given to the world in 1792. Six years later he brought out a third volume, and in 1812, fourteen years after, he published a fragment entitled Columbus. Jaqueline was put forth in 1814. Human Life in 1819, and in 1822, the poet, then sixty years of age, produced the first part of his Italy. The complete edition of this latter poem was not published until 1836, having been illustrated under his own direction by Stothard, Turner, and Prout, at a cost of 10,000. Up to his ninety-first year he wrote an occasional piece, composed, like all his works, with laborious slowness, and polished line by line into elegance.]

FROM "THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY."

Oft may the spirits of the dead descend
 To watch the silent slumbers of a friend;
 To hover round his evening-walk unseen,
 And hold sweet converse on the dusky green;
 To hail the spot where first their friendship grew,
 And heaven and nature opened to their view!
 Ah, when he trims his cheerful hearth,
 And sees
 A smiling circle emulous to please;
 Where may these gentle guests delight to dwell,
 And bless the scene they loved in life so well!
 Oh thou! with whom my heart was wont to share
 From Reason's dawn each pleasure and each care;
 With whom, alas! I fondly hoped to know
 The humble walks of happiness below;
 If thy blest nature now unites above
 An angel's pity with a brother's love,
 Still o'er my life preserve thy mild control,
 Correct my views, and elevate my soul;
 Grant me thy peace and purity of mind,
 Devout yet cheerful, active yet resigned;

Grant me, like thee, whose heart knew no disguise,
 Whose blameless wishes never aimed to rise,
 To meet the changes Time and Chance present
 With modest dignity and calm content.
 When thy last breath, ere Nature sunk
 to rest,
 Thy meek submission to thy God expressed, When thy last look, ere thought and feeling fled,
 A mingled gleam of hope and triumph
 shed,
 What to thy soul its glad assurance gave,
 Its hope in death, its triumph o'er the
 grave?
 The sweet Remembrance of unblemished
 youth,
 The still inspiring voice of Innocence
 and Truth!
 Hail, MEMORY, hail! in thy exhaust-less mine
 From age to age unnumbered treasures
 shine!
 Thought and her shadowy brood thy call obey,
 And Place and Time are subject to thy
 sway!
 Thy pleasures most we feel, when most
 alone;
 The only pleasures we can call our
 own.

Lighter than air, Hope's summer-visions
die,
If but a fleeting cloud obscure the sky;
If but a beam of sober Reason play,
Lo, Fancy's fairy frost-work melts away!
But can the wiles of Art, the grasp of
Power,
Snatch the rich relics of a well-spent
hour?
These, when the trembling spirit wings her flight,
Pour round her path a stream of living
light,
And gild those pure and perfect realms of rest
Where Virtue triumphs and her sons are blest!

FROM "ITALY."

BUT who comes,
Brushing the floor with what was once,
methinks,
A hat of ceremony? On he glides, Slip-shod, ungartered; his long suit of black Dingy, thread-bare, tho', patch by patch, renewed
Till it has almost ceased to be the same.
At length arrived, and with a shrug that pleads
"'Tis my necessity!" he stops and speaks,
Screwing a smile into his dinnerless
face.
"Blame not a Poet, Signor, for his zeal —
When all are on the wing, who would be last?
The splendor of thy name has gone before thee;
And Italy from sea to sea exults,
As well indeed she may! But I transgress.
He, who has known the weight of praise himself, Should spare another." Saying so, he laid
His sonnet, an impromptu, at my feet,

(If his, then Petrarch must have stolen it from him)
And bowed and left me; in his hollow
hand
Receiving my small tribute, a zecchine,
Unconsciously, as doctors do their fees
My omelet, and a flagon of hill-wine,
Pure as the virgin-spring, had happily Fled from all eyes; or, in a waking dream,
I might have sat as many a great man has,
And many as small, like him of San-tilane, Bartering my bread and salt for empty
praise.

Am I in Italy? Is this the Mincius?
Are those the distant turrets of Verona?
And shall I sup where Juliet at the Masque
Saw her loved Montague, and now sleeps by him?
Such questions hourly do I ask myself;
And not a stone, in a cross-way, inscribed
"To Mantua" — "To Ferrara" — but excites Surprise, and doubt, and self-congratulation.
O Italy, how beautiful thou art!
Yet I could weep — for thou art lying,
alas,
Low in the dust; and we admire thee now
As we admire the beautiful in death.
Thine was a dangerous gift, when thou wast born,
The gift of Beauty. Would thou hadst it not;
Or wert as once, awing the caitiffs vile That now beset thee, making thee their slave!
Would they had loved thee less, or feared thee more!
— But why despair? Twice hast thou lived already;
Twice shone among the nations of the
world,
As the sun shines among the lesser lights
Of heaven; and shalt again. The hour shall come,

en they who think to bind the ethereal spirit,
 o, like the eagle cowering o'er his prey, tch with quick eye, and strike and strike again ut a sinew vibrate, shall confess ir wisdom folly. Even now the flame rsts forth where once it burnt so gloriously, d, dying, left a splendor like the day, at like the day diffused itself, and still sses the earth — the light of genius,
 virtue,
 eatness in thought and act, contempt
 of death,
 d-like example. Echoes that have slept ice Athens, Lacedæmon, were Themselves, ice men invoked "By Those in Marathon!"
 rake along the Ægean; and the dead, ey of that sacred shore, have heard the call,
 id thro' the ranks, from wing to wing, are seen owing as once they were — instead of rage
 eathing deliberate valor.

FROM "HUMAN LIFE."

'HEN by a good man's grave I muse alone, ethinks an Angel sits upon the stone, ike those of old, on that thrice-hallowed night, ho sate and watched in raiment heavenly bright, and with a voice inspiring joy not fear, ay, pointing upward, "Know, He is not here;
 He is risen!"
 But the day is almost spent;

And stars are kindling in the firmament,
 To us how silent — though like ours perchance
 Busy and full of life and circumstance;
 Where some the paths of Wealth and Power pursue,
 Of Pleasure some, of Happiness a few;
 And, as the sun goes round — a sun not ours —
 While from her lap another Nature showers Gifts of her own, some from the crowd retire,
 Think on themselves, within, without inquire;
 At distance dwell on all that passes there,
 All that their world reveals of good and fair;
 And, as they wander, picturing things, like me,
 Not as they are but as they ought to be,
 Trace out the journey through their little day,
 And fondly dream an idle hour away

GINEVRA.

IF thou shouldst ever come by choice or chance
 To Modena, where still religiously Among her ancient trophies is preserved Bologna's bucket (in its chain it hangs Within the reverend tower, the Guirlandine)
 Stop at the Palace near the Reggiate, Dwelt in of old by one of the Orsini.
 Its noble gardens, terrace above terrace,
 And rich in fountains, statues, cypresses,
 Will long detain thee; thro' their arched walks,
 Dim at noon-day, discovering many a glimpse Of knights and dames, such as in old romance,
 And lovers, such as in heroic song,
 Perhaps the two, for groves were their delight,

That in the spring-time, as alone they sat,
Venturing together on a tale of love,
Read only part that day.—A summer-sun

Sets ere one half is seen; but, ere thou
go,

Enter the house — prythee, forget it not —

And look awhile upon a picture there.

'Tis of a Lady in her earliest youth,
The very last of that illustrious race,
Done by Zampieri — but I care not whom.

He, who observes it — ere he passes on,
Gazes his fill, and comes and comes
again,

That he may call it up, when far away.

She sits, inclining forward as to speak,

Her lips half-open, and her finger up,
As tho' she said "Beware!" her vest
of gold

Broidered with flowers, and clasped from head to foot,

An emerald stone in every golden clasp;

And on her brow, fairer than alabaster,
A coronet of pearls. But then her
face,

So lovely, yet so arch, so full of mirth,
The overflowings of an innocent heart—It haunts me still, tho' many a year has fled,

Like some wild melody!

Alone it hangs
Over a mouldering heir-loom, its companion,

An oaken-chest, half-eaten by the worm,

But richly carved by Anthony of Trent
With scripture-stories from the life of Christ;

A chest that came from Venice, and had held

The ducal robes of some old Ancestor.
That by the way — it may be true or false —

But don't forget the picture; and thou wilt not,

When thou hast heard the tale they told me there.

dreadful time,

An old man wandering as in quest of something,
 something he could not find — he knew not what.
 When he was gone, the house remained awhile
 rent and tenantless — then went to strangers.
 Full fifty years were past, and all forgot,
 even on an idle day, a day of search in the old lumber in the Gallery, that mouldering chest was noticed;

 Ginevra,

 ring,

AN EPISTLE TO A FRIEND.

Still must my partial pencil love to dwell
 the home-prospects of my hermit
 cell;
 the mossy pales that skirt the orchard-
 green,
 are hid by shrub-wood, there by glimpses seen;
 and the brown pathway, that, with careless flow,
 winds, and is lost among the trees below.
 All must it trace (the flattering tints forgive)
 each fleeting charm that bids the landscape live.
 Oft o'er the mead, at pleasing distance,
 pass —

Browsing the hedge by fits, the pan-niered ass;
 The idling shepherd-boy, with rude de-
 light,
 Whistling his dog to mark the pebble's
 flight;
 And in her kerchief blue the cottage-
 maid,
 With brimming pitcher from the shadowy glade.
 Far to the south a mountain vale retires, Rich in its groves, and glens, and village-spires;
 Its upland lawns, and cliffs with foliage hung,
 Its wizard-stream, nor nameless nor un-
 sung:
 And through the various year, the various day,
 What scenes of glory burst, and melt
 away!

When Christmas revels in a world of
 snow,
 And bids her berries blush, her carols
 flow;
 His spangling shower when frost the wizard flings;
 Or, borne in ether blue, on viewless
 wings,
 O'er the white pane his silvery foliage weaves,
 And gems with icicles the sheltering eaves;
 — Thy muffled friend his nectarine-wall pursues,
 What time the sun the yellow crocus woos,
 Screened from the arrowy North; and duly hies
 To meet the morning-rumor as it flies,
 To range the murmuring market-place and view
 The motley groups that faithful Teniers drew.

When Spring bursts forth in blossoms through the vale,
 And her wild music triumphs on the
 gale,
 Oft with my book I muse from stile to stile;
 Oft in my porch the listless noon beguile,

Framing loose numbers, till declining
 day
 Through the green trellis shoots a crimson ray;
 Till the west-wind leads on the twilight
 hours,
 And shakes the fragrant bells of closing
 flowers.

*DEAR IS MY LITTLE NATIVE
 VALE.*

DEAR is my little native vale,
 The ring-dove builds and murmurs
 there;
 Close by my cot she tells her tale
 To every passing villager;
 The squirrel leaps from tree to tree,
 And shells his nuts at liberty.

In orange-groves and myrtle-bowers,
 That breathe a gale of fragrance
 round,
 I charm the fairy-footed hours
 With my loved lute's romantic sound;
 Or crowns of living laurel weave
 For those that win the race at eve.

The shepherd's horn at break of day,
 The ballet danced in twilight glade,

The canzonet and roundelay
 Sung in the silent greenwood shade.
 These simple joys, that never fail,
 Shall bind me to my native vale.

A WISH.

MINE be a cot beside the hill;
 A bee-hive's hum shall soothe my ear;
 A willowy brook, that turns a mill,
 With many a fall, shall linger near.

The swallow oft, beneath my thatch,
 Shall twitter near her clay-built nest;
 Oft shall the pilgrim lift the latch,
 And share my meal, a welcome guest.

Around my ivied porch shall spring Each fragrant flower that drinks the
 dew;
 And Lucy, at her wheel, shall sing,
 In russet gown and apron blue.

The village church beneath the trees,
 Where first our marriage-vows were
 given,
 With merry peals shall swell the breeze,
 And point with taper spire to heaven.

CAROLINE OLIPHANT

(BARONESS NAIRN).

1766-1845.

[LADY NAIRN was born in 1766. Though she lived to an advanced age, dying in 1845, most of her songs were written early in life, soon after the appearance of Burns's poems in 1787. The first and only collected edition of her works appeared in 1869, but for two generations before, songs of her composing had been sung in every Scotch household and concert-room, though the name of the author was unknown. A surprising number of the most familiar Scotch songs, many of them popularly believed to have descended from remote antiquity, were written by Lady Nairn. — The Land o' the Leal, The Laird o' Cockpen, Caller Herrin, The Auld House, Hunting-Town, John Tod, W'hall be King but Charlie? Charlie is my darling, Will ye no come back again? He's ower the hills that I loe weel, I will sit in my wee croo house.] was a farmer's boy, and became through the influence of the Duke of Grafton a government writer. He wrote The Farmer's Boy, 1798; Rural Tales, 1810; Wild Flowers, and other pieces of rural life with much moral feeling and smoothness of versification, — his great fault is passion; his great excellence, the truth and reality of his delineations.]

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD.

LINES ADDRESSED TO MY CHILDREN.

of the forest shades,
 hy power, and lend thine ear;
 er trod thy lonely giades,
 : thy dark and bounding deer;

Inquiring childhood claims the verse,
 O let them not inquire in vain;
 Be with me while I thus rehearse
 The glories of thy sylvan reign.

Thy dells by wintry currents worn,
 Secluded haunts, how dear to me!
 From all but Nature's converse borne,
 No ear to hear, no eye to see.
 Their honor'd leaves the green oaks rear'd,
 And crown'd the upland's graceful swell;
 While answering through the vale was heard
 Each distant heifer's tinkling bell.

Hail, greenwood shades, that, stretching far,
 Defy e'en summer's noontide power,
 When August in his burning car Withholds the clouds, withholds the shower.
 The deep-toned low from either hill,
 Down hazel aisles and arches green (The herd's rude tracks from rill to rill), Roar'd echoing through the solemn
 scene.

From my charm'd heart the numbers
 sprung,
 Though birds had ceased the choral
 lay;
 I pour'd wild raptures from my tongue,
 And gave delicious tears their way.
 Then, darker shadows seeking still,
 Where human foot had seldom
 strayed,
 I read aloud to every hill
 Sweet Emma's love, "The Nut-brown
 Maid."

Shaking his matted mane on high,
 The gazing colt would raise his head,
 Or timorous doe would rushing fly,
 And leave to me her grassy bed;
 Where, as the azure sky appeared
 Through bowers of ever-varying form, Midst the deep gloom methought I
 heard
 The daring progress of the storm.

How would each sweeping ponderous
 bough
 Resist, when straight the whirlwind cleaves,

Dashing in strengthening eddies through
 A roaring wilderness of leaves?
 How would the prone descending
 shower
 From the green canopy rebound?
 How would the lowland torrents pour?
 How deep the pealing thunder
 sound?

But peace was there: no lightning blazed;
 No clouds obscured the face of heaven;
 Down each green opening while I gazed,
 My thoughts to you and home were
 given.
 O, tender minds! in life's gay morn,
 Some clouds must dim your coming
 day;
 Yet bootless, pride and falsehood scorn,
 And peace like this shall cheer your
 way.

Now, at the dark wood's stately side,
 Well pleased I met the sun again;
 Here fleeting fancy travell'd wide;
 My seat was destined to the main.
 For many an oak lay stretch'd at length, Whose trunks (with bark no longer sheathed)
 Had reach'd their full meridian strength
 Before your father's father breathed!

Perhaps they'll many a conflict brave
 And many a dreadful storm defy;
 Then, groaning o'er the adverse wave,
 Bring home the flag of victory.
 Go, then, proud oaks, we meet no more!
 Go, grace the scenes to me denied,
 The white cliffs round my native shore.
 And the loud ocean's swelling tide.

"Genius of the forest shades,"

OF A HIGHLAND DROVER LEAVING FROM ENGLAND.

thee-well, England: no
 er I'll roam;
 my shadow that points the
 home:
 uthern shores shall not tempt
 to stay;
 aggy's at home, and my chilat play!
 akes my bonnet sit light on
 brow,
 inews their strength and my om its glow.

Farewell, mountaineers! my companions, adieu;
 Soon, many long miles when I'm severed from you,
 I shall miss your white horns on the brink of the burn,
 And o'er the rough heaths, where you'll never return;
 But in brave English pastures you cannot complain,
 While your drover speeds back to his Maggy again.

O Tweed! gentle Tweed, as I pass your green vales,
 More than life, more than love, my tired spirit inhales;
 There, Scotland, my darling, lies full in my view,
 With her bare-footed lasses and mountains so blue;
 To the mountains away my heart bounds like the hind,
 For home is so sweet, and my Maggy so
 kind.

As day after day I still follow my course,
 And in fancy trace back every stream to its source,
 Hope cheers me up hills, where the road lies before,
 O'er hills just as high, and o'er tracks of wild moor;
 The keen polar star nightly rising to
 view;
 But Maggy's my star, just as steady and true.

O ghosts of my fathers! O heroes, look
 down!
 Fix my wandering thoughts on your deeds of renown;
 For the glory of Scotland reigns warm in my breast,
 And fortitude grows both from toil and from rest;
 May your deeds and your worth be forever in view,
 And may Maggy bear sons not unworthy of you.

Love, why do you urge me, so weary and poor?
I cannot step faster, I cannot do
more:
I've passed silver Tweed; e'en the Tay flows behind;
Yet fatigue I'll disdain; my reward I shall find;
Thou, sweet smile of innocence, thou art my prize;
And the joy that will sparkle in Maggy's blue eyes.

She'll watch to the southward; — p haps she will sigh,
That the way is so long, and the mo
tains so high;
Perhaps some huge rock in the d she may see,
And will say in her fondness, "I surely is he!"
Good wife, you're deceived: I'm far from my home;
Go, sleep, my dear Maggy, — to-mor
I'll come.

JAMES HOGG.

1770-1835.

[THE "Ettrick Shepherd," born in 1770 in Selkirkshire, where his forefathers had been at farmers for generations, was "discovered" by Sir Walter Scott very much in the same way in which Allan Cunningham was discovered by Cromek. Scott struck across him while engaged in search for The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border. The living minstrel, in this case however, was not under the necessity of passing off his own poems as relics of an older time; Scott at once recognized his talent, and gave him a helping hand. Hogg threw aside the crook for the pen, migrated to Edinburgh, and wrote for the magazines and the booksellers. He was one of the projectors of Blackwood's Magazine in 1817, and became famous as one of the interlocutors in Noctes Ambrosianæ. The Queen's Wake, on which his poetic reputation chiefly rests, was published in 1813. He died in 1835.]

THE SKY-LARK.

BIRD of the wilderness,
Blythesome and cumberless, Sweet be thy matin o'er moorland and lea!
Emblem of happiness,
Blest is thy dwelling-place —
O to abide in the desert with thee!
Wild is thy lay and loud
Far in the downy cloud,
Love gives it energy, love gave it birth.
Where, on thy dewy wing,
Where art thou journeying?
Thy lay is in heaven, thy love is on earth.

O'er fell and fountain sheen,
O'er moor and mountain green, O'er the red streamer that heralds the
day,
Over the cloudlet dim,
Over the rainbow's rim,
Musical cherub, soar, singing, away!
Then, when the gloaming comes,
Low in the heather blooms,

Sweet will thy welcome and bed of
be!
Emblem of happiness,
Blest is thy dwelling-place —
O to abide in the desert with thee!

a gruff untoward bedeman came,
idit the lion on his dame;

guardian maid, wi' the dauntss e'e,

pped a tear, and left her knee;

bonniest flower of the world lay

One-half of all the glowing world,
Where oceans rolled, and rivers ran,
To bound the aims of sinful man.
She saw a people, fierce and fell, Burst frae their bounds like fiends of
hell;

There lilies grew, and the eagle flew,
And she herked on her ravening crew, Till the cities and towers were wrapt in a blaze,

And the thunder it roared o'er the land and the seas.

The widows they wailed, and the red blood ran,

And she threatened an end to the race of man :

She never lened nor stood in awe,
Till caught by the lion's deadly paw.

Oh ! then the eagle swinked for life,
And brainyelled up a mortal strife;

But flew she north, or flew she south,
She met wi' the gowl of the lion's mouth.

KILMENY'S RETURN FROM FAIRY LAND.

WHEN seven lang years have come and
fled :

When grief was calm, and hope was
dead;

When scarce was remembered Kilmeny's
name,

Late, late in a gloamin', Kilmeny cam' hame !

And O, her beauty was fair to see,
But still and steadfast was her e'e !

Such beauty bard may never declare,
For there was no pride nor passion there;

And the soft desire of maidens' een
In that mild face could never be seen.

Her seymar was the lily flower,
And her cheek the moss-rose in the

shower :

And her voice like the distant melodie
That floats along the twilight sea.

But she loved to raik the lanely glen,
And keepit afar frae the haunts of men,

Her holy hymns unheard to sing,
To suck the flowers, and drink the spring

But, wherever her peaceful form appeared,
 The wild beasts of the hill were cheered :
 The wolf played blythely round the field,
 The lordly byson lowed and kneeled ;
 The dun-deer wooed with manner bland,
 And cowered aneath her lily hand.
 And when at even the woodlands rung,
 When hymns of other worlds she sung,
 In ecstasy of sweet devotion,
 O, then the glen was all in motion :
 The wild beasts of the forest came ;
 Broke from their bughts and faulds the tame,
 And goved around, charmed and amazed ;
 Even the dull cattle crooned and gazed,
 And murmured, and looked with anxious
 pain
 For something the mystery to explain.
 The buzzard came with the throstle-cock,
 The corby left her hous in the rock ;
 The blackbird along wi' the eagle flew ;
 The hind came tripping o'er the dew ;
 The wolf and the kid their raik began,
 And the tod, and the lamb, and the leveret ran ;
 The hawk and the hern atour them hung,
 And the merl and the mavis forhooyed their young ;
 And all in a peaceful ring were hurled :
 It was like an eve in a sinless world !

A BOY'S SONG.

WHERE the pools are bright and deep,
 Where the gray trout lies asleep,
 Up the river and o'er the lea,
 That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the blackbird sings the latest,
 Where the hawthorn blooms the sweet
 est,
 Where the nestlings chirp and flee,
 That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the mowers mow the cleanest,
 Where the hay lies thick and greenest ;
 There to trace the homeward bee,
 That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the hazel bank is steepest,
 Where the shadow falls the deepest,
 Where the clustering nuts fall free,
 That's the way for Billy and me.

Why the boys should drive away
 Little maidens from their play,
 Or love to banter and fight so well,
 That's the thing I never could tell.

But this I know, I love to play,
 Through the meadow, among the hay :
 Up the water and o'er the lea,
 That's the way for Billy and me.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

1770-1850.

[WILLIAM WORDSWORTH was born April 7, 1770, at Cockermouth, a town on the edge of the Cumberland highlands. His father was agent to Lord Lowther, and came of an old north-country stock. Both father and mother died in his boyhood: his mother first, his father when he was fourteen. He went to school in the neighborhood, at Hawkshead, and his school-days were days of much liberty, both in playing and reading. In October, 1787, he went to St. John's College, Cambridge. But he made no mark at the university, and in January, 1791, he took his degree and left Cambridge. Like many of his generation he was filled with enthusiasm for the French Revolution, and after taking his degree he resided for more than a year in France. The Reign of Terror drove him home again: he came to London, unsettled in his plans: he was in Dorsetshire (1796), then at Alfoxden in the Somersetshire Quantocks, where he saw much of S. T. Coleridge. In 1793 he published a volume of poems, and in 1798 appeared, at Bristol, the first volume of the Lyrical Ballads, intended to be a joint work of Coleridge and Wordsworth, but to which Coleridge only contributed The Ancient Mariner, and two or three other pieces. The two friends went to Germany at the end of 1798, and Wordsworth, with his sister, spent the winter at Goslar. When he returned to he also returned for good to his own northern mountains and lakes. He settled, with his Grasmere, meaning to give himself to poetical composition as the business of his life, and published the second volume of the Lyrical Ballads. In 1802 he married Mary Ansell, and finally fixed his home in the lakes, though it was not till several years afterwards that he took up his abode in the place henceforth connected with his name, Rydal Mount. In the early part of the century he was very busy. Besides shorter pieces, suggested by events or feelings of the day, he was at work from 1799 to 1805 on a poem, The Prelude, of the history and growth of his own mind, and intended to be an introduction to the greater epic poem which he was already meditating, The Recluse — in part, and only in part, The Excursion. The Excursion was published in 1814. Composition took many of the various collections published by Wordsworth, from the Lyrical Ballads in 1800 to his death. But especially his poetical efforts took the shape of the sonnet. Large collections marked the working of his thoughts and feelings on certain groups of subjects, or memorials of scenes which had interested him. He once, and early in his career, attempted drama (The Borderers, 1795-6) but with little success. From the first he took a keen interest in all political and social questions, and he was an impassioned and forcible prose writer. He was, as a long one, of steady work and much happiness. He died April 23, 1850, at Rydal

LUCY GRAY;

OR, SOLITUDE.

Had heard of Lucy Gray;
When I crossed the wild,
Went to see at break of day
That solitary child.

No comrade, Lucy knew;
It on a wide moor,
The sweetest thing that ever grew Beside a human door!

May spy the fawn at play,
Upon the green;
The sweet face of Lucy Gray
Never more be seen.

What will be a stormy night —
The town must go;
Bring a lantern, child, to light
The way through the snow."

Father, will I gladly do!
Early afternoon —
The clock has just struck two,
Under the moon."

The father raised his hook
To pick up a fagot band;
To his work; — and Lucy took
The fern in her hand.

There is the mountain roe:
With any wanton stroke
Will disperse the powdery snow,
Which rises up like smoke.

The storm came on before its time:
She wandered up and down:
And many a hill did Lucy climb;
But never reached the town.

The wretched parents all that night
Went shouting far and wide;
But there was neither sound nor sight
To serve them for a guide.

At daybreak on a hill they stood
That overlooked the moor;
And thence they saw the bridge of wood,
A furlong from the door.

And, turning homeward, now they cried,
"In heaven we all shall meet!"
— When in the snow the mother spied
The print of Lucy's feet.

Then downward from the steep hill's
Edge
They tracked the footmarks small;
And through the broken hawthorn hedge,
And by the long stone wall:

And then an open field they crossed:
The marks were still the same;
They tracked them on, nor ever lost;
And to the bridge they came.

They followed from the snowy bank
The footmarks, one by one,
Into the middle of the plank;
And further there were none!

— Yet some maintain that to this day
She is a living child;
That you may see sweet Lucy Gray
Upon the lonesome wild.

O'er rough and smooth she trips along,
And never looks behind;
And sings a solitary song
That whistles in the wind.

WE ARE SEVEN.

A SIMPLE child
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What should it know of death?

I met a little cottage girl:
She was eight years old, she said;
Her hair was thick with many a curl
That clustered round her head.

She had a rustic, woodland air,
And she was wildly clad;
Her eyes were fair, and very fair;
— Her beauty made me glad.

“Sisters and brothers, little maid,
How many may you be?”
“How many? Seven in all,” she said,
And wondering looked at me.

“And where are they? I pray you tell.”
She answered, “Seven are we;
And two of us at Conway dwell,
And two are gone to sea.

“Two of us in the churchyard lie,
My sister and my brother;
And, in the churchyard cottage, I Dwell near them with my mother.”

“You say that two at Conway dwell,
And two are gone to sea,
Yet ye are seven! — I pray you tell,
Sweet maid, how this may be?”

Then did the little maid reply, “Seven boys and girls are we;
Two of us in the churchyard lie,
Beneath the churchyard tree.”

“You run about, my little maid,
Your limbs they are alive;
If two are in the churchyard laid,
Then ye are only five.”

“Their graves are green, they may be seen,”
The little maid replied, “Twelve steps or more from my mother's door,
And they are side by side.

“My stockings there I often knit,
My kerchief there I hem;
And there upon the ground I sit —
I sit and sing to them.

“And often after sunset, Sir,
When it is light and fair,
I take my little porringer,
And eat my supper there.

“The first that died was little Jane;
In bed she moaning lay,
Till God released her of her pain:
And then she went away.

“So in the churchyard she was laid;
And all the summer dry,
Together round her grave we played,
My brother John and I.

“And when the ground was white with
snow,
And I could run and slide,
My brother John was forced to go,
And he lies by her side.”

“How many are you, then,” said I,
“If they two are in heaven?”
The little maiden did reply, “O master! we are seven.”

“But they are dead: those two are dead!
Their spirits are in heaven!”
’Twas throwing words away: for still
The little maid would have her will,
And said, “Nay, we are seven!”

LUCY.

Among the untrodden ways
 The springs of Dove,
 From there were none to praise,
 And few to love.

By a mossy stone
 Hidden from the eye!
 'Twas here, when only one Star shone in the sky.

Unknown, and few could How
 Lucy ceased to be;
 But in her grave, and, oh,
 The difference to me!

Among unknown men,
 And beyond the sea;
 And 'till I know till then How I bore to thee.

That melancholy dream!
 I quit thy shore
 Time; for still I seem
 To thee more and more.

My mountains did I feel
 Of my desire;
 Cherished turned her wheel
 In English fire.

Things showed, thy nights considered
 Where Lucy played;
 'Tis too the last green field
 Lucy's eyes surveyed.

THE DAFFODILS.

'Twas lonely as a cloud
 That hid on high o'er vales and hills,
 When once I saw a crowd,
 Small, golden daffodils,
 Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
 Dancing in the breeze.

As the stars that shine
 In deep blue on the milky way,

They stretch'd in never-ending line
 Along the margin of a bay:
 Ten thousand saw I at a glance
 Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced, but
 They
 Out-did the sparkling waves in glee:—
 A Poet could not but be gay
 In such a jocund company!
 I gazed—and gazed—but little thought What wealth the show to me had Brought;

For oft, when on my couch I lie
 In vacant or in pensive mood,
 They flash upon that inward eye
 Which is the bliss of solitude;
 And then my heart with pleasure fills,
 And dances with the daffodils.

TO THE DAISY.

With little here to do or see
 Of things that in the great world be,
 Sweet Daisy! oft I talk to thee
 For thou art worthy,
 Thou unassuming commonplace
 Of Nature, with that homely face,
 And yet with something of a grace
 Which love makes for thee!

Oft on the dappled turf at ease
 I sit and play with similes,
 Loose types of things through all Degrees,
 Thoughts of thy raising;
 And many a fond and idle name
 I give to thee, for praise or blame
 As is the humor of the game,
 While I am gazing.

A nun demure, of lowly port;
 Or sprightly maiden, of Love's court,
 In thy simplicity the sport
 Of all temptations;
 A queen in crown of rubies drest;
 A starveling in a scanty vest;
 Are all, as seems to suit thee best,
 Thy appellations.

A little Cyclops, with one eye
Staring to threaten and defy,
That thought comes next—and instantly
 The freak is over,
The shape will vanish, and behold!
A silver shield with boss of gold
That spreads itself, some fairy bold
 In fight to cover.

I see thee glittering from afar—
And then thou art a pretty star,
Not quite so fair as many are In heaven above thee!
Yet like a star, with glittering crest,
Self-poised in air thou seem'st to rest;—
May peace come never to his nest
 Who shall reprove thee!

Sweet Flower! for by that name at last
When all my reveries are past
I call thee, and to that cleave fast,
 Sweet silent Creature!
That breath'st with me in sun and air,
Do thou, as thou art wont, repair
My heart with gladness, and a share
 Of thy meek nature!

TO THE SMALL CELANDINE.

PANSIES, lilies, kingcups, daisies,
Let them live upon their praises;
Long as there's a sun that sets,
Primroses will have their glory;
Long as there are violets,
They will have a place in story:
There's a flower that shall be mine,
'Tis the little Celandine.

Eyes of some men travel far
For the finding of a star;
Up and down the heavens they go,
Men that keep a mighty rout!
I'm as great as they, I trow,
Since the day I found thee out,
Little flower!—I'll make a stir
Like a great astronomer.

Modest, yet withal an elf;
Bold, and lavish of thyself;

Since we needs must first have met
I have seen thee, high and low,
Thirty years or more, and yet
'Twas a face I did not know;
Thou hast now, go where I may,
Fifty greetings in a day.

Ere a leaf is on a bush,
In the time before the thrush
Has a thought about its nest,
Thou wilt come with half a call,
Spreading out thy glossy breast
Like a careless prodigal;
Telling tales about the sun,
When we've little warmth, or none.

Poets, vain men in their mood!
Travel with the multitude;
Never heed them; I aver
That they all are wanton wooers.
But the thrifty cottager,
Who stirs little out of doors,
Joys to spy thee near her home:
Spring is coming—thou art come!

Comfort have thou of thy merit,
Kindly, unassuming spirit!
Careless of thy neighborhood,
Thou dost show thy pleasant face
On the moor, and in the wood,
In the lane—there's not a place,
Howsoever mean it be,
But 'tis good enough for thee.

Ill befall the yellow flowers,
Children of the flaring hours!
Buttercups that will be seen,
Whether we will see or no;
Others, too, of lofty mien;
They have done as worldlings do,
Taken praise that should be thine,
Little, humble Celandine!

Prophet of delight and mirth,
Scorned and slighted upon earth;
Herald of a mighty band,
Of a joyous train ensuing,
Singing at my heart's command,
In the lanes my thoughts pursuing:
I will sing, as doth behove,
Hymns in praise of what I love!

ADMONITION TO A TRAVELLER.

Yes, there is holy pleasure in thine
eye!

—The lovely cottage in the guardian nook

Hath stirr'd thee deeply; with its own
dear brook,

Its own small pasture, almost its own
sky!

But covet not the abode — O do not sigh

As many do, repining while they look;
Intruders who would tear from Nature's book

This precious leaf with harsh impiety:

—Think what the home would be if it were thine,

Even thine, though few thy wants! — Roof, window, door,

The very flowers are sacred to the Poor,

The roses to the porch which they entwine:

Yea, all that now enchants thee, from
the day

On which it should be touch'd would melt away!

COMPOSED AT NEIDPATH CASTLE, THE PROPERTY OF LORD
QUEENSBERRY, 1803.

DEGENERATE Douglas! O the unworthy
lord!

Whom mere despite of heart could so far please

And love of havoc (for with such disease

Fame taxes him) that he could send forth word

To level with the dust a noble horde,
A brotherhood of venerable trees, Leaving an ancient dome, and towers like these

Beggar'd and outraged! — Many hearts deplored

The fate of those old trees; and oft with pain

The traveller at this day will stop and gaze

On wrongs, which Nature scarcely seems to heed:

For shelter'd places, bosoms, nooks,
and bays,

And the pure mountains, and the gentle Tweed,

And the green silent pastures, yet remain.

TO A SKY-LARK.

Up with me! up with me, into the
clouds!

For thy song, Lark, is strong;
Up with me, up with me, into the
clouds!

Singing, singing,
With all the heavens about thee ringing.

Lift me, guide me till I find
That spot which seems so to thy mind!

I have walked through wildernesses dreary,

And to-day my heart is weary;
Had I now the wings of a fairy,
Up to thee would I fly.

There is madness about thee, and joy
divine

In that song of thine;
Up with me, up with me, high and
high,

To thy banqueting-place in the sky!

Joyous as morning,
Thou art laughing and scorning;
Thou hast a nest, for thy love and thy
rest:

And, though little troubled with sloth,
Drunken Lark! thou wouldst be loth
To be such a traveller as I.

Happy, happy liver!
With a soul as strong as a mountain river,

Pouring out praise to th' Almighty Giver,
Joy and jollity be with us both!

Alas! my journey, rugged and uneven,
Through prickly moors or dusty ways must wind;
But hearing thee, or others of thy kind,
As full of gladness and as free of
heaven,
I, with my fate contented, will plod on,
And hope for higher raptures when life's day is done.

YEW-TREES.

THERE is a yew-tree, pride of Lorton
Vale,
Which to this day stands single, in the midst
Of its own darkness, as it stood of yore, Not loth to furnish weapons for the bands
Of Umfraville or Percy, ere they marched To Scotland's heaths; or those that crossed the sea
And drew their sounding bows at Azincour,
Perhaps at earlier Crecy, or at Poitiers.
Of vast circumference and gloom profound
This solitary tree! — a living thing Produced too slowly ever to decay;
Of form and aspect too magnificent To be destroyed. But worthier still of note
Are those fraternal four of Borrowdale, Joined in one solemn and capacious grove;
Huge trunks! — and each particular trunk a growth
Of intertwined fibres serpentine Up-coiling, and inveterately convolved, —
Nor uninformed with phantasy, and looks
That threaten the profane; a pillared
shade,

Upon whose grassless floor of red-brown hue,
By sheddings from the pining umbrage tinged
Perennially — beneath whose sable roof
Of doughts, as if for festal purpose, decked
With unrejoicing berries, ghostly shapes May meet at noontide — Fear and trembling Hope, Silence and Foresight — Death the skeleton
And Time the shadow, — there to celebrate,
As in a natural temple scattered o'er
With altars undisturbed of mossy stone,
United worship; or in mute repose
To lie, and listen to the mountain flood Murmuring from Glaramara's inmost caves.

TO THE CUCKOO.

OBLITHE new-comer! I have heard,
I hear thee and rejoice:
O Cuckoo! shall I call thee bird,
Or but a wandering voice?

While I am lying on the grass,
Thy loud note smites my ear!
From hill to hill it seems to pass,
At once far off and near!

I hear thee babbling to the vale
Of sunshine and of flowers;
And unto me thou bring'st a tale
Of visionary hours.

Thrice welcome, darling of the spring!
Even yet thou art to me
No bird, but an invisible thing,
A voice, a mystery.

The same whom in my school-boy days
I listened to; that cry
Which made me look a thousand ways
In bush, and tree, and sky.

thee did I often rove
 Woods and on the green;
 I wert still a hope, a love;
 I longed for, never seen!

Can I listen to thee yet;
 Upon the plain
 I stand, till I do beget
 A new time again.

A bird! the earth we pace Appears to be
 A substantial, fairy place,
 A home for thee!

A TRUE WOMAN.

A phantom of delight
 First she gleamed upon my sight;
 A apparition, sent
 A moment's ornament;
 As stars of twilight fair,
 Light's, too, her dusky hair;
 Things else about her drawn
 Day-time and the cheerful dawn
 Of shape, an image gay,
 To startle, and waylay.

For upon nearer view,
 I saw a woman too!
 Household motions light and free,
 Steps of virgin liberty;
 A place in which did meet
 Records, promises as sweet;
 Were not too bright or good
 For human nature's daily food,
 For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
 For blame, love, kisses, tears, and Smiles.

Now I see with eye serene
 The very pulse of the machine;
 A breathing thoughtful breath,
 A creature betwixt life and death;
 A strong firm, the temperate will,
 A sense, foresight, strength, and skill;
 A woman, nobly planned,
 To comfort, and command;
 And that spirit still, and bright
 A something of an angel light.

A MEMORY.

THREE years she grew in sun and
 shower,
 Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower
 On earth was never sown:
 This child I to myself will take:
 She shall be mine, and I will make A lady of my own.

"Myself will to my darling be Both law and impulse; and with me
 The girl, in rock and plain,
 In earth and heaven, in glade and bower,
 Shall feel an overseeing power
 To kindle or restrain.

"She shall be sportive as the fawn,
 That wild with glee across the lawn
 Or up the mountain springs;
 And hers shall be the breathing balm,
 And hers the silence and the calm
 Of mute insensate things.

"The floating clouds their state shall lend
 To her; for her the willow bend;
 Nor shall she fail to see E'en in the motions of the storm
 Grace that shall mould the maiden's form
 By silent sympathy.

"The stars of midnight shall be dear
 To her; and she shall lean her ear
 In many a secret place Where rivulets dance their wayward
 round,
 And beauty born of murmuring sound Shall pass into her face.

"And vital feelings of delight Shall rear her form to stately height,
 Her virgin bosom swell;
 Such thoughts to Lucy I will give While she and I together live Here in this happy dell."

Thus Nature spake. The work was done —
 How soon my Lucy's race was run!
 She died, and left to me
 This heath, this calm and quiet scene;
 The memory of what has been,
 And never more will be.

TO A HIGHLAND GIRL.

(AT INVERSNEYDE, LOCH LOMOND.)

SWEET Highland Girl, a very shower
Of beauty is thy earthly dower!
Twice seven consenting years have shed
Their utmost bounty on thy head;
And these gray rocks; this household

lawn;
These trees, a veil just half withdrawn;
This fall of water, that doth make
A murmur near the silent lake;
This little bay, a quiet road,
That holds in shelter thy abode;
In truth together ye do seem Like something fashioned in a dream;
Such forms as from their covert peep
When earthly cares are laid asleep!
Yet, dream and vision as thou art,
I bless thee with a human heart!
God shield thee to thy latest years!
I neither know thee nor thy peers;
And yet my eyes are filled with tears.

With earnest feeling I shall pray
For thee when I am far away:
For never saw I mien, or face,
In which more plainly I could trace Benignity and home-bred sense
Ripening in perfect innocence.
Here, scattered like a random seed,
Remote from men, thou dost not need
The embarrassed look of shy distress,
And maidenly shamefacedness;
Thou wearest upon thy forehead clear
The freedom of a mountaineer,
A face with gladness overspread!
Sweet looks, by human kindness bred!
And seemliness complete, that sways
Thy courtesies, about thee plays;
With no restraint, but such as springs
From quick and eager visitings
Of thoughts, that lie beyond the reach
Of thy few words of English speech;
A bondage sweetly brooked, a strife
That gives thy gestures grace and life!
So have I, not unmoved in mind,
Seen birds of tempest-loving kind,
Thus beating up against the wind.

What hand but would a garland cull
For thee, who art so beautiful?

O happy pleasure! here to dwell
Beside thee in some heathy dell;
Adopt your homely ways and dress,
A shepherd, thou a shepherdess!
But I could frame a wish for thee
More like a grave reality:
Thou art to me but as a wave
Of the wild sea; and I would have Some claim upon thee, if I could,
Though but of common neighborhood
What joy to hear thee, and to see!
Thy elder brother I would be Thy father—anything to thee!
Now thanks to Heaven! that of its

grace

Hath led me to this lonely place.
Joy have I had; and going hence
I bear away my recompense.
In spots like these it is we prize
Our memory, feel that she hath eyes;
Then, why should I be loth to stir?
I feel this place was made for her;
To give new pleasure like the past,
Continued long as life shall last.
Nor am I loth, though pleased at heart, Sweet Highland Girl! from thee to YARROW UNVISITED.

1803.

FROM Sterling Castle we had seen
The mazy Forth unravelled;
Had trod the banks of Clyde and Tay,
And with the Tweed had travelled;
And, when we came to Clovenford,
Then said my "winsome Marrow," "Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside,
And see the Braes of Yarrow."

"Let Yarrow folk, frae Selkirk town,
Who have been buying, selling,
Go back to Yarrow, 'tis their own,
Each maiden to her dwelling!
On Yarrow's banks let herons feed, Hares couch, and rabbits burrow!

ll downwards with the Tweed, side to Yarrow.

Galla Water, Leader Haughs, right before us;
burgh, where with chiming
reed
hites sing in chorus;
asant Teviotdale, a land
he with plough and harrow;
w away a needful day search of Yarrow?

Yarrow but a river bare,
as the dark hills under?
a thousand such elsewhere of your wonder."
e words they seemed of slight d scorn;
ove sighed for sorrow;
ed me in the face, to think uld speak of Yarrow!

een," said I, "are Yarrow's lms,

"If care with freezing years should come,
And wandering seem but folly, —
Should we be loth to stir from home,
And yet be melancholy;
Should life be dull, and spirits low,
'Twill soothe us in our sorrow
That earth has something yet to show

YARROW VISITED.

September, 1814.

AND is this Yarrow? — this the stream
Of which my fancy cherished
So faithfully, a waking dream?
An image that hath perished!
O that some minstrel's harp were near,
To utter notes of gladness,
And chase this silence from the air,
That fills my heart with sadness!

Yet why? — a silvery current flows
With uncontrolled meanderings;
Nor have these eyes by greener hills
Been soothed, in all my wanderings.
And, through her depths, Saint Mary's
Lake
Is visibly delighted;
For not a feature of those hills
Is in the mirror slighted.

A blue sky bends o'er Yarrow Vale,
Save where that pearly whiteness
Is round the rising sun diffused,
A tender hazy brightness;
Mild dawn of promise! that excludes
All profitless dejection;
Though not unwilling here to admit
A pensive recollection.

Where was it that the famous flower
Of Yarrow Vale lay bleeding?
His bed perchance was yon smooth mound
On which the herd is feeding:
And haply from this crystal pool,
Now peaceful as the morning,
The water-wraith ascended thrice,
And gave his doleful warning.

Delicious is the lay that sings
 The haunts of happy lovers,
 The path that leads them to the grove,
 The leafy grove that covers:
 And pity sanctifies the verse
 That paints, by strength of sorrow,
 The unconquerable strength of love;
 Bear witness, rueful Yarrow!

But thou, that didst appear so fair
 To fond imagination,
 Dost rival in the light of day
 Her delicate creation:
 Meek loveliness is round thee spread,
 A softness still and holy;
 The grace of forest charms decayed,
 And pastoral melancholy.

That region left, the vale unfolds Rich groves of lofty stature,
 With Yarrow winding through the pomp
 Of cultivated nature;
 And, rising from those lofty groves,
 Behold a ruin hoary!
 The shattered front of Newark's towers Renowned in border story.

Fair scenes for childhood's opening
 bloom,
 For sportive youth to stray in;
 For manhood to enjoy his strength;
 And age to wear away in!
 Yon cottage seems a bower of bliss,
 It promises protection
 To studious ease, and generous cares,
 And every chaste affection!

How sweet on this autumnal day,
 The wild wood's fruits to gather,
 And on my true love's forehead plant
 A crest of blooming heather!
 And what if I enwreathed my own!
 'Twere no offence to reason;
 The sober hills thus deck their brows
 To meet the wintry season.

I see — but not by sight alone,
 Loved Yarrow, have I won thee;
 A ray of fancy still survives —
 Her sunshine plays upon thee!
 Thy ever youthful waters keep
 A course of lively pleasure;

And gladsome notes my lips can breathe
 Accordant to the measure.

The vapors linger round the heights,
 They melt — and soon must vanish;
 One hour is theirs, no more is mine —
 Sad thought! which I would banish,
 But that I know, where'er I go,
 Thy genuine image, Yarrow!
 Will dwell with me — to heighten joy,
 And cheer my mind in sorrow.

A POET'S EPITAPH.

ART thou a statist, in the van
 Of public business trained and bred?
 — First learn to love one living man!
 Then mayst thou think upon the dead.

A lawyer art thou? — draw not nigh;
 Go, carry to some other place
 The hardness of thy coward eye,
 The falsehood of thy sallow face.

Art thou a man of purple cheer,
 A rosy man, right plump to see?
 Approach; yet, doctor, not too near;
 This grave no cushion is for thee.

Art thou a man of gallant pride,
 A soldier, and no man of chaff?
 Welcome! — but lay thy sword aside,
 And lean upon a peasant's staff.

Physician art thou? One, all eyes,
 Philosopher! a fingering slave,
 One that would peep and botanize
 Upon his mother's grave?

Wrapt closely in thy sensual fleece,
 O turn aside, — and take, I pray,
 That he below may rest in peace,
 That abject thing, thy soul, away.

— A moralist perchance appears;
 Led, Heaven knows how, to this post-sod;
 And he has neither eyes nor ears;
 Himself his world, and his own God;

ODE TO DUTY.

daughter of the voice of God!
 if that name thou love a light to guide, a rod
 : the erring, and reprove;

Thou who art victory and law
 When empty terrors overawe;
 From vain temptations dost set free;
 And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity!

There are who ask not if thine eye
 Be on them; who, in love and truth,
 Where no misgiving is, rely Upon the genial sense of youth:
 Glad hearts! without reproach or blot;
 Who do thy work, and know it not:
 May joy be theirs while life shall last!
 And thou, if they should totter, teach them to stand fast!

Serene will be our days and bright,
 And happy will our nature be,
 When love is an unerring light,
 And joy its own security.
 And blest are they who in the main
 This faith, even now, do entertain:
 Live in the spirit of this creed; Yet find that other strength, according to their need.

I, loving freedom, and untried;
 No sport of every random gust,
 Yet being to myself a guide,
 Too blindly have reposed my trust;
 Full oft, when in my heart was heard Thy timely mandate, I deferred
 The task imposed, from day to day;
 But thee I now would serve more strictly, if I may.

Through no disturbance of my soul,
 Or strong compunction in me wrought,
 I supplicate for thy control;
 But in the quietness of thought;
 Me this unchartered freedom tires;
 I feel the weight of chance desires:
 My hopes no more must change their
 name,
 I long for a repose which ever is the same.

Stern lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
 The Godhead's most benignant grace;
 Nor know we anything so fair
 As is the smile upon thy face;
 Flowers laugh before thee on their beds;

And fragrance in thy footing treads;
Thou dost preserve the stars from wrong;
And the most ancient heavens, through thee, are fresh and strong.

To humbler functions, awful power!
I call thee: I myself commend Unto thy guidance from this hour;
Oh! let my weakness have an end!
Give unto me, made lowly wise,
The spirit of self-sacrifice;
The confidence of reason give;
And, in the light of truth, thy bondman let me live!

PERSONAL TALK.

I.

I AM not one who much or oft delight
To season my fireside with personal talk, —
Of friends who live within an easy walk,
Or neighbors daily, weekly, in my sight:
And, for my chance acquaintance, ladies
bright,
Sons, mothers, maidens withering on the stalk;
These all wear out of me, like forms with chalk Painted on rich men's floors for one feast-night.
Better than such discourse doth silence
long,
Long, barren silence, square with my desire;
To sit without emotion, hope, or aim,
In the loved presence of my cottage fire,
And listen to the flapping of the flame,
Or kettle, whispering its faint undersong.

II.

'Yet life,' you say, 'is life; we have seen and see,
And with a living pleasure we describe;
And fits of sprightly malice do but bribe
The languid mind into activity.
Sound sense, and love itself, and mirth and glee,

Are fostered by the comment and the gibe."

E'en be it so; yet still, among your tribe,
Our daily world's true worldlings, rank not me!

Children are blest, and powerful; their world lies

More justly balanced; partly at their feet

And part far from them: sweetest melodies

Are those that are by distance made more sweet.

Whose mind is but the mind of his own
eyes,

He is a slave — the meanest we can meet!

III.

Wings have we — and as far as we can
go

We may find pleasure: wilderness and
wood,

Blank ocean and mere sky, support that mood

Which, with the lofty, sanctifies the low; Dreams, books, are each a world; and books, we know,

Are a substantial world, both pure and

good:
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,

Our pastime and our happiness will

grow.
There do I find a never-failing store

Of personal themes, and such as I love
best;

Matter wherein right voluble I am;
Two will I mention, dearer than the rest:

The gentle lady married to the Moor;
And heavenly Una, with her milk-white lamb.

IV.

Nor can I not believe but that hereby Great gains are mine; for thus I live remote

From evil-speaking; rancour, never sought,

Comes to me not; malignant truth or

lie.
Hence have I genial seasons, hence have I

Smooth passions, smooth discourse, and joyous thought:
And thus, from day to day, my little boat
Rocks in its harbor, lodging peaceably.
Blessings be with them — and eternal
praise,
Who gave us nobler loves, and nobler
cares,
The poets — who on earth have made us heirs
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!
Oh! might my name be numbered among theirs,
Then gladly would I end my mortal
days.

INVOCATION TO THE EARTH.

February, 1816.

"REST, rest, perturbed Earth!
O rest, thou doleful mother of man-
kind!"
A spirit sang in tones more plaintive than the wind;
"From regions where no evil thing has birth
I come — thy stains to wash away,
Thy cherished fetters to unbind,
To open thy sad eyes upon a milder
day!
— The heavens are thronged with martyrs that have risen
From out thy noisome prison;
The penal caverns groan
With tens of thousands rent from off
the tree
Of hopeful life, — by battle's whirlwind blown
Into the deserts of Eternity.
Unpitied havoc — victims unlamented!
But not on high where madness is resented,
And murder causes some sad tears to
flow,
Though, from the widely-sweeping
blow,
The choirs of angels spread triumphantly augmented.

"False parent of mankind!
Obdurate, proud, and blind,
I sprinkle thee with soft celestial dews,
Thy lost maternal heart to reinfuse!
Scattering this far-fetched moisture from my wings,
Upon the act a blessing I implore,
Of which the rivers in their secret
springs,
The rivers stained so oft with human
gore,
Are conscious; — may the like return
no more!
May Discord — for a seraph's care Shall be attended with a bolder
prayer —
May she, who once disturbed the seats of bliss,
These mortal spheres above,
Be chained for ever to the black
abyss!
And thou, O rescued Earth, by peace and love,
And merciful desires, thy sanctity approve!"

The spirit ended his mysterious rite,
And the pure vision closed in darkness infinite.

CONSOLATIONS AMIDST EARTHLY CHANGE.

[The Excursion, Book IV.]

POSSESSIONS vanish, and opinions
change,
And passions hold a fluctuating seat:
But, by the storms of circumstance unshaken,
And subject neither to eclipse nor wane,
Duty exists; — immutably survive,
For our support, the measures and the forms,
Which an abstract intelligence supplies, Whose kingdom is where time and space are not:
Of other converse, which mind, soul,
and heart,
Do, with united urgency, require,

What more, that may not perish? Thou dread Source, Prime, self-existing Cause and End of
 all,
 That in the scale of being fill their place,
 Above our human region, or below,
 Set and sustained; — Thou — who did'st wrap the cloud
 Of infancy around us, that thyself,
 Therein, with our simplicity awhile Might'st hold, on earth, communion undisturbed —
 Who, from the anarchy of dreaming
 sleep,
 Or from its death-like void, with punctual care,
 And touch as gentle as the morning
 light,
 Restorest us, daily, to the powers of
 sense,
 And reason's steadfast rule — Thou, thou alone
 Art everlasting, and the blessed spirits Which thou includest, as the sea her waves:
 For adoration thou endurest; endure
 For consciousness the motions of thy
 will;
 For apprehension those transcendent truths
 Of the pure Intellect, that stand as laws (Submission constituting strength and power)
 Even to thy being's infinite majesty!
 This universe shall pass away — a work, Glorious! because the shadow of thy
 might,
 A step, or link, for intercourse with
 thee.
 Ah! if the time must come, in which my feet
 No more shall stray where meditation leads,
 By flowing stream, through wood, or craggy wild,
 Loved haunts like these, the un-imprisoned mind
 May yet have scope to range among
 her own,
 Her thoughts, her images, her high desires.
 If the dear faculty of sight should fail,

Still it may be allowed me to re-
 What visionary powers of eye and In youth were mine; when station the top
 Of some huge hill — expectant, I
 The sun rise up, from distant cl turned,
 Darkness to chase, and sleep, and
 the day
 His bounteous gift! or saw him,
 the deep,
 Sink — with a retinue of flaming Attended; then my spirit was en
 With joy exalted to beatitude;
 The measure of my soul was fill
 bliss,
 And holiest love; as earth, so with light,
 With pomp, with glory, with incence!

NATURE WORSHIPPED BY GREEKS.

[The Excursion, Book IV.]

— IN that fair clime, the lonely man, stretched
 On the soft grass, through hall mer's day,
 With music lulled his indolent re-
 And, in some fit of weariness, if When his own breath was chanced to hear A distant strain, far sweeter than sounds
 Which his poor skill could not fancy fetched,
 Even from the blazing chariot
 sun,
 A beardless youth, who touched golden lute,
 And filled the illumined grove ravishment.
 The nightly hunter, lifting up his Towards the crescent moon, with ful heart
 Called on the lovely wanderer
 stowed
 That timely light, to share his sport:

Her bosom heaves and spreads, her stature grows;
And she expects the issue in repose.

O terror! what hath she perceived? — O joy!
What doth she look on? — whom doth she behold?
Her Hero slain upon the beach of Troy?
His vital presence? his corporeal mould?
It is — if sense deceive her not — 'tis he!
And a god leads him — winged Mercury!

Mild Hermes spake — and touched her with his wand
That calms all fear: "Such grace hath crowned thy prayer,
Laodamia! that at Jove's command Thy Husband walks the paths of upper
air:
He comes to tarry with thee three hours' space;
Accept the gift, behold him face to
face!"

Forth sprang the impassioned Queen her Lord to clasp:
Again that consummation she essayed:
But unsubstantial Form eludes her grasp
As often as that eager grasp was made.
The Phantom parts — but parts to reunite,
And reassume his place before her
sight.

"Protesilaus, lo! thy guide is gone!
Confirm, I pray, the vision with thy
voice:
This is our palace, — yonder is thy
throne;
Speak, and the floor thou tread'st on will rejoice.
Not to appal me have the gods bestowed
This precious boon; and blest a sad abode."

Great Jove, Laodamia! doth not leave

His gifts imperfect: — Spectre though I be,
I am not sent to scare thee or deceive;
But in reward of thy fidelity.
And something also did my worth obtain;
For fearless virtue bringeth boundless
gain.

Thou knowest, the Delphic oracle fore told
That the first Greek who touched the Trojan strand Should die; but me the threat could not withhold:
A generous cause a victim did demand;
And forth I leapt upon the sandy plain;
A self-devoted chief — by Hector slain."

"Supreme of Heroes — bravest, noblest,
best!
Thy matchless courage I bewail no
more,
Which then, when tens of thousands were deprest
By doubt, propelled thee to the fatal
shore;
Thou found'st — and I forgive thee — here thou art —
A nobler counsellor than my poor heart.

But thou, though capable of sternest
deed,
Wert kind as resolute, and good as brave;
And he, whose power restores thee, hath decreed Thou should'st elude the malice of the
grave;
Redundant are thy locks, thy lips as
fair
As when their breath enriched Thessa-lian air.

No Spectre greets me, — no vain Shadow
this:
Come, blooming Hero, place thee by my side!
Give, on this well-known couch, one nuptial kiss
To me, this day, a second time thy bride!"

Jove frowned in heaven: the conscious Parca threw
 Upon those roseate lips a Stygian hue.

"This visage tells thee that my doom is
 past:
 Nor should the change be mourned even if the joys
 Of sense were able to return as fast
 And surely as they vanish. Earth destroys
 Those raptures duly — Erebus disdains:
 Calm pleasures there abide — majestic pains.

Be taught, O faithful Consort, to control
 Rebellious passion; for the Gods approve
 The depth, and not the tumult, of the
 soul;
 A fervent, not ungovernable, love.
 Thy transports moderate; and meekly
 mourn
 When I depart, for brief is my sojourn —"

"Ah, wherefore? — Did not Hercules by force Wrest from the guardian Monster of the tomb
 Alceſtis, a reanimated corse, Given back to dwell on earth in vernal
 bloom?
 Medea's spells dispersed the weight of
 years,
 And Aſon stood a youth 'mid youthful peers.

The Gods to us are merciful — and they
 Yet further may relent: for mightier far Than strength of nerve and sinew, or the sway
 Of magic potent over sun and star,
 Is love, though oft to agony distressed,
 And though his favorite seat be feeble woman's breast.

But if thou goest, I follow — "Peace!"
 he said, —
 She looked upon him and was calmed and cheered;

 The ghastly color from his lips had fled;
 In his deportment, shape, and mien, appeared
 Elysian beauty — melancholy grace — Brought from a pensive though a happy
 place.

He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel
 In worlds whose course is equable and
 pure;
 No fears to beat away — no strife to heal —
 The past unsigh'd for, and the future
 sure;
 Spake of heroic hearts in graver mood
 Revived, with finer harmony pursued;

Of all that is most beautiful — imaged
 there
 In happier beauty; more pellucid streams,
 An ampler ether, a diviner air,
 And fields invested with purpureal gleams;
 Climes which the sun, who sheds the brightest day
 Earth knows, is all unworthy to survey.

Yet there the Soul shall enter which hath earned
 That privilege by virtue. — "Ill," said he,
 "The end of man's existence I discerned,
 Who from ignoble games and revelry Could draw, when we had parted, vain
 delight,
 While tears were thy best pastime, day
 and night:

"And while my youthful peers before my eyes
 (Each here following his peculiar bent) Prepared themselves for glorious enterprise
 By martial sports, — or, seated in the tent,
 Chieftains and kings in council were detained;
 What time the fleet at Aulis lay en-chained.

"The wish'd-for wind was given: — I then revolved

The oracle, upon the silent sea;
And, if no worthier led the way, resolved That, of a thousand vessels, mine should
be

The foremost prow in pressing to the strand, —

Mine the first blood that tinged the Trojan sand.

"Yet bitter, oft-times bitter, was the pang

When of thy loss I thought, beloved Wife!

On thee too fondly did my memory hang,
And on the joys we shared in mortal
life, —

The paths which we had trod — these fountains, flowers;

My new-planned cities, and unfinished towers.

"But should suspense permit the Foe to cry,

'Behold, they tremble! — haughty their
array,

Yet of their number no one dares to
die?'

In soul I swept the indignity away:
Old frailties then recurred: — but lofty
thought

In act embodied, my deliverance
wrought.

"And Thou, though strong in love, art all too weak

In reason, in self-government too slow;
I counsel thee by fortitude to seek

Our blest re-union in the shades below.
The invisible world with thee hath sym-pathized:

Be thy affections raised and solemnized.

"Learn, by a mortal yearning, to ascend —

Seeking a higher object. Love was
given,

Encouraged, sanctioned, chiefly for that
end;

For this the passion to excess was driven —

That self might be annulled; her bondage prove

The fetters of a dream, opposed to
love." —

Aloud she shrieked! for Hermes reappears!

Round the dear Shade she would have clung — 'tis vain.

The hours are past — too brief had they been years;

And him no mortal effort can detain:
Swift, toward the realms that know not earthly day,

He through the portal takes his silent

way,
And on the palace-floor a lifeless corse she lay.

By no weak pity might the Gods be moved;

She who thus perished, not without the crime

Of lovers that in reason's spite have loved,

Was doomed to wear out her appointed
time,

Apart from happy Ghosts — that gather
flowers

Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.

— Yet tears to human suffering are due,

And mortal hopes defeated and o'er-
thrown

Are mourned by man, and not by man
alone,

As fondly he believes. — Upon the side Of Hellespont (such faith was entertained)

A knot of spiry trees for ages grew From out the tomb of him for whom she

died;

And ever, when such stature they had gained

That Ilium's walls were subject to their
view,

The trees' tall summits withered at the
sight;

A constant interchange of growth and blight!

SONNETS.

THE USES AND BEAUTIES OF THE SONNET.

NUNS fret not at their convent's narrow
room;
And hermits are contented with their cells;
And students with their pensive citadels;
Maids at the wheel, the weaver at his
loom,
Sit blithe and happy; bees that soar for
bloom,
High as the highest peak of Furness Fells,
Will murmur by the hour in foxglove
bells:
In truth, the prison, unto which we doom Ourselves, no prison is: and hence to
me,
In sundry moods, 'twas pastime to be bound Within the Sonnet's scanty plot of
ground:
Pleased if some souls (for such there needs must be)
Who have felt the weight of too much liberty,
Should find short solace there, as I have found.

UPON THE SIGHT OF A BEAU-TIFUL PICTURE.

PRAISED be the art whose subtle power could stay
Yon cloud, and fix it in that glorious
shape;
Nor would permit the thin smoke to escape,
Nor those bright sunbeams to forsake
the day;
Which stopped that band of travellers on their way
Ere they were lost within the shady
wood;

And showed the bark upon the glassy flood
For ever anchored in her sheltering bay.
Soul-soothing art! which morning, noon-tide, even,
Do serve with all their changeful pageantry!
Thou, with ambition modest yet sublime,
Here, for the sight of mortal man hast
given
To one brief moment, caught from fleeing time,
The appropriate calm of blest eternity.

TWILIGHT.

HAIL Twilight, sovereign of one peaceful hour!
Not dull art thou as undiscerning Night;
But studious only to remove from sight Day's mutable distinctions. Ancient
power!
Thus did the waters gleam, the mountains lower
To the rude Briton, when, in wolf-skin vest
Here roving wild, he laid him down to rest
On the bare rock, or through a leafy bower Looked ere his eyes were closed. By him was seen
The selfsame vision which we now be-
hold,
At thy meek bidding, shadowy power,
brought forth;
These mightier barriers, and the gulf
between;
The floods, — the stars; a spectacle as
old
As the beginning of the heavens and earth!

THE SHIP.

WHERE lies the land to which yon ship must go?
Festively she puts forth in trim array;

vigorous as a lark at break of day:
 for tropic suns, or polar snow?
 it boots the inquiry? Neither friend nor foe cares for; let her travel where she
 may,
 finds familiar names, a beaten way before her, and a wind to blow.
 still I ask, what haven is her mark? almost as it was when ships were
 rare,
 from time to time, like pilgrims, here and there crossing the waters) doubt, and something dark,
 the old sea some reverential fear, with me at thy farewell, joyous bark!

WOODLAND WALKS.

how sweet it is, when mother Fancy rocks
 : wayward brain, to saunter through a wood!
 old place, full of many a lovely
 brood,
 in trees, green arbors, and ground flowers in flocks;
 in wild rose tiptoe upon hawthorn stocks,
 e to a bonny lass, who plays her pranks wakes and fairs with wandering mountebanks, — when she stands cresting the clown's head, and mocks the crowd beneath her. Verily I think,
 this place to me is sometimes like a dream
 map of the whole world: thoughts, link by link,
 enter through ears and eyesight, with such gleam all things, that at last in fear I shrink,
 and leap at once from the delicious
 stream.

TO SLEEP.

I.

A FLOCK of sheep that leisurely pass by,
 One after one; the sound of rain, and bees Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
 Smooth fields, white sheets of water,
 and pure sky;
 I've thought of all by turns; and still I
 lie
 Sleepless; and soon the small birds' melodies
 Must hear, first uttered from my orchard
 trees;
 And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.
 Even thus last night, and two nights more, I lay,
 And could not win thee, Sleep! by any stealth:
 So do not let me wear to-night away:
 Without thee what is all the morning's wealth?
 Come, blessed barrier betwixt day and
 day,
 Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

II.

Fond words have oft been spoken to thee, Sleep!
 And thou hast had thy store of tenderest names;
 The very sweetest words that fancy frames
 When thankfulness of heart is strong and deep!
 Dear bosom child we call thee, that dost steep
 In rich reward all suffering; balm that tames
 All anguish; saint that evil thoughts and aims
 Takest away, and into souls dost creep, Like to a breeze from heaven. Shall I
 alone —
 I, surely not a man ungently made — Call thee worst tyrant by which flesh is crossed?

Perverse, self-willed to own and to dis-
own,
Mere slave of them who never for thee
prayed,
Still last to come where thou art wanted most!

THE WORLD.

THE world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our
powers:
Little we see in Nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
This sea that bares her bosom to the moon;
The winds that will be howling at all
hours
And are up-gathered now like sleeping
flowers;
For this, for everything, we are out of tune;
It moves us not. Great God! I'd rather
be
A pagan suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn,
Have sight of Proteus coming from the sea,
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed
horn.

WESTMINSTER BRIDGE.

Sept. 3, 1802.

EARTH has not anything to show more
fair:
Dull would he be of soul who could pass
by
A sight so touching in its majesty:
This city now doth like a garment wear
The beauty of the morning; silent, bare, Ships, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie
Open unto the fields and to the sky,
All bright and glittering in the smokeless
air.

Never did sun more beautifully steep
In his first splendor valley, rock, or hill;
Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!
The river glideth at his own sweet will:
Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
And all that mighty heart is lying still!

PELION AND OSSA.

PELION and Ossa flourish side by side,
Together in immortal books enrolled;
His ancient dower Olympus hath not sold;
And that inspiring hill, which "did divide
Into two ample horns his forehead wide,"
Shines with poetic radiance as of old; While not an English mountain we behold
By the celestial muses glorified.
Yet round our sea-girt shore they rise in crowds:
What was the great Parnassus' self to
thee,
Mount Skiddaw? In his natural sovereignty
Our British hill is fairer far; he shrouds
His double-fronted head in higher
clouds,
And pours forth streams more sweet than Castalay.

THE BROOK.

BROOK! whose society the poet seeks Intent his wasted spirits to renew;
And whom the curious painter doth pursue
Through rocky passes, among flowery creeks,
And tracks thee dancing down thy waterbreaks;
If I some type of thee did wish to view, Thee, — and not thee thyself, I would not do Like Grecian artists, give thee human cheeks,

"Through rocky passes, among flowery creeks."

channels for tears; no Naiad shouldst thou be,
 have neither limbs, feet, feathers, joints,
 nor hairs;
 seems the eternal soul is clothed in
 thee
 With purer robes than those of flesh
 and blood,
 and hath bestowed on thee a better
 good—unwearied joy, and life without its cares.

EVENING.

It is a beautiful evening, calm and
 free;
 the holy time is quiet as a nun breathless with adoration; the broad sun is sinking down in its tranquillity;
 the gentleness of heaven is on the sea:
 listen! the mighty being is awake, and doth with his eternal motion make a sound like thunder everlastingly.
 Dear child! dear girl! that walkest with me here, thou appear'st untouched by solemn
 thought,
 thy nature therefore is not less divine:
 thou liest "in Abraham's bosom" all
 the year;
 and worshipp'st at the temple's inner shrine,
 God being with thee when we know it not.

BUONAPARTE.

GRIEVED for Buonaparte, with a vain and an unthinking grief! for, who aspires to genuine greatness but from just desires,
 and knowledge such as he could never
 gain?
 Is not in battles that from youth we train
 the governor who must be wise and
 good,

And temper with the sternness of the brain
 Thoughts motherly and meek as womanhood.
 Wisdom doth live with children round
 her knees,
 Books, leisure, perfect freedom, and the talk
 Man holds with week-day man in the hourly walk
 Of the mind's business: these are the degrees
 By which true sway doth mount; this is the stalk
 True power doth grow on; and her rights are these.

ON THE EXTINCTION OF THE VENETIAN REPUBLIC.

ONCE did she hold the gorgeous East in fee;
 And was the safeguard of the West: the worth
 Of Venice did not fall below her birth—
 Venice, the eldest child of Liberty!
 She was a maiden city, bright and free;
 No guile seduced, no force could violate;
 And, when she took unto herself a mate,
 She must espouse the everlasting sea.
 And what if she had seen those glories
 fade,
 Those titles vanish, and that strength
 decay;
 Yet shall some tribute of regret be paid When her long life hath reached its final day.
 Men are we, and must grieve when even the shade
 Of that which once was great is passed
 away.

TO TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

TOUSSAINT, the most unhappy man of
 men!
 Whether the all-cheering sun be free to
 shed
 His beams around thee, or thou rest thy head

Pillowed in some dark dungeon's noisome den —
O miserable chieftain! where and when Wilt thou find patience? Yet die not;
do thou
Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful
brow:
Though fallen thyself, never to rise
again,
Live, and take comfort. Thou hast left behind
Powers that will work for thee: air, earth, and skies;
There's not a breathing of the common
wind
That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;
Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable
mind.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

September, 1802.

INLAND, within a hollow vale, I stood;
And saw, while sea was calm and air was clear,
The coast of France—the coast of France how near!
Drawn almost into frightful neighborhood.
I shrunk, for verily the barrier flood
Was like a lake, or river bright and fair, A span of waters; yet what power is
there!
What mightiness for evil and for
good!
Even so doth God protect us if we be Virtuous and wise. Winds blow, and waters roll, Strength to the brave, and power, and deity,
Yet in themselves are nothing! One decree
Spake laws to them, and said that by the soul
Only the nations shall be great and
free.

ON THE SUBJUGATION OF SWITZERLAND.

Two voices are there — one is of the sea,
One of the mountains — each a mighty
voice:
In both from age to age, thou didst rejoice,
They were thy chosen music, Liberty!
There came a tyrant, and with holy glee Thou foughtst against him; but hast vainly striven;
Thou from thy Alpine holds at length art driven,
Where not a torrent murmurs heard by
thee.
Of one deep bliss thine ear hath been bereft:
Then cleave, O cleave to that which still is left;
For, high-souled maid, what sorrow would it be
That mountain floods should thunder as
before,
And ocean bellow from his rocky shore,
And neither awful voice be heard by thee!

MILTON.

1802.

MILTON! thou shouldst be living at this hour:
England hath need of thee: she is a fen
Of stagnant waters: altar, sword, and
pen,
Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower,
Have forfeited their ancient English
dower
Of inward happiness. We are selfish
men:
Oh! raise us up, return to us again;
And give us manners, virtue, freedom,
power
Thy soul was like a star, and dwelt apart:
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea;
Pure as the naked heavens, majestic,
free;

lest thou travel on life's common
way,
erful godliness; and yet thy heart wiliest duties on itself did lay.

GREAT MEN.

'men have been among us; hands that penned ongues that uttered wisdom, better
none:
ter Sydney, Marvel, Harington,
; Vane and others, who called Milton friend.
moralists could act and comprehend:
cnew how genuine glory was put
on;
t us how rightfully a nation shone lendor: what strength was, that would not bend magnanimous meekness. France,
'tis strange,
brought forth no such souls as we had then.
ual emptiness! unceasing change!
gle volume paramount, no code, ster spirit, no determined road;
ually a want of books and men!

TO THOMAS CLARKSON.

THE FINAL PASSING OF THE BILL FOR THE ABOLITION OF THE SLAVE TRADE,
MARCH, 1807.

CLARKSON! it was an obstinate hill to climb:
oilsome, nay, how dire it was, by
thee
own — by none, perhaps so feelingly;
ou, who, starting in thy fervent prime,
first lead forth this pilgrimage
sublime,
heard the constant voice its charge
repeat,

Which, out of thy young heart's oracular
seat,
First roused thee, O true yoke-fellow of
Time.
With unabating effort, see, the palm Is won, and by all nations shall be worn!
The bloody writing is for ever torn,
And thou henceforth shall have a good man's calm,
A great man's happiness; thy zeal shall find Repose at length, firm friend of human
kind!

FEELINGS OF THE TYROLESE.

O'ER the wide earth, on mountain and on plain,
Dwells in the affections and the soul of
man
A godhead, like the universal Pan,
But more exalted, with a brighter train.
And shall his bounty be dispensed in
vain,
Showered equally on city and on field,
And neither hope nor steadfast promise
yield
In these usurping times of fear and pain?
Such doom awaits us. Nay, forbid it,
Heaven!
We know the arduous strife, the eternal laws
To which the triumph of all good is
given,
High sacrifice, and labor without pause,
Even to the death: else wherefore should the eye
Of man converse with immortality?

ON THE FINAL SUBMISSION OF THE TYROLESE.

SAY, what is Honor? 'Tis the finest
sense
Of justice which the human mind can
frame,
Intent each lurking frailty to disclaim,

And guard the way of life from all offence
 Suffered or done. When lawless violence A kingdom doth assault, and in the scale
 Of perilous war her weightiest armies fail,
 Honor is hopeful elevation — whence Glory — and Triumph. Yet with politic
 skill
 Endangered states may yield to terms unjust,
 Stoop their proud heads — but not unto the dust,
 A foe's most favorite purpose to fulfil!
 Happy occasions oft by self-mistrust
 Are forfeited; but infamy doth kill.

INDIGNATION OF A HIGH-MINDED SPANIARD.

AVAUNT all specious pliancy of mind
 In men of low degree, all smooth pretence!
 I better like a blunt indifference
 And self-respecting slowness, disinclined
 To win me at first sight: — and be there joined Patience and temperance with this high reserve, —
 Honor that knows the path and will not swerve;
 Affections, which, if put to proof, are
 kind;
 And piety towards God. — Such men of
 old

Were England's native growth; and,
 throughout Spain,
 Thanks to high God! forests of such
 remain;
 Then for that country let our hopes be
 bold;
 For matched with these shall policy prove vain,
 Her arts, her strength, her iron, and her
 gold.

GEORGE III.

November, 1813.

Now that all hearts are glad, all faces
 bright,
 Our aged Sovereign sits to the ebb and
 flow
 Of states and kingdoms, to their joy or
 woe,
 Insensible; he sits deprived of sight,
 And lamentably wrapped in twofold
 night,
 Whom no weak hopes deceived; whose mind ensued,
 Through perilous war, with regal fortitude, Peace that should claim respect from lawless might.
 Dread King of kings, vouchsafe a ray
 divine
 To his forlorn condition! let thy grace
 Upon his inner soul in mercy shine;
 Permit his heart to kindle, and embrace (Though were it only for a moment's space)
 The triumphs of this hour; for they are THINE!

He thought even yet, the sooth to

 That, if she loved the harp to hear,
 He could make music to her ear.

The humble boon was soon obtain'd;
 The aged Minstrel audience gain'd.
 But, when he reach'd the room of
 state,
 Where she, with all her ladies, sate,
 Perchance he wished his boon denied:
 For, when to tune his harp he tried,
 His trembling hand had lost the
 ease,

Which marks security to please;
 And scenes, long past, of joy and pain,
 Came wildering o'er his aged brain —
 He tried to tune his harp in vain!
 The pitying Duchess praised its chime,
 And gave him heart, and gave him
 time,

Till every string's according glee
 Was blended into harmony.
 And then, he said, he would full fain
 He could recall an ancient strain,
 He never thought to sing again
 It was not framed for village churls,
 But for high dames and mighty earls;
 He had play'd it to King Charles the
 Good,

When he kept court in Holyrood;
 And much he wish'd, yet fear'd to try
 The long-forgotten melody.
 Amid the strings his fingers stray'd,
 And an uncertain warbling made,
 And oft he shook his hoary head.
 But when he caught the measure wild,
 The old man raised his face, and smiled.

And lighten'd up his faded eye,
 With all a poet's ecstasy!
 In varying cadence, soft or strong,
 He swept the sounding chords along;
 The present scene, the future lot,
 His toils, his wants, were all forgot:
 Cold diffidence, and age's frost,
 In the full tide of song were lost;
 Each blank in faithless memory void,
 The poet's glowing thought supplied;
 And, while his harp responsive rung,
 'Twas thus the LATEST MINSTREL sung

MELROSE ABBEY.[Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto ii.]

I.

IF thou would'st view fair Melrose
aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight;
For the gay beams of lightsome day
Gild, but to flout, the ruins gray.
When the broken arches are black in
night,
And each shafted oriel glimmers white;
When the cold light's uncertain shower
Streams on the ruin'd central tower;
When buttress and buttress, alternately,
Seem framed of ebon and ivory;
When silver edges the imagery,
And the scrolls that teach thee to live and die;
When distant Tweed is heard to rave,
And the owlet to hoot o'er the dead man's grave,
Then go — but go alone the while —
Then view St. David's ruin'd pile;
And, home returning, soothly swear,
Was never scene so sad and fair!

LOVE AS THE THEME OF POETS.[Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto iii.]

I.

AND said I that my limbs were old,
And said I that my blood was cold,
And that my kindly fire was fled,
And my poor wither'd heart was dead,
And that I might not sing of love? —
How could I to the dearest theme,
That ever warm'd a minstrel's dream,
So foul, so false a recreant prove!
How could I name love's very name,
Nor wake my heart to notes of flame!

II.

In peace, Love tunes the shepherd's
reed;
In war, he mounts the warrior's steed;
In halls, in gay attire is seen;
In hamlets, dances on the green.

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
And men below, and saints above;
For love is heaven, and heaven is love.

THE LOVE OF COUNTRY.[Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto vi.]

I.

BREATHES there the man, with soul so
dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him
burn'd,
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd,
From wandering on a foreign strand!
If such there breathe, go, mark him
well;
For him no Minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim;
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch; concentrated all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonor'd, and unsung.

II.

O Caledonia! stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!
Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood,
Land of my sires! what mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band,
That knits me to thy rugged strand!
Still, as I view each well-known scene, Think what is now, and what hath
been,
Seems as, to me, of all bereft, Sole friends thy woods and streams were left;
And thus I love them better still,
Even in extremity of ill.
By Yarrow's streams still let me stray, Though none should guide my feeble
way;
Still feel the breeze down Ettrick break,

"If thou wouldst view fair Melrose aright, Go visit it by the pale moonlight."

ROSABELLE.

[Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto vi.]

XXIII.

O LISTEN, listen, ladies gay!
No haughty feat of arms I tell;
Soft is the note, and sad the lay,
That mourns the lovely Rosabelle:

—“Moor, moor the barge, ye gallant crew!

And, gentle ladye, deign to stay,
Rest thee in Castle Ravensheuch,
Nor tempt the stormy firth to-day.

“The blackening wave is edged with
white:

To inch¹ and rock the sea-mews fly;
The fishers have heard the Water-Sprite, Whose screams forebode that wreck is nigh.

“Last night the gifted Seer did view
A wet shroud swathed round ladye
gay;

Then stay thee, Fair, in Ravensheuch:
Why cross the gloomy firth to-day?” —

“’Tis not because Lord Lindesay’s heir
To-night at Roslin leads the ball,
But that my ladye-mother there Sits lonely in her castle-hall.

“’Tis not because the ring they ride,
And Lindesay at the ring rides well,
But that my sire the wine will chide,
If ’tis not fill’d by Rosabelle.” —

O’er Roslin all that dreary night
A wondrous blaze was seen to gleam;
’Twas broader than the watch-fire’s
light,
And redder than the bright moon-beam.

It glared on Roslin’s castled rock,
It ruddied all the copse-wood glen,
’Twas seen from Dryden’s groves of oak,
And seen from cavern’d Hawthornden.

Seem’d all on fire that chapel proud,
Where Roslin’s chiefs uncoffin’d lie,
Each Baron, for a sable shroud,
Sheathed in his iron panoply.

Seem’d all on fire, within, around,
Deep sacristy and altar’s pale,
Shone every pillar foliage-bound,
And glimmer’d all the dead men’s mail.

Blazed battlement and pinnet high,
Blazed every rose-carved buttress
fair —

So still they blaze, when fate is nigh
The lordly line of high St. Clair.

There are twenty of Roslin’s barons
bold
Lie buried within that proud chapelle;

Each one the holy vault doth hold —
But the sea holds lovely Rosabelle!

And each St. Clair was buried there,
With candle, with book, and with
knell;

But the sea-caves rung, and the wild winds sung,
The dirge of lovely Rosabelle.

HYMN FOR THE DEAD. —

[Lay of the Last Minstrel, Canto vi.]

XXXI.

THAT day of wrath, that dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away,
What power shall be the sinner’s stay?
How shall he meet that dreadful day?

When, shriveling like a parched scroll,
The flaming heavens together roll;

When louder yet, and yet more dread, Swells the high trump that wakes the
dead,

Oh! on that day, that wrathful day,
When man to judgment wakes from
clay,
Be THOU the trembling sinner's stay, Though heaven and earth shall pass
away.

HUSH'D is the harp—the Minstrel
gone.
And did he wander forth alone?
Alone, in indigence and age,
To linger out his pilgrimage?
No; close beneath proud Newark's
tower,
Arose the Minstrel's lowly bower;
A simple hut; but there was seen
The little garden hedged with green,
The cheerful hearth, and lattice clean.
There shelter'd wanderers, by the blaze,
Oft heard the tale of other days;
For much he loved to ope his door,
And give the aid he begg'd before.
So pass'd the winter's day; but still,
When summer smiled on sweet Bowhill,
And July's eve, with balmy breath,
Waved the blue-bells on Newark heath;
When throstles sung in Harehead-shaw,
And corn was green on Carterhaugh,
And flourish'd, broad, Blackandro's oak,
The aged Harper's soul awoke!
Then would he sing achievements high,
And circumstance of chivalry,
Till the rapt traveller would stay,
Forgetful of the closing day;
And noble youths, the strain to hear,
Forsook the hunting of the deer;
And Yarrow, as he roll'd along,
Bore burden to the Minstrel's song.

THE CASTLE OF NORHAM.

[Marmion, Canto i.]

I.

DAY set on Norham's castled steep,
And Tweed's fair river, broad and deep,
And Cheviot's mountains lone:

The battled towers, the donjon keep,
The loophole grates, where captives
weep,
The flanking walls that round it sweep,
In yellow lustre shone.
The warriors on the turrets high,
Moving athwart the evening sky,
Seem'd forms of giant height:
Their armor, as it caught the rays,
Flash'd back again the western blaze,
In lines of dazzling light.

II.

Saint George's banner, broad and gay,
Now faded, as the fading ray
Less bright, and less, was flung;
The evening gale had scarce the power
To wave it on the Donjon Tower,
So heavily it hung.
The scouts had parted on their search,
The Castle gates were barr'd;
Above the gloomy portal arch,
Timing his footsteps to a march,
The Warder kept his guard;
Low humming, as he paced along,
Some ancient Border gathering song.

III.

A distant trampling sound he hears;
He looks abroad, and soon appears,
O'er Hornclyff-hill a plump of spears,
Beneath a pennon gay;
A horseman, darting from the crowd,
Like lightning from a summer cloud,
Spurs on his mettled courser proud,
Before the dark array.
Beneath the sable palisade,
That closed the Castle barricade,
His bugle-horn he blew;
The warder hasted from the wall,
And warn'd the Captain in the hall,
For well the blast he knew;
And joyfully that knight did call,
To sewer, squire, and seneschal.

THE HOSTEL, OR INN.

[Marmion, Canto iii.]

I.

THE lifelong day Lord Marmion rode:
The mountain path the Palmer show'd

By glen and streamlet winded still,
Where stunted birches hid the rill.
They might not choose the lowland
road,

For the Merse forayers were abroad,
Who, fired with hate and thirst of prey,
Had scarcely fail'd to bar their way.
Oft on the trampling band, from crown
Of some tall cliff, the deer look'd down;
On wing of jet, from his repose
In the deep heath, the black-cock rose;
Sprung from the gorse the timid roe,
Nor waited for the bending bow;
And when the stony path began,
By which the naked peak they wan,
Up flew the snowy ptarmigan.
The noon had long been pass'd before
They gain'd the height of Lammermoor;
Thence winding down the northern way
Before them, at the close of day,
Old Gifford's towers and hamlet lay.

II.

No summons calls them to the tower,
To spend the hospitable hour.
To Scotland's camp the Lord was gone;
His cautious dame, in bower alone,
Dreaded her castle to uncloze,
So late, to unknown friends or foes.
On through the hamlet as they paced,
Before a porch, whose front was graced
With bush and flagon trimly placed,
Lord Marmion drew his rein:
The village inn seem'd large, though
rude;

Its cheerful fire and hearty food
Might well relieve his train.
Down from their seats the horsemen
sprung,
With jingling spurs the court-yard rung;
They bind their horses to the stall,
For forage, food, and firing call,
And various clamor fills the hall:
Weighing the labor with the cost,
Toils everywhere the bustling host.

III.

Soon, by the chimney's merry blaze,
Through the rude hostel might you
gaze;
Might see, where, in dark nook aloof,

The rafters of the scottish roof
Bore wealth of winter cheer;
Of sea-fowl dried, and solands store,
And gammons of the tusky boar,
And savory haunch of deer.
The chimney arch projected wide;
Above, around it, and beside,
Were tools for housewives' hand;
Nor wanted, in that martial day,
The implements of Scottish fray,
The buckler, lance, and brand.
Beneath its shade, the place of state,
On oaken settle Marmion sate,
And view'd around the blazing hearth.
His followers mix in noisy mirth;
Whom with brown ale, in jolly tide,
From ancient vessels ranged aside,
Full actively their host supplied.

IV.

Theirs was the glee of martial breast,
And laughter theirs at little jest;
And oft Lord Marmion deign'd to aid,
And mingle in the mirth they made;
For though, with men of high degree,
The proudest of the proud was he,
Yet, train'd in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldier's hardy heart.
They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May:
With open hand, and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy;
Ever the first to scale a tower,
As venturous in a lady's bower: —
Such buxom chief shall lead his host
From India's fires to Zembla's frost.

V.

Resting upon his pilgrim staff,
Right opposite the Palmer stood;
His thin dark visage seen but half,
Half hidden by his hood.
Still fix'd on Marmion was his look,
Which he, who ill such gaze could
brook,
Strove by a frown to quell;
But not for that, though more than once Full met their stern encountering glance,
The Palmer's visage fell.

LOCHINVAR.

LADY HERON'S SONG.

[Marmion, Canto v.]

O, YOUNG Lochinvar is come out of the west, Through all the wide Border his steed was the best;
And save his good broadsword he weapons had none,
He rode all unarm'd, and he rode all
alone.
So faithful in love, and so dauntless in
war,
There never was knight like the young Lochinvar.

He staid not for brake, and he stopp'd not for stone,
He swam the Eske river where ford
there was none;
But ere he alighted at Netherby gate,
The bride had consented, the gallant came late:
For a laggard in love, and a dastard in
war,
Was to wed the fair Ellen of brave
Lochinvar.

So boldly he enter'd the Netherby Hall, Among bride's-men, and kinsmen, and brothers, and all:
Then spoke the bride's father, his hand on his sword, (For the poor craven bridegroom said never a word,)
"O come ye in peace here, or come ye in war,
Or to dance at our bridal, young Lord
Lochinvar?" —

"I long woo'd your daughter, my suit you denied; —
Love swells like the Solway, but ebbs like its tide —
And now am I come, with this lost love of mine,
To lead but one measure, drink one cup of wine.
There are maidens in Scotland more lovely by far,
That would gladly be bride to the young Lochinvar."

The bride kiss'd the goblet: the knight took it up,
He quaff'd off the wine, and he threw down the cup.
She look'd down to blush, and she look'd up to sigh,
With a smile on her lips, and a tear in her eye.
He took her soft hand, ere her mother could bar, —
"Now tread we a measure!" said young Lochinvar.

So stately his form, and so lovely her
face,
That never a hall such a galliard did
grace;
While her mother did fret, and her father did fume,
And the bridegroom stood dangling his bonnet and plume;
And the bride-maidens whisper'd,
"Twere better by far,
To have match'd our fair cousin with young Lochinvar."

One touch to her hand, and one word
in her ear,
When they reach'd the hall-door, and the charger stood near;
So light to the croupe the fair lady he swung,
So light to the saddle before her he sprung!
"She is won! we are gone, over bank,
bush, and scaur;
They'll have fleet steeds that follow," quoth young Lochinvar.

There was mounting 'mong Græmes of the Netherby clan; Forsters, Fenwicks, and Musgraves,
they rode and they ran;
There was racing and chasing, on Cannobie Lee,
But the lost bride of Netherby ne'er did they see.
So daring in love, and so dauntless in
war,
Have ye e'er heard of gallant like young Lochinvar?

MARMION AND DOUGLAS.

[Marmion, Canto vi.]

XIII.

advanced was morning day, Marmion did his troop array array's camp to ride;
 safe conduct for his band,
 the royal seal and hand,
 Douglas gave a guide:
 Marmion Earl, with stately grace, Clara on her palfrey place, whisper'd in an under tone, the hawk stoop, his prey is
 own." —
 from out the castle drew, Marmion stopp'd to bid adieu: — though something I might plain,"
 he said,
 respect to stranger guest,
 her by your King's behest, in Tantallon's towers I staid;
 in friendship from your land, noble Earl, receive my hand." — Douglas round him drew his cloak, his arms, and thus he spoke: — anons, halls, and bowers, shall till
 at my Sovereign's will, one whom he lists, howe'er to be the owner's peer.
 les are my King's alone, rret to foundation-stone —
 id of Douglas is his own;
 ver shall in friendly grasp id of such as Marmion clasp." —

XIV.

Marmion's swarthy cheek like ire,
 took his very frame for ire,
 — "This to me!" he said, — were not for thy hoary beard, and as Marmion's had not spared leave the Douglas' head!
 st, I tell thee, haughty Peer, does England's message here,
 h the meanest in her state,
 ll, proud Angus, be thy mate:
 Douglas, more I tell thee here, in thy pitch of pride,
 thy hold, thy vassals near,

(Nay, never look upon your lord,
 And lay your hands upon your sword,)
 I tell thee thou'rt defied!
 And if thou said'st I am not peer
 To any lord in Scotland here, Lowland or Highland, far or near,
 Lord Angus, thou hast lied!"
 On the Earl's cheek the flush of rage
 O'ercame the ashen hue of age:
 Fierce he broke forth, — "And darest thou, then,
 To beard the lion in his den,
 The Douglas in his hall?
 And hopest thou hence unscathed to
 go? —
 No, by Saint Bride of Bothwell, no!
 Up drawbridge, grooms — what, Warder, ho!
 Let the portcullis fall."
 Lord Marmion turn'd, — well was his need,
 And dash'd the rowels in his steed,
 Like arrow through the archway sprung
 The ponderous grate behind him rung:
 To pass there was such scanty room,
 The bars, descending, razed his plume.

XV.

The steed along the drawbridge flies,
 Just as it trembled on the rise;
 Nor lighter does the swallow skim
 Along the smooth lake's level brim:
 And when Lord Marmion reach'd his band,
 He halts, and turn'd with clench'd hand,
 And shout of loud defiance pours,
 And shook his gauntlet at the towers.
 "Horse! horse!" the Douglas cried,
 "and chase!"
 But soon he rein'd his fury's pace:
 "A royal messenger he came,
 Though most unworthy of the name. —
 A letter forged! Saint Jude to speed!
 Did ever knight so foul a deed!
 At first in heart it liked me ill,
 When the King praised his clerkly
 skill.
 Thanks to Saint Bothan, son of mine,
 Save Gawain, ne'er could pen a line.
 So swore I, and I swear it still,
 Let my boy-bishop fret his fill. —

Saint Mary mend my fiery mood!
 Old age ne'er cools the Douglas blood,
 I thought to slay him where he stood.
 'Tis pity of him too," he cried:
 "Bold can he speak, and fairly ride,
 I warrant him a warrior tried."
 With this his mandate he recalls,
 And slowly seeks his castle halls.

DEATH OF MARMION.

[Marmion, Canto vi.]

XXXII.

With fruitless labor, Clara bound,
 And strove to stanch the gushing
 wound;

The Monk, with unavailing cares,
 Exhausted all the Church's prayers.
 Ever, he said, that, close and near,
 A lady's voice was in his ear,
 And that, the priest he could not hear,
 For that she ever sung,

"In the lost battle, borne down by the flying,
 Where mingles war's rattle with groans of the dying!"

So the notes rung: —

"Avoid thee, Fiend! — with cruel hand, Shake not the dying sinner's sand! —
 O, look, my son, upon yon sign
 Of the Redeemer's grace divine;

O, think on faith and bliss! —
 By many a death-bed I have been,
 And many a sinner's parting seen,
 But never aught like this." —

The war, that for a space did fail, Now trebly thundering swell'd the
 gale,

And — STANLEY! was the cry;
 A light on Marmion's visage spread,
 And fired his glazing eye;
 With dying hand, above his head,
 He shook the fragment of his blade,
 And shouted "Victory! —
 Charge, Chester, charge! On, Stanley,
 on!"
 Were the last words of Marmion.

THE CHASE.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto i.]

v.

THE noble stag was pausing now,
 Upon the mountain's southern brow,
 Where broad extended, far beneath,
 The varied realms of fair Menteith.
 With anxious eye he wander'd o'er Mountain and meadow, moss and moor
 And ponder'd refuge from his toil;
 By far Lochard or Aberfoyle.
 But nearer was the copsewood gray,
 That waved and wept on Loch-Achray
 And mingled with the pine-trees blue
 On the bold cliffs of Benvenue.
 Fresh vigor with the hope return'd,
 With flying foot the heath he spurn'd,
 Held westward with unwearied race,
 And left behind the panting chase.

VIII.

The Hunter mark'd that mountain high,
 The lone lake's western boundary,
 And deem'd the stag must turn to bay, Where that huge rampart barr'd the
 way.

Already glorying in the prize,
 Measured his antlers with his eyes;
 For the death-wound and death-hallows,
 Muster'd his breath, his whinyard drew:
 But thundering as he came prepared,
 With ready arm and weapon bared,
 The wily quarry shunn'd the shock,
 And turn'd him from the opposing
 rock;

Then, dashing down a darksome glen,
 Soon lost to hound and hunter's ken,
 In the deep Trosach's wildest nook
 His solitary refuge took.

There, while close couch'd, the thicket
 shed

Cold dews and wild-flowers on his head,
 He heard the baffled dogs in vain
 Rave through the hollow pass amain, Chiding the rocks that yell'd again.

IX.

Close on the hounds the Hunter came,
 To cheer them on the vanish'd game;
 But, stumbling in the rugged dell,
 The gallant horse exhausted fell.

"The noble stag was pausing now,
Upon the mountain's southern brow."

patient rider strove in vain
 To him with the spur and rein,
 His good steed, his labors o'er,
 And his stiff limbs to rise no more;
 Touch'd with pity and remorse,
 He bow'd o'er the expiring horse.
 He thought, when first thy rein
 Led upon the banks of Seine,
 The ghland eagle e'er should feed
 His fleet limbs, my matchless steed.
 Worth the chase, woe worth the
 day,
 'Tis thy life, my gallant gray!"

X.

Though the dell his horn resounds,
 In pursuit to call the hounds.
 Imp'd, with slow and crippled
 pace,
 Thy leaders of the chase;
 On their master's side they press'd,
 Hooping tail and humbled crest;
 The dingle's hollow throat
 Had the swelling bugle-note.
 Hounds started from their dream,
 And answer'd with their scream,
 And around the sounds were cast,
 And seem'd an answering blast;
 The Hunter bled his way,
 Some comrades of the day;
 He paused, so strange the road,
 Lustrous were the scenes it show'd.

XVII.

Once again his horn he wound,
 And forth starting at the sound,
 Underneath an aged oak,
 He stood from the islet rock,
 His guider of its way,
 The skiff shot to the bay,
 And the promontory steep
 A deep line in graceful sweep,
 In almost viewless wave,
 The pliant willow-bough to lave,
 And, with whispering sound and
 low,
 A gleam of pebbles bright as snow.
 He had touch'd this silver strand,
 The Hunter left his stand,
 And conceal'd amid the brake,

To view this Lady of the Lake.
 The maiden paused, as if again
 She thought to catch the distant strain.
 With head up-raised, and look intent,
 And eye and ear attentive bent,
 And locks flung back, and lips apart,
 Like monument of Grecian art,
 In listening mood, she seem'd to stand.
 The guardian Naiad of the strand.

XVIII.

And ne'er did Grecian chisel trace
 A Nymph, a Naiad, or a Grace,
 Of finer form, or lovelier face!
 What though the sun, with ardent frown,
 Had slightly tinged her cheek with brown, —
 The sportive toil, which, short and light,
 Had dyed her glowing hue so bright,
 Served too in hastier swell to show
 Short glimpses of a breast of snow:
 What though no rule of courtly grace
 To measured mood had train'd her pace, —
 A foot more light, a step more true, Ne'er from the heath-flower dash'd the
 dew;
 E'en the slight harebell raised its head,
 Elastic from her airy tread:
 What though upon her speech there hung
 The accents of the mountain tongue, —
 Those silver sounds, so soft, so dear,
 The listener held his breath to hear!

XIX.

A Chieftain's daughter seem'd the maid;
 Her satin snood,¹ her silken plaid,
 Her golden brooch, such birth betray'd.
 And seldom was a snood amid Such wild luxuriant ringlets hid, Whose glossy black to shame might
 bring
 The plumage of the raven's wing;
 And seldom o'er a breast so fair,
 Mantled a plaid with modest care,
 And never brooch the folds combined
 Above a heart more good and kind.
 Her kindness and her worth to spy,
 You need but gaze on Ellen's eye;

Not Katrine, in her mirror blue,
 Gives back the shaggy banks more true,
 Than every free-born glance confess'd
 The guileless movements of her breast;
 Whether joy danced in her dark eye,
 Or woe or pity claim'd a sigh,
 Or filial love was glowing there,
 Or meek devotion pour'd a prayer,
 Or tale of injury call'd forth
 The indignant spirit of the North.
 One only passion unreveal'd,
 With maiden pride the maid conceal'd,
 Yet not less purely felt the flame; —
 O need I tell that passion's name!

BOAT SONG.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto ii.]

XIX.

HAIL to the Chief who in triumph advances!
 Honor'd and bless'd be the ever-green
 Pine!
 Long may the tree, in his banner that glances,
 Flourish, the shelter and grace of our line!
 Heaven send it happy dew,
 Earth lend it sap anew, Gayly to bourgeon, and broadly to
 grow,
 While every Highland glen Sends our shout back agen,
 "Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho!

Ours is no sapling, chance-sown by the fountain,
 Blooming at Beltane, in winter to
 fade;
 When the whirlwind has stripp'd every leaf on the mountain,
 The more shall Clan-Alpine exult in her shade.
 Moor'd in the rifted rock,
 Proof to the tempest's shock,
 Firmer he roots him the ruder it blow;
 Menteith and Breadalbane, then,
 Echo his praise agen,
 "Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho!

THE FIERY CROSS.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto iii.]

I.

TIME rolls his ceaseless course race of yore,
 Who danced our infancy upo
 knee,
 And told our marvelling t
 legends store,
 Of their strange ventures ha land or sea,
 How are they blotted from the that be!

How few, all weak, and wither'd of their force,
 'ait on the verge of dark eternity,
 Like stranded wrecks, the tide returning hoarse, > sweep them from our sight! Time rolls his ceaseless course.
 et live there still who can remember well, How, when a mountain chief his bugle blew, oth field and forest, dingle, cliff, and dell,
 And solitary heath, the signal knew;
 nd fast the faithful clan around him
 drew,
 What time the warning note was keenly wound,
 That time aloft their kindred banner flew, While clam'rous warpipes yell'd the gathering sound, nd while the Fiery Cross glanced like a meteor round.

VIII.

'was all prepared:—and from the
 rock,
 goat, the patriarch of the flock, efore the kindling pile was laid,
 nd pierced by Roderick's ready blade.
 atient the sickening victim eyed he life-blood ebb in crimson tide, own his clogg'd beard and shaggy
 limb,
 ill darkness glazed his eyeballs dim.
 he grisly priest, with murmuring
 prayer,
 slender crosslet form'd with care, cubit's length in measure due;
 he shaft and limbs were rods of yew, whose parents in Inch-Cailliach wave heir shadows o'er Clan-Alpine's grave, nd, answering Lomond's breezes deep,
 oth many a chieftain's endless sleep.
 he Cross, thus form'd, he held on high,
 ith wasted hand, and haggard eye, nd strange and mingled feelings woke,
 hile his anathema he spoke.

IX.

Woe to the clansman, who shall view his symbol of sepulchral yew, orgetful that its branches grew

Where weep the heavens their holiest
 dew,

On Alpine's dwelling low!
 Deserter of his Chieftain's trust,
 He ne'er shall mingle with their dust,
 But, from his sires and kindred thrust,
 Each clansman's execration just Shall doom him wrath and woe!"
 He paused; the word the vassals took;
 With forward step and fiery look,
 On high their naked brands they shook.
 Their clattering targets wildly strook;
 And first in murmur low,
 Then, like the billow in his course,
 That far to seaward finds his source,
 And flings to shore his muster'd force, Burst, with loud roar, their answer hoarse,

"Woe to the traitor, woe!"
 Ben-an's gray scalp the accents knew,
 The joyous wolf from covert drew,
 The exulting eagle scream'd afar,—
 They knew the voice of Alpine's war.

HYMN TO THE VIRGIN.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto iii.]

XXIX.

Ave Maria! maiden mild!
 Listen to a maiden's prayer!
 Thou canst hear though from the wild,
 Thou canst save amid despair.
 Safe may we sleep beneath thy care, Though banish'd, outcast, and reviled—
 Maiden! hear a maiden's prayer;
 Mother, hear a suppliant child!
Ave Maria!

Ave Maria! undefiled!
 The flinty couch we now must share
 Shall seem with down of eider piled,
 If thy protection hover there.
 The murky cavern's heavy air Shall breathe of balm if thou hast
 smiled;
 Then, Maiden! hear a maiden's prayer;
 Mother, list a suppliant child!
Ave Maria!

Ave Maria! stainless styled!

Foul demons of the earth and air,
From this their wanton haunt exiled,
Shall flee before thy presence fair.

We bow us to our lot of care,

Beneath thy guidance reconciled;

Hear for a maid a maiden's prayer,

And for a father hear a child!

Ave Maria!

FITZ-JAMES AND RODERICK DHU.

THE COMBAT.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto v.]

X.

FITZ-JAMES was brave: — Though to his
heart

The life-blood thrill'd with sudden start,

He mann'd himself with dauntless air,

Return'd the chief his haughty stare,

His back against a rock he bore,

And firmly placed his foot before: —

"Come one, come all! this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

Sir Roderick mark'd — and in his eyes

Respect was mingled with surprise,

And the stern joy which warriors feel

In foemen worthy of their steel.

Short space he stood — then waved his
hand:

Down sunk the disappearing band;

Each warrior vanish'd where he stood,

In broom or bracken, heath or wood;

Sunk brand and spear and bended bow,

In osiers pale and copses low;

It seem'd as if their mother Earth

Had swallow'd up her warlike birth.

The wind's last breath had toss'd in air,

Pennon, and plaid, and plumage fair, —

The next but swept a lone hill-side,

Where heath and fern were waving wide

From spear and glaive, from targe and jack, —

The next, all unreflected shone

On bracken green and cold gray stone.

XII.

The Chief in silence strode before,

And reach'd that torrent's sounding
shore,

Which, daughter of three mighty lakes,
From Vennachar in silver breaks, Sweeps through the plain, and ceases
mines

On Bochastle the mouldering lines,

Where Rome, the Empress of the world,

Of yore her eagle wings unfurl'd.

And here his course the Chieftain staid,

Threw down his target and his plaid,

And to the Lowland warrior said: —

"Bold Saxon! to his promise just,

Vich-Alpine has discharged his trust.

This murderous Chief, this ruthless man,

This head of a rebellious clan,

Hath led thee safe through watch and
ward,

Far past Clan-Alpine's outmost guard

Now, man to man, and steel to steel,

A chieftain's vengeance thou shalt feel.

See here, all vantageless I stand,

Arm'd, like thyself, with single brand:

For this is Coilantogle ford,

And thou must keep thee with thy sword."

XIII.

The Saxon paused: — "I ne'er delay'd,
When foeman bade me draw my blade:
Nay, more, brave Chief, I vow'd thy
death:

Yet sure thy fair and generous faith.

And my deep debt for life preserved,

A better meed have well deserved:

Can nought but blood our feud atone?

Are there no means?" — "No, Stranger,
none!

And hear, — to fire thy flagging zeal, —

The Saxon cause rests on thy steel;

For thus spoke Fate, by prophet bred

Between the living and the dead:

'Who spills the foremost foeman's life.

His party conquers in the strife.'"

"Then, by my word," the Saxon said,

"The riddle is already read.

Seek yonder brake beneath the cliff, —

There lies Red Murdoch, stark and stiff.

Thus Fate has solved her prophecy.

Then yield to Fate, and not to me.

To James, at Stirling, let us go,

When, if thou wilt be still his foe,

Or if the King shall not agree

To grant thee grace and favor free,

I plight mine honor, oath, and word.

"Come one, come all! this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

 The Chieftain's gripe his throat compress'd,

His knee was planted on his breast;
 His clotted locks he backward threw,
 Across his brow his hand he drew,
 From blood and mist to clear his sight,
 Then gleam'd aloft his dagger bright! —
 — But hate and fury ill supplied
 The stream of life's exhausted tide,
 And all too late the advantage came,
 To turn the odds of deadly game;
 For, while the dagger gleam'd on high, Reel'd soul and sense, reel'd brain and
 eye,

Down came the blow! but in the heath
 The erring blade found bloodless sheath.
 The struggling foe may now unclasp
 The fainting Chief's relaxing grasp;
 Unwounded from the dreadful close,
 But breathless all, Fitz-James arose.

LAY OF THE IMPRISONED HUNTSMAN.

[Lady of the Lake, Canto vi.]

XXIV.

"My hawk is tired of perch and hood,
 My idle greyhound loathes his food,
 My horse is weary of his stall,
 And I am sick of captive thrall.
 I wish I were, as I have been,
 Hunting the hart in forest green,
 With bended bow and bloodhound free,
 For that's the life is meet for me.
 I hate to learn the ebb of time,
 From yon dull steeple's drowsy chime,
 Or mark it as the sunbeams crawl,
 Inch after inch along the wall.
 The lark was wont my matins ring,
 The sable rook my vespers sing,
 These towers, although a king's they be,
 Have not a hall of joy for me.
 No more at dawning morn I rise,
 And sun myself in Ellen's eyes,
 Drive the fleet deer the forest through,
 And homeward wend with evening dew;
 A blithesome welcome blithely meet,
 And lay my trophies at her feet,
 While fled the eve on wing of glee, —
 That life is lost to love and me!"

THE BUCCANEER.

[From Rokeby, Canto i.]

[Bertram Risingham, the Buccaneer, brings the tidings of Marston Moor, and of his murder of Philip Morthan in the battle, to Oswald Wycliffe, his accomplice, then holding Barnard Castle for the Parliament.]

FAR town-ward sounds of distant tread,
And Oswald, starting from his bed,
Hath caught it, though no human ear,
Unsharpen'd by revenge and fear,
Could e'er distinguish horse's clank,
Until it reach'd the castle bank.

Now nigh and plain the sound appears,
The warder's challenge now he hears,
Then clanking chains and levers tell,
That o'er the moat the drawbridge fell,
And, in the castle court below,
Voices are heard, and torches glow,
As marshalling the stranger's way,
Straight to the room where Oswald lay;
The cry was,—“Tidings from the host,
Of weight—a messenger comes post.”
Stifling the tumult of his breast,
His answer Oswald thus express'd—“Bring food and wine, and trim the
fire;

Admit the stranger, and retire.”

The stranger came with heavy stride;
The morion's plumes his visage hide,
And the buff-coat, an ample fold,
Mantles his form's gigantic mould.
Full slender answer deigned he
To Oswald's anxious courtesy,
But mark'd, by a disdainful smile,
He saw and scorn'd the petty wile,
When Oswald changed the torch's
place,

Anxious that on the soldier's face
Its partial lustre might be thrown,
To show his looks, yet hide his own.
His guest, the while, laid low aside
The ponderous cloak of tough bull's hide,

And to the torch glanced broad and clear

The corselet of a cuirassier;
Then from his brows the casque he drew,
And from the dank plume dash'd the
dew,

From gloves of mail relieved his hands,
And spread them to the kindling brands,
And, turning to the genial board,
Without a health, or pledge, or word
Of meet and social reverence said,
Deeply he drank, and fiercely fed;
As free from ceremony's sway,
As famish'd wolf that tears his prey.

With deep impatience, tinged with fear,
His host beheld him gorge his cheer,
And quaff the full carouse, that lent
His brow a fiercer hardiment.

Now Oswald stood a space aside,
Now paced the room with hasty stride,
In feverish agony to learn

Tidings of deep and dread concern,
Cursing each moment that his guest Protracted o'er his ruffian feast.

Yet, viewing with alarm, at last,
The end of that uncouth repast,
Almost he seem'd their haste to rue,
As, at his sign, his train withdrew,
And left him with the stranger, free
To question of his mystery.

Then did his silence long proclaim
A struggle between fear and shame.
Much in the stranger's mien appears,
To justify suspicious fears.

On his dark face a scorching clime,
And toil, had done the work of time,
Roughen'd the brow, the temples bared,
And sable hairs with silver shared,
Yet left—what age alone could tame—
The lip of pride, the eye of flame;
The full-drawn lip that upward curl'd,
The eye that seem'd to scorn the world.
That lip had terror never blench'd;
Ne'er in that eye had tear-drop quench'd
The flash severe of swarthy glow,
That mock'd at pain, and knew not woe.
Inured to danger's direst form, Tornado and earthquake, flood and
storm,

Death had he seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by tortures slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes, and scorn'd them all.

But yet, though Bertram's hardened look, Unmoved, could blood and danger
brook,

more than apathy had place his swart brow and callous face; his passions, cherish'd long, plough'd them with impressions
 strong.

That gives gloss to sin, all gay folly, past with youth away, rooted stood, in manhood's hour, weeds of vice without their flower, yet the soil in which they grew,
 not been tamed when life was new, depth and vigor to bring forth bolder fruits of virtuous worth.
 But, e'en then, his heart had known gentler feelings' kindly tone; which waste had been refined purity in his chasten'd mind, dust of gold, that waste to feed,
 lost in love of glory's meed, frantic then no more, his pride had a'ne fair virtue for its guide.

Now, by conscience unrestrain'd, led by gross vice, by slaughter stain'd, knew his daring soul to soar, mastery o'er the mind he bore;
 heavier guilt, or heart less hard,
 led beneath Bertram's bold regard.
 He felt Oswald, while in vain he rove, by many a winding train, he his sullen guest to show,
 led, the news he long'd to know,
 on far other subjects hung his heart, than falter'd from his tongue.
 He ought for that his guest did deign to spare his secret pain, still, in stern and stubborn sort, he'd him answer dark and short,
 started from the theme, to range his digression wild and strange, forced the embarrass'd host to buy,
 every close, direct reply.

THE OUTLAW.

[From Rokeby, Canto iii.]

BRIGNALL banks are wild and fair,
 And Greta woods are green,
 you may gather garlands there could grace a summer-queen.
 As I rode by Dalton-Hall
 beneath the turrets high,

A Maiden on the castle-wall
 Was singing merrily:

"O Brignall banks are fresh and fair,
 And Greta woods are green;
 I'd rather rove with Edmund there
 Than reign our English queen."

"If, Maiden, thou would'st wend with
 me,

To leave both tower and town,
 Thou first must guess what life lead we
 That dwell by dale and down.

And if thou canst that riddle read,
 As read full well you may,
 Then to the greenwood shalt thou speed
 As blithe as Queen of May."

Yet sung she "Brignall banks are fair,
 And Greta woods are green;
 I'd rather rove with Edmund there
 Than reign our English queen.

"I read you by your bugle-horn
 And by your palfrey good,
 I read you for a ranger sworn
 To keep the king's greenwood."

"A Ranger, lady, winds his horn,
 And 'tis at peep of light;
 His blast is heard at merry morn,
 And mine at dead of night."
 Yet sung she "Brignall banks are fair,
 And Greta woods are gay;
 I would I were with Edmund there
 To reign his Queen of May!

"With burnish'd brand and musketoon
 So gallantly you come,
 I read you for a bold Dragoon
 That lists the tuck of drum."

"I list no more the tuck of drum,
 No more the trumpet hear;
 But when the beetle sounds his hum
 My comrades take the spear.
 And O! though Brignall banks be fair
 And Greta woods be gay,
 Yet mickle must the maiden dare
 Would reign my Queen of May!

"Maiden! a nameless life I lead,
 A nameless death I'll die!
 The fiend whose lantern lights the mead
 Were better mate than I!
 And when I'm with my comrades met

Beneath the greenwood bough
What once we were we all forget,
Nor think what we are now."

• Chorus.

Yet Brignall banks are fresh and fair,
And Greta woods are green,
And you may gather garlands there Would grace a summer-queen.

LAKE CORISKIN.

[From The Lord of the Isles, Canto iii.]

A WHILE their route they silent made,
As men who stalk for mountain-deer,
Till the good Bruce to Ronald said,—

"Saint Mary! what a scene is here!
I've traversed many a mountain-strand,
Abroad and in my native land,
And it has been my lot to tread
Where safety more than pleasure led;
Thus, many a waste I've wandered o'er, Clombe many a crag, cross'd many a moor,

But, by my halidome,
A scene so rude, so wild as this,
Yet so sublime in barrenness,
Ne'er did my wandering footsteps press,
Where'er I happ'd to roam."

No marvel thus the Monarch spake;
For rarely human eye has known
A scene so stern as that dread lake,
With its dark ledge of barren stone.
Seems that primeval earthquake's sway
Hath rent a strange and shatter'd way Through the rude bosom of the hill,
And that each naked precipice,
Sable ravine, and dark abyss,
Tells of the outrage still.

The wildest glen, but this, can show
Some touch of Nature's genial glow;
On high Benmore green mosses grow,
And heath-bells bud in deep Glencroe,
And copse on Crachan-Ben;
But here,—above, around, below,
On mountain or in glen,
Nor tree, nor shrub, nor plant, nor flower,
Nor aught of vegetative power,
The weary eye may ken.

For all is rocks at random thrown,
Black waves, bare crags, and banks of stone,

As if were here denied
The summer sun, the spring's sweet dew,
That clothe with many a varied hue
The bleakest mountain-side.

And wilder, forward as they wound,
Were the proud cliffs and lake profound.
Huge terraces of granite black Afforded rude and cumber'd track;

For from the mountain hoar, Hurl'd headlong in some night of fear,
When yell'd the wolf, and fled the deer,
Loose crags had toppled o'er;
And some, chance-poised and balanced,
lay

So that a stripling arm might sway
A mass no host could raise,

In Nature's rage at random thrown,
Yet trembling like the Druid's stone
On its precarious base.

The evening mists, with ceaseless
change,

Now clothed the mountains' lofty range,

Now left their foreheads bare,
And round the skirts their mantle furl'd,
Or on the sable waters curl'd,
Or on the eddying breezes whirl'd,
Dispersed in middle air.

And oft, condensed, at once they lower,
When, brief and fierce, the mountain
shower

Pours like a torrent down,
And when return the sun's glad beams,
Whiten'd with foam a thousand streams
Leap from the mountain's crown.

"This lake," said Bruce, "whose barriers drear

Are precipices sharp and sheer,
Yielding no track for goat or deer,
Save the black shelves we tread,
How term you its dark waves? and how Yon northern mountain's pathless brow,
And yonder peak of dread,
That to the evening sun uplifts
The grisly gulfs and slaty rifts,

Which seam its shiver'd head?"—
"Coriskin call the dark lake's name, Coolin the ridge, as bards proclaim,

From old Cuchullin, chief of fame.
But bards, familiar in our isles
Rather with Nature's frowns than smiles,
Full oft their careless humors please
By sportive names from scenes like these.

I would old Torquil were to show
His maidens with their breasts of snow,
Or that my noble Liege were nigh
To hear his Nurse sing lullaby!
(The Maids — tall cliffs with breakers
white,
The Nurse — a torrent's roaring might,)
Or that your eye could see the mood
Of Corryvreckin's whirlpool rude,
When dons the Hag her whiten'd
hood —
'Tis thus our islesmen's fancy frames,
For scenes so stern, fantastic names."

THE BATTLE OF BANNOCK- BURN.

[Lord of the Isles, Canto vi.]

X.

THE King had deem'd the maiden
bright
Should reach him long before the fight,
But storms and fate her course delay:
It was on eve of battle-day:
When o'er the Gillie's hill she rode,
The landscape like a furnace glow'd,
And far as e'er the eye was borne,
The lances waved like autumn-corn.
In battles four beneath their eye,
The forces of King Robert lie.
And one below the hill was laid,
Reserved for rescue and for aid;
And three, advanced, form'd vaward-
line,
'Twixt Bannock's brook and Ninian's
shrine.
Detach'd was each, yet each so nigh
As well might mutual aid supply.
Beyond, the Southern host appears,
A boundless wilderness of spears,
Whose verge or rear the anxious eye
Strove far, but strove in vain, to spy.
Thick flashing in the evening beam, Glaives, lances, bills, and banners gleam;

And where the heaven join'd with the hill,
Was distant armor flashing still,
So wide, so far, the boundless host Seem'd in the blue horizon lost.

XI.

Down from the hill the maiden pass'd,
At the wild show of war aghast;
And traversed first the rearward host,
Reserved for aid where needed most.
The men of Carrick and of Ayr, Lennox and Lanark, too, were there,
And all the western land;
With these the valiant of the Isles Beneath their chieftains rank'd their files,

In many a plaided band.
There, in the centre, proudly raised,
The Bruce's royal standard blazed,
And there Lord Ronald's banner bore
A galley driven by sail and oar.
A wild, yet pleasing contrast, made Warriors in mail and plate array'd,
With the plumed bonnet and the plaid
By these Hebrideans worn;
But O! unseen for three long years,
Dear was the garb of mountaineers
To the fair Maid of Lorn!
For one she look'd — but he was far Busied amid the ranks of war —
Yet with affection's troubled eye
She mark'd his banner boldly fly,
Gave on the countless foe a glance,
And thought on battle's desperate chance.

XIV.

O gay, yet fearful to behold,
Flashing with steel and rough with gold,
And bristled o'er with bills and spears,
With plumes and pennons waving fair,
Was that bright battle-front! for there
Rode England's King and peers:
And who, that saw that monarch ride,
His kingdom battled by his side,
Could then his direful doom foretell! —
Fair was his seat in knightly selle,
And in his sprightly eye was set
Some spark of the Plantagenet.
Though light and wandering was his
glance,

It flash'd at sight of shield and lance.
 "Know'st thou," he said, "De Argentine, Yon knight who marshals thus their line?" —
 "The tokens on his helmet tell The Bruce, my Liege: I know him
 well." —
 "And shall the audacious traitor brave
 The presence where our banners
 wave?" —
 "So please my liege," said Argentine,
 "Were he but horsed on steed like
 mine,
 To give him fair and knightly chance,
 I would adventure forth my lance." —
 "In battle-day," the King replied,
 "Nice tourney rules are set aside.
 — Still must the rebel dare our wrath?
 Set on him — sweep him from our path!" —
 And, at King Edward's signal, soon Dash'd from the ranks Sir Henry Boune.

XV.

Of Hereford's high blood he came,
 A race renown'd for knightly fame.
 He burn'd before his Monarch's eye
 To do some deed of chivalry.
 He spurr'd his steed, he couch'd his lance,
 And darted on the Bruce at once.
 — As motionless as rocks, that bide
 The wrath of the advancing tide,
 The Bruce stood fast. — Each breast beat high,
 And dazzled was each gazing eye —
 The heart had hardly time to think,
 The eyelid scarce had time to wink,
 While on the King, like flash of flame, Spurr'd to full speed the war-horse
 came!
 The partridge may the falcon mock,
 If that slight palfrey stand the shock —
 But, swerving from the knight's career, Just as they met, Bruce shunn'd the
 spear,
 Onward the baffled warrior bore His course — but soon his course was o'er! —
 High in his stirrups stood the King,

And gave his battle-axe the swing.
 Right on De Boune, the whiles he —
 pass'd,
 Fell that stern dint — the first — the —
 last! —
 Such strength upon the blow was put,
 The helmet crash'd like hazel-nut;
 The axe-shaft, with its brazen clasp,
 Was shiver'd to the gauntlet grasp.
 Springs from the blow the startled horse.
 Drops to the plain the lifeless corse;
 — First of that fatal field, how soon,
 How sudden, fell the fierce De Boune!

XXI.

Now onward, and in open view,
 The countless ranks of England drew,
 Dark rolling like the ocean-tide,
 When the rough west hath chafed his
 pride,
 And his deep roar sends challenge wide
 To all that bars his way!
 In front the gallant archers trode,
 The men-at-arms behind them rode,
 And midmost of the phalanx broad
 The Monarch held his sway.
 Beside him many a war-horse fumes,
 Around him waves a sea of plumes,
 Where many a knight in battle known,
 And some who spurs had first braced
 on,
 And deem'd that fight should see them
 won,
 King Edward's hests obey.
 De Argentine attends his side,
 With stout De Valence, Pembroke's
 pride,
 Selected champions from the train,
 To wait upon his bridle-rein.
 Upon the Scottish foe he gazed —
 — At once, before his sight amazed, Sunk banner, spear, and shield;
 Each weapon-point is downward sent,
 Each warrior to the ground is bent.
 "The rebels, Argentine, repent!
 For pardon they have kneel'd." — "Aye! — but they bend to other
 powers,
 And other pardon sue than ours!
 See where yon bare-foot Abbot stands,
 And blesses them with lifted hands:

"Such strength upon the blow was put
The helmet crash'd like hazel-nut."

on the spot where they have kneel'd, these men will die or win the field." —
 "Then prove we if they die or win!
 And Gloster's Earl the fight begin."

XXIII.

Then spurs were dash'd in chargers' flanks,
 they rush'd among the archer ranks, & spears were there the shock to let,
 & stakes to turn the charge was set,
 and how shall yeoman's armor slight,
 and the long lance and mace of
 might?

What may their short swords avail, against barbed horse and shirt of mail?
 And their ranks the chargers sprung, high o'er their heads the weapons
 swung,

and shriek and groan and vengeful shout

ave note of triumph and of rout!
 while, with stubborn hardihood, their English hearts the strife made
 good.

orne down at length on every side, ompell'd to flight, they scatter wide. — et stags of Sherwood leap for glee, and bound the deer of Dallom-Lee!
 he broken bows of Bannock's shore all in the greenwood ring no more!
 ound Wakefield's merry May-pole
 now,

he maids may twine the summer
 bough,
 ay northward look with longing
 glance,

or those that wont to lead the dance,
 or the blithe archers look in vain!
 oken, dispersed, in flight o'erta'en, rced through, trode down, by thousands slain,

ey cumber Bannock's bloody plain.

XXVI.

flinching foot 'gainst foot was set,
 ceasing blow by blow was met;
 The groans of those who fell re drown'd amid the shriller clang at from the blades and harness rang, and in the battle-yell.
 Fast they fell, unheard, forgot,

Both Southern fierce and hardy Scot;
 And O! amid that waste of life,
 What various motives fired the strife!
 The aspiring Noble bled for fame,
 The Patriot for his country's claim;
 This Knight his youthful strength to prove,

And that to win his lady's love;
 Some fought from ruffian thirst of
 blood,

From habit some, or hardihood.

But ruffian stern, and soldier good,

The noble and the slave,
 From various cause the same wild road,
 On the same bloody morning, trode,
 To that dark inn, the grave!

XXVIII.

Bruce, with the pilot's wary eye,
 The slackening of the storm could spy.

"One effort more, and Scotland's free!

Lord of the Isles, my trust in thee

Is firm as Ailsa Rock;

Rush on with Highland sword and targe,

I with my Carrick spearmen charge;
 Now, forward to the shock!"

At once the spears were forward
 thrown,

Against the sun the broadswords
 shone;

The pibroch lent its maddening tone,
 And loud King Robert's voice was known - -

"Carrick, press on — they fail, they fail!

Press on, brave sons of Innisgail,
 The foe is fainting fast!

Each strike for parent, child, and
 wife,

For Scotland, liberty, and life, —
 The battle cannot last!"

XXXI.

Already scatter'd o'er the plain,
 Reproof, command, and counsel vain,
 The rearward squadrons fled amain,

Or made but doubtful stay;

But when they mark'd the seeming show

Of fresh and fierce and marshall'd foe,
 The boldest broke array.

O give their hapless prince his due!
 In vain the royal Edward threw
 His person 'mid the spears,
 Cried, "Fight!" to terror and despair,
 Menaced, and wept, and tore his hair,
 And cursed their caitiff fears;
 Till Pembroke turn'd his bridle rein,
 And forced him from the fatal plain
 With them rode Argentine, until They gain'd the summit of the hill,
 But quitted there the train: —
 "In yonder field a gage I left, — I must not live of fame bereft;
 I needs must turn again.
 Speed hence, my Liege, for on your trace
 The fiery Douglas takes the chase,
 I know his banner well.
 God send my Sovereign joy and bliss,
 And many a happier field than this! — Once more, my Liege, farewell."

HUNTING SONG.

WAKEN, lords and ladies gay,
 On the mountain dawns the day,
 All the jolly chase is here,
 With hawk, and horse, and hunting-spear!
 Hounds are in their couples yelling, Hawks are whistling, horns are knell-
 ing,
 Merrily, merrily, mingle they,
 "Waken, lords and ladies gay."

Waken, lords and ladies gay,
 The mist has left the mountain gray,
 Springlets in the dawn are steaming,
 Diamonds on the brake are gleaming:
 And foresters have busy been,
 To track the buck in thickets green;
 Now we come to chant our lay,
 "Waken, lords and ladies gay."

Waken, lords and ladies gay,
 To the green-wood haste away;
 We can show you where he lies,
 Fleet of foot, and tall of size;
 We can show the marks he made,
 When, 'gainst the oak his antlers fray'd;

You shall see him brought to bay,
 "Waken, lords and ladies gay."

Louder, louder chant the lay,
 Waken, lords and ladies gay!
 Tell them youth, and mirth, and glee,
 Run a course as well as we;
 Time, stern huntsman! who can baulk
 Staunch as hound, and fleet as hawk:
 Think of this, and rise with day,
 Gentle lords and ladies gay.

THE PALMER.

"O OPEN the door, some pity to show,
 Keen blows the northern wind!
 The glen is white with the drifted snow,
 And the path is hard to find.

"No outlaw seeks your castle gate,
 From chasing the King's deer, Though even an outlaw's wretched
 state
 Might claim compassion here.

"A weary Palmer, worn and weak,
 I wander for my sin;
 O open, for Our Lady's sake!
 A pilgrim's blessing win!

"I'll give you pardons from the Pope,
 And reliques from o'er the sea; —
 Or if for these you will not ope,
 Yet ope for charity.

"The hare is crouching in her form,
 The hart beside the hind;
 An aged man, amid the storm,
 No shelter can I find.

"You hear the Ettrick's sullen roar,
 Dark, deep, and strong is he,
 And I must ford the Ettrick o'er,
 Unless you pity me.

"The iron gate is bolted hard,
 At which I knock in vain;
 The owner's heart is closer barr'd,
 Who hears me thus complain.

, farewell! and Mary grant, Id and frail you be,
 may the shelter want,
 ow denied to me."

er on his couch lay warm,

 By fits, so ashly pale she grew,
 Her maidens thought her dying.

Yet keenest powers to see and hear,
 Seem'd in her frame residing;
 Before the watch-dog prick'd his ear,
 She heard her lover's riding;
 Ere scarce a distant form was kenn'd,
 She knew, and waved to greet him;
 And o'er the battlement did bend,
 As on the wing to meet him.

He came — he pass'd — a heedless gaze,
 As o'er some stranger glancing;
 Her welcome, spoke in faltering phrase,
 Lost in his courser's prancing —
 The castle arch, whose hollow tone
 Returns each whisper spoken,
 Could scarcely catch the feeble moan,
 Which told her heart was broken.

REBECCA'S HYMN.

[From Ivanhoe.]

WHEN Israel, of the Lord beloved,
 Out from the land of bondage came,
 Her fathers' God before her moved,
 An awful guide in smoke and flame.
 By day, along the astonish'd lands
 The clouded pillar glided slow;
 By night Arabia's crimson'd sands
 Return'd the fiery column's glow.

Then rose the choral hymn of praise,
 And trump and timbrel answer'd keen,
 And Zion's daughters pour'd their lays,
 With priest's and warrior's voice between.

No portents now our foes amaze,
 Forsaken Israel wanders lone:
 Our fathers would not know THY ways,
 And THOU hast left them to their
 own.

But present still, though now unseen !
 When brightly shines the prosperous
 day,
 Be thoughts of THEE a cloudy screen
 To temper the deceitful ray.
 And oh, when stoops on Judah's path
 In shade and storm the frequent
 night,
 Be THOU, long-suffering, slow to wrath,
 A burning and a shining light !

Our harps we left by Babel's streams,
 The tyrant's jest, the Gentile's scorn ;
 No censer round our altar beams,
 And mute are timbrel, harp, and
 horn.
 But THOU hast said, The blood of goat,
 The flesh of rams, I will not prize ;
 A contrite heart, a humble thought,
 Are mine accepted sacrifice.

SONG. — SOLDIER, WAKE.

[From The Betrothed.]

SOLDIER, wake — the day is peeping, Honor ne'er was won in sleeping, Never when the sunbeams still Lay unreflected on the hill :
 'Tis when they are glinted back
 From axe and armor, spear and jack,
 That they promise future story
 Many a page of deathless glory.
 Shields that are the foeman's terror,
 Ever are the morning's mirror.

Arm and up — the morning beam
 Hath call'd the rustic to his team,
 Hath call'd the falc'ner to the lake,
 Hath call'd the huntsman to the break ;
 The early student ponders o'er
 His dusty tomes of ancient lore.
 Soldier, wake — thy harvest, fame ;
 Thy study, conquest ; war, thy game.
 Shield, that would be foeman's terror,
 Still should gleam the morning's mirror.

Poor hire repays the rustic's pain ;
 More paltry still the sportsman's gain ;
 Vainest of all, the student's theme

Ends in some metaphysic dream :
 Yet each is up, and each has toil'd
 Since first the peep of dawn has smiled :
 And each is eagerer in his aim
 Than he who barter's life for fame.
 Up, up, and arm thee, son of terror !
 Be thy bright shield the morning's mirror.

FAREWELL TO MACKENZIE,

HIGH CHIEF OF KINTAIL.

[From the Gaelic.]

[The original verses are arranged to a beautiful Gaelic air, of which the chorus is adapted to the double pull upon the oars of a galley, and which is therefore distinct from the ordinary jorrams, or boat-songs. They were composed by the Family Bard upon the departure of the Earl of Seaforth, who was obliged to take refuge in Spain, after an unsuccessful effort at insurrection in favor of the Stuart family, in the year 1718.]

FAREWELL to Mackenneth, great Earl of the North,
 The Lord of Lochcarron, Glenshiel, and Seaforth ;
 To the Chieftain this morning his course who began,
 Launching forth on the billows his bark like a swan.
 For a far foreign land he has hoisted his sail :
 Farewell to Mackenzie, High Chief of Kintail !

O swift be the galley, and hardy her crew,
 May her captain be skilful, her mariners true,
 In danger undaunted, unwearied by
 toil,
 Though the whirlwind should rise, and the ocean should boil :
 On the brave vessel's gunnel I drank his bonail,¹
 And farewell to Mackenzie, High Chief of Kintail !

Awake in thy chamber, thou sweet southland gale!
 Like the sighs of his people, breathe soft on his sail:
 Be prolong'd as regret, that his vassals must know,
 Be fair as their faith, and sincere as their woe:
 Be so soft, and so fair, and so faithful,
 sweet gale,
 Wafting onward Mackenzie, High Chief
 of Kintail!

Be his pilot experienced, and trusty,
 and wise,
 To measure the seas and to study the
 skies:
 May he hoist all his canvas from streamer to deck,
 But O! crowd it higher when wafting him back —
 Till 'the cliffs of Skooroora, and Couan's glad vale,
 Shall welcome Mackenzie, High Chief
 of Kintail!

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE.

1772-1834.

[SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE was born at Ottery Saint Mary in the year 1772, was educated at Christ's Hospital and Jesus College, Cambridge, and died in 1834, at Highgate, in the house of Mr. Gillman, under whose friendly care he had passed the last eighteen years of his life, during which years he wrote but little. His first volume of poems was published at Bristol in 1796, and in 1798, Wordsworth's famous volume of Lyrical Ballads, to which Coleridge contributed The Ancient Mariner, together with some other pieces. Christabel, after lying long in manuscript, was printed in 1816, three editions of it appearing in one year; and in the next year Coleridge published a collection of his chief poems, under the title of Sibylline Leaves, "in allusion," as he says, "to the fragmentary and wildly-scattered state in which they had been long suffered to remain." A desultory writer both in prose and verse, he published the first really collective edition of his Poetical and Dramatic Works in the year 1828, in three volumes arranged by himself; a third and more complete issue of which, arranged by another hand, appeared in 1834, the year of his death. The latest reprint, with notes and an excellent memoir, and some poems not included in any earlier collection, is founded on that final edition of 1834.]

DEAD CALM IN THE TROPICS.

[The Ancient Mariner.]

THE fair breeze blew, the white foam
 flew,
 The furrow followed free;
 We were the first that ever burst
 Into that silent sea.

Down dropt the breeze, the sails dropt
 down,
 'Twas sad as sad could be;
 And we did speak only to break
 The silence of the sea!

All in a hot and copper sky,
 The bloody Sun, at noon,

Right up above the mast did stand,
 No bigger than the Moon.

Day after day, day after day,
 We stuck, nor breath nor motion;
 As idle as a painted ship
 Upon a painted ocean.

Water, water, everywhere,
 And all the boards did shrink;
 Water, water, everywhere,
 Nor any drop to drink.

The very deep did rot: O Christ!
 That ever this should be!
 Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs
 Upon the slimy sea.

THE ANCIENT MARINER AMONG THE DEAD BODIES OF THE SAILORS.

ALONE, alone, all, all alone,
Alone on the wide wide sea!
And never a saint took pity on My soul in agony.

The many men, so beautiful!
And they all dead did lie:
And a thousand thousand slimy things
Lived on; and so did I.

I looked upon the rotting sea,
And drew my eyes away;
I looked upon the rotting deck,
And there the dead men lay.

I looked to heaven, and tried to pray,
But or ever a prayer had gusht,
A wicked whisper came, and made
My heart as dry as dust.

I closed my eyes and kept them close,
And the balls like pulses beat;
For the sky and the sea, and the sea and
the sky,
Lay like a load on my weary eye,
And the dead were at my feet.

The cold sweat melted from their limbs,
Nor rot nor reck did they:
The look with which they looked on me
Had never passed away.

An orphan's curse would drag to hell
A spirit from on high;
But oh! more horrible than that
Is the curse in a dead man's eye!
Seven days, seven nights, I saw that curse,
And yet I could not die.

THE ANCIENT MARINER FINDS A VOICE TO BLESS AND PRAY.

BEYOND the shadow of the ship,
I watched the water-snakes:
They moved in tracks of shining white,
And when they reared, the elfish light
Fell off in hoary flakes.

Within the shadow of the ship
I watched their rich attire:
Blue, glossy green, and velvet black,
They coiled and swam; and every track
Was a flash of golden fire.

O happy living things! no tongue
Their beauty might declare:
A spring of love gushed from my heart,
And I blessed them unaware:
Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
And I blessed them unaware.

The selfsame moment I could pray;
And from my neck so free
The Albatross fell off, and sank
Like lead into the sea.

THE BREEZE AFTER THE CALM.

OH sleep! it is a gentle thing,
Beloved from pole to pole!
To Mary Queen the praise be given!
She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven,
That slid into my soul.

The silly buckets on the deck,
That had so long remained,
I dreamt that they were filled with dew;
And when I woke, it rained.

My lips were wet, my throat was cold,
My garments all were dank;
Sure I had drunken in my dreams,
And still my body drank.

I moved, and could not feel my limbs:
I was so light — almost
I thought that I had died in sleep,
And was a blessed ghost.

And soon I heard a roaring wind:
It did not come anear;
But with its sound it shook the sails,
That were so thin and sere.

The upper air burst into life!
And a hundred fire-flags sheen,
To and fro they were hurried about!
And to and fro, and in and out,
The wan stars danced between.

coming wind did roar more loud,
 The sails did sigh like sedge;
 The rain poured down from one black cloud;
 The moon was at its edge.

A black cloud was cleft, and still
 The moon was at its side:
 The waters shot from some high crag,
 The lightning fell with never a jag,
 A steep and wide.

THE BEST PRAYER.

Prayest best, who loveth best Things both great and small;
 O dear God who loveth us,
 O be and loveth all.

THE FIRST PART OF CHRISTABEL.

In the middle of night by the castle clock,
 The owls have awaken'd the crowing cock,
 Hark! — Tu-whoo!
 Hark, again! the crowing cock, Crowsily it crew.

Online, the Baron rich,
 A toothless mastiff bitch;
 Her kennel beneath the rock
 Giveth answer to the clock,
 For the quarters, and twelve for the hour;
 And aye, by shine and shower,
 The short howls, not over loud;
 Aye, she sees my lady's shroud.

Night chilly and dark?
 Night is chilly, but not dark.
 A gray cloud is spread on high,
 But not hides the sky.
 The moon is behind, and at the full;
 But she looks both small and dull.
 Night is chill, the cloud is gray:
 A month before the month of May,
 The Spring comes slowly up this
 way.

The lovely lady, Christabel,
 Whom her father loves so well,
 What makes her in the wood so late,
 A furlong from the castle gate?
 She had dreams all yesternight
 Of her own betrothed knight;
 Dreams that made her moan and leap
 As on her bed she lay in sleep;
 And she in the midnight wood will pray
 For the weal of her lover that's far
 away.

She stole along, she nothing spoke,
 The sighs she heaved were soft and
 low,
 And naught was green upon the oak
 But moss and rarest mistletoe:
 She kneels beneath the huge oak tree,
 And in silence prayeth she.

The lady sprang up suddenly,
 The lovely lady, Christabel!
 It moaned as near as near can be,
 But what it is she cannot tell. —
 On the other side it seems to be Of the huge, broad-breasted, old oak tree.

The night is chill; the forest bare;
 Is it the wind that moaneth bleak?
 There is not wind enough in the air
 To move away the ringlet curl
 From the lovely lady's cheek —
 There is not wind enough to twirl
 The one red leaf, the last of its clan,
 That dances as often as dance it can,
 Hanging so light, and hanging so high,
 On the topmost twig that looks up at the sky.

Hush, beating heart of Christabel!
 Jesu Maria, shield her well!
 She folded her arms beneath her cloak,
 And stole to the other side of the oak.
 What sees she there?

There she sees a damsel bright,
 Drest in a silken robe of white,
 That shadowy in the moonlight shone:
 The neck that made that white robe wan,
 Her stately neck and arms were bare;

Her blue-vein'd feet unsandal'd were,
And wildly glitter'd here and there
The gems entangled in her hair.
I guess, 'twas frightful there to see A lady so richly clad as she — Beautiful exceedingly!

"Mary mother, save me now!"
(Said Christabel,) "And who art
thou?"

The lady strange made answer meet,
And her voice was faint and sweet: —
"Have pity on my sore distress,
I scarce can speak for weariness:
Stretch forth thy hand, and have no
fear!"
Said Christabel, "How camest thou
here?"
And the lady, whose voice was faint and sweet,
Did thus pursue her answer meet: —
"My sire is of a noble line,
And my name is Geraldine:
Five warriors seized me yesternorn,
Me, even me, a maid forlorn:
They choked my cries with force and fright,
And tied me on a palfrey white.
The palfrey was as fleet as wind,
And they rode furiously behind.
They spurred amain, their steeds were
white:
And once we cross'd the shade of night.
As sure as Heaven shall rescue me,
I have no thought what men they be;
Nor do I know how long it is (For I have lain entranced I wis)
Since one, the tallest of the five,
Took me from the palfrey's back,
A weary woman, scarce alive.
Some mutter'd words his comrades
spoke:
He placed me underneath this oak;
He swore they would return with haste;
Whither they went I cannot tell —
I thought I heard, some minutes past,
Sounds as of a castle bell.
Stretch forth thy hand" (thus ended she),
"And help a wretched maid to flee."

Then Christabel stretch'd forth her hand
And comforted fair Geraldine:
"O well, bright dame! may you command

The service of Sir Leoline;
And gladly our stout chivalry
Will he send forth and friends withal
To guide and guard you safe and free
Home to your noble father's hall."

She rose: and forth with steps they pass'd

That strove to be, and were not, fast.
Her gracious stars the lady blest,
And thus spake on sweet Christabel:
"All our household are at rest,
The hall as silent as the cell;
Sir Leoline is weak in health,
And may not well awaken'd be,
But we will move as if in stealth,
And I beseech your courtesy,
This night, to share your couch with
me."

They cross'd the moat, and Christabel
Took the key that fitted well;
A little door she open'd straight,
All in the middle of the gate;
The gate that was iron'd within and without,
Where an army in battle array had march'd out.

The lady sank, belike through pain,
And Christabel with might and main Lifted her up, a weary weight,
Over the threshold of the gate:
Then the lady rose again,
And moved, as she were not in pain.

So free from danger, free from fear,
They cross'd the court: right glad they were.

And Christabel devoutly cried
To the lady by her side:
"Praise we the Virgin all divine Who hath rescued thee from thy distress!"

"Alas, alas!" said Geraldine,
"I cannot speak for weariness."
So free from danger, free from fear,
They crossed the court: right glad they were.

her kennel the mastiff old asleep, in moonshine cold.
 The mastiff old did not awake,
 An angry moan did make!
 What can ail the mastiff bitch?
 All now she utter'd yell
 The eye of Christabel.
 'Tis the owl's scritch:
 What can ail the mastiff bitch?

Shed the hall, that echoes still,
 Lightly as you will!
 The floors were flat, the brands were Lying,
 Their own white ashes lying;
 When the lady pass'd, there came
 A gleam of light, a fit of flame;
 Christabel saw the lady's eye,
 Nothing else saw she thereby,
 The boss of the shield of Sir Leone tall,
 Hung in a murky old niche in The wall.
 "Softly tread," said Christabel,
 "For here she seldom sleepeth well."

Christabel her feet doth bare,
 Mute of the listening air,
 And all their way from stair to stair,
 A glimmer, and now in gloom,
 As they pass the Baron's room,
 As death, with stifled breath!
 Now have reach'd her chamber
 Floor;
 And doth Geraldine press down
 The tiles of the chamber floor.

Light shines dim in the open air,
 As a moonbeam enters here.
 Without its light can see
 The member carved so curiously,
 With figures strange and sweet,
 As out of the carver's brain,
 The lady's chamber meet:
 A carpet with twofold silver chain
 Led to an angel's feet.

The lamp burns dead and dim;
 Christabel the lamp will trim.
 She trim'd the lamp, and made it
 Bright,
 As it swinging to and fro,

While Geraldine, in wretched plight,
 Sank down upon the floor below.

"O weary lady, Geraldine,
 I pray you, drink this cordial wine!
 It is a wine of virtuous powers;
 My mother made it of wild flowers."

"And will your mother pity me,
 Who am a maiden most forlorn?" Christabel answered — "Woe is me!
 She died the hour that I was born.
 I have heard the gray-hair'd friar tell,
 How on her death-bed she did say,
 That she should hear the castle-bell
 Strike twelve upon my wedding-day.
 O mother dear! that thou wert here!"
 "I would," said Geraldine, "she were!"

But soon with altered voice, said she — "Off, wandering mother! Peak and Pine!"

I have power to bid thee flee."
 Alas! what ails poor Geraldine?
 Why stares she with unsettled eye?
 Can she the bodiless dead espy?
 And why with hollow voice cries she,
 "Off, woman, off! this hour is mine — Though thou her guardian spirit be,
 Off, woman, off! 'tis given to me."

Then Christabel knelt by the lady's side,
 And raised to heaven her eyes so blue —
 "Alas!" said she, "this ghastly ride — Dear lady! it hath wilder'd you!"
 The lady wiped her moist cold brow,
 And faintly said, "'Tis over now!"

Again the wild-flower wine she drank;
 Her fair large eyes 'gan glitter bright,
 And from the floor whereon she sank,
 The lofty lady stood upright:
 She was most beautiful to see,
 Like a lady of a far countrée.

And thus the lofty lady spake:
 "All they who live in the upper sky,
 Do love you, holy Christabel!
 And you love them, and for their sake
 And for the good which me befell,
 Even I in my degree will try,
 Fair maiden, to requite you well.

But now unrobe yourself; for I Must pray, ere yet in bed I lie."

Quoth Christabel, "So let it be!"
And as the lady bade, did she.
Her gentle limbs did she undress,
And lay down in her loveliness.

But through her brain of weal and woe
So many thoughts moved to and fro,
That vain it were her lids to close;
So half-way from the bed she rose,
And on her elbow did recline
To look at the lady Geraldine.

Beneath the lamp the lady bow'd,
And slowly roll'd her eyes around;
Then drawing in her breath aloud
Like one that shudder'd, she unbound
The cincture from beneath her breast:
Her silken robe, and inner vest,
Dropt to her feet, and full in view,
Behold! her bosom and half her side —
A sight to dream of, not to tell!
O shield her! shield sweet Christabel!

Yet Geraldine nor speaks nor stirs;
Ah! what a stricken look was hers!
Deep from within she seems half-way
To lift some weight with sick assay,
And eyes the maid and seeks delay;
Then suddenly, as one defied,
Collects herself in scorn and pride,
And lay down by the maiden's side! —
And in her arms the maid she took,

Ah well-a-day!

And with low voice and doleful look
These words did say:

"In the touch of this bosom there worketh a spell,

Which is lord of thy utterance, Christabel!

Thou knowest to-night, and wilt know to-morrow,

This mark of my shame, this seal of my sorrow;

But vainly thou warrest,

For this is alone in Thy power to declare,

That in the dim forest

Thou heard'st a low moaning,

And found'st a bright lady, surpassing
fair;

And didst bring her home with thee in love and in charity,

To shield her and shelter her from the damp air.

SEVERED FRIENDSHIP.

[Christabel, Part II.]

ALAS! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison truth;
And constancy lives in realms above;
And life is thorn; and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we love,
Doth work like madness in the brain.
And thus it chanced, as I divine,
With Roland and Sir Leoline.
Each spake words of high disdain
And insult to his heart's best brother:
They parted — ne'er to meet again!
But never either found another
To free the hollow heart from paining —
They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
A dreary sea now flows between; —
But neither heat, nor frost, nor thunder,
Shall wholly do away, I ween,
The marks of that which once hath been

YOUTH AND AGE.

VERSE, a breeze 'mid blossoms straying,
Where Hope clung feeding, like a bee —
Both were mine! Life went a-maying
With Nature, Hope, and Poesy,

When I was young!

When I was young? — Ah, woeful when!

Ah! for the change 'twixt Now and Then!

This breathing house not built with
hands,

This body that does me grievous wrong,
O'er airy cliffs and glittering sands,

How lightly then it flashed along: —

Like those trim skiffs, unknown of yore

On winding lakes and rivers wide,

That ask no aid of sail or oar,

That fear no spite of wind or tide!

cared this body for wind or weather,
youth and I lived in't together.

are lovely; love is flower-like;
lip is a sheltering tree;
days that came down shower-like friendship, Love, and Liberty, Ere I was old!

Is old? Ah woeful ere, tells me, Youth's no longer here!
For years so many and sweet, when that thou and I were one;
it but a fond conceit —

Be that thou art gone!
The bell hath not yet tolled:
A wert aye a masker bold!
A strange disguise hast now put on,
Believe that thou art gone?

These locks in silvery slips,
Thy spring gait, this altered size:
The ebb-tide blossoms on thy lips,
Thou takest sunshine from thine eyes!
At thought: so think I will
That thou and I are house-mates still.

Days are the gems of morning,
Tears of mournful eve!

No hope is, life's a warning
Which serves to make us grieve,
When we are old:

Which serves to make us grieve
And tedious taking leave,
The poor night-related guest,
Which not rudely be dismissed,
Which outstayed his welcome while,
Which is the jest without the smile.

BEFORE SUN-RISE, IN THE VALE OF CHAMOUNI.

Thou a charm to stay the morning
Or

Deep course? So long he seems To pause

Ald awful head, O sovran Blanc!
The é and Arveiron at thy base
Uselessly; but thou, most awful
Form!

Comest forth thy silent sea of pines,
Thou art! Around thee and above

Deep is the air, and dark, substantial,
black,

An ebon mass: methinks thou piercest it As with a wedge! But when I look
again,

It is thine own calm home, thy crystal
shrine,

Thy habitation from eternity!

O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon
thee,

Till thou, still present to the bodily sense, Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer

I worshipped the Invisible alone.

Yet, like some sweet beguiling melody,
So sweet, we know not we are listening to it,

Thou, the meanwhile, wert blending with my thought,

Yea, with my life and life's own secret
joy,

Till the dilating Soul, enrapt, transfused,
Into mighty vision passing — there,
As in her natural form, swelled vast to Heaven!

Awake my soul! not only passive
praise

Thou owest! not alone these swelling
tears,

Mute thanks, and secret ecstasy! Awake, Voice of sweet song! Awake, my heart, awake!

Green vales and icy cliffs, all join my Hymn.

Thou first and chief, sole sovran of the Vale!

Oh, struggling with the darkness all the
night,

And visited all night by troops of stars,
Or when they climb the sky, or when they sink:

Companion of the morning star at dawn, Thyself Earth's rosy star, and of the dawn

Co-herald: wake, oh wake, and utter
praise!

Who sank thy sunless pillars deep in
earth?

Who filled thy countenance with rosy
light?

Who made thee parent of perpetual streams?

And you, ye five wild torrents, fiercely glad!
Who called you forth from night and utter death,
From dark and icy caverns called you
forth,
Down those precipitous, black, jagged
rocks,
For ever shattered and the same for ever?

Who gave you your invulnerable life,
Your strength, your speed, your fury,
and your joy,
Unceasing thunder and eternal foam?
And who commanded (and the silence
came),
Here let the billows stiffen and have
rest?

Ye ice-falls! ye that from the mountain's brow
Adown enormous ravines slope amain — Torrents, methinks, that heard a mighty
voice,
And stopped at once amid their maddest plunge!
Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!
Who made you glorious as the gates of
Heaven
Beneath the keen full moon? Who bade the sun Clothe you with rainbows? Who, with living flowers
Of loveliest blue, spread garlands at your feet? —

God! let the torrents, like a shout of nations,
Answer! and let the ice-plains echo,
God!

God! sing, ye meadow-streams, with gladsome voice!

Ye pine-groves, with your soft and soul-like sounds!

And they too have a voice, yon piles of
snow,
And in their perilous fall shall thunder,
God!

Ye living flowers that skirt the eternal frost!
Ye wild goats sporting round the eagle's nest!

Ye eagles, playmates of the mountain-
storm!

Ye lightnings, the dread arrows of the clouds!

Ye signs and wonders of the element!
Utter forth God, and fill the hills with
praise!

Thou, too, hoar Mount! with thy sky-pointing peaks,
Oft from whose feet the avalanche, un-
heard,
Shoots downward, glittering through the pure serene,
Into the depth of clouds that veil thy
breast —

Thou too again, stupendous Mountain!
thou

That as I raise my head, awhile bowed
low

In adoration, upward from thy base Slow travelling with dim eyes suffused with tears,

Solemnly seemest like a vapory cloud
To rise before me. — Rise, oh, ever rise, Rise like a cloud of incense from the Earth!

Thou kingly Spirit throned among the hills,

Thou dread ambassador from Earth to
Heaven,

Great hierarch! tell thou the silent sky,
And tell the stars, and tell yon rising
sun,

Earth, with her thousand voices, praise
God.

DOMESTIC PEACE.

TELL me, on what holy ground
May Domestic Peace be found?
Halcyon Daughter of the skies,
Far on fearful wings she flies,
From the pomp of sceptred state,
From the rebel's noisy hate.
In a cottaged vale she dwells,
Listening to the Sabbath bells!
Still around her steps are seen Spotless Honor's meeker mien,
Love, the sire of pleasing fears,
Sorrow smiling through her tears,
And, conscious of the past employ,
Memory, bosom-spring of joy.

GENEVIEVE.

MAID of my love, sweet Genevieve!
 In beauty's light you glide along:
 Your eye is like the star of eve,
 And sweet your voice as seraph's song.
 Yet not your heavenly beauty gives
 This heart with passion soft to glow:
 Within your soul a voice there lives!
 It bids you hear the tale of woe:
 When sinking low, the sufferer wan
 Beholds no hand outstretched to save,
 Fair as the bosom of the swan
 That rises graceful o'er the wave,
 I've seen your breast with pity heave,
 And therefore love I you, sweet Genevieve!

A DAY-DREAM.

My eyes make pictures when they're shut:—

I see a fountain large and fair,
 A willow and a ruined hut,
 And thee, and me, and Mary there.
 O Mary! make thy gentle lap our pillow!

Bend o'er us like a bower, my beautiful green willow!

A wild rose roofs the ruined shed,
 And that and summer will agree;
 And lo! where Mary leans her head
 Two dear names carved upon the tree!
 And Mary's tears, they are not tears of sorrow:
 Our sister and our friends will both be here to-morrow.

'Twas day! But now, few, large, and bright,

The stars are round the crescent moon!
 And now it is a dark, warm night,
 The balmiest of the month of June.

A glow-worm fallen, and on the marge remounting

Shines, and its shadow shines, fit stars for our sweet fountain!

Oh, ever, ever be thou blest!
 For dearly, Nora, love I thee!
 This brooding warmth across my breast,

This depth of tranquil bliss—ah, me!
 Fount, tree, and shed are gone—I know not whither;
 But in one quiet room, we three are still together.

The shadows dance upon the wall,
 By the still-dancing fire-flames made;
 And now they slumber, moveless all!
 And now they melt to one deep shade!
 But not from me shall this mild darkness steal thee:
 I dream thee with mine eyes, and at my heart I feel thee.

Thine eyelash on my cheek doth play;
 'Tis Mary's hand upon my brow!
 But let me check this tender lay,
 Which none may hear but she and thou!
 Like the still hive at quiet midnight humming,
 Murmur it to yourselves, ye two beloved women!

THE HAPPY HUSBAND.

OFT, oft methinks, the while with thee
 I breath, as from the heart, thy dear
 And dedicated name, I hear
 A promise and a mystery,
 A pledge of more than passing life,
 Yea, in that very name of wife!

A pulse of love, that ne'er can sleep!
 A feeling that upbraids the heart
 With happiness beyond desert,
 That gladness half requests to weep!
 Nor bless I not the keener sense
 And unalarming turbulence

Of transient joys that ask no sting
 From jealous fears, or coy denying;
 But born beneath love's brooding wing
 And into tenderness soon dying, Wheel out their giddy moment, then Resign the soul to love again.

A more precipitated vein
 Of notes, that eddy in the flow
 Of smoothest song, they come, they go
 And leave their sweeter under-strain
 Its own sweet self — a love of thee
 That seems, yet cannot greater be!

KUBLA KHAN; OR, A VISION IN A DREAM.

A FRAGMENT.

[In the summer of the year 1797, the author, then in ill health, had retired to a lonely farmhouse between Porlock and Linton, on the Exmoor confines of Somerset and Devonshire. In consequence of a slight indisposition an anodyne had been prescribed, from the effect of which he fell asleep in his chair at the moment he was reading the following sentence, or words of the same substance, in "Purchas's Pilgrimage": — "Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to be built, and a stately garden thereunto: and thus ten miles of fertile ground were inclosed with a wall." The author continued for about three hours in a profound sleep, at least of the external senses, during which time he has the most vivid confidence that he could not have composed less than from two to three hundred lines; if that indeed can be called composition in which all the images rose up before him as things, with a parallel production of the correspondent expressions, without any sensation or consciousness of effort. On awakening he appeared to himself to have a distinct recollection of the whole, and taking his pen, ink, and paper, instantly and eagerly wrote down the lines that are here preserved. At this moment he was unfortunately called out by a person on business from Porlock, and detained by him above an hour, and on his return to his room, found, to his no small surprise and mortification, that though he still retained some vague and dim recollection of the general purport of the vision, yet, with the exception of some eight or ten scattered lines and images, all the rest had passed away like the images on the surface of a stream into which a stone had been cast, but, alas! without the after restoration of the latter.

Then all the charm
 Is broken — all that phantom-world so fair
 Vanishes, and a thousand circlelets spread,
 And each mis-shape the other. Stay awhile, Poor youth! who scarcely dar'st lift up thine
 eyes —

The stream will soon renew its smoothness, soon
 The visions will return! And lo! he stays,
 And soon the fragments dim of lovely forms
 Come trembling back, unite, and now once more
 The pool becomes a mirror.

Yet, from the still-surviving recollections in his mind, the author has frequently purposed to finish for himself what had been originally, as it were, given to him. Αὐριον ἄδιον ἔστω: but the to-morrow is yet to come.]

In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
 A stately pleasure-dome decree:
 Where Alph, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man
 Down to a sunless sea.
 So twice five miles of fertile ground
 With walls and towers were girdled
 round:
 And there were gardens bright with sinuous rills
 Where blossomed many an incense-bearing
 tree;
 And here were forests ancient as the hills,
 Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.

But oh! that deep romantic chasm which slanted
 Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover!
 A savage place! as holy and enchanted As e'er beneath a waning moon was haunted
 By woman wailing for her demon-lover!
 And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,
 As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
 A mighty fountain momentarily was forced:
 Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding hail,
 Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's flail:
 And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
 It flung up momentarily the sacred river.
 Five miles meandering with a mazy motion
 Through wood and dale the sacred river
 ran,
 Then reached the caverns measureless
 to man,
 And sank in tumult to a lifeless ocean:
 And 'mid this tumult Kubla heard from far
 Ancestral voices prophesying war!

The shadow of the dome of pleasure
 Floated midway on the waves;
 Where was heard the mingled measure
 From the fountain and the caves,
 It was a miracle of rare device,
 A sunny pleasure-dome with caves of ice!
 A damsel with a dulcimer
 In a vision once I saw:
 It was an Abyssinian maid,
 And on her dulcimer she played,
 Singing of Mount Abora.
 Could I revive within me
 Her symphony and song,
 To such a deep delight 'twould win me,
 That with music loud and long,
 I would build that dome in air,
 That sunny dome! those caves of ice!
 And all who heard should see them there,
 And all should cry, Beware! Beware!
 His flashing eyes, his floating hair!
 Weave a circle round him thrice,
 And close your eyes with holy dread,
 For he on honey-dew hath fed,
 And drunk the milk of Paradise.

TIME, REAL AND IMAGINARY.

AN ALLEGORY.

ON the wide level of a mountain's head,
 I knew not where, but 'twas some faery place)
 Their pinions, ostrich-like, for sails out-
 spread,
 Two lovely children run an endless race,
 A sister and a brother!
 That far outstripped the other;
 Yet ever runs she with reverted face,
 And looks and listens for the boy behind:
 For he, alas! is blind!
 O'er rough and smooth with even step
 he passed,
 And knows not whether he be first or last.

LOVE.

ALL thoughts, all passions, all delights,
 Whatever stirs this mortal frame,
 All are but ministers of Love,
 And feed his sacred flame.

Oft in my waking dreams do I Live o'er again that happy hour,
 When midway on the mount I lay,
 Beside the ruined tower.

The moonshine, stealing o'er the scene,
 Had blended with the lights of eve;
 And she was there, my hope, my joy,
 My own dear Genevieve!

She leaned against the armed man,
 The statue of the armed knight;
 She stood and listened to my lay,
 Amid the lingering light.

Few sorrows hath she of her own,
 My hope! my joy! my Genevieve!
 She loves me best, whene'er I sing
 The songs that make her grieve.

I played a soft and doleful air,
 I sang an old and moving story —
 An old rude song, that suited well
 That ruin wild and hoary.

She listened with a flitting blush,
 With downcast eyes and modest grace;
 For well she knew, I could not choose
 But gaze upon her face.

I told her of the Knight that wore Upon his shield a burning brand;
 And that for ten long years he wooed
 The Lady of the Land.

I told her how he pined; and ah!
 The deep, the low, the pleading tone
 With which I sang another's love, Interpreted my own.

She listened with a flitting blush,
 With downcast eyes, and modest grace;
 And she forgave me, that I gazed Too fondly on her face!

But when I told the cruel scorn
That crazed that bold and lovely Knight,
And that he crossed the mountain-
woods,
Nor rested day nor night;

That sometimes from the savage den,
And sometimes from the darksome
shade,
And sometimes starting up at once
In green and sunny glade, —

There came and looked him in the face
An angel beautiful and bright;
And that he knew it was a Fiend,
This miserable Knight!

And that unknowing what he did,
He leaped amid a murderous band,
And saved from outrage worse than
death
The Lady of the Land; —

And how she wept, and clasped his knees;
And how she tended him in vain —
And ever strove to expiate
The scorn that crazed his brain; —

And that she nursed him in a cave;
And how his madness went away,
When on the yellow forest leaves
A dying man he lay; —

His dying words — but when I reached
That tenderest strain of all the ditty,
My faltering voice and pausing harp
Disturbed her soul with pity!

All impulses of soul and sense
Had thrilled my guileless Genevieve;
The music, and the doleful tale,
The rich and balmy eve;

And hopes, and fears that kindle hope,
An undistinguishable throng,
And gentle wishes, long subdued,
Subdued and cherished long!

She wept with pity and delight,
She blushed with love, and virgin
shame;

And like the murmur of a dream,
I heard her breathe my name.

Her bosom heaved — she stept aside,
As conscious of my look she stept —
Then suddenly, with timorous eye
She fled to me and wept.

She half enclosed me with her arms,
She pressed me with a meek embrace;
And bending back her head, looked up
And gazed upon my face.

'Twas partly love, and partly fear,
And partly 'twas a hashful art,
That I might rather feel, than see,
The swelling of her heart.

I calmed her fears, and she was calm,
And told her love with virgin-pride;
And so I won my Genevieve,
My bright and beautiful Bride.

SONNET.

As when far off the warbled strains are
heard,
That soar on Morning's wing the vales
among,
Within his cage the imprisoned matin
bird
Swells the full chorus with a generous
song:
He bathes no pinion in the dewy light,
No father's joy, no lover's bliss he shares,
Yet still the rising radiance cheers his
sight;
His fellows' freedom soothes the cap-tive's cares!
Thou, Fayette! who didst wake with startling voice
Life's better sun from that long wintry
night,
Thus in thy country's triumphs shalt rejoice,
And mock with raptures high the dun-geon's might:
For lo! the morning struggles into day,
And Slavery's spectres shriek and vanish from the ray!

THE EOLIAN HARP.●

[Composed at Clevedon, Somersetshire.]

M: pensive Sara! thy soft cheek reclined
Thus on mine arm, most soothing sweet it is
To sit beside our cot, our cot o'ergrown With white-flowered jasmin, and the broad-leaved myrtle, (Meet emblems they of Innocence and Love!)

And watch the clouds, that late were rich with light, Slow saddening round, and mark the star of eve Serenely brilliant (such should wisdom
be) Shine opposite! How exquisite the scents
Snatched from yon bean-field! and the world so hushed!
The stilly murmur o' the distant sea Tells us of silence. And that simplest lute,
Placed length-ways in the clasping casement, hark!
How by the desultory breeze caressed, Like some coy maid half-yielding to her lover,
It pours such sweet upbraiding, as must needs
Tempt to repeat the wrong! and now, its strings
Boldlier swept, the long sequacious notes
Over delicious surges sink and rise,
Such a soft floating witchery of sound As twilight Elfin's make, when they at eve
Voyage on gentle gales from Fairy-
Land,
Where melodies round honey-dropping
flowers,
Footless and wild, like birds of Paradise,
Nor pause, nor perch, hovering on untamed wing!
O! the one life, within us and abroad,
Which meets all motion, and becomes its soul,

A light in sound, a sound-like power in
light,
Rhythm in all thought, and joyance everywhere.
Methinks, it should have been impossible
Not to love all things in a world so filled,
Where the breeze warbles and the mute still air
Is Music slumbering on her instrument!
And thus, my love! as on the midway slope
Of yonder hill I stretch my limbs at noon,
Whilst through my half-closed eyelids I behold
The sunbeams dance, like diamonds, on the main,
And tranquil muse upon tranquillity;
Full many a thought uncalled and un-
detained,
And many idle flitting phantasies, Traverse my indolent and passive
brain,
As wild and various as the random
gales
That swell and flutter on this subject lute!

And what if all of animated nature
Be but organic harps diversely framed,
That tremble into thought, as o'er them sweeps Plastic and vast, one intellectual
breeze,
At once the Soul of each, and God of
all?

But thy more serious eye a mild reproof
Darts, O beloved woman! nor such thoughts
Dim and unhallowed dost thou not reject,
And biddest me walk humbly with my
God.
Meek daughter in the family of Christ!
Well hast thou said and holily dis-praised
These shapings of the unregenerate
mind, Bubbles that glitter as they rise and break

On vain Philosophy's aye-babbling
 spring.
 For never guiltless may I speak of Him,
 The Incomprehensible! save when with awe
 I praise Him, and with faith that inly feels;

Who with His saving mercies healed
 me,
 A sinful and most miserable man, Wildered and dark, and gave me to possess
 Peace, and this cot, and thee, heart-honored Maid!

ROBERT TANNAHILL.

1774-1810.

[A LYRICAL poet whose songs rival all but the best of Burns in popularity. Born at Paisley, June 3, 1774. His education was limited, but he was a diligent student and reader. He followed the trade of a weaver in his native town till his twenty-sixth year, when he removed to Lancashire, where he remained for two years, until the declining state of his father's health induced him to return. In 1807 he published a volume of poems and songs, the first edition of which sold in a few weeks, and became immensely popular with all classes of his countrymen. He afterwards fell into a state of morbid despondency, aggravated by bodily weakness, which at length resulted in mental derangement, and he committed suicide by drowning, May 17, 1810.]

THE BRAES O' BALQUHITHER.

LET us go, lassie, go,
 To the braes o' Balquhither,
 Where the blae-berries grow
 'Mang the bonnie Highland heather;
 Where the deer and the roe,
 Lightly bounding together,
 Sport the lang summer day
 On the braes o' Balquhither.

I will twine thee a bower
 By the clear siller fountain,
 And I'll cover it o'er Wi' the flowers of the mountain;
 I will range through the wilds,
 And the deep glens sae drearie,
 And return wi' the spoils
 To the bower o' my dearie.

When the rude wintry win'
 Idly raves round our dwelling,
 And the roar of the linn
 On the night breeze is swelling,
 So merrily we'll sing,
 As the storm rattles o'er us,
 Till the dear shieling ring
 Wi' the light lilting chorus.

Now the summer's in prime Wi' the flowers richly blooming,
 And the wild mountain thyme
 A' the moorlands perfuming:
 To our dear native scenes
 Let us journey together,
 Where glad innocence reigns 'Mang the braes o' Balquhither.

THE FLOWER O' DUMBLANE.

THE sun has gane down o'er the lofty Benlomond,
 And left the red clouds to preside o'er the scene,
 While lanely I stray in the calm summer
 gloamin,
 To muse on sweet Jessie, the flower
 o' Dumblane.
 How sweet is the brier, wi' its saft fauldin' blossom!
 And sweet is the birk, wi' its mantle
 o' green;
 Yet sweeter and fairer, and dear to this bosom,

Is lovely young Jessie, the flower o'
Dumblane.
She's modest as ony, and blithe as she's bonnie;
For guileless simplicity marks her its
ain:
And far be the villain, divested of feeling,
Wha'd blight in its bloom the sweet flower o' Dumblane.
Sing on, thou sweet mavis, thy hymn to the e'ening;
Thou'rt dear to the echoes of Calder-wood glen:
Sae dear to this bosom, sae artless and winning,
Is charming young Jessie, the flower
o' Dumblane.

How lost were my days till I met wi'
my Jessie!
The sports o' the city seem'd foolish
and vain;
I ne'er saw a nymph I would ca' my dear lassie,
Till charm'd wi' sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane.
Though mine were the station o' loftiest grandeur, [pain,
Amidst its profusion I'd languish in And reckon as naething the height o' its splendor,
If wanting sweet Jessie, the flower o'
Dumblane.

THE MIDGES DANCE ABOON THE BURN.

THE midges dance aboon the burn;
The dew's begin to fa';
The pairtricks down the rushy holm
Set up their e'ening ca'.
Now loud and clear the blackbird's sang
Rings through the briery shaw,
While flitting gay the swallows play
Around the castle wa'.

Beneath the golden gloamin' sky
The mavis mends her lay;
The redbreast pours his sweetest strains,
To charm the ling'ring day;
While weary yaldrins seem to wail
Their little nestlings torn,
The merry wren, frae den to den,
Gaes jinking through the thorn.

The roses fauld their silken leaves,
The foxglove shuts its bell;
The honeysuckle and the birk
Spread fragrance through the dell.
Let others crowd the giddy court
Of mirth and revelry,
The simple joys that Nature yields
Are dearer far to me.

MRS. MARY TIGHE.

1774-1810.

[THE daughter of William Blatchford of the county of Wicklow, Ireland. Her history is but little known to the public. Mrs. Tighe is chiefly known by her poem of Psyche in six cantos, founded on the classic fable of Apuleius, of the lives of Cupid and Psyche, or the allegory of Love and the Soul. Some of her minor pieces are also scarcely exceeded for beauty and pathos by anything of the kind in the language.]

PSYCHE GAZING ON CUPID.

[From The Marriage of Cupid and Psyche.]

ALLOW'D to settle on celestial eyes, Soft sleep, exulting, now exerts his
sway,
From Psyche's anxious pillow gladly
flies

To veil those orbs, whose pure and lam-bent ray
The powers of heaven submissively obey.
Trembling and breathless then she softly rose,
And seized the lamp, where it ob-scurely lay,

With hand too rashly daring to disclose
The sacred veil which hung mysterious o'er her woes.

Twice, as with agitated step she went,
The lamp expiring shone with doubtful
gleam,
As though it warn'd her from her rash
intent:
And twice she paused, and on its trembling beam
Gazed with suspended breath, while voices seem
With murmuring sound along the roof to sigh;
As one just waking from a troublous
dream,
With palpitating heart and straining eye,
Still fix'd with fear remains, still thinks the danger nigh.

Oh, daring Muse! wilt thou indeed essay
To paint the wonders which that lamp could show?
And canst thou hope in living words to
say
The dazzling glories of that heavenly
view?
Ah! well I ween, that if with pencil true
That splendid vision could be well ex-
press'd,
The fearful awe imprudent Psyche knew Would seize with rapture every wondering breast,
When Love's all-potent charms divinely stood confess'd.

All imperceptible to human touch,
His wings display celestial essence
light;
The clear effulgence of the blaze is such,
The brilliant plumage shines so heavenly bright,
That mortal eyes turn dazzled from the
sight;
A youth he seems, in manhood's freshest years;
Round his fair neck, as clinging with
delight,
Each golden curl resplendently appears,

Or shades his darker brow, which grace majestic wears:

Or o'er his guileless front the ringlets
bright
Their rays of sunny lustre seem to throw,
That front than polished ivory more
white!
His blooming cheeks with deeper blushes glow
Than roses scatter'd o'er a bed of snow:
While on his lips, distill'd in balmy dews (Those lips divine, that even in silence
know
The heart to touch), persuasion to infuse,
Still hangs a rosy charm that never vainly sues.

The friendly curtain of indulgent sleep
Disclosed not yet his eyes' resistless sway,
But from their silky veil there seem'd to peep
Some brilliant glances with a softened
ray,
Which o'er his features exquisitely play,
And all his polish'd limbs suffuse with
light.
Thus through some narrow space the azure day,
Sudden its cheerful rays diffusing bright, Wide darts its lucid beams, to gild the brow of night.

His fatal arrows and celestial bow Beside the couch were negligently
thrown,
Nor needs the god his dazzling arms to show
His glorious birth; such beauty round him shone
As sure could spring from Beauty's self
alone;
The bloom which glow'd o'er all of soft desire
Could well proclaim him Beauty's cherish'd son:
And Beauty's self will oft those charms admire,
And steal his witching smile, his glance's living fire.

Speechless with awe, in transport strangely lost,
Long Psyche stood with fix'd adoring
eye;
Her limbs immovable, her senses toss'd
Between amazement, fear, and ecstasy,
She hangs enamor'd o'er the deity.
Till from her trembling hand extin-guish'd falls
The fatal lamp — he starts — and suddenly Tremendous thunders echo through the halls,
While ruin's hideous crash bursts o'er
th' affrighted walls.

Dread horror seizes on her sinking
heart,
A mortal chillness shudders at her
breast,
Her soul shrinks fainting from death's icy dart,
The groan scarce utter'd dies but half express'd,
And down she sinks in deadly swoon
oppress'd;
But when at length, awaking from her trance,
The terrors of her fate stand all confess'd,
In vain she casts around her timid
glance;
The rudely frowning scenes her former joys enhance.

No traces of those joys, alas, remain!
A desert solitude alone appears;
No verdant shade relieves the sandy
plain,
The wide-spread waste no gentle fountain cheers;
One barren face the dreary prospect wears;
Nought through the vast horizon meets
her eye
To calm the dismal tumult of her fears;
No trace of human habitation nigh:
A sandy wild beneath, above a threatening sky.

THE LILY.

How withered, perish'd seems the form
Of yon obscure unsightly root!
Yet from the blight of wintry storm,
It hides secure the precious fruit.

The careless eye can find no grace,
No beauty in the scaly folds,
Nor see within the dark embrace
What latent loveliness it holds.

Yet in that bulb, those sapless scales,
The lily wraps her silver vest,
Till vernal suns and vernal gales Shall kiss once more her fragrant
breast.

Yes, hide beneath the mouldering heap
The undelighting slighted thing;
There in the cold earth buried deep,
In silence let it wait the spring.

Oh! many a stormy night shall close
In gloom upon the barren earth,
While still, in undisturbed repose,
Uninjured lies the future birth;

And Ignorance with sceptic eye, Hope's patient smile shall wondering view:
Or mock her fond credulity,
As her soft tears the spot bedew.

Sweet smile of hope, delicious tear!
The sun, the shower indeed shall
come;
The promis'd verdant shoot appear,
And nature bid her blossoms bloom.

And thou, O virgin queen of spring!
Shalt, from thy dark and lowly bed, Bursting thy green sheath's silken string,
Unveil thy charms and perfume shed;

Unfold thy robes of purest white,
Unsullied from their darksome grave,
And thy soft petals' silvery light
In the mild breeze unfettered wave.

So Faith shall seek the lowly dust
Where humble Sorrow loves to lie,
And bid her thus her hopes intrust,
And watch with patient, cheerful eye;

And bear the long, cold wintry night,
And bear her own degraded doom;
And wait till Heaven's reviving light,
Eternal spring! shall burst the gloom.

ROBERT SOUTHEY.

1774-1843.

[ROBERT SOUTHEY was born at Bristol on Aug. 12, 1774. He was educated at Westminster School and at Balliol College, Oxford; and after some years of wandering and unsettlement he went to live, in 1803, at Greta Hall, near Keswick, which remained his home till his death in 1843. In 1813 he was made poet laureate. Besides his countless prose works, his volumes of verse were very numerous: the chief of them are:—Poems by Robert Lovell and Robert Southey, of Balliol College, Oxford, 2 vols., 1795-9. Joan of Arc, 1796; Poems, 1797; Thalaba the Destroyer, 1801; Madoc, 1805; Metrical Tales and other Poems, 1805; The Curse of Kehama, 1810; Roderick, the last of the Goths, 1814; A Vision of Judgment, 1821.]

FROM "RODERICK."

[The King is in disguise on his final mission to exterminate the Moors.]

ON foot they came,
Chieftains and men alike; the Oaken
Cross,
Triumphant borne on high, precedes their march,
And broad and bright the argent banner shone.
Roderick, who dealing death from side to side,
Had through the Moorish army now made way,
Beheld it flash, and judging well what aid Approach'd, with sudden impulse that way rode,
To tell of what had pass'd, . . . lest in the strife
They should engage with Julian's men, and mar
The mighty consummation. One ran
on
To meet him fleet of foot, and having
given
His tale to this swift messenger, the Goth
Halted awhile to let Orelío breathe.

Siverian, quoth Pelayo, if mine eyes Deceive me not, yon horse, whose reeking sides

Are red with slaughter, is the same on whom

The Apostate Orpas in his vauntery
Wont to parade the streets of Cordoba.
But thou shouldst know him best; regard him well:

Is't not Orelío?

Either it is he,
The old man replied, or one so like to
him,

Whom all thought matchless, that similitude

Would be the greater wonder. But behold,

What man is he who in that disarray
Doth with such power and majesty bestride

The noble steed, as if he felt himself In his own proper seat? Look how he leans

To cherish him; and how the gallant horse

Curves up his stately neck, and bends
his head,

As if again to court that gentle touch.
And answer to the voice which praises
him.

be Maccabee? rejoin'd the King,
 the secret wishes of my soul
 I fulfill'd, and hath the grave given up ad? . . . So saying, on the old man he turn'd full of wide astonishment, which told recipient thought that for incredible ake no farther. But enough had
 past;
 d Siverian, started at the words one who sees a spectre, and exclaim'd, that I was to know him not till
 now!

aster, O my Master!

He meantime easy pace moved on to meet their march.

to Pelayo he began, this day ans scarce less than miracle, thy throne
 lish'd, and the wrongs of Spain revenged.

the accursed, upon yonder field ready for the ravens. By the Moors

nerously slain, Count Julian will be found

: Saint Peter's altar; unto him was vouchsafed; and by that holy power

at Visonia from the Primate's
 hand

own proper act to me was given, rthy as I am, . . . yet sure I think ithout mystery, as the event hath shown, . . .

accept Count Julian's penitence, econcile the dying man to Heaven.

: him hath his daughter fallen asleep;

honorably with his remains, and let rave with Christian rites receive them both.

ot written that as falls the Tree shall lie?

In this and all things else, answered, looking wistfully

Upon the Goth, thy pleasure shall be done.

Then Roderick saw that he was known and turn'd

His head away in silence. But the old
 man

Laid hold upon his bridle, and look'd
 up

In his master's face, weeping and silently.

Thereat the Goth with fervent pressure took

His hand, and bending down toward him, said,

My good Siverian, go not thou this day
 To war! I charge thee keep thyself from harm!

Thou art past the age for battles, and with whom

Hereafter should thy mistress talk o'
 me

If thou wert gone? . . . Thou seest I am unarm'd;

Thus disarray'd as thou beholdest me,
 Clean through yon miscreant army have I cut

My way unhurt; but being once by
 Heaven

Preserved, I would not perish with the guilt

Of having wilfully provoked my death.
 Give me thy helmet and thy cuirass! . . .
 nay, . . .

Thou wert not wont to let me ask in
 vain,

Nor to gainsay me when my will was known!

To thee methinks I should be still the King. . . .

O who could tell what deeds were wrought that day,

Or who endure to hear the tale of rage Hatred, and madness, and despair, and
 fear,

Horror, and wounds, and agony, and
 death,

The cries, the blasphemies, the shrieks,
 and groans,

And prayers, which mingled with the din of arms

In one wild uproar of terrific sounds;

While over all predominant was heard, Reiterate from the conquerors o'er the
 field,
 Roderick the Goth! Roderick and Victory!
 Roderick and Vengeance! . . .

The evening darken'd, but the avenging sword Turned not away its edge till night had closed Upon the field of blood. The Chieftains then Blew the recall, and from their perfect work Return'd rejoicing, all but he for whom All look'd with most expectance. He full sure
 Had thought upon that field to find his
 end
 Desired, and with Florinda in the grave Rest, in indissoluble union joined.
 But still where through the press of war he went Half-arm'd, and like a lover seeking
 death,
 The arrows past him by to right and left,
 The spear-point pierced him not, the scymitar Glanced from his helmet; he, when he beheld
 The rout complete, saw that the shield
 of Heaven
 Had been extended over him once
 more,
 And bowed before its will. Upon the banks
 Of Sella was Orelia found, his legs
 And flanks incarnadined, his poitral smeared
 With froth and foam and gore, his silver mane Sprinkled with blood, which hung on every hair,
 Aspersed like dewdrops; trembling there he stood
 From the toil of battle, and at times sent forth
 His tremulous voice far echoing loud
 and shrill,

A frequent anxious cry, with which seem'd
 To call the master whom he loved
 well,
 And who had thus again forsaken him
 Siverian's helm and cuirass on the grass Lay near; and Julian's sword, its hilt and chain
 Clotted with blood; but where was he whose hand
 Had wielded it so well that glorious
 day? . . .

Days, months, and years, and generations pass'd,
 And centuries held their course, before far off
 Within a hermitage near Viseu's wall
 A humble tomb was found, which bore inscribed
 In ancient characters King Roderick's
 name.

FROM "THALABA."

HE found a Woman in the cave,
 A solitary Woman,
 Who by the fire was spinning,
 And singing as she spun.
 The pine boughs were cheerfully blazing,
 And her face was bright with the flame;
 Her face was as a Damsel's face,
 And yet her hair was gray.
 She bade him welcome with a smile,
 And still continued spinning,
 And singing as she spun. . . .
 The thread she spun it gleam'd like
 gold
 In the light of the odorous fire,
 Yet 'twas it so wonderously thin,
 That, save when it shone in the light,
 You might look for it closely in vain.
 The youth sat watching it,
 And she observed his wonder,
 And then again she spake,
 And still her speech was song;
 "Now twine it round thy hands I say,
 Now twine it round thy hands I pray;
 My thread is small, my thread is fine,

But he must be
A stronger than thee,
Who can break this thread of mine ! ”

And up she raised her bright blue eyes,
And sweetly she smiled on him,
And he conceived no ill;
And round and round his right hand,
And round and round his left,
He wound the thread so fine.
And then again the Woman spake,
And still her speech was song,
“ Now thy strength, O Stranger, strain !
Now then break the slender chain. ”

Thalaba strove, but the thread
By magic hands was spun,
And in his cheek the flush of shame
Arose, commixt with fear.
She beheld and laugh'd at him,
And then again she sung,
My thread is small, my thread is fine,
But he must be
A stronger than thee,
Who can break this thread of mine ! ”

And up she raised her bright blue eyes,
And fiercely she smiled on him :
‘ I thank thee, I thank thee, Hodei-rah's son !
I thank thee for doing what can't be undone,
For binding thyself in the chain I have spun ! ”

Then from his head she wrench'd
A lock of his raven hair,
And cast it in the fire,
And cried aloud as it burnt, “ Sister ! Sister ! hear my voice !
“ Sister ! Sister ! come and rejoice !
The thread is spun,
The prize is won,
The work is done,
Or I have made captive Hodeirah's
Son. ”

FROM “ KEHAMA. ”

FORCE of faith ! O strength of virtuous will !
Behold him in his endless martyrdom,

Triumphant still !
The Curse still burning in his heart and
brain,
And yet doth he remain
Patient the while, and tranquil, and content !
The pious soul hath framed unto itself
A second nature, to exist in pain
As in its own allotted element.

Such strength the will reveal'd had
given
This holy pair, such influxes of grace,
That to their solitary resting place
They brought the peace of Heaven.
Yea, all around was hallow'd ! Danger,
Fear,
Nor thought of evil ever enter'd here.
A charm was on the Leopard when he came
Within the circle of that mystic glade ; Submiss he crouch'd before the heavenly
maid,
And offer'd to her touch his speckled
side ;
Or with arch'd back erect, and bending head,
And eyes half-closed for pleasure, would he stand Courting the pressure of her gentle
hand.
Trampling his path through wood and brake,
And canes which crackling fall before his
way,
And tassel-grass, whose silvery feathers
play
O'ertopping the young trees,
On comes the Elephant, to slake His thirst at noon in yon pellucid springs.
Lo ! from his trunk upturn'd, aloft he flings
The grateful shower ; and now
Plucking the broad-leaved bough
Of yonder plane, with wavey motion
slow,
Fanning the languid air,
He moves it to and fro.
But when that form of beauty meets his
sight,
The trunk its undulating motion stops

From his forgetful hold the plane-branch drops,
Reverent he kneels, and lifts his rational
eyes

To her as if in prayer;
And when she pours her angel voice in song
Entranced he listens to the thrilling
notes,
Till his strong temples, bathed with sudden dews,
Their fragrance of delight and love diffuse.

Lo! as the voice melodious floats
around,
The Antelope draws near,
The Tigress leaves her toothless cubs
to hear;
The Snake comes gliding from the secret
brake,
Himself in fascination forced along
By that enchanting song;
The antic Monkeys, whose wild gambols late,
When not a breeze waved the tall jungle grass,
Shook the whole wood, are hush'd, and silently
Hang on the cluster'd tree.
All things in wonder and delight are
still;
Only at times the Nightingale is heard,
Not that in emulous skill that sweetest
bird

Her rival strain would try,
A mighty songster, with the Maid to vie;
She only bore her part in powerful sympathy.
Well might they thus adore that heavenly Maid!

For never Nymph of Mountain,
Or Grove, or Lake, or Fountain,
With a diviner presence fill'd the shade.
No idle ornaments deface
Her natural grace,
Musk-spot, nor sandal-streak, nor scarlet stain,
Ear-drop nor chain, nor arm nor ankle-
ring,
Nor trinketry on front, or neck, or
breast,

Marring the perfect form: she seem'd
thing
Of Heaven's prime uncorrupted wor-child

Of early nature undefiled,
A daughter of the years of incence.
And therefore all things loved her
When she stood Beside the glassy pool, the fish, the flies
Quick as an arrow from all other
eyes, Hover'd to gaze on her. The moth
bird,
When Kailyal's step she heard,
Sought not to tempt her from her secret nest,
But hastening to the dear retreat would fly
To meet and welcome her benignant
eye.

LOVE'S IMMORTALITY.

[From Kehama.]

THEY sin who tell us love can die:
With life all other passions fly,
All others are but vanity.
In Heaven ambition cannot dwell,
Nor avarice in the vaults of Hell:
Earthly these passions, as of Earth, They perish where they have the birth.

But Love is indestructible;
Its holy flame for ever burneth,
From Heaven it came, to Heaven returneth.

Too oft on Earth a troubled guest,
At times deceived, at times oppress'd;
It here is tried and purified,
And hath in Heaven its perfect rest.
It soweth here with toil and care,
But the harvest-time of Love is there (Oh! when a mother meets on high
The babe she lost in infancy,
Hath she not then for pains and fear
The day of woe, the anxious night,
For all her sorrow, all her tears,
An over-payment of delight?)

SONNETS WRITTEN IN HIS LIBRARY.

Among the dead are pass'd;
Around me I behold,
For these casual eyes are cast,
The mighty minds of old;
Ever-failing friends are they Whom I converse night and day.

From them I take delight in weal,
And seek relief in woe;
While I understand and feel
How much to them I owe,
Which have often been bedew'd
By tears of thoughtful gratitude.

Thoughts are with the dead: with Them I live in long past years,
Whom true love, their faults condemn,
Take their griefs and fears;
From their sober lessons find Instruction with a humble mind.

As they are with the dead: anon
Among them my place will be;
With them shall travel on Through all futurity;
Living here a name, I trust,
Will not perish in the dust.

THE HOLLY TREE.

Wonder! hast thou ever stood to see
The Holly Tree?
That contemplates it well perceives
Its glossy leaves,
Given by an Intelligence so wise,
To confound the Atheist's sophistries.

Like a circling fence, its leaves are
Green
Prickled and keen;
Shielding cattle through their prickly
Ground
From reach to wound;

But, as they grow where nothing is to
fear,
Smooth and unarm'd the pointless leaves appear.

I love to view these things with curious
eyes,
And moralize;
And in this wisdom of the Holly Tree
Can emblems see,
Wherewith perchance to make a pleasant rhyme,
One which may profit in the after-time.

Thus, though abroad perchance I might appear
Harsh and austere;
To those, who on my leisure would intrude,
Reserved and rude; —
Gentle at home amid my friends I'd be,
Like the high leaves upon the Holly
Tree.

And should my youth, as youth is apt I
know,
Some harshness show,
All vain asperities I day by day
Would wear away,
Till the smooth temper of my age should be
Like the high leaves upon the Holly
Tree.

And as when all the summer trees are seen
So bright and green,
The Holly leaves a sober hue display Less bright than they;
But when the bare and wintry woods
we see,
What then so cheerful as the Holly
Tree?

So serious should my youth appear among
The thoughtless throng;
So would I seem amid the young and
gay
More grave than they;
That in my age as cheerful I might be
As the green winter of the Holly Tree.

HOW THE WATER COMES DOWN AT LODORE.

HERE it comes sparkling,
And there it lies darkling.
Here smoking and frothing,
Its tumult and wrath in,
It hastens along conflicting strong;
Now striking and raging,
As if a war waging,
Its caverns and rocks among.
Rising and leaping,
Sinking and creeping,
Swelling and flinging,
Showering and springing,
Eddying and whisking,
Spouting and frisking,
Turning and twisting
Around and around;
Collecting, disjecting,
With endless rebound;
Smiting and fighting,
A sight to delight in,
Confounding, astounding, Dizzying and deafening the ear with its
sound.

Receding and speeding,
And shocking and rocking,
And darting and parting,
And threading and spreading,
And whizzing and hissing,
And dripping and skipping,
And brightening and whitening,
And quivering and shivering,
And hitting and splitting,
And shining and twining,
And rattling and battling,
And shaking and quaking,
And pouring and roaring,
And waving and raving,
And tossing and crossing,
And flowing and growing,
And running and stunning,
And hurrying and skurrying,
And glittering and flittering,
And gathering and feathering,
And dinning and spinning,
And foaming and roaming,
And dropping and hopping,
And working and jerking,
And guggling and struggling,
And heaving and cleaving,

And thundering and floundering,
And falling and crawling and sprawl-
ing,
And driving and riving and striving,
And sprinkling and twinkling and
wrinkling,
And sounding and bounding and
rounding,
And hubbling and troubling and doubling,
Dividing and gliding and sliding,
And grumbling and rumbling and
tumbling,
And clattering and battering and shattering,
And gleaming and streaming and
steaming and beaming,
And rushing and flushing and brushing
and gushing,
And flapping and rapping and clapping
and slapping,
And curling and whirling and purling
and twirling,
Retreating and meeting and beating
and sheeting,
Delaying and straying and playing and
spraying,
Advancing and prancing and glancing
and dancing,
Recoiling, turmoiling, and toiling and
boiling,
And thumping and plumping and
bumping and jumping,
And dashing and flashing and splash-
ing and clashing,
And so never ending but always descending,
Sounds and motions for ever and ever
are blending;
All at once, and all o'er, with a mighty uproar,
And in this way the water comes down
at Lodore.

THE OLD MAN'S COMFORTS, AND HOW HE GAINED THEM.

You are old, Father William, the young
man cried,
The few locks that are left you are
gray;

You are hale, Father William, a hearty
old man,
Now tell me the reason, I pray.

In the days of my youth, Father William replied,
I remember'd that youth would fly
fast,
And abused not my health and my vigor at first,
That I never might need them at
last.

You are old, Father William, the young
man cried,
And pleasures with youth pass away,
And yet you lament not the days that are gone,
Now tell me the reason, I pray.

In the days of my youth, Father William replied,
I remember'd that youth could not
last;
I thought of the future, whatever I did,
That I never might grieve for the
past.

You are old, Father William, the young
man cried,
And life must be hastening away;
You are cheerful, and love to converse upon death!
Now tell me the reason, I pray.

I am cheerful, young man, Father William replied;
Let the cause thy attention engage;
In the days of my youth I remember'd my God!
And He hath not forgotten my age.

THE BATTLE OF BLENHEIM.

I.

It was a summer evening,
Old Kaspar's work was done;
And he before his cottage door
Was sitting in the sun,
And by him sported on the green
His little grandchild Wilhelmine.

II.

She saw her brother Peterkin
Roll something large and round,
That he beside the rivulet,
In playing there, had found;
He came to ask what he had found,
That was so large, and smooth, and
round.

III.

Old Kaspar took it from the boy,
Who stood expectant by;
And then the old man shook his head,
And with a natural sigh,
'Tis some poor fellow's skull, said he,
Who fell in the great victory.

IV.

I find them in the garden, for
There's many here about,
And often when I go to plough,
The ploughshare turns them out;
For many thousand men, said he,
Were slain in the great victory.

V.

Now tell us what 'twas all about,
Young Peterkin he cries,
And little Wilhelmine looks up
With wonder-waiting eyes;
Now tell us all about the war,
And what they kill'd each other for.

VI.

It was the English, Kaspar cried,
That put the French to rout;
But what they kill'd each other for,
I could not well make out.
But everybody said, quoth he,
That 'twas a famous victory.

VII.

My father lived at Blenheim then,
Yon little stream hard by;
They burnt his dwelling to the ground,
And he was forced to fly:
So with his wife and child he fled,
Nor had he where to rest his head.

VIII.

With fire and sword the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a childing mother then,
And new-born infant, died.
But things like that, you know, must be
At every famous victory.

IX.

They say it was a shocking sight,
After the field was won,
For many thousand bodies here
Lay rotting in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be
After a famous victory.

X.

Great praise the Duke of Marlbro' won,
And our good Prince Eugene. —
Why, 'twas a very wicked thing!
Said little Wilhelmine. —
Nay — nay — my little girl, quoth he,
It was a famous victory.

XI.

And everybody praised the Duke
Who such a fight did win. —
But what good came of it at last?
Quoth little Peterkin. —
Why that I cannot tell, said he,
But 'twas a famous victory.

THE VOYAGE OF THALABA
AND THE DAMSEL.

THEN did the damsel speak again,
"Wilt thou go on with me?
The moon is bright, the sea is calm,
And I know well the ocean paths;
Wilt thou go on with me? —
Deliverer! yes! thou dost not fear!
Thou wilt go on with me!"
"Sail on, sail on!" quoth Thalaba,
"Sail on, in Allah's name!"

The moon is bright, the sea is calm,
The little boat rides rapidly
Across the ocean waves;
The line of moonlight on the deep

Still follows as they voyage on;
The winds are motionless;
The gentle waters gently part
In murmurs round the prow.
He looks above, he looks around,
The boundless heaven, the boundless
sea,
The crescent moon, the little boat.
Nought else above, below.

The moon is sunk, a dusky gray
Spreads o'er the eastern sky,
The stars grow pale and paler; —
Oh beautiful! the godlike sun
Is rising o'er the sea!
Without an oar, without a sail,
The little boat rides rapidly; —
Is that a cloud that skirts the sea?
There is no cloud in heaven!
And nearer now, and darker now —
It is — it is — the land!
For yonder are the rocks that rise
Dark in the reddening morn,
For loud around their hollow base
The surges rage and roar.

The little boat rides rapidly,
And now with shorter toss it heaves
Upon the heavier swell;
And now so near, they see
The shelves and shadows of the cliff,
And the low-lurking rocks,
O'er whose black summits, hidden
half,
The shivering billows burst; —
And nearer now they feel the breaker's
spray.
Then spake the damsel, "Yonder is
our path,
Beneath the cavern arch.
Now is the ebb, and till the ocean-flow,
We cannot over-ride the rocks.
Go thou, and on the shore Perform thy last ablutions, and with
prayer
Strengthen thy heart. — I too have need to pray."

She held the helm with steady hand
Amid the stronger waves;
Through surge and surf she drove,
The adventurer leap'd to land.

THE INCHCAPE ROCK.

No stir in the air, no stir in the sea,
The ship was as still as she could be,
Her sails from heaven received no
 motion,
Her keel was steady in the ocean.

Without either sign or sound of their
 shock
The waves flow'd over the Inchcape
 Rock;
So little they rose, so little they fell,
They did not move the Inchcape Bell.

The good old Abbot of Aberbrothok
Had placed that bell on the Inchcape
 Rock;
On a buoy in the storm it floated and swung,
And over the waves its warning rung.

When the rock was hid by the surges'
 swell,
The Mariners heard the warning bell;
And then they knew the perilous Rock,
And blest the Abbot of Aberbrothok.

The sun in heaven was shining gay,
All things were joyful on that day;
The sea-birds scream'd as they wheel'd
 round,
And there was joyance in their sound.

The buoy of the Inchcape Bell was seen
A darker speck on the ocean green;
Sir Ralph the Rover walk'd his deck,
And he fix'd his eye on the darker speck.

He felt the cheering power of spring,
It made him whistle, it made him sing;
His heart was mirthful to excess,
But the Rover's mirth was wickedness.

His eye was on the Inchcape float;
Quoth he, "My men, put out the boat,
And row me to the Inchcape Rock,
And I'll plague the priest of Aberbrothok."

The boat is lower'd, the boatmen row,
And to the Inchcape Rock they go;
Sir Ralph bent over from the boat,

And he cut the bell from the Inchcape
 float.

Down sank the bell, with a gurgling
 sound,
The bubbles rose and burst around;
Quoth Sir Ralph, "The next who comes to the Rock
Won't bless the Abbot of Aberbrothok."

Sir Ralph the Rover sail'd away,
He scour'd the seas for many a day;
And now grown rich with plunder'd store,
He steers his course for Scotland's shore.

So thick a haze o'erspreads the sky
They cannot see the sun on high;
The wind hath blown a gale all day,
At evening it hath died away.

On the deck the Rover takes his stand,
So dark it is they see no land.
Quoth Sir Ralph, "It will be lighter
 soon,
For there is the dawn of the rising
 moon."

"Can'st hear," said one, "the breakers
 roar?
For methinks we should be near the
 shore;
Now where we are I cannot tell,
But I wish I could hear the Inchcape
 Bell."

They hear no sound, the swell is
 strong;
Though the wind hath fallen, they drift
 along,
Till the vessel strikes with a shivering
 shock:
Cried they, "It is the Inchcape Rock!"

Sir Ralph the Rover tore his hair,
He curst himself in his despair;
The waves rush in on every side,
The ship is sinking beneath the tide,

But even in his dying fear
One dreadful sound could the Rover hear,
A sound as if with the Inchcape Bell,
The fiends below were ringing his knell.

CAROLINE BOWLES

MRS. SOUTHEY.

1786-1854

Mrs. SOUTHEY, a singular person, and wife of the First Laureate, was the only child of Captain Charles Bowles of Dorchester, near Exeter. For more than twenty years her writings were published anonymously. Among the friends who had been attracted to her by her poems, were the poets Keats and Shelley. The former of whom became her husband in 1819. On his death, Mrs. Bowles was given a pension of £200 a year. Her principal works are Ellen Fildes Archer, a poem; The Maid of the Mill, and other poems; Salisbury Square, a novel and verse; Chatterbox, Conversations, Lines to the Fairies, and Little Rime, were other poems.

TO A DYING INFANT.

Sleep, little baby, sleep!

Not in thy cradle bed,
Not in thy mother's breast
Henceforth shall be thy rest,
But with the just dead!

Yes! with the quiet dead,

Baby, thy rest shall be!
O'er many a weary night,
Weary of life and light,
Would I have lie down with thee.

Flee, little tender nursing!

Flee to thy grassy nest;
There the first flowers shall blow;
The first pure fairs of snow
Shall fall upon thy breast.

Peace! peace! the little bosom

Is full with slumbering breath:—
Peace! peace! that tremulous sigh
Speaks his departure nigh!
Those are the clamps of death

I've seen thee in thy beauty,

A thing all health and glee;
But never then wert thou
So beautiful as now,
Baby, thou seem'st to me!

Thine upturn'd eyes glazed o'er,

Like harebells wet with dew;
Already veiled and hid
By the convulsed lid,
Their pupils, darkly blue.

Thy little mouth half open—

Thy soul is fluttering,
As if like summer-air,
Ruffling the rose-leaves there,
Thy soul is fluttering.

Momentary, immortal essence!

Young spirit, haste, depart!—
And is this death?—I dread thing!
If such thy visiting,
How beautiful thou art!

Oh! I could gaze for ever

Upon thy waxy face;
So passionless, so pure!
The little shrine was sure,
An angel's dwelling-place.

Thou weepest, childless Mother!

Aye, weep—'twill ease thine heart;—
He was thy first-born son,
Thy first, thine only one,
'Tis hard from him to part.

'Tis hard to lay thy darling

Deep in the damp cold earth,
His early crib to see,
His silent nursery,
Once gladsome with his mirth

To meet again in slumber,

His small mouth's rosy kiss;
Then, waken'd with a start,
By thine own throbbing heart,
His twining arms to miss!

To feel (half conscious why)

A dull, heart-sinking weight,

mony on the soul
the painful whole,
thou art desolate!

n, to lie and weep,

"And when the hour arrives,
From flesh that sets me free,
Thy spirit may await,
The first at Heaven's gate,
To meet and welcome me!"

THE PAUPER'S DEATHBED.

TREAD softly! bow the head —
In reverent silence bow!
No passing bell doth toll;
Yet an immortal soul
Is passing now.

Stranger, however great,
With lowly reverence bow!
There's one in that poor shed —
One by that paltry bed —
Greater than thou.

Beneath that beggar's roof,
Lo! Death doth keep his state!
Enter! — no crowds attend —
Enter! — no guards defend
This palace gate.

That pavement damp and cold
No smiling courtiers tread;
One silent woman stands,
Lifting with meagre hands
A dying head.

No mingling voices sound —
An infant wail alone;
A sob suppress'd — again
That short deep gasp — and then
The parting groan!

O! change — O! wondrous change!
Burst are the prison bars!
This moment there, so low,
So agonized — and now
Beyond the stars!

O! change — stupendous change!
 There lies the soulless clod!
 The sun eternal break;
 The new immortal wakes —
 Wakes with his God.

 MARINER'S HYMN.

LAUNCH thy bark, mariner!
 Christian, God speed thee!
 Let loose the rudder-bands —
 Good angels lead thee!
 Set thy sails warily,
 Tempests will come;
 Steer thy course steadily;
 Christian, steer home!

Look to the weather-bow,
 Breakers are round thee;
 Let fall the plummet now,
 Shallows may ground thee.
 Reef in the foresail, there!
 Hold the helm fast!
 So — let the vessel wear —
 There swept the blast.

“What of the night, watchman
 What of the night?”

“Cloudy — all quiet —
 No land yet — all's right.”
 Be wakeful, be vigilant —
 Danger may be
 At an hour when all seemeth
 Securest to thee.

How! gains the leak so fast?
 Clean out the hold —
 Hoist up thy merchandise,
 Heave out thy gold;
 There — let the ingots go —
 Now the ship rights;
 Hurra! the harbor's near —
 Lo! the red lights!

Slacken not sail yet
 At inlet or island;
 Straight for the beacon steer,
 Straight for the high land;
 Crowd all thy canvas on,
 Cut through the foam —
 Christian! cast anchor now —
 Heaven is thy home.

1775-1841.

[BORN at Seville, Spain, July 11, 1775; of an Irish Catholic family; ordained a priest, 1796; came to England in 1810; left the Catholic Church, and became a tutor in the family of Lord H. Russell, who resided in London as a man of letters, contributing to leading reviews and periodicals, and publishing several works in Spanish and English. Died at Liverpool, May 20, 1841. His Sleep of the Night was called by Coleridge the finest in the language.]

NIGHT AND DEATH.

MYSTERIOUS Night! when our first parent knew Thee from report divine, and heard
 thy name,
 Did he not tremble for this lovely
 frame,
 This glorious canopy of light and
 blue?
 Yet 'neath a curtain of translucent dew,
 Bathed in the rays of the great setting flame,
 Hesperus with the host of heaven came,

And lo! creation widened in
 view.
 Who could have thought such da-lay concealed Within thy beams, O sun! could could find,
 Whilst fly, and leaf, and insect stole
 vealed,
 That to such countless orbs mad'st us blind!
 Why do we then shun Death
 anxious strife?
 If light can thus deceive, what not life?

CHARLES LAMB.

1775-1834.

[BORN in the Temple, London, February 10, 1775; was educated at Christ's Hospital, with Coleridge for a school-fellow; became clerk in the India House, 1792; retired on a pension, 1825; died December 27, 1834. His poetry is as follows: — Poems by S. T. Coleridge, second Edition, to which are now added poems by Charles Lamb and Charles Lloyd, 1797. Blank Verse. By Charles Lloyd and Charles Lamb, 1798. Poetry for Children, entirely original; by the Author of Mrs. Leicester's School, 1809. Poems in The Works of Charles Lamb, 1818. Album Verses, with a few others, by Charles Lamb, 1830.]

THE OLD FAMILIAR FACES.

I HAVE had playmates, I have had companions,
In my days of childhood, in my joyful school-days;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I have been laughing, I have been carousing,
Drinking late, sitting late, with my bosom cronies;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I loved a love once, fairest among women;
Closed are her doors on me, I must not see her —
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I have a friend, a kinder friend has no man;
Like an ingrate, I left my friend abruptly;
Left him, to muse on the old familiar faces.

Ghost-like I paced round the haunts of my childhood,
Earth seemed a desert I was bound to traverse,
Seeking to find the old familiar faces.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why wert not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces —

How some they have died, and some they have left me,
And some are taken from me; all are departed;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

THE GRANDAME.

ON the green hill top,
Hard by the house of prayer, a modest roof,
And not distinguished from its neighbor-barn,
Save by a slender-tapering length of spire,
The Grandame sleeps. A plain stone barely tells
The name and date to the chance passenger.
For lowly born was she, and long had eat,
Well-earned, the bread of service: — hers was else
A mounting spirit, one that entertained
Scorn of base action, deed dishonorable,
Or aught unseemly. I remember well
Her reverend image: I remember, too,
With what a zeal she served her master's house:
And how the prattling tongue of garrulous age
Delighted to recount the oft-told tale
Or anecdote domestic. Wise she was,
And wondrous skilled in genealogies,
And could in apt and voluble terms discourse
Of births, of titles, and alliances;

Of marriages, and intermarriages;
 Relationship remote, or near of kin;
 Of friends offended, family disgraced —
 Maiden high-born, but wayward, disobeying
 Parental strict injunction, and regardless
 Of unmixed blood, and ancestry remote,
 Stooping to wed with one of low degree.
 But these are not thy praises; and I wrong
 Thy honored memory, recording chiefly
 Things light or trivial. Better 'twere to tell,
 How with a nobler zeal, and warmer love,

She served her heavenly master. I have seen
 That reverend form bent down with age and pain,
 And rankling malady. Yet not for this Ceased she to praise her Maker, or withdrew
 Her trust in him, her faith, and humble hope —
 So meekly had she learned to bear her cross —
 For she had studied patience in the school
 Of Christ, much comfort she had thence derived,
 And was a follower of the Nazarene.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

1775-1864.

[WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR was born at Warwick, Jan. 30, 1775; died at Florence, Dec. 17, 1864. He resided in Italy almost continuously from 1815 to 1835, and afterwards twenty-one years in Bath. His writings, the dates of which range from 1795 to almost the year of his death, were first collected by himself in two large volumes (1846), and afterwards (1876), with his Life, by Mr. John Forster, in eight vols. 8vo.]

THE SHELL.

[From Gebir, Book I.]

I AM not daunted, no; I will engage.
 But first, said she, what wager will you lay?
 A sheep, I answered, add whate'er you will.
 I cannot, she replied, make that return:
 Our hidèd vessels in their pitchy round
 Seldom, unless from rapine, hold a sheep.
 But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue
 Within, and they that lustre have imbibed
 In the Sun's palace-porch, where when unyoked
 His chariot-wheel stands midway in the wave:
 Shake one and it awakens, then apply

Its polishèd lips to your attentive ear
 And it remembers its august abodes,
 And murmurs as the ocean murmurs there.

PRAYERS.

[From Book V.]

YE men of Gades, armed with brazen shields,
 And ye of near Tartessus, where the shore
 Stoops to receive the tribute which all owe
 To Baetis and his banks for their attire,
 Ye too whom Durius bore on level meads,
 Inherent in your hearts is bravery:
 For Earth contains no nation where abounds

generous horse and not the warlike
man.
neither soldier now nor steed avails :
steed nor soldier can oppose the Gods :
is there aught above like Jove himself,
weighs against his purpose, when once fixt,
ought but, with supplicating knee, the Prayers.
fter than light are they, and every
face,

TAMAR AND THE NYMPH.

[From Book VI.]

H seek not destin'd evils to divine, and out at last too soon! cease here
the search,

mine;
ill impart far better, will impart at makes, when Winter comes, the d I will tell sometimes the fate of

men
o loos'd from drooping neck the restless arm
venturous, ere long nights had satisfied
: sweet and honest avarice of love;
w whirlpools have absorb'd them, storms o'erwhelm'd, d how amid their struggles and their prayers

The big wave blacken'd o'er the mouth supine :
Then, when my Tamar trembles at the tale,
Kissing his lips half open with surprise, Glance from the gloomy story, and with glee
Light on the fairer fables of the Gods.
— Thus we may sport at leisure when we go
Where, loved by Neptune and the Naiad, loved
By pensive Dryad pale, and Oread
The sprightly nymph whom constant Zephyr woos,
Rhine rolls his beryl-color'd wave; than Rhine
What river from the mountains ever
came
More stately? most the simple crown adorns
Of rushes and of willows intertwined
With here and there a flower: his lofty
brow
Shaded with vines and mistletoe and oak He rears, and mystic bards his fame re-
sound.
Or gliding opposite, th' Illyrian gulf Will harbor us from ill." While thus she spake,
She toucht his eyelashes with libant lip,
And breath'd ambrosial odors, o'er his cheek
Celestial warmth suffusing: grief dispersed,
And strength and pleasure beam'd upon his brow.
Then pointed she before him: first arose
To his astonisht and delighted view
The sacred ile that shrines the queen of
love.
It stood so near him, so acute each
sense,
That not the symphony of lutes alone
Or coo serene or billing strife of doves.
But murmurs, whispers, nay the very sighs
Which he himself had utter'd once, he
heard.
Next, but long after and far off, appear
The cloudlike cliffs and thousand towers
of Crete,

DOWN AT LODORE.*

HERE it comes sparkling,
And there it lies darkling.
Here smoking and frothing,
Its tumult and wrath in,
It hastens along conflicting strong;
Now striking and raging,
As if a war waging,
Its caverns and rocks among.
Rising and leaping,
Sinking and creeping,
Swelling and flinging,
Showering and springing,
Eddying and whisking,
Spouting and frisking,
Turning and twisting
Around and around;
Collecting, dissecting,
With endless rebound;
Smiting and fighting,
A sight to delight in,
Confounding, astounding, Dizzying and deafening the ear with its
sound.

Receding and speeding,
And shocking and rocking,
And darting and parting,
And threading and spreading,
And whizzing and hissing,
And dripping and skipping,
And brightening and whitening,
And quivering and shivering,
And hitting and splitting,
And shining and twining,
And rattling and battling,
And shaking and quaking,
And pouring and roaring,
And waving and raving,
And tossing and crossing,
And flowing and growing,
And running and stunning,
And hurrying and skurrying,
And glittering and flittering,
And gathering and feathering,
And dinning and spinning,
And foaming and roaring,
And dropping and hopping,
And working and jerking,
And guggling and struggling,
And heaving and cleaving,

And thundering and floundering,
And falling and crawling and sprawl-
ing,
And driving and riving and striving,
And sprinkling and twinkling and
wrinkling,
And sounding and bounding and
rounding,
And bubbling and troubling and doubling,
Dividing and gliding and sliding,
And grumbling and rumbling and
tumbling,
And clattering and battering and
shattering,
And gleaming and streaming and
steaming and beaming,
And rushing and flushing and brushing
and gushing,
And flapping and rapping and clapping
and slapping,
And curling and whirling and purling
and twirling,
Retreating and meeting and beating
and sheeting,
Delaying and straying and playing and
spraying,
Advancing and prancing and glancing
and dancing,
Recoiling, turmoiling, and toiling and
boiling,
And thumping and plumping and
bumping and jumping,
And dashing and flashing and splash-
ing and clashing,
And so never ending but always descending,
Sounds and motions for ever and ever
are blending;
All at once, and all o'er, with a mighty
uproar,
And in this way the water comes down
at Lodore.

*THE OLD MAN'S COMFORTS,
AND HOW HE GAINED THEM.*

You are old, Father William, the young
man cried,
The few locks that are left you are
gray;

e hale, Father William, a hearty
old man,
tell me the reason, I pray.

days of my youth, Father William replied,
member'd that youth would fly
fast,
bused not my health and my vigor at first,
I never might need them at
last.

e old, Father William, the young
man cried,
pleasures with youth pass away, et you lament not the days that
are gone,
tell me the reason, I pray.

days of my youth, Father William replied,
member'd that youth could not
last;
ght of the future, whatever I did,
I never might grieve for the
past.

e old, Father William, the young
man cried,
life must be hastening away;
e cheerful, and love to converse upon death!
tell me the reason, I pray.

heerful, young man, Father William replied;
the cause thy attention engage;
days of my youth I remember'd
my God!
He hath not forgotten my age.

BATTLE OF BLENHEIM.

I.

a summer evening,
Kaspar's work was done;
e before his cottage door sitting in the sun, him sported on the green le grandchild Wilhelmine.

II.

She saw her brother Peterkin
Roll something large and round,
That he beside the rivulet,
In playing there, had found;
He came to ask what he had found,
That was so large, and smooth, and
round.

III.

Old Kaspar took it from the boy,
Who stood expectant by;
And then the old man shook his head,
And with a natural sigh,
'Tis some poor fellow's skull, said he,
Who fell in the great victory.

IV.

I find them in the garden, for
There's many here about,
And often when I go to plough,
The ploughshare turns them out;
For many thousand men, said he,
Were slain in the great victory.

V.

Now tell us what 'twas all about,
Young Peterkin he cries,
And little Wilhelmine looks up
With wonder-waiting eyes;
Now tell us all about the war,
And what they kill'd each other for.

VI.

It was the English, Kaspar cried,
That put the French to rout;
But what they kill'd each other for,
I could not well make out.
But everybody said, quoth he,
That 'twas a famous victory.

VII.

My father lived at Blenheim then,
Yon little stream hard by;
They burnt his dwelling to the ground,
And he was forced to fly:
So with his wife and child he fled,
Nor had he where to rest his head.

VIII.

With fire and sword the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a childing mother then,
And new-born infant, died.
But things like that, you know, must be
At every famous victory.

IX.

They say it was a shocking sight,
After the field was won,
For many thousand bodies here
Lay rotting in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be
After a famous victory.

X.

Great praise the Duke of Marlbro' won,
And our good Prince Eugene. —
Why, 'twas a very wicked thing!
Said little Wilhelmine. —
Nay — nay — my little girl, quoth he,
It was a famous victory.

XI.

And everybody praised the Duke
Who such a fight did win. —
But what good came of it at last?
Quoth little Peterkin. —
Why that I cannot tell, said he,
But 'twas a famous victory.

THE VOYAGE OF THALABA
AND THE DAMSEL.

THEN did the damsel speak again,
"Wilt thou go on with me?
The moon is bright, the sea is calm,
And I know well the ocean paths;
Wilt thou go on with me? —
Deliverer! yes! thou dost not fear!
Thou wilt go on with me!"
"Sail on, sail on!" quoth Thalaba,
"Sail on, in Allah's name!"

The moon is bright, the sea is calm,
The little boat rides rapidly
Across the ocean waves;
The line of moonlight on the deep

Still follows as they voyage on;
The winds are motionless;
The gentle waters gently part
In murmurs round the prow.
He looks above, he looks around,
The boundless heaven, the boundless
sea,
The crescent moon, the little boat,
Nought else above, below.

The moon is sunk, a dusky gray
Spreads o'er the eastern sky,
The stars grow pale and paler; —
Oh beautiful! the godlike sun
Is rising o'er the sea!
Without an oar, without a sail,
The little boat rides rapidly; —
Is that a cloud that skirts the sea?
There is no cloud in heaven!
And nearer now, and darker now —
It is — it is — the land!
For yonder are the rocks that rise
Dark in the reddening morn,
For loud around their hollow base
The surges rage and roar.

The little boat rides rapidly,
And now with shorter toss it heaves
Upon the heavier swell;
And now so near, they see
The shelves and shadows of the cliff,
And the low-lurking rocks,
O'er whose black summits, hidden
half,
The shivering billows burst; —
And nearer now they feel the breaker's
spray.
Then spake the damsel, "Yonder is
our path,
Beneath the cavern arch.
Now is the ebb, and till the ocean-flow,
We cannot over-ride the rocks.
Go thou, and on the shore Perform thy last ablutions, and with
prayer
Strengthen thy heart. — I too have
need to pray."

She held the helm with steady hand
Amid the stronger waves;
Through surge and surf she drove,
The adventurer leap'd to land.

THE INCHCAPE ROCK.

Stir in the air, no stir in the sea,
 The ship was as still as she could be,
 Her sails from heaven received no
 motion,
 Her keel was steady in the ocean.

Without either sign or sound of their
 shock
 The waves flow'd over the Inchcape
 Rock;
 While they rose, so little they fell,
 They did not move the Inchcape Bell.

The good old Abbot of Aberbrothok
 Had placed that bell on the Inchcape
 Rock;
 The buoy in the storm it floated and swung,
 Over the waves its warning rung.

On the rock was hid by the surges'
 swell,
 The mariners heard the warning bell;
 Then they knew the perilous Rock,
 They blest the Abbot of Aberbrothok.

The sun in heaven was shining gay,
 The rings were joyful on that day;
 The sea-birds scream'd as they wheel'd
 round,
 There was joyance in their sound.

The buoy of the Inchcape Bell was seen
 A darker speck on the ocean green;
 Sir Ralph the Rover walk'd his deck,
 He fix'd his eye on the darker speck.

He felt the cheering power of spring,
 He made him whistle, it made him sing;
 His heart was mirthful to excess,
 The Rover's mirth was wickedness.

His eye was on the Inchcape float;
 When he, "My men, put out the boat,
 Row me to the Inchcape Rock, I'll plague the priest of Aberbrothok."

The boat is lower'd, the boatmen row,
 To the Inchcape Rock they go;
 Sir Ralph bent over from the boat,

And he cut the bell from the Inchcape
 float.

Down sank the bell, with a gurgling
 sound,
 The bubbles rose and burst around;
 Quoth Sir Ralph, "The next who comes to the Rock
 Won't bless the Abbot of Aberbrothok."

Sir Ralph the Rover sail'd away,
 He scour'd the seas for many a day;
 And now grown rich with plunder'd store,
 He steers his course for Scotland's shore.

So thick a haze o'erspreads the sky
 They cannot see the sun on high;
 The wind hath blown a gale all day,
 At evening it hath died away.

On the deck the Rover takes his stand,
 So dark it is they see no land.
 Quoth Sir Ralph, "It will be lighter
 soon,
 For there is the dawn of the rising
 moon."

"Can'st hear," said one, "the breakers
 roar?
 For methinks we should be near the
 shore;
 Now where we are I cannot tell,
 But I wish I could hear the Inchcape
 Bell."

They hear no sound, the swell is
 strong;
 Though the wind hath fallen, they drift
 along,
 Till the vessel strikes with a shivering
 shock:
 Cried they, "It is the Inchcape Rock!"

Sir Ralph the Rover tore his hair,
 He curst himself in his despair;
 The waves rush in on every side,
 The ship is sinking beneath the tide,

But even in his dying fear
 One dreadful sound could the Rover hear,
 A sound as if with the Inchcape Bell,
 The fiends below were ringing his knell.

TO A DYING INFANT.

SLEEP, little baby, sleep!
Not in thy cradle bed,
Not on thy mother's breast
Henceforth shall be thy rest,
But with the quiet dead!

Yes! with the quiet dead,
Baby, thy rest shall be!
Oh! many a weary wight,
Weary of life and light,
Would fain lie down with thee.

Flee, little tender nursling!
Flee to thy grassy nest;
There the first flowers shall blow;
The first pure flake of snow
Shall fall upon thy breast.

Peace! peace! the little bosom
Labors with shortening breath:—
Peace! peace! that tremulous sigh
Speaks his departure nigh!
Those are the damps of death.

I've seen thee in thy beauty,
A thing all health and glee;
But never then wert thou
So beautiful as now,
Baby, thou seem'st to me!

Thine upturn'd eyes glazed o'er,
Like harebells wet with dew;
Already veiled and hid
By the convulsed lid,
Their pupils, darkly blue.

Thy little mouth half open—
Thy soft lip quivering,
As if like summer-air,
Ruffling the rose-leaves, there,
Thy soul was fluttering.

Mount up, immortal essence!
Young spirit, haste, depart!—
And is this death?—Dread thing!
If such thy visiting,
How beautiful thou art!

Oh! I could gaze for ever
Upon thy waxen face;
So passionless, so pure!
The little shrine was sure,
An angel's dwelling-place.

Thou weapest, childless Mother!
Aye, weep—'twill ease thine heart;—
He was thy first-born son,
Thy first, thine only one,
'Tis hard from him to part.

'Tis hard to lay thy darling
Deep in the damp cold earth,
His empty crib to see,
His silent nursery,
Once gladsome with his mirth.

To meet again in slumber,
His small mouth's rosy kiss;
Then, waken'd with a start,
By thine own throbbing heart,
His twining arms to miss!

To feel (half conscious why)
A dull, heart-sinking weight, emory on the soul s the painful whole,

t thou art desolate!

"And when the hour arrives,
From flesh that sets me free,
Thy spirit may await,
The first at Heaven's gate,

THE PAUPER'S DEATHBED.

TREAD softly! bow the head —
In reverent silence bow!
No passing bell doth toll;
Yet an immortal soul
Is passing now.

Stranger, however great,
With lowly reverence bow!
There's one in that poor shed —
One by that paltry bed —
Greater than thou.

Beneath that beggar's roof,
Lo! Death doth keep his state!
Enter! — no crowds attend —
Enter! — no guards defend
This palace gate.

That pavement damp and cold
No smiling courtiers tread;
One silent woman stands,
Lifting with meagre hands
A dying head.

No mingling voices sound —
An infant wail alone;
A sob suppress'd — again
That short deep gasp — and then
The parting groan!

O! change — O! wondrous change!
Burst are the prison bars!
This moment there, so low,
So agonized — and now
Beyond the stars!

O! change — stupendous change!
 There lies the soulless clod!
 The sun eternal breaks;
 The new immortal wakes —
 Wakes with his God.

MARINER'S HYMN.

LAUNCH thy bark, mariner!
 Christian, God speed thee!
 Let loose the rudder-bands —
 Good angels lead thee!
 Set thy sails warily,
 Tempests will come;
 Steer thy course steadily;
 Christian, steer home!

Look to the weather-bow,
 Breakers are round thee;
 Let fall the plummet now,
 Shallows may ground thee.
 Reef in the foresail, there!
 Hold the helm fast!
 So — let the vessel wear —
 There swept the blast.

“What of the night, watchman?
 What of the night?”
 “Cloudy — all quiet —
 No land yet — all's right.”
 Be wakeful, be vigilant —
 Danger may be
 At an hour when all seemeth
 Securest to thee.

How! gains the leak so fast?
 Clean out the hold —
 Hoist up thy merchandise,
 Heave out thy gold;
 There — let the ingots go —
 Now the ship rights;
 Hurra! the harbor's near —
 Lo! the red lights:

Slacken not sail yet
 At inlet or island;
 Straight for the beacon steer,
 Straight for the high land;
 Crowd all thy canvas on,
 Cut through the foam —
 Christian! cast anchor now —
 Heaven is thy home.

NIGHT AND DEATH.

MYSTERIOUS Night! when our first
 parent knew Thee from report divine, and heard
 thy name,
 Did he not tremble for this lovely
 frame,
 This glorious canopy of light and
 blue?
 Yet 'neath a curtain of translucent dew,
 Bathed in the rays of the great setting flame,
 Hesperus with the host of heaven came,

And lo! creation widened in r
 view.
 Who could have thought such darl
 lay concealed Within thy beams, O sun! or could find,
 Whilst fly, and leaf, and insect sto-
 vealed,
 That to such countless orbs
 mad'st us blind!
 Why do we then shun Death
 anxious strife?
 If light can thus deceive, wher
 not life?

CHARLES LAMB.

1775-1834.

[BORN in the Temple, London, February 10, 1775; was educated at Christ's Hospital, with Coleridge for a school-fellow; became clerk in the India House, 1792; retired on a pension, 1825; died December 27, 1834. His poetry is as follows:—Poems by S. T. Coleridge, second Edition, to which are now added poems by Charles Lamb and Charles Lloyd, 1797. Blank Verse, by Charles Lloyd and Charles Lamb, 1798. Poetry for Children, entirely original; by the Author of Mrs. Leicester's School, 1809. Poems in The Works of Charles Lamb, 1818. Album Verses, with a few others, by Charles Lamb, 1830.]

THE OLD FAMILIAR FACES.

I HAVE had playmates, I have had companions,
In my days of childhood, in my joyful school-days;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I have been laughing, I have been carousing,
Drinking late, sitting late, with my bosom cronies;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I loved a love once, fairest among women;
Closed are her doors on me, I must not see her —
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I have a friend, a kinder friend has no man;
Like an ingrate, I left my friend abruptly;
Left him, to muse on the old familiar faces.

Ghost-like I paced round the haunts of my childhood,
Earth seemed a desert I was bound to traverse,
Seeking to find the old familiar faces.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why wert not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces —

How some they have died, and some they have left me,
And some are taken from me; all are departed;
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

THE GRANDAME.

ON the green hill top,
Hard by the house of prayer, a modest roof,
And not distinguished from its neighbor-barn,
Save by a slender-tapering length of spire,
The Grandame sleeps. A plain stone barely tells
The name and date to the chance passenger.
For lowly born was she, and long had eat,
Well-earned, the bread of service: — hers was else
A mounting spirit, one that entertained
Scorn of base action, deed dishonorable,
Or aught unseemly. I remember well
Her reverend image: I remember, too,
With what a zeal she served her master's house:
And how the prattling tongue of garrulous age
Delighted to recount the oft-told tale
Or anecdote domestic. Wise she was,
And wondrous skilled in genealogies,
And could in apt and voluble terms discourse
Of births, of titles, and alliances;

Of marriages, and intermarriages;
 Relationship remote, or near of kin;
 Of friends offended, family disgraced —
 Maiden high-born, but wayward, disobeying
 Parental strict injunction, and regardless
 Of unmixed blood, and ancestry remote,
 Stooping to wed with one of low degree.
 But these are not thy praises; and I wrong
 Thy honored memory, recording chiefly
 Things light or trivial. Better 'twere to tell,
 How with a nobler zeal, and warmer love,

She served her heavenly master. I have seen
 That reverend form bent down with age
 and pain,
 And rankling malady. Yet not for this Ceased she to praise her Maker, or withdrew
 Her trust in him, her faith, and humble hope —
 So meekly had she learned to bear her cross —
 For she had studied patience in the school
 Of Christ, much comfort she had thence derived,
 And was a follower of the Nazarene.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

1775-1864.

[WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR was born at Warwick, Jan. 30, 1775; died at Florence, Dec. 17, 1864. He resided in Italy almost continuously from 1815 to 1835, and afterwards twenty-one years in Bath. His writings, the dates of which range from 1795 to almost the year of his death, were first collected by himself in two large volumes (1846), and afterwards (1876), with his Life, by Mr. John Forster, in eight vols. 8vo.]

THE SHELL.

[From Gebir, Book I.]

I AM not daunted, no; I will engage.
 But first, said she, what wager will you
 lay?
 A sheep, I answered, add whate'er you
 will.
 I cannot, she replied, make that return:
 Our hidèd vessels in their pitchy round Seldom, unless from rapine, hold a sheep.
 But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue Within, and they that lustre have imbibed
 In the Sun's palace-porch, where when unyoked
 His chariot-wheel stands midway in the
 wave:
 Shake one and it awakens, then apply

Its polishèd lips to your attentive ear
 And it remembers its august abodes,
 And murmurs as the ocean murmurs
 there.

PRAYERS.

[From Book V.]

YE men of Gades, armed with brazen shields,
 And ye of near Tartessus, where the
 shore
 Stoops to receive the tribute which all owe
 To Baetis and his banks for their attire, Ye too whom Durius bore on level
 meads,
 Inherent in your hearts is bravery:
 For Earth contains no nation where abounds

e generous horse and not the warlike
 man.
 t neither soldier now nor steed avails :
 r steed nor soldier can oppose the Gods :
 r is there aught above like Jove himself,
 r weighs against his purpose, when
 once fixt,
 ight but, with supplicating knee, the Prayers.
 ifter than light are they, and every
 face,
 o' different, glows with beauty; at the throne mercy, when clouds shut it from mankind,
 ey fall bare-bosom'd, and indignant Jove
 ops at the soothing sweetness of their voice
 e thunder from his hand: let us arise these high places daily, beat our
 breast,
 ostrate ourselves and deprecate his wrath.

 The sacred ile that shrines the queen of
 love.
 It stood so near him, so acute each
 sense,
 That not the symphony of lutes alone
 Or coo serene or billing strife of doves.
 But murmurs, whispers, nay the very sighs
 Which he himself had utter'd once, he
 heard.
 Next, but long after and far off, appear
 The cloudlike cliffs and thousand towers
 of Crete,

And further to the right, the Cyclades : Phœbus had rais'd and fixt them, to surround
 His native Delos and aerial fane.
 He saw the land of Pelops, host of
 Gods,
 Saw the steep ridge where Corinth after stood Beckoning the serious with the smiling
 Arts
 Into the sunbright bay; unborn the maid
 That to assure the bent-up hand unskilled Lookt oft, but oftener fearing who might wake.
 He heard the voice of rivers; he des-cried
 Pindan Peneus and the slender nymphs
 That tread his banks but fear the thundering tide;
 These, and Amphrysos and Apidanus
 And poplar-crown'd Spercheus, and reclined
 On restless rocks Enipeus, where the winds Scatter'd above the weeds his hoary
 hair.
 Then, with Pirene and with Panope
 Evenus, troubled from paternal tears,
 And last was Achelous, king of iles.
 Zacynthus here, above rose Ithaca, Like a blue bubble floating in the bay.
 Far onward to the left a glimm'ring
 light Glanced out oblique, nor vanisht; he inquired
 Whence that arose, his consort thus replied,
 "Behold the vast Eridanus! ere long
 We may again behold him and rejoice.
 Of noble rivers none with mightier force Rolls his unwearied torrent to the main."
 And now Sicanian Etna rose to view: Darkness with light more horrid she confounds, Baffles the breath and dims the sight of
 day.
 Tamar grew giddy with astonishment
 And, looking up, held fast the bridal vest;

He heard the roar above him, heard the
 roar
 Beneath, and felt it too, as he beheld, Hurl, from Earth's base, rocks, mom-tains, to the skies.

TO TACÆA.

TO-MORROW, brightest-eyed of Avon's
 train,
 To-morrow thou art slavelike bound and
 sold,
 Another's and another's; haste away, Winde through the willows, dart along the path,
 It nought avails thee, nought our plaint avails.
 O happy those before me, who could
 say,
 "Short though thy period, sweet Tacæa, short Ere thou art destined to the depths below,
 Thou passest half thy sunny hours with
 me."
 I mourn not, envy not, what others
 gain,
 Thee, and thy venerable elms I mourn, Thy old protectors, ruthless was the
 pride,
 And gaunt the need that bade their heads lie low.
 I see the meadow's tender grass start
 back,
 See from their prostrate trunks the gory glare.
 Ah! pleasant was it once to watch thy waves
 Swelling o'er pliant beds of glossy weed; Pleasant to watch them dip amid the stones, Chirp, and spring over, glance and gleam along,
 And tripping light their wanton way
 pursue.
 Methinks they now with mellow mournfulness
 Bid their faint breezes chide my fond delay,
 Nor suffer on the bridge nor on the knee poor irregularly pencilled page. s, Tacæa, thou art sore deceived!

 re are no foren words, no fatal seal, thou and all who hear me shall avow
 : simple notes of sorrow's song are
 here.

FÆSULAN IDYL.

RE, when precipitate Spring with one light bound
 o hot Summer's lusty arms expires;
 I where go forth at morn, at eve, at
 night,
 t airs, that want the lute to play with them,
 d softer sighs, that know not what they want;
 der a wall, beneath an orange tree ose tallest flowers could tell the lowlier ones
 sights in Fiesole right up above, ile I was gazing a few paces off what they seemed to show me with their nods, air frequent whispers and their pointing shoots, gentle maid came down the garden
 steps
 d gathered the pure treasure in her lap.
 heard the branches rustle, and stept
 forth
 drive the ox away, or mule, or goat, ach I believed it must be); for sweet scents
 : the swift vehicles of still sweeter
 thoughts,
 d nurse and pillow the dull memory at would let drop without them her best stores.
 ey bring me tales of youth and tones of love, d 'tis and ever was my wish and
 way
 let all flowers live freely, and all
 die,
 ene'er their Genius bids their souls
 depart,

Among their kindred in their native
 place.
 I never pluck the rose; the violet's
 head
 Hath shaken with my breath upon its bank
 And not reproacht me; the ever-sacred cup
 Of the pure lily hath between my hands
 Felt safe, unsoiled, nor lost one grain
 of gold.
 I saw the light that made the glossy
 leaves
 More glossy; the fair arm, the fairer cheek
 Warmed by the eye intent on its pursuit;
 I saw the foot, that although half-erect From its gray slippers, could not lift her up
 To what she wanted; I held down a branch,
 And gathered her some blossoms, since their hour
 Was come, and bees had wounded them, and flies
 Of harder wing were working their way through
 And scattering them in fragments under foot.
 So crisp were some, they rattled un-evolved,
 Others, ere broken off, fell into shells,
 For such appear the petals when de-tacht, Unbending, brittle, lucid, white like
 snow,
 And like snow not seen through, by eye or sun;
 Yet every one her gown received from
 me
 Was fairer than the first; . . . !
 thought not so,
 But so she praised them to reward my
 care,
 I said: you find the largest.
This indeed,
 Cried she, is large and sweet.
 She held one forth,
 Whether for me to look at or to take
 She knew not nor did I; but taking
 it

Would best have solved (and this she felt) her doubts,
I dared not touch it; for it seemed a
part
Of her own self; fresh, full, the most mature
Of blossoms, yet a blossom; with a touch
To fall, and yet unfallen.

She drew back
The boon she tendered, and then, finding not
The ribbon at her waist to fix it in,
Dropt it, as loth to drop it, on the rest.

IPHIGENEIA AND AGAMEMNON.

IPHIGENEIA, when she heard her doom
At Aulis, and when all beside the
King
Had gone away, took his right hand, and said,
"O father! I am young and very happy.
I do not think the pious Calchas heard Distinctly what the Goddess spake.
Old-age Obscures the senses. If my nurse, who knew
My voice so well, sometimes misunderstood While I was resting on her knee both arms
And hitting it to make her mind my words,
And looking in her face, and she in
mine,
Might he not also hear one word amiss,
Spoken from so far off, even from Olympus?"
The father placed his cheek upon her
head,
And tears dropt down it, but the king of men Replied not. Then the maiden spake once more.
"O father! say'st thou nothing?
Hear'st thou not Me, whom thou ever hast, until this
hour,

Listened to fondly, and awakened me
To hear my voice amid the voice of birds,
When it was inarticulate as theirs,
And the down deadened it within the nest?"
He moved her gently from him, silent
still,
And this, and this alone, brought tears from her,
Although she saw fate nearer: then with sighs,
"I thought to have laid down my hair
before Benignant Artemis, and not have dimmed
Her polisht altar with my virgin blood;
I thought to have selected the white
flowers
To please the Nymphs, and to have asked of each
By name, and with no sorrowful regret,
Whether, since both my parents willed the change,
I might at Hymen's feet bend my clay
brow;
And (after those who mind us girls the most)
Adore our own Athena, that she would Regard me mildly with her azure eyes.
But, father! to see you no more, and
see
Your love, O father! go ere I am
gone." . . .
Gently he moved her off, and drew her
back,
Bending his lofty head far over hers,
And the dark depths of nature heaved and burst.
He turned away; not far, but silent
still.
She now first shuddered; for in him,
so nigh,
So long a silence seemed the approach
of death,
And like it. Once again she raised her voice.
"O father! if the ships are now detained,
And all your vows move not the Gods
above,

on the knife strikes me there will be one prayer less to them: and purer can there
 be
 , or more fervent than the daughter's prayer her dear father's safety and success?"
 roan that shook him shook not his resolve.
 aged man now entered, and without word, stept slowly on, and took the wrist
 the pale maiden. She looked up, and saw fillet of the priest and calm cold
 eyes.
 n turned she where her parent stood, and cried father! grieve no more: the ships can sail."

THE DEATH OF ARTEMIDORA.

ARTEMIDORA! Gods invisible, While thou art lying faint along the couch,
 have tied the sandal to thy slender
 feet
 I stand beside thee, ready to convey thy weary steps where other rivers
 flow.
 Refreshing shades will waft thy weariness away, and voices like thy own come near
 I nearer, and solicit an embrace." Artemidora sighed, and would have
 prest
 her hand now pressing hers, but was too weak.
 He stood over her dark hair unseen While thus Elpenor spoke. He lookt into eyes that had given light and life ere-while on those above them, but now dim with tears
 wakefulness. Again he spake of joy

Eternal. At that word, that sad word, joy,
 Faithful and fond her bosom heaved
 once more;
 Her head fell back; and now a loud deep sob
 Swelled thro' the darkened chamber;
 'twas not hers.

CORINNA, FROM ATHENS, TO TANAGRA.

[From Pericles and Aspasia.]

I.

TANAGRA! think not I forget
 Thy beautifully-storied streets;
 Be sure my memory bathes yet
 In clear Thermodon, and yet greets
 The blythe and liberal shepherd boy,
 Whose sunny bosom swells with joy
 When we accept his matted rushes Upheaved with sylvan fruit; away he bounds, and blushes.

2.

I promise to bring back with me
 What thou with transport will receive,
 The only proper gift for thee,
 Of which no mortal shall bereave
 In later times thy mouldering walls,
 Until the last old turret falls;
 A crown, a crown from Athens won,
 A crown no god can wear, beside Latona's son.

3.

There may be cities who refuse
 To their own child the honors due,
 And look ungently on the Muse;
 But ever shall those cities rue
 The dry, unyielding, niggard breast,
 Offering no nourishment, no rest,
 To that young head which soon shall
 rise Disdainfully, in might and glory, to the skies.

4.

Sweetly where caverned Dirce flows Do white-armed maidens chaunt my
 lay,

Flapping the while with laurel-rose
 The honey-gathering tribes away;
 And sweetly, sweetly, Attick tongues
 Lisp your Corinna's early songs;
 To her with feet more graceful come
 The verses that have dwelt in kindred breasts at home.

5.

O let thy children lean aslant
 Against the tender mother's knee,
 And gaze into her face, and want To know what magic there can be In words that urge some eyes to dance,
 While others as in holy trance
 Look up to heaven; be such my praise!
 Why linger? I must haste, or lose the Delphic bays.

CLEONE TO ASPASIA.

We mind not how the sun in the mid-
 sky
 Is hastening on; but when the golden orb Strikes the extreme of earth, and when the gulphs
 Of air and ocean open to receive him, Dampness and gloom invade us; then we think Ah! thus it is with youth. Too fast
 his feet
 Run on for sight; hour follows hour;
 fair maid Succeeds fair maid; bright eyes be-star his couch:
 The cheerful horn awakens him; the feast,
 The revel, the entangling dance,
 allure,
 And voices mellower than the Muse's
 own
 Heap up his buoyant bosom on their
 wave.
 A little while, and then . . . Ah youth! youth! youth!
 Listen not to my words . . . but stay with me!
 When thou art gone, Life may go too;
 the sigh
 That rises is for thee, and not for Life.

THE MAIDS LAMENT.

[From the Examination of Shakspeare.]

I LOVED him not; and yet now he is gone
 I feel I am alone.
 I checked him while he spoke; yet could he speak,
 Alas, I would not check.
 For reasons not to love him once I sought
 And wearied all my thought To vex myself and him; I now would give
 My love, could he but live Who lately lived for me, and when he found
 'Twas vain, in holy ground
 He hid his face amid the shades of
 death.
 I waste for him my breath
 Who wasted his for me; but mine returns,
 And this lorn bosom burns
 With stifling heat, heaving it up in
 sleep,
 And waking me to weep
 Tears that had melted his soft heart;
 for years
 Wept he as bitter tears.
 "Merciful God!" such was his latest
 prayer,
 "These may she never share!"
 Quieter is his breath, his breast more
 cold
 Than daisies in the mould, Where children spell, athwart the churchyard gate,
 His name, and life's brief date.
 Pray for him, gentle souls, whoe'er you
 be,
 And, O, pray too for me.

WHY, why repine, my pensive friend.
 At pleasures slipt away?
 Some the stern Fates will never lend,
 And all refuse to stay.

I see the rainbow in the sky,
 The dew upon the grass;
 I see them, and I ask not why They glimmer or they pass.

folded arms I linger not call them back — 'twere vain :
s, or in some other spot
now they'll shine again.

CHILDREN PLAYING IN A CHURCHYARD.

DREN, keep up that harmless play, kindred angels plainly say God's authority ye may.

Be prompt his Holy word to hear,
It teaches you to banish fear;
The lesson lies on all sides near.

Ten summers hence the sprightliest lad
In Nature's face will look more sad,
And ask where are those smiles she had?

Ere many days the last will close.
Play on, play on, for then (who knows?)
Ye who play here may here repose.

THOMAS CAMPBELL.

1777-1844.

THOMAS CAMPBELL was born at Glasgow in 1777 of a good Scotch family. He was educated at Glasgow Grammar School and University, and after one or two tutorships proceeded to Edinburgh to try his fortunes in literature. He published The Pleasures of Hope at the age of twenty-one, and from that date forward his career was one of literary success sufficient, with a pension of £200 from the Crown, to secure him from pecuniary anxiety. He contested successfully the professorship of his University with Sir Walter Scott in 1827, and was re-elected the two following years. He removed to London in 1840, but the last years of his life were spent at Boulogne, where he died in 1844. He was buried in Westminster Abbey.]

HOPE.

HEAVENLY Hope, the Aonian Muses say, Man and Nature mourned their first decay,
Every form of Death and every woe From malignant stars to Earth below,
Murder bared her arm, and rampant War
Led the red dragons of her iron car; Peace and Mercy, banished from the plain,
Went on the viewless winds to Heaven
again;
All forsook the friendless guilty
mind.
Hope, the charmer, lingered still behind.

THE FINAL TRIUMPH OF HOPE.

HEAVENLY Hope! when yonder spheres
sublime
Led their first notes to sound the march of time,

Their joyous youth began — but not to fade. —
When all the sister planets have de-cayed;
When rapt in fire the realms of ether
glow,
And Heaven's last thunder shakes the world below;
Thou, undismayed, shalt o'er the ruins
smile,
And light thy torch at Nature's funeral pile!

THE LAST MAN.

ALL worldly shapes shall melt in gloom,
The sun himself must die,
Before this mortal shall assume Its immortality!
I saw a vision in my sleep
That gave my spirit strength to sweep Adown the gulf of Time!
I saw the last of human mould,
That shall creation's death behold,
As Adam saw her prime!

The sun's eye had a sickly glare,
 The earth with age was wan,
 The skeletons of nations were Around that lonely man!
 Some had expired in fight, — the brands
 Still rusted in their bony hands;
 In plague and famine some!
 Earth's cities had no sound nor tread;
 And ships were drifting with the dead
 To shores where all was dumb!

Yet, prophet-like, that lone one stood,
 With dauntless words and high,
 That shook the sere leaves from the wood
 As if a storm passed by — Saying, We are twins in death, proud
 sun,
 Thy face is cold, thy race is run,
 'Tis mercy bids thee go;
 For thou ten thousand thousand years
 Hast seen the tide of human tears,
 That shall no longer flow.

What though beneath thee man put forth
 His pomp, his pride, his skill;
 And arts that made fire, flood, and
 earth,
 The vassals of his will; —
 Yet mourn I not thy parted sway,
 Thou dim discrowned king of day:
 For all those trophied arts
 And triumphs that beneath thee sprang,
 Healed not a passion or a pang
 Entailed on human hearts.

Go, let oblivion's curtain fall
 Upon the stage of men,
 Nor with thy rising beams recall
 Life's tragedy again.
 Its piteous pageants bring not back,
 Nor waken flesh upon the rack
 Of pain anew to writhe;
 Stretched in disease's shapes abhorred,
 Or mown in battle by the sword,
 Like grass beneath the scythe.

Even, I am weary in yon skies
 To watch thy fading fire;
 Test of all sumless agonies,
 Behold not me expire.

My lips that speak thy dirge of death—
 Their rounded gasp and gurgling breath
 To see thou shalt not boast.
 The eclipse of nature spreads my pall,—
 The majesty of darkness shall Receive my parting ghost!

'This spirit shall return to Him
 Who gave its heavenly spark;
 Yet think not, sun, it shall be dim,
 When thou thyself art dark!
 No! it shall live again, and shine
 In bliss unknown to beams of thine,
 By Him recalled to breath,
 Who captive led captivity,
 Who robbed the grave of victory,—
 And took the sting from death!

Go, sun, while mercy holds me up
 On nature's awful waste,
 To drink this last and bitter cup
 Of grief that man shall taste —
 Go, tell the night that hides thy face,
 Thou saw'st the last of Adam's race,
 On earth's sepulchral clod,
 The darkening universe defy
 To quench his immortality,
 Or shake his trust in God!

LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER.

A CHIEFTAIN to the Highlands bound,
 Cries, "Boatman, do not tarry!
 And I'll give thee a silver pound
 To row us o'er the ferry."

"Now, who be ye would cross Lochgyle,

This dark and stormy water?"

"Oh! I'm the chief of Ulva's isle,
 And this Lord Ullin's daughter.

"And fast before her father's men
 Three days we've fled together;
 For, should he find us in the glen,
 My blood would stain the heather.

"His horsemen hard behind us ride;
 Should they our steps discover,
 Then who will cheer my bonny bride
 When they have slain her lover?"

THE LAMENT OF OUTALISSI.

[Gertrude of Wyoming.]

"AND I could weep;" th' Oneyda chief
His descant wildly thus begun;
"But that I may not stain with grief
The death-song of my father's son!
Or bow his head in woe;
For by my wrongs, and by my wrath!
To-morrow Areouski's breath (That fires yon heav'n with storms of
death,)

Shall light us to the foe:
And we shall share, my Christian boy!
The foeman's blood, the avenger's joy!

"But thee, my flower, whose breath was given

By milder genii o'er the deep,
The spirits of the white man's heaven
Forbid not thee to weep:
Nor will the Christian host,
Nor will thy father's spirit grieve
To see thee, on the battle's eve, Lamenting take a mournful leave
Of her who loved thee most:
She was the rainbow to thy sight!
Thy sun — thy heaven — of lost delight!

"To-morrow let us do or die!
But when the bolt of death is hurled,
Ah! whither then with thee to fly,
Shall Outalissi roam the world?
Seek we thy once loved home?
The hand is gone that cropt its flowers:
Unheard their clock repeats its hours!
Cold is the hearth within their bow'rs!
And should we thither roam,
Its echoes and its empty tread
Would sound like voices from the dead!

"Or shall we cross yon mountains blue, Whose streams my kindred nation quaffed;
And by my side, in battle true,
A thousand warriors drew the shaft?
Ah! there, in desolation cold,
The desert serpent dwells alone,
Where grass o'ergrows each mouldering bone,
And stones themselves to ruin grown,
Like me, are death-like old.

Then seek we not their camp — for
there
The silence dwells of my despair !

“But hark, the trump! — to-morrow
thou

In glory's fires shalt dry thy tears :
Even from the land of shadows now
My father's awful ghost appears,
Amidst the clouds that round us roll ;
He bids my soul for battle thirst —
He bids me dry the last — the first —
The only tears that ever burst
From Outalissi's soul ;
Because I may not stain with grief
The death-song of an Indian chief.”

THE SOLDIER'S DREAM.

OUR bugles sang truce — for the night-cloud had lowered
And the sentinel stars set their watch
in the sky ;
And thousands had sunk on the ground overpowered,
The weary to sleep, and the wounded to die.

When reposing that night on my pallet
of straw,
By the wolf-scaring faggot that guarded the slain,
At the dead of the night a sweet vision
I saw,
And thrice ere the morning I dreamt it again.

Methought from the battle-field's dreadful array,
Far, far I had roamed on a desolate track ;
’Twas autumn — and sunshine arose on
the way
To the home of my fathers, that welcomed me back.

I flew to the pleasant fields traversed so oft
In life's morning march, when my bosom was young ;

I heard my own mountain-goats bleat-ing aloft,
And knew the sweet strain that the corn-reapers sung.

Then pledged we the wine-cup, and fondly I swore
From my home and my weeping friends never to part ;
My little ones kissed me a thousand times o'er,
And my wife sobbed aloud in her fullness of heart.

Stay, stay with us — rest, thou art weary and worn ;
And fain was their war-broken soldier to stay ;
But sorrow returned with the dawning of morn,
And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away.

EXILE OF ERIN.

THEIR came to the beach a poor Exile of Erin,
The dew on his thin robe was heavy and chill :
For his country he sighed, when at twilight repairing
To wander alone by the wind-beaten
hill.
But the day-star attracted his eye's sad devotion,
For it rose o'er his own native isle of the ocean,
Where once, in the fire of his youthful emotion,
He sang the bold anthem of Erin go bragh.

Sad is my fate ! said the heart-broken stranger,
The wild deer and wolf to a covert can flee ;
But I have no refuge from famine and danger,
A home and a country remain not to
me.

Never again in the green sunny bowers,
Where my forefathers lived, shall I spend the sweet hours,
Or cover my harp with the wild woven
 flowers,
And strike to the numbers of Erin go
 bragh!

Erin my country! though sad and forsaken,
In dreams I revisit thy sea-beaten
 shore;
But alas! in a far foreign land I awaken,
And sigh for the friends who can meet me no more!
Oh cruel fate! wilt thou never replace
 me
In a mansion of peace — where no perils can chase me?
Never again, shall my brothers embrace
 me?
They died to defend me, or live to deplore!

Where is my cabin-door, fast by the wild wood?
Sisters and sire! did ye weep for its
 fall?
Where is the mother that looked on my childhood?
And where is the bosom friend, dearer than all?
Oh! my sad heart! long abandoned by pleasure,
Why did it dote on a fast-fading treasure!
Tears like the rain-drop, may fall without measure,
But rapture and beauty they cannot recall.

Yet all its sad recollection suppressing,
One dying wish my lone bosom can draw:
Erin! an exile bequeaths thee this bless-
 ing!
Land of my forefathers! Erin go
 bragh!
Buried and cold, when my heart stills her motion,

Green be thy fields — sweetest isle of the ocean!
And thy harp-striking bards sing aloud with devotion —
Erin mavournin! — Erin go bragh!

FIELD FLOWERS.

YE field flowers! the gardens eclipse you, 'tis true,
Yet, wildings of nature, I doat upon
 you;
For ye waft me to summers of old,
When the earth teemed around me with fairy delight,
And when daisies and buttercups glad-dened my sight,
Like treasures of silver and gold.

I love you for lulling me back into dreams
Of the blue Highland mountains and echoing streams,
And of birchen glades breathing their balm,
While the deer was seen glancing in sunshine remote,
And the deep mellow crush of the woodpigeon's note
Made music that sweetened the calm.

Not a pastoral song has a pleasanter
 tune
Than ye speak to my heart, little wildings of June:
Of old ruinous castles ye tell,
Where I thought it delightful your beauties to find,
When the magic of Nature first breathed on my mind,
And your blossoms were part of her spell.

Even now what affections the violet
 awakes;
What loved little islands twice seen in their lakes,
Can the wild water-lily restore;
What landscapes I read in the primrose's looks,

And what pictures of pebbled and minnowy brooks
In the vetches that tangled their
shore.

Earth's cultureless buds, to my heart ye were dear,
Ere the fever of passion or ague of
fear
Had scathed my existence's bloom;
Once I welcome you more, in life's pas-sionless stage,
With the visions of youth to revisit my
age,
And I wish you to grow on my tomb.

YE MARINERS OF ENGLAND.

YE mariners of England,
That guard our native seas;
Whose flag has braved a thousand
years
The battle and the breeze!
Your glorious standard launch again
To match another foe;
And sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow!

The spirits of your fathers
Shall start from every wave;
For the deck it was their field of fame
And Ocean was their grave:
Where Blake and mighty Nelson fell,
Your manly hearts shall glow,
As ye sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow!

Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep;
Her march is o'er the mountain wave,
Her home is on the deep.
With thunders from her native oak
She quells the floods below,
As they roar on the shore,

When the stormy winds do blow;
When the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow!

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn,
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return;
Then, then, ye ocean warriors,
Our song and feast shall flow
To the fame of your name,
When the storm has ceased to blow,
When the fiery fight is heard no more,
And the storm has ceased to blow.

THE BATTLE OF THE BALTIC.

OF Nelson and the North
Sing the glorious day's renown,
When to battle fierce came forth
All the might of Denmark's crown,
And her arms along the deep proudly
shone:

By each gun the lighted brand
In a bold, determined hand;
And the prince of all the land Led them on.

Like leviathans afloat,
Lay their bulwarks on the brine,
While the sign of battle flew O'er the lofty British line:
It was ten of April morn by the chime,
As they drifted on their path;
There was silence deep as death,
And the boldest held his breath
For a time.

But the might of England flushed,
To anticipate the scene;
And her van the fleeter rushed O'er the deadly space between.
"Hearts of oak!" our captains cried;
when each gun
From its adamant lips
Spread a death-shade round the ships,
Like the hurricane eclipse
Of the sun.

Again! again! again!
And the havoc did not slack, feebler cheer the Dane

 r cheering sent us back;
 shots along the deep slowly boom: —
 ceased, and all is wail,
 y strike the shattered sail;
 conflagration pale,
 the gloom.

oke the victor then,
 hailed them o'er the wave:
 re brothers! we are men!
 ve conquer but to save:
 ace instead of death let us bring;
 eld, proud foe, thy fleet,
 the crews, at England's feet, nake submission meet r king."

Denmark blessed our chief,
 he gave her wounds repose;
 he sounds of joy and grief her people wildly rose, ath withdrew his shades from the
 day;
 : the sun looked smiling bright
 t wide and woeful sight,
 e the fires of funeral light
 away.

joy, Old England raise,
 he tidings of thy might,
 e festal cities' blaze,
 t the wine-cup shines in light;
 et amidst that joy and uproar
 s think of them that sleep, nany a fathom deep,
 y wild and stormy steep,

hearts! to Britain's pride so faithful and so true,
 e deck of fame that died,
 the gallant good Riou: igh the winds of heaven o'er their
 grave;
 : the billow mournful rolls,

 ing glory to the souls

HOHENLINDEN.

ON Linden when the sun was low,
 All bloodless lay the untrodden snow;
 And dark as winter was the flow
 Of Iser rolling rapidly.

But Linden saw another sight
 When the drum beat at dead of night,
 Commanding fires of death to light
 The darkness of her scenery.

By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
 Each horseman drew his battle blade,
 And furious every charger neigh'd
 To join the dreadful revelry.

Then shook the hills, with thunder
 riven;
 Then rushed the steed, to battle driven;
 And louder than the bolts of Heaven
 Far flashed the red artillery.

But redder yet that light shall glow
 On Linden's hills of stained snow,
 And bloodier yet the torrent flow
 Of Iser rolling rapidly.

'Tis morn, but scarce yon level sun
 Can pierce the war-clouds, rolling dun,
 Where furious Frank and fiery Hun
 Shout in their sulph'rous canopy.

The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
 Who rush to glory or the grave!
 Wave, Munich, all thy banners wave,
 And charge with all thy chivalry.

Few, few shall part where many meet;
 The snow shall be their winding-sheet:
 And every turf beneath their feet
 Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

THE MOTHER.

[The Pleasures of Hope.]

LO! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
 Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps;

She, while the lovely babe unconscious
 lies,
 Smiles on her slumbering child with pensive eyes,
 And weaves a song of melancholy joy —
 "Sleep, image of thy father, sleep, my boy:
 No lingering hour of sorrow shall be
 thine;
 No sigh that rends thy father's heart and mine;
 Bright as his many sire the son shall
 be
 In form and soul; but ah! more blest than he!
 Thy fame, thy worth, thy filial love, at
 last,
 Shall soothe this aching heart for all the
 past —
 With many a smile my solitude repay,
 And chase the world's ungenerous scorn
 away.

"And say, when summoned from the world and thee,
 I lay my head beneath the willow-tree,
 Wilt thou, sweet mourner! at my stone
 appear,
 And soothe my parted spirit lingering
 near?
 Oh, wilt thou come, at evening hour, to
 shed
 The tears of memory o'er my narrow
 bed;
 With aching temples on thy hand reclined,
 Muse on the last farewell I leave behind, Breathe a deep sigh to winds that murmur low,
 And think on all my love, and all my
 woe?"

So speaks affection, ere the infant eye
 Can look regard, or brighten in reply.
 But when the cherub lip hath learnt to claim
 A mother's ear by that endearing name;
 Soon as the playful innocent can prove
 A tear of pity, or a smile of love,
 Or cons his murmuring task beneath her
 care.

Or lisps, with holy look, his evening
 prayer,
 Or gazing, mutely pensive, sits to hear
 The mournful ballad warbled in his ear;
 How fondly looks admiring Hope the
 while,
 At every artless tear, and every smile!
 How glows the joyous parent to decry
 A guileless bosom, true to sympathy!

THE RIVER OF LIFE.

THE more we live, more brief appear
 Our life's succeeding stages:
 A day to childhood seems a year,
 And years like passing ages.

The gladsome current of our youth
 Ere passion yet disorders,
 Steals lingering like a river smooth
 Along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan,
 And sorrow's shafts fly thicker,
 Ye Stars, that measure life to man,
 Why seem your courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and
 breath
 And life itself is vapid,
 Why, as we reach the Falls of Death,
 Feel we its tide more rapid?

It may be strange — yet who would change
 Time's course to slower speeding,
 When one by one our friends have gone
 And left our bosoms bleeding?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength
 Indemnifying fleetness;
 And those of youth, a seeming length.
 Proportion'd to their sweetness

FREEDOM AND LOVE.

How delicious is the winning
 Of a kiss at love's beginning,
 When two mutual hearts are sighing
 For the knot there's no untying!

Yet remember, 'midst your wooing,
Love has bliss, but Love has ruing;
Other smiles may make you fickle,
Tears for other charms may trickle.

Love he comes, and Love he tarries,
Just as fate or fancy carries;
Longest stays, when sorest chidden;
Laughs and flies, when press'd and bidden.

Bind the sea to slumber stilly,
Bind its odor to the lily,

Bind the aspen ne'er to quiver,
Then bind Love to last for ever.

Love's a fire that needs renewal
Of fresh beauty for its fuel: Love's wing moults when caged and captured,
Only free, he soars enraptured.

Can you keep the bee from ranging
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fetter'd Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying.

THOMAS MOORE.

1779-1852.

[THOMAS MOORE was born at No. 12, Aungier Street, Dublin, on May 28, 1779. He began to print verses at the age of thirteen, and became popular in early youth as a precocious genius. He came to London in 1799, and was received into fashionable society. In 1803 he was made Admiralty Registrar at Bermuda, a post he soon resigned to a deputy, and returned to England after travelling in Canada and the United States. In 1819 he was involved in financial ruin by the embezzlements of his Bermuda agent, and left England in company with Lord John Russell. He came back to England in 1822. After a very quiet life, the end of which was saddened by the deaths of his five children, he died at Sloperston on Feb. 25, 1852. His chief poetical works are: Odes of Anacreon, 1800; Little's Poems, 1801; Odes and Epistles, 1806; Irish Melodies, 1807 to 1834; Lalla Rookh, 1817; The Fudge Family in Paris, 1818; Rhymes on the Road, 1819; The Loves of the Angels, 1823.]

PARADISE AND THE PERI.

[Lalla Rookh.]

ONE morn a Peri at the gate
Of Eden stood, disconsolate;
And as she listened to the Springs
Of Life within, like music flowing,
And caught the light upon her wings
Through the half-open portal glow-
ing,
She wept to think her recreant race Should e'er have lost that glorious
place!

"How happy!" exclaimed this child of
air,

"Are the holy spirits who wander there,
'Mid flowers that never shall fade or
fall;

Though mine are the gardens of earth and sea,

And the stars themselves have flowers for me,

One blossom of heaven outblossoms
them all!

Though sunny the Lake of cool Cashmere,

With its plane-tree isle reflected clear.

And sweetly the founts of that valley
fall:

Though bright are the waters of Sing-su-hay,

And the golden floods, that thitherward
stray,

Yet — oh, 'tis only the blest can say

How the waters of heaven outshine them all!

"Go, wing thy flight from star to star,
From world to luminous world, as far As the universe spreads its flaming wall;
Take all the pleasures of all the spheres,
And multiply each through endless years,
One minute of heaven is worth them
all!"

The glorious Angel, who was keeping
The gates of Light, beheld her weeping;
And, as he nearer drew and listened
To her sad song, a tear-drop glistened
Within his eyelids, like the spray
From Eden's fountain, when it lies On the blue flower, which — Bramins
say —

Blooms nowhere but in paradise!
"Nymph of a fair, but erring line!" Gently he said — "one hope is thine.
'Tis written in the Book of Fate,
*The Peri yet may be forgiven
Who brings to this Eternal Gate
The Gift that is most dear to Heaven!*
Go, seek it, and redeem thy sin; —
'Tis sweet to let the Pardoned in!"

Rapidly as comets run
To th' embraces of the sun: —
Fleeter than the starry brands,
Flung at night from angel hands
At those dark and daring sprites,
Who would climb th' empyreal heights,
Down the blue vault the Peri flies,
And, lighted earthward by a glance
That just then broke from morning's
eyes, Hung hovering o'er our world's expanse.

But whither shall the Spirit go
To find this gift for Heaven? — "I know
The wealth," she cries "of every urn,
In which unnumbered rubies burn,
Beneath the pillars of Chilminar; —
I know where the Isles of Perfume are Many a fathom down in the sea,
To the south of sun-bright Araby; —
I know too where the Genii hid
The jewelled cup of their king Jamshid,
With life's elixir sparkling high —
But gifts like these are not for the sky.

Where was there ever a gem that shone
Like the steps of Allah's wonderful
throne?
And the Drops of Life — oh! what would they be In the boundless Deep of Eternity?"

DISAPPOINTED HOPES.

[Lalla Rookh.]

I KNEW, I knew it could not last —
'Twas bright, 'twas heavenly, but 'tis
past!
Oh! ever thus, from childhood's hour,
I've seen my fondest hopes decay;
I never loved a tree or flower,
But 'twas the first to fade away.
I never nursed a dear gazelle,
To glad me with its soft black eye,
But when it came to know me well,
And love me, it was sure to die!
Now too — the joy most like divine
Of all I ever dreamt or knew,
To see thee, hear thee, call thee mine, —
Oh, misery! must I lose that too?
Yet go — on peril's brink we meet; — Those frightful rocks — that treacherous sea —
No, never come again — though sweet, Though heaven, it may be death to
thee.
Farewell — and blessings on thy way,
Where'er thou go'st, beloved stranger!
Better to sit and watch that ray,
And think thee safe, though far away,
Than have thee near me, and in danger!

THE TEARS OF REPENTANCE

[Lalla Rookh.]

BLEST tears of soul-felt penitence!
In whose benign, redeeming flow
Is felt the first, the only sense
Of guiltless joy that guilt can know.
"There's a drop," said the Peri, "that down from the moon
Falls through the withering airs of June

Upon Egypt's land, of so healing a power,
So balmy a virtue, that e'en in the hour
That drop descends, contagion dies,
And health reanimates earth and skies! —

Oh! is it not thus, thou man of sin,
The precious tears of repentance fall?
Though foul thy fiery plagues within,
One heavenly drop hath dispelled them all! ”

And now — behold him kneeling there
By the child's side, in humble prayer,
While the same sunbeam shines upon
The guilty and the guiltless one,
And hymns of joy proclaim through heaven
The triumph of a soul forgiven!

'Twas when the golden orb had set,
While on their knees they lingered yet,
There fell a light, more lovely far
Than ever came from sun or star,
Upon the tear that, warm and meek,
Dewed that repentant sinner's cheek:
To mortal eye this light might seem
A northern flash or meteor beam —
But well th' enraptured Peri knew 'Twas a bright smile the Angel threw
From heaven's gate, to hail that tear
Her harbinger of glory near!

“ Joy, joy for ever! my task is done —
The Gates are passed, and Heaven is won!

Oh! am I not happy? I am, I am —
To thee, sweet Eden! how dark and sad
Are the diamond turrets of Shadukiam,
And the fragrant bowers of Amberabad!

“ Farewell, ye odors of earth, that die,
Passing away like a lover's sigh! —
My feast is now of the tooba tree,
Whose scent is the breath of eternity!

“ Farewell, ye vanishing flowers, that shone
In my fairy-wreath, so bright and brief, —

Oh! what are the brightest that e'er have blown,
To the lote tree, springing by Allah's
Throne,
Whose flowers have a soul in every leaf!
Joy, joy for ever! — my task is done —
The Gates are passed, and Heaven is won!”

HAVE YOU NOT SEEN THE TIMID TEAR.

HAVE you not seen the timid tear
Steal trembling from mine eye?
Have you not marked the flush of fear,
Or caught the murmured sigh?
And can you think my love is chill,
Nor fixed on you alone?
And can you rend, by doubting still,
A heart so much your own?

To you my soul's affections move Devoutly, warmly true;
My life has been a task of love,
One long, long thought of you.
If all your tender faith is o'er,
If still my truth you'll try;
Alas! I know but one proof more, — I'll bless your name, and die!

WHEN TIME, WHO STEALS.

WHEN Time, who steals our years away,
Shall steal our pleasures too,
The memory of the past will stay,
And half our joys renew.

Then, Chloe, when thy beauty's flower
Shall feel the wintry air, Remembrance will recall the hour
When thou alone wert fair!

Then talk no more of future gloom;
Our joys shall always last;
For hope shall brighten days to come,
And memory gild the past!

Come, Chloe, fill the genial bowl,
I drink to Love and thee:

Thou never canst decay in soul,
Thou'lt still be young for me.

And as thy lips the tear-drops chase
Which on my cheek they find,
So hope shall steal away the trace
Which sorrow leaves behind!

Then fill the bowl — away the gloom!
Our joys shall always last;
For hope shall brighten days to come,
And memory gild the past!

But mark, at thought of future years
When love shall lose its soul,
My Chloe drops her timid tears,
They mingle with my bowl!

How like this bowl of wine, my fair,
Our loving life shall fleet;
Though tears may sometimes mingle
there,
The draught will still be sweet!

Then fill the bowl — away with gloom!
Our joys shall always last;
For hope will brighten days to come,
And memory gild the past!

A CANADIAN BOAT-SONG.

FAINTLY as tolls the evening chime, Our voices keep tune and our oars keep
time.

Soon as the woods on shore look dim,
We'll sing at St. Ann's our parting hymn.
Row, brothers, row! the stream runs
fast,
The rapids are near, and the daylight's
past!

Why should we yet our sail unfurl?
There is not a breath the blue wave to curl!
But, when the wind blows off the shore,
Oh! sweetly we'll rest our weary oar.
Blow, breezes, blow! the stream runs
fast,
The rapids are near, and the daylight's
past!

Ottawa's tide! this trembling mood
Shall see us float over thy surges:
Saint of this green isle! hear our
ers,

Oh! grant us cool heavens and fair
airs.

Blow, breezes, blow! the stream
fast,

The rapids are near, and the day
past!

GO WHERE GLORY WAITS THEE.

Go where glory waits thee,
But while fame elates thee,
Oh! still remember me.
When the praise thou meetest
To thine ear is sweetest,
Oh! then remember me.
Other arms may press thee,
Dearer friends caress thee,
All the joys that bless thee Sweeter far may be;
But when friends are nearest,
And when joys are dearest,
Oh! then remember me.

When at eve thou rovest
By the star thou lovest,
Oh! then remember me.
Think, when home returning,
Bright we've seen it burning.
Oh! thus remember me.
Oft as summer closes,
When thine eye reposes
On its lingering roses,
Once so loved by thee,
Think of her who wove them,
Her who made thee love them
Oh! then remember me.

When, around thee dying,
Autumn leaves are lying,
Oh! then remember me.
And, at night, when gazing
On the gay hearth blazing,
Oh! still remember me.
Then, should music, stealing
All the soul of feeling,
To thy heart appealing,

A CANADIAN BOAT SONG. — Page 366.

Draw one tear from thee;
 Then let memory bring thee
 The strains I used to sing thee, —
 Oh! then remember me.

I BELIEVED THEE TRUE.

I believed thee true,
 I was blest in thus believing;
 Now I mourn that e'er I knew
 One so fair and so deceiving!
 We ever loved like me, —
 I have loved thee too sincerely!
 Now have e'er deceived like thee,
 Thou! deceived me too severely!

See well! yet think awhile
 Of one whose bosom bleeds to doubt
 Of thee;
 Now would rather trust that smile,
 And die with thee than live without
 Thee!

See well! I'll think of thee,
 And leav'st me many a bitter token;
 Thou, distracting woman! see,
 My peace is gone, my heart is Broken! — Fare thee well!

DOES AZURE DECK THE SKY?

Does azure deck the sky?
 To be like thine eyes of blue;
 Or red the rose's dye?
 Or use it is thy blushes' hue.
 'Tis fair, by Love's decree,
 When made resembling thee!

Like falling snow so white,
 To be like thy bosom fair?
 Or like solar beams so bright?
 Or may they seem thy golden hair!
 'Tis bright, by Love's decree,
 When made resembling thee!

Like Nature's beauties felt?
 'Tis thine in her we see!
 Or as music power to melt?

Oh! because it speaks like thee.
 All that's sweet, by Love's decree,
 Has been made resembling thee!

OH! BREATHE NOT HIS NAME.

Oh! breathe not his name, let it sleep in
 The shade,
 Where cold and unhonored his relics
 Are laid;
 Sad, silent, and dark be the tears that We shed,
 As the night-dew that falls on the grass
 O'er his head.

But the night-dew that falls, though in Silence it weeps,
 Shall brighten with verdure the grave
 Where he sleeps;
 And the tear that we shed, though in Secret it rolls,
 Shall long keep his memory green in Our souls.

WHEN HE WHO ADORES THEE.

When he who adores thee has left but
 The name
 Of his fault and his sorrows behind, Oh! say, wilt thou weep, when they Darken the fame
 Of a life that for thee was resigned?
 Yes, weep, and however my foes may Condemn,
 Thy tears shall efface their decree;
 For Heaven can witness, though guilty
 To them,
 I have been but too faithful to thee.

With thee were the dreams of my earliest love;
 Every thought of my reason was thine;
 In my last humble prayer to the Spirit
 Above,
 Thy name shall be mingled with mine.
 Oh! blest are the lovers and friends
 Who shall live
 The days of thy glory to see;
 But the next dearest blessing that Heaven can give
 Is the pride of thus dying for thee.

THE HARP THAT ONCE THROUGH TARA'S HALLS.

THE harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.
So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er,
And hearts, that once beat high for
praise,
Now feel that pulse no more.

No more to chiefs and ladies bright
The harp of Tara swells:
The chord alone, that breaks at night,
Its tale of ruin tells.
Thus Freedom now so seldom wakes,
The only throb she gives
Is when some heart indignant breaks,
To show that still she lives.

FLY NOT YET.

FLY not yet; 'tis just the hour
When pleasure, like the midnight flower
That scorns the eye of vulgar light,
Begins to bloom for sons of night,
And maids who love the moon.

'Twas but to bless these hours of shade
That beauty and the moon were made;
'Tis then their soft attractions glowing Set the tides and goblets flowing.

Oh! stay, — oh! stay, —
Joy so seldom weaves a chain
Like this to-night, that, oh! 'tis pain
To break its links so soon.

Fly not yet; the fount that played
In times of old through Ammon's shade,
Though icy cold by day it ran,
Yet still, like souls of mirth, began

To burn when night was near;
And thus should woman's heart and looks
At noon be cold as winter brooks,
Nor kindle till the night, returning,
Brings their genial hour for burning.

Oh! stay, — oh! stay, —
When did morning ever break,
And find such beaming eyes awake
As those that sparkle here?

RICH AND RARE WERE THE GEMS SHE WORE.

RICH and rare were the gems she wore,
And a bright gold ring on her wand
she bore;
But, oh! her beauty was far beyond
Her sparkling gems or snow-white wand.

"Lady, dost thou not fear to stray,
So lone and lovely, through this bleak
way?

Are Erin's sons so good or so cold
As not to be tempted by woman or
gold?"

"Sir Knight! I feel not the least alarm,
No son of Erin will offer me harm:
For, though they love women and golden store,
Sir Knight! they love honor and virtue
more."

On she went, and her maiden smile
In safety lighted her round the green
isle;

And blest for ever is she who relied Upon Erin's honor and Erin's pride.

AS A BEAM O'ER THE FACE OF THE WATERS MAY GLOW.

AS a beam o'er the face of the waters may glow,

While the tide runs in darkness and coldness below,

So the cheek may be tinged with a warm sunny smile,

Though the cold heart to ruin runs darkly the while.

One fatal remembrance, one sorrow that throws

Its bleak shade alike o'er our joys and our woes,

To which life nothing darker or brighter can bring,

For which joy has no balm and afflic-tion no sting:

Oh! this thought in the midst of enjoyment will stay,

Like a dead, leafless branch in the summer's bright ray,
The beams of the warm sun play round it in vain,
It may smile in his light, but it blooms not again.

THE MEETING OF THE WATERS.

HERE is not in the wide world a valley so sweet,
As that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet;
Oh! the last rays of feeling and life must depart,
Ere the bloom of that valley shall fade from my heart.

Yet it was not that Nature had shed o'er the scene
Her purest of crystal and brightest of green:
Twas not her soft magic of streamlet or hill,
Oh! no, — it was something more exquisite still.

Twas that friends, the beloved of my bosom, were near,
Who made every dear scene of enchantment more dear,
And who felt how the best charms of Nature improve,
When we see them reflected from looks that we love.

SAW THY FORM IN YOUTHFUL PRIME.

SAW thy form in youthful prime,
Nor thought that pale decay
Would steal before the steps of Time,
And waste its bloom away, Mary!
Yet still thy features wore that light
Which fleets not with the breath;
And life ne'er looked more truly bright
Than in thy smile of death, Mary!

As streams that run o'er golden mines,
Yet humbly, calmly glide,

Nor seem to know the wealth that shines
Within their gentle tide, Mary!
So, veiled beneath the simplest guise,
Thy radiant genius shone,
And that which charmed all other eyes
Seemed worthless in thine own, Mary!

If souls could always dwell above,
Thou ne'er hadst left that sphere;
Or could we keep the souls we love,
We ne'er had lost thee here, Mary!
Though many a gifted mind we meet,
Though fairest forms we see,
To live with them is far less sweet
Than to remember thee, Mary!

SHE IS FAR FROM THE LAND.

SHE is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers are round her sighing;
But coldly she turns from their gaze,
and weeps,
For her heart in his grave is lying.

She sings the wild songs of her dear native plains,
Every note which he loved awaking; —
Ah! little they think, who delight in her strains,
How the heart of the Minstrel is breaking.

He had lived for his love, for his country he died,
They were all that to life had entwined him;
Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried,
Nor long will his love stay behind him.

Oh! make her a grave where the sun beams rest
When they promise a glorious morrow;
They'll shine o'er her sleep, like a smile from the West,
From her own loved island of sorrow.

BELIEVE ME, IF ALL THOSE ENDEARING YOUNG CHARMS.

BELIEVE me, if all those endearing young charms,
Which I gaze on so fondly to-day,
Were to change by to-morrow, and fleet in my arms,
Like fairy-gifts fading away,
Thou wouldst still be adored, as this moment thou art,
Let thy loveliness fade as it will,
And around the dear ruin each wish of my heart
Would entwine itself verdantly still.

It is not while beauty and youth are thine own,
And thy cheeks unprofaned by a tear,
That the fervor and faith of a soul can
be known,
To which time will but make thee more dear;
No, the heart that has truly loved never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sun-flower turns on her god, when he sets,
The same look which she turned when he rose.

DRINK TO HER.

DRINK to her who long
Hath waked the poet's sigh,
The girl who gave to song
What gold could never buy.
Oh! woman's heart was made
For minstrel hands alone;
By other fingers played,
It yields not half the tone.
Then here's to her who long
Hath waked the poet's sigh,
The girl who gave to song
What gold could never buy.

At Beauty's door of glass
Where Wealth and Wit once stood,
They asked her, "which might pass?"
She answered, "he who could."
With golden key Wealth thought

To pass — but 'twould not do:
While Wit a diamond brought,
Which cut his bright way through.
So here's to her who long
Hath waked the poet's sigh,
The girl who gave to song
What gold could never buy.

The love that seeks a home
Where wealth and grandeur shines,
Is like the gloomy gnome
That dwells in dark gold mines.
But oh! the poet's love
Can boast a brighter sphere;
Its native home's above,
Though woman keeps it here.
Then drink to her who long
Hath waked the poet's sigh,
The girl who gave to song
What gold could never buy.

OH! BLAME NOT THE BARD.

OH! blame not the bard, if he fly to the bowers
Where Pleasure lies, carelessly smiling at Fame,
He was born for much more, and in happier hours
His soul might have burned with a holier flame;
The string that now languishes loose o'er the lyre,
Might have bent a proud bow to the warrior's dart;
And the lip, which now breathes but the song of desire,
Might have poured the full tide of a patriot's heart.

But, alas for his country! — her pride has gone by,
And that spirit is broken, which never would bend;
O'er the ruin her children in secret must sigh,
For 'tis treason to love her, and death to defend.
Unprized are her sons, till they've learned to betray;

Undistinguished they live, if they shame not their sires;
And the torch, that would light them through dignity's way, Must be caught from the pile where their country expires.

Then blame not the bard, if in pleasure's soft dream
He should try to forget what he never can heal;
Oh! give but a hope—let a vista but gleam
Through the gloom of his country, and mark how he'll feel!
Every passion it nursed, every bliss it
adored,
That instant, his heart at her shrine would lay down;
While the myrtle, now idly entwined with his crown,
Like the wreath of Harmodius, should cover his sword.

But though glory be gone, and though hope fade away,
Thy name, loved Erin, shall live in his songs;
Not even in the hour when his heart is most gay
Will he lose the remembrance of thee and thy wrongs.
The stranger shall hear thy lament on his plains;
The sigh of thy heart shall be sent o'er the deep,
Till thy masters themselves, as they rivet thy chains, Shall pause at the song of their captive, and weep!

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

OH! the days are gone, when Beauty
bright
My heart's chain wove;
When my dream of life from morn till
night
Was love, still love.
New hope may bloom,
And days may come

Of milder, calmer beam,
But there's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream:
No, there's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream.

Though the bard to purer fame may soar,
When wild youth's past;
Though he wins the wise, who frowned
before,
To smile at last;
He'll never meet
A joy so sweet,
In all his noon of fame,
As when first he sung to woman's ear
His soul-felt flame,
And, at every close, she blushed to hear
The one loved name.

No — that hallowed form is ne'er forgot
Which first love traced;
Still it lingering haunts the greenest spot
On memory's waste.
'Twas odor fled
As soon as shed;
'Twas morning's wingèd dream;
'Twas a light that ne'er can shine again
On life's dull stream:
Oh! 'twas light that ne'er can shine
again
On life's dull stream.

LESBIA HATH A BEAMING EYE.

LESBIA hath a beaming eye,
But no one knows for whom it beameth;
Right and left its arrows fly,
But what they aim at no one dream-eth.
Sweeter 'tis to gaze upon My Nora's lid that seldom rises;
Few its looks, but every one,
Like unexpected light, surprises.
O my Nora Creina, dear,
My gentle, bashful Nora Creina, Beauty lies
In many eyes,
But love in yours, my Nora Creina!

Lesbia wears a robe of gold,
But all so close the nymph hath laced it,
Not a charm of beauty's mould Presumes to stay where Nature placed
it.

Oh, my Nora's gown for me,
That floats as wild as mountain breezes,
Leaving every beauty free
To sink or swell as Heaven pleases.
Yes, my Nora Creina, dear,
My simple, graceful Nora Creina,
Nature's dress
Is loveliness —
The dress you wear, my Nora Creina.

Lesbia hath a wit refined,
But when its points are gleaming round us,
Who can tell if they're designed
To dazzle merely, or to wound us?
Pillowed on my Nora's heart
In safer slumber Love reposes — Bed of peace! whose roughest part
Is but the crumpling of the roses.
O my Nora Creina, dear,
My mild, my artless Nora Creina,
Wit, though bright,
Hath no such light
As warms your eyes, my Nora Creina.

AT THE MID HOUR OF NIGHT.

At the mid hour of night, when stars are weeping, I fly
To the lone vale we loved, when life shone warm in thine eye;
And I think oft, if spirits can steal from the regions of air,
To revisit past scenes of delight, thou wilt come to me there,
And tell me our love is remembered,
even in the sky!

Then I sing the wild song 'twas once such pleasure to hear,
When our voices, commingling, breathed, like one, on the ear;
And, as Echo far off through the vale
my sad orison rolls,

I think, O my love! 'tis thy voice from the Kingdom of Souls, Faintly answering still the notes once were so dear.

'TIS THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

'Tis the last rose of summer
Left blooming alone;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone;
No flower of her kindred,
No rosebud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
To give sigh for sigh.

I'll not leave thee, thou lone one
To pine on the stem;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go sleep thou with them.
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves o'er the bed,
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead.

So soon may I follow,
When friendships decay,
And from Love's shining circle
The gems drop away!
When true hearts lie withered
And fond ones are flown,
Oh! who would inhabit
This bleak world alone?

THE MINSTREL-BOY.

THE Minstrel-boy to the war is gone
In the ranks of death you'll find him
His father's sword he has girded on,
And his wild harp slung behind
him. —

"Land of song!" said the warrior-lad
"Though all the world betrays the One sword, at least, thy rights shall guard,
One faithful harp shall praise thee

Page 872.

the Minstrel fell! — but the foeman's chain
Could not bring his proud soul under;
The harp he loved ne'er spoke again,
For he tore its cords asunder:
And said, "No chains shall sully thee,
Thou soul of love and bravery!
My songs were made for the brave and
free,
They shall never sound in slavery!"

FAREWELL! — BUT WHENEVER YOU WELCOME THE HOUR.

FAREWELL! — but whenever you welcome the hour
That awakens the night-song of mirth in your bower,
When think of the friend who once welcomed it too,
And forgot his own griefs to be happy with you.
His griefs may return, not a hope may remain
Of the few that have brightened his pathway of pain,
But he ne'er will forget the short vision that threw
An enchantment around him, while lingering with you.

And still on that evening when pleasure fills up
The highest top sparkle each heart and each cup,
Where'er my path lies, be it gloomy or
bright,
Your soul, happy friends, shall be with you that night;
All join in your revels, your sports,
and your wiles,
And return to me beaming all o'er with your smiles —
O blest, if it tells me that, 'mid the gay cheer,
The kind voice had murmured, "I wish he were here!"

Let Fate do her worst; there are relics of joy,

Bright dreams of the past, which she cannot destroy;
Which come in the night-time of sorrow and care,
And bring back the features that joy used to wear.
Long, long be my heart with such memories filled!
Like the vase in which roses have once been distilled —
You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

OH! DOUBT ME NOT.

OH! doubt me not — the season
Is o'er, when Folly made me
rove,
And now the vestal, Reason,
Shall watch the fire awaked by
Love.
Although this heart was early blown,
And fairest hands disturbed the tree,
They only shook some blossoms down,
Its fruit has all been kept for thee.
Then doubt me not — the season
Is o'er when Folly made me
rove,
And now the vestal, Reason,
Shall watch the fire awaked by
Love.

And though my lute no longer
May sing of Passion's ardent spell,
Yet, trust me, all the stronger
I feel the bliss I do not tell.
The bee through many a garden roves,
And hums his lay of courtship o'er,
But, when he finds the flower he loves,
He settles there, and hums no more.
Then doubt me not — the season
Is o'er when Folly kept me free,
And now the vestal, Reason,
Shall guard the flame awaked by
thee.

COME O'ER THE SEA.

COME o'er the sea,
Maiden, with me,
Mine through sunshine, storm, and snows;
Seasons may roll,
But the true soul
Burns the same, where'er it goes.
Let fate frown on, so we love and part
not;
'Tis life where thou art, 'tis death where thou art not.
Then come o'er the sea,
Maiden, with me,
Come wherever the wild wind blows;
Seasons may roll,
But the true soul
Burns the same, where'er it goes.

Was not the sea
Made for the free,
Land for courts and chains alone?
Here we are slaves,
But, on the waves,
Love and liberty's all our own No eye to watch, and no tongue to wound us,
All earth forgot, and all heaven around us —
Then come o'er the sea,
Maiden, with me,
Mine through sunshine, storm, and
snows,
Seasons may roll,
But the true soul
Burns the same where'er it goes.

YOU REMEMBER ELLEN.

You remember Ellen, our hamlet's
pride,
How meekly she blessed her humble
lot,
When the stranger, William, had made her his bride,
And love was the light of their lowly cot Together they toiled through winds and rains,

Till William at length in sadness
said,
"We must seek our fortune on other
plains;" —

Then, sighing, she left her lowly shed.
They roamed a long and a weary way, Nor much was the maiden's heart at
ease,
When now, at the close of one stormy
day,

They see a proud castle among the trees.
"To-night," said the youth, "we'll shelter there;

The wind blows cold, and the hour is late:"
So he blew the horn with a chieftain's
air,
And the porter bowed as they passed the gate.

"Now, welcome, lady," exclaimed the youth,

"This castle is thine, and these dark woods all!"

She believed him crazed, but his words were truth,

For Ellen is Lady of Rosna Hall:
And dearly the Lord of Rosna loves What William the stranger wooed and wed;

And the light of bliss, in these lordly
groves,

Shines pure as it did in the lowly
shed.

HAS SORROW THY YOUNG DAYS SHADED.

Has sorrow thy young days shaded,
As clouds o'er the morning fleet?
Too fast have those young days faded,
That, even in sorrow, were sweet?
Does Time with his cold wing wither
Each feeling that once was dear? —
Then, child of misfortune, come hither
I'll weep with thee, tear for tear.

Has love to that soul, so tender,
Been like our Iagenian mine,
Where sparkles of golden splendor

All over the surface shine?
But, if in pursuit we go deeper,
Allured by the gleam that shone,
Ah! false as the dream of the sleeper,
Like Love, the bright ore is gone.

Has Hope, like the bird in the story,
That flitted from tree to tree
With the talisman's glittering glory —
Has Hope been that bird to thee?
On branch after branch alighting,
The gem did she still display,
And, when nearest and most inviting,
Then waft the fair gem away?

If thus the young hours have fled,
When sorrow itself looked bright;
If thus the fair hope hath cheated,
That led thee along so light;
If thus the cold world now wither
Each feeling that once was dear: —
Come, child of misfortune, come hither,
I'll weep with thee, tear for tear.

THE TIME I'VE LOST IN WOOLING.

THE time I've lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing
The light that lies
In woman's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.
Though Wisdom oft has sought me,
I scorned the lore she brought me,
My only books
Were woman's looks,
And folly's all they've taught me.

Her smile when Beauty granted,
I hung with gaze enchanted,
Like him the Sprite
Whom maids by night
Oft meet in glen that's haunted.
Like him, too, Beauty won me,
But while her eyes were on me;
If once their ray
Was turned away,
Oh! winds could not outrun me.

And are those follies going?
And is my proud heart growing Too cold or wise

For brilliant eyes
Again to set it glowing?
No — vain, alas! th' endeavor
From bonds so sweet to sever; —
Poor Wisdom's chance Against a glance
Is now as weak as ever.

COME, REST IN THIS BOSOM.

COME, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer,
Though the herd have fled from thee,
thy home is still here:
Here still is the smile that no cloud can o'ercast,
And a heart and a hand all thy own to the last.

Oh! what was love made for, if 'tis not the same
Through joy and through torment, through glory and shame?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that
heart,
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art.

Thou hast called me thy Angel in moments of bliss,
And thy Angel I'll be, 'mid the horrors of this,
Through the furnace, unshrinking, thy steps to pursue,
And shield thee, and save thee, or perish there too.

I SAW FROM THE BEACH.

I SAW from the beach, when the morning was shining,
A bark o'er the waters move gloriously on;
I came when the sun o'er that beach was declining,
The bark was still there, but the waters were gone.

And such is the fate of our life's early promise,
 So passing the spring-tide of joy we have known;
 Each wave, that we danced on at morning, ebbs from us,
 And leaves us, at eve, on the bleak shore alone.

Ne'er tell me of glories serenely adorn-
 ing
 The close of our day, the calm eve of our night: —
 Give me back, give me back the wild freshness of Morning,
 Her clouds and her tears are worth Evening's best light.

Oh, who would not welcome that moment's returning,
 When passion first waked a new life through his frame,
 And his soul — like the wood that grows precious in burning — Gave out all its sweets to love's exquisite flame!

LIFE WITHOUT FREEDOM.

FROM life without freedom, oh! who would not fly?
 For one day of freedom, oh! who would not die?
 Hark, hark! 'tis the trumpet, the call on the brave,
 The death-song of tyrants, and dirge of the slave.
 Our country lies bleeding, oh! fly to her aid, —
 One arm that defends, is worth hosts that invade.

In Death's kindly bosom our last hope remains,
 The dead fear no tyrants; the grave has no chains.
 On, on to the combat! the heroes that bleed
 For virtue and mankind, are heroes indeed!

And oh! e'en if Freedom from this world be driven,
 Despair not — at least we shall find her in heaven!

HERE'S THE BOWER.

HERE'S the bower she loved so much,
 And the tree she planted;
 Here's the harp she used to touch, —
 Oh! how that touch enchanted!
 Roses now unheeded sigh,
 Where's the hand to wreath them?
 Songs around neglected lie,
 Where's the lip to breathe them?
 Here's the bower she loved so much
 And the tree she planted;
 Here's the harp she used to touch,
 Oh! how that touch enchanted!

Spring may bloom, but she we loved
 Ne'er shall feel its sweetness,
 Time that once so fleetly moved,
 Now hath lost its fleetness.
 Years were days, when here she strayed,
 Days were moments near her;
 Heaven ne'er formed a brighter maid.
 Nor pity wept a dearer!
 Here's the bower she loved so much,
 And the tree she planted;
 Here's the harp she used to touch, —
 Oh! how that touch enchanted!

LOVE AND HOPE.

AT morn, beside yon summer sea,
 Young Hope and Love reclined:
 But scarce had noon-tide come, when
 he
 Into his bark leaped smilingly,
 And left poor Hope behind!
 "I go," said Love, "to sail awhile, Across this sunny main; " —
 And then so sweet his parting smile,
 That Hope, who never dreamed of
 guile,
 Believed he'd come again.

"Oft, in the stilly night, Ere Slumber's chain has bound me."

gered there, till evening's beam er the sands, in thoughtful dream, aced his name, which still the

 stream
 ften washed away.

gth, a sail appears in sight,
 toward the maiden moves;
 'ealth that comes, and gay and
 bright,
 lden bark reflects the light;
 ah, it is not Love's!

 dm the light that lamp bestowed, ve had lights that warmer glowed where, alas! was He?

ist around the sea and shore
 it threw her darkling chain;
 nny sails were seen no more,
 , morning dreams of bliss were

 e never came again!

THOU ART, O GOD!

I.

art, O God! the life and light ll this wondrous world we see;
 w by day, its smile by night, but reflections caught from Thee.
 'er we turn Thy glories shine,
 l things fair and bright are Thine.

II.

day, with farewell beam, delays ng the opening clouds of even,
 e can almost think we gaze ough golden vistas into Heaven;
 hues, that make the sun's decline
 , so radiant, Lord! are Thine.

III.

night, with wings of starry gloom, shadows all the earth and skies, me dark, beauteous bird, whose plume

Is sparkling with unnumbered eyes; —
 That sacred gloom, those fires divine,
 So grand, so countless, Lord! are Thine.

IV.

When youthful spring around us breathes,
 Thy spirit warms her fragrant sigh;
 And every flower the summer wreathes
 Is born beneath that kindling eye.
 Where'er we turn Thy glories shine,
 And all things fair and bright are Thine.

THIS WORLD IS ALL A FLEETING SHOW.

I.

THIS world is all a fleeting show
 For man's illusion given;
 The smiles of joy, the tears of woe,
 Deceitful shine, deceitful flow, —
 There's nothing true but Heaven!

II.

And false the light on Glory's plume,
 As fading hues of even;
 And Love, and Hope, and Beauty's
 bloom,
 Are blossoms gathered for the tomb, —
 There's nothing bright but Heaven!

III.

Poor wanderers of a stormy day,
 From wave to wave we're driven,
 And fancy's flash and reason's ray Serve but to light the troubled way, —
 There's nothing calm but Heaven!

FALL'N IS THY THRONE.

I.

FALL'N is thy throne, O Israel!
 Silence is o'er thy plains;
 Thy dwellings all lie desolate,
 Thy children weep in chains.
 Where are the dews that fed thee
 On Etham's barren shore?
 That fire from Heaven which led thee,
 Now lights thy path no more.

II.

Lord! Thou didst love Jerusalem; —
 Once, she was all Thy own;
 Her love Thy fairest heritage,
 Her power Thy glory's throne,
 Till evil came, and blighted
 Thy long-loved olive-tree; —
 And Salem's shrines were lighted
 For other gods than Thee!

III.

Then sunk the star of Solyma; —
 Then passed her glory's day,
 Like heath that, in the wilderness,
 The wild wind whirls away.
 Silent and waste her bowers,
 Where once the mighty trod,
 And sunk those guilty towers,
 Where Baal reigned as God!

IV.

"Go," — said the Lord, — "ye conquerors!
 Steep in her blood your swords,
 And raze to earth her battlements,
 For they are not the Lord's!
 Till Zion's mournful daughter
 O'er kindred bones shall tread,
 And Hinnom's vale of slaughter Shall hide but half her dead!"

O THOU WHO DRY'ST THE MOURNER'S TEAR!

I.

O THOU who dry'st the mourner's tear!
 How dark this world would be,
 If, when deceived and wounded here,
 We could not fly to Thee.
 The friends, who in our sunshine live,
 When winter comes are flown:
 And he, who has but tears to give,
 Must weep those tears alone.
 But Thou wilt heal that broken heart,
 Which, like the plants that throw
 Their fragrance from the wounded part,
 Breathes sweetness out of woe.

II.

When joy no longer soothes or cheers,
 And e'en the hope that threw
 A moment's sparkle o'er our tears,
 Is dimmed and vanished too!
 Oh! who would bear life's stormy
 doom,
 Did not thy wing of love Come, brightly wafting through the gloom
 Our peace-branch from above?
 Then sorrow, touched by Thee, grows
 bright
 With more than rapture's ray;
 As darkness shows us worlds of light
 We never saw by day!

SOUND THE LOUD TIMBREL

I.

SOUND the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea!
 Jehovah has triumphed — his people
 are free.
 Sing — for the pride of the tyrant is broken,
 His chariots, and horsemen, all splendid and brave,
 How vain was their boasting! — the Lord hath but spoken,
 And chariots and horsemen are sunk in the wave.
 Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's
 dark sea!
 Jehovah has triumphed — his people
 are free.

II.

Praise to the Conqueror, praise to the Lord,
 His word was our arrow, his breath was our sword! —
 Who shall return to tell Egypt the story Of those she sent forth in the hour of her pride?
 For the Lord hath looked out from his pillar of glory,
 And all her brave thousands are dashed in the tide.

Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's
dark sea!
Jehovah has triumphed — his people
are free.

OFT IN THE STILL NIGHT.

OFT, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me;
The smiles, the tears
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone,
Now dimm'd and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken!
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

When I remember all
The friends, so link'd together,
I've seen around me fall,
Like leaves in wintry weather;
I feel like one
Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled,
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

THE JOURNEY ONWARDS.

As slow our ship her foamy track
Against the wind was cleaving,
Her trembling pennant still look'd back
To that dear isle 'twas leaving.
So loth we part from all we love,
From all the links that bind us;
So turn our hearts, as on we rove,
To those we've left behind us!

When, round the bowl, of vanish'd years
We talk with joyous seeming —
With smiles that might as well be tears.
So faint, so sad their beaming;
While memory brings us back again
Each early tie that twined us,
O, sweet's the cup that circles then
To those we've left behind us!

And when in other climes, we meet
Some isle or vale enchanting,
Where all looks flowery wild and sweet,
And nought but love is wanting;
We think how great had been our bliss
If Heaven had but assign'd us
To live and die in scenes like this,
With some we've left behind us!

As travellers oft look back at eve
When eastward darkly going,
To gaze upon that light they leave Still faint behind them glowing, —
So, when the close of pleasure's day
To gloom hath near consign'd us,
We turn to catch one fading ray
Of joy that's left behind us.

HORACE SMITH.

1779-1849.

[AUTHOR of several novels and verses. In connection with his brother James he wrote parodies and criticisms in the Picnic, the London Review, and the Monthly Mirror. He last appeared those imitations from his own and his brother's hand which were published as The Rejected Addresses, one of the most successful and popular works that has ever appeared. Besides these he wrote Brambletye House, in imitation of Scott's historical novels; also, Walter Colyton, The Moneyed Man, The Merchant, and several others. His best poem is the Address to the Mummy, some parts of which exhibit the finest sensibility and an poetic taste.]

ADDRESS TO THE MUMMY IN BELZONI'S EXHIBITION.

AND thou hast walk'd about (how strange a story!)

In Thebes' streets three thousand years ago,

When the Memnonium was in all its glory,

And time had not begun to overthrow

Those temples, palaces, and piles stupendous,

Of which the very ruins are tremendous!

Speak! for thou long enough hast acted dumby;

Thou hast a tongue, come let us hear its tune;

Thou'rt standing on thy legs above ground, mummy!

Revisiting the glimpses of the moon.
Not like thin ghosts or disembodied creatures,

But with thy bones and flesh, and limbs and features.

Tell us — for doubtless thou canst recollect —

To whom should we assign the Sphinx's fame?

Was Cheops or Cephrenes architect Of either pyramid that bears his
name?

Is Pompey's pillar really a misnomer?
Had Thebes a hundred gates, as sung by Homer?

Perhaps thou wert a mason, and bidden

By oath to tell the secrets
trade —

Then say, what secret melody vouch-den

In Memnon's statue, which at play'd?

Perhaps thou wert a priest — in struggles

Are vain, for priestcraft never could juggles.

Perchance that very hand, now
ion'd flat,

Has hob-a-nobb'd with Ptolemy's glass to glass;

Or dropp'd a halfpenny in Homer's Or doff'd thine own to let Queen
pass,

Or held, by Solomon's own invita-A torch, at the great Temple's tion.

tion.

I need not ask thee if that hand
arm'd,

Has any Roman soldier mauled knuckled,

For thou wert dead, and buried embalm'd,

Ere Romulus and Remus had suckled:

Antiquity appears to have begun Long after thy primeval race was Thou couldst develop, if that

Imperishable type of evanescence!
Posthumous man, who quit'st thy nar-

And standest undecay'd within our

When the great trump shall thrill thee

Why should this worthless tegument

If its undying guest be lost forever?
Oh, let us keep the soul embalm'd and
pure
In living virtue, that, when both must sever,
Although corruption may our frame consume,
The immortal spirit in the skies may bloom.

HYMN TO THE FLOWERS.

DAY-STARS! that ope your eyes with

And dew-drops on her lonely altars

As a libation!

Ye matin worshippers! who bending lowly
Before the uprisen sun — God's lid-less eye —
Throw from your chalices a sweet and holy Incense on high!

Ye bright mosaics! that with storied beauty
The floor of Nature's temple tessel-
late,
What numerous emblems of instructive duty
Your forms create!

'Neath cloister'd boughs, each floral bell that swingeth
And tolls its perfume on the passing
air,
Makes sabbath in the fields, and ever ringeth
A call to prayer.

Not to the domes where crumbling arch and column
Attest the feebleness of mortal hand, But to that fane, most Catholic and solemn,
Which God hath plann'd;

To that cathedral, boundless as our wonder,
Whose quenchless lamps the sun and moon supply —
Its choir the winds and waves, its organ
thunder,
Its dome the sky.

There — as in solitude and shade I wander
Through the green aisles, or, stretch'd upon the sod,
Awed by the silence, reverently ponder
The ways of God —

Your voiceless lips, O Flowers, are living preachers,
Each cup a pulpit, and each leaf a
book,
Supplying to my fancy numerous teachers
From loneliest nook.

Floral Apostles! that in dewy splendor
"Weep without woe, and blush without a crime,"
O may I deeply learn and ne'er surrender
Your lore sublime!

"Thou wert not, Solomon! in all thy glory,
Array'd," the lilies cry, "in robes like
ours;
How vain your grandeur! Ah, how transitory
Are human flowers!"

In the sweet-scented pictures, Heavenly Artist!
With which thou paintest Nature's wide-spread hall,
What a delightful lesson thou impartest
Of love to all.

Not useless are ye, Flowers! though made for pleasure:
Blooming o'er field and wave, by day
and night,
From every source your sanction bids me treasure
Harmless delight.

Ephemeral sages! what instructors hoary
For such a world of thought could furnish scope?
Each fading calyx a memento mori.
Yet fount of hope.

Posthumous glories! angel-like collection!
Upraised from seed or bulb interred in earth,
Ye are to me a type of resurrection,
And second birth.

Were I, O God, in churchless land remaining,
Far from all voice of teachers or divines,
My soul would find, in flowers of thy ordaining,
Priests, sermons, shrines!

DOMESTIC LOVE.

O! LOVE of loves! — to thy white hand is given
 Of earthly happiness the golden key.
 Thine are the joyous hours of winter's even,
 When the babes cling around their

 And thine the voice, that, on the mid-

 Melts the rude mariner with thoughts

SONG.

hy father dead?
 , gone!
 ey tax his bread?
 ll be done!

Mother has sold her bed:
 Better to die than wed!
 Where shall she lay her head?
 Home we have none!

Father clammed¹ thrice a week —
 God's will be done!
 Long for work did he seek,
 Work he found none.
 Tears on his hollow cheek
 Told what no tongue could speak:
 Why did his master break?
 God's will be done!

Doctor said air was best —
 Food we had none;
 Father, with panting breast,
 Groaned to be gone:
 Now he is with the blest —
 Mother says death is best!
 We have no place of rest —
 Yes, we have one!

AN EXCURSION TO THE MOUNTAINS.

[From The Village Patriarch.]

I.

COME, Father of the Hamlet! grasp again Thy stern ash plant, cut when the woods were young;
 Come, let us leave the plough-subjected plain,
 And rise, with freshened hearts, and nerves restrung,
 Into the azure dome that, haply, hung O'er thoughtful power, ere suffering had begun

II.

Flowers peep, trees bud, boughs tremble, rivers run,
 The redwing saith, it is a glorious morn.
 Blue are thy Heavens, thou Highest! and thy sun Shines without cloud, all fire. How sweetly, borne
 On wings of morning o'er the leafless
 thorn,
 The tiny wren's small twitter warbles
 near!
 How swiftly flashes in the stream the trout!
 Woodbine¹ our father's ever-watchful

Knows, by thy rustle, that thy leaves are out.
 The trailing bramble hath not yet a sprout;
 Yet harshly to the wind the wanton prates,
 Not with thy smooth lisp, woodbine of the fields!
 Thou future treasure of the bee, that waits
 Gladly on thee, spring's harbinger!
 when yields
 All bounteous earth her odorous flowers, and builds
 The nightingale, in beauty's fairest
 land.

III.

Five rivers, like the fingers of a hand,
 Flung from black mountains, mingle and are one Where sweetest valleys quit the wild and grand,
 And eldest forests, o'er the silvan Doe,
 Bid their immortal brother journey on,
 A stately pilgrim, watched by all the hills.
 Say, shall we wander where, through warriors' graves,
 The infant Yewden, mountain-cradled trills
 Her doric notes? Or, where the Lockley raves
 Of broil and battle, and the rocks and caves Dream yet of ancient days? Or, what
 the sky
 Darkens o'er Rivilin, the clear and cold,
 That throws his blue length, like a snake, from high?
 Or, where deep azure brightens into gold O'er Sheaf, that mourns in Eden? Or, where rolled
 On tawny sands, through regions per-sion-wild,
 And groves of love, in jealous beauty
 dark,
 Complains the Porter, Nature's thwarted
 child,
 Born in the waste, like headlong Warring? Hark!

poised hawk calls thee, Village patriarch!
 calls thee to his mountains! Up,
 way!
 up, to Stanedge! higher still ascend,
 hundred rivers, from the summit
 ray,
 stant seas their course in beauty
 end,
 like the lives of human millions, lend ted waves in one immensity!

A POET'S EPITAPH.

Mortal! Here thy brother lies,
 Poet of the Poor.
 books were rivers, woods, and skies, meadow and the moor.
 achers were the torn hearts' wail, tyrant and the slave, reet, the factory, the jail,
 palace — and the grave!
 meanest thing, earth's feeblest
 form,
 feared to scorn or hate;
 onored in a peasant's form equal of the great.
 he loved the rich who make poor man's little more,

 m plundered labor's store.

 o drew them as they are.

PLAINT.

deep, and cold the current flows
 he sea where no wind blows, ing the land which no one knows.
 s sad gloom still comes and goes ingled wail of friends and foes, to the land which no one knows.
 shrieks for help yon wretch, who goes

With millions, from a world of woes,
 Unto the land which no one knows?

Though myriads go with him who goes,
 Alone he goes where no wind blows,
 Unto the land which no one knows.

For all must go where no wind blows,
 And none can go for him who goes;
 None, none return whence no one knows.

Yet why should he who shrieking goes
 With millions, from a world of woes,
 Reunion seek with it or those?

Alone with God, where no wind blows,
 And Death, his shadow — doomed, he goes:
 That God is there the shadow shows.

Oh, shoreless Deep, where no wind
 blows!
 And, thou, oh Land which no one knows!
 That God is All, His shadow shows.

THE HAPPY LOT.

BLESS'D is the hearth where daughters
 gird the fire,
 And sons that shall be happier than their sire,
 Who sees them crowd around his evening chair,
 While love and hope inspire his wordless prayer.
 Oh, from their home paternal may they
 go,
 With little to unlearn, though much to
 know!
 Them, may no poison'd tongue, no evil
 eye,
 Curse for the virtues that refuse to die
 The generous heart, the independent
 mind,
 Till truth, like falsehood, leaves a sting
 behind!
 May temperance crown their feast, and friendship share!

May Pity come, Love's sister-spirit,
 there!
 May they shun baseness as they shun
 the grave!
 May they be frugal, pious, humble,
 brave!
 Sweet peace be theirs — the moonlight of the breast —
 And occupation, and alternate rest;
 And dear to care and thought the usual
 walk;
 Theirs be no flower that withers on the stalk,
 But roses cropp'd, that shall not bloom
 in vain;
 And hope's bless'd sun, that sets to rise
 again.
 Be chaste their nuptial bed, their home be sweet,
 Their floor resound the tread of little
 feet;
 Bless'd beyond fear and fate, if bless'd by thee,
 And heirs, O Love! of thine Eternity.

LOVE STRONG IN DEATH.

We watch'd him, while the moonlight,
 Beneath the shadow'd hill,
 Seem'd dreaming of good angels,
 And all the woods were still.
 The brother of two sisters
 Drew painfully his breath:
 A strange fear had come o'er him,
 For love was strong in death.
 The fire of fatal fever
 Burn'd darkly on his cheek,

And often to his mother
 He spoke, or tried to speak:
 "I felt as if from slumber
 I never could awake:
 Oh, Mother, give me something
 To cherish for your sake!
 A cold, dead weight is on me —
 A heavy weight, like lead:
 My hands and feet seem sinkin'
 Quite through my little bed:
 I am so tired, so weary —
 With weariness I ache:
 Oh, Mother, give me something
 To cherish for your sake!
 Some little token give me,
 Which I may kiss in sleep —
 To make me feel I'm near you,
 And bless you though I weep!
 My sisters say I'm better —
 But, then, their heads they shake!
 Oh, Mother, give me something
 To cherish for your sake!
 Why can't I see the poplar,
 The moonlit stream and hill,
 Where, Fanny says, good angels Dream, when the woods are still?
 Why can't I see you, Mother?
 I surely am awake:
 Oh, haste! and give me something
 To cherish for your sake!"
 His little bosom heaves not:
 The fire hath left his cheek:
 The fine chord — is it broken?
 The strong chord — could it be!
 Ah, yes! the loving spirit
 Hath wing'd his flight away:
 A mother and two sisters
 Look down on lifeless clay.

ABOU BEN ADHEM AND THE ANGEL.

ABOU BEN ADHEM (may his tribe increase)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel, writing in a book of gold: —
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" — The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord, Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerly still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."

The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

MORNING AT RAVENNA.

'Tis morn, and never did a lovelier day
Salute Ravenna from its leafy bay:
For a warm eve, and gentle rains at night,
Have left a sparkling welcome for the light,
And April, with his white hands wet with flowers,
Dazzles the bride-maids looking from the towers:
Green vineyards and fair orchards, far and near,
Glitter with drops, and heaven is sapphire clear,
And the lark rings it, and the pine trees glow,
And odors from the citrons come and go,
And all the landscape — earth, and sky, and sea —
Breathes like a bright-eyed face that laughs out openly.

The seats with boughs are shaded from above
Of bays and roses — trees of wit and love;
And in the midst, fresh whistling through the scene,
The lightsome fountain starts from out the green,
Clear and compact; till, at its height o'errun,
It shakes its loosening silver in the sun.

THE GLOVE AND THE LIONS.

KING FRANCIS was a hearty king, and loved a royal sport,
 And one day, as his lions strove, sat
 looking on the court:
 The nobles filled the benches round,
 the ladies by their side,
 And 'mongst them Count de Lorge, with one he hoped to make his bride;
 And truly 'twas a gallant thing to see that crowning show, Valor and love, and a king above, and the royal beasts below.

Ramped and roared the lions, with horrid laughing jaws;
 They bit, they glared, gave blows like beams, a wind went with their paws;
 With wallowing might and stifled roar they rolled one on another, Till all the pit, with sand and mane,
 was in a thund'rous smother;
 The bloody foam above the bars came whizzing through the air;
 Said Francis then, "Good gentlemen, we're better here than there!"

De Lorge's love o'erheard the king, a beauteous, lively dame,
 With smiling lips, and sharp bright eyes, which always seemed the same:
 She thought, "The Count, my lover, is as brave as brave can be;
 He surely would do desperate things to show his love of me!
 King, ladies, lovers, all look on; the chance is wondrous fine;
 I'll drop my glove to prove his love;
 great glory will be mine!"

She dropped her glove to prove his love;
 then looked on him and smiled;
 He bowed, and in a moment leaped among the lions wild:
 The leap was quick; return was quick;
 he soon regained his place;
 Then threw the glove, but not with love,
 right in the lady's face!
 "In truth!" cried Francis, "rightly done!" and he rose from where he sat:
 "No love," quoth he, "but vanity, sets love a task like that!"

AN ANGEL IN THE HOUSE.

How sweet it were, if without feeble
 fright,
 Or dying of the dreadful beauteous sight,
 An angel came to us, and we could bear
 To see him issue from the silent air At evening in our room, and bend on ours
 His divine eyes, and bring us from his
 bowers
 News of dear friends, and children who have never Been dead indeed, — as we shall know forever.
 Alas! we think not what we daily see About our hearths, — angels, that are to be,
 Or may be, if they will, and we prepare Their souls and ours to meet in happy
 air, —
 A child, a friend, a wife whose soft heart sings
 In unison with ours, breeding its future wings.

JOHN WILSON

1785-1854.

[BORN at Paisley. An eminent Scotch poet and essayist, who received his education at Oxford. After putting forth some minor lyrical attempts, he published in 1812 The Isle of Patmos, which was well received. In 1816, he produced The City of the Plague; in 1820 was nominated to the chair of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh. In 1825 he began the celebrated Noctes Ambrosianæ under the name of Christopher North. He also wrote numerous political articles and literary criticisms for Blackwood's Magazine, which was started as an outlet for Scottish Toryism. Died at Edinburgh in 1854.]

THE SABBATH-DAY.

WHEN by God's inward light, a happy
child,
I walk'd in joy, as in the open air,
It seem'd to my young thought the Sabbath smiled
With glory and with love. So still, so
fair,
The heavens look'd ever on that hal-low'd morn,
That, without aid of memory, something
there
Had surely told me of its glad return.
How did my little heart at evening burn, When, fondly seated on my father's knee,
Taught by the lip of love, I breathed the
prayer,
Warm from the fount of infant piety!
Much is my spirit changed; for years have brought Intenser feeling and expanded thought;
— Yet, must I envy every child I see!

THE MIDNIGHT OCEAN.

IT is the midnight hour: the beau-teous sea,
Calm as the cloudless heaven, the heaven discloses,
While many a sparkling star, in quiet
glee,
Far down within the watery sky reposes.
As if the Ocean's heart were stirr'd
With inward life, a sound is heard,

Like that of dreamer murmuring in his
sleep;

'Tis partly the billow, and partly the air
That lies like a garment floating fair Above the happy deep.

The sea, I ween, cannot be fann'd
By evening freshness from the land,
For the land it is far away;
But God hath will'd that the sky-born
breeze

In the centre of the loneliest seas
Should ever sport and play.
The mighty Moon she sits above,
Encircled with a zone of love,
A zone of dim and tender light
That makes her wakeful eye more
bright:

She seems to shine with a sunny ray,
And the night looks like a mellow'd
day!

The gracious Mistress of the Main Hath now an undisturbèd reign,
And from her silent throne looks down,
As upon children of her own,
On the waves that lend their gentle
breast

In gladness for her couch of rest!

THE EVENING CLOUD.

A CLOUD lay cradled near the setting
sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braided
snow:
Long had I watch'd the glory moving
on

O'er the still radiance of the lake below, Tranquil its spirit seem'd, and floated
 slow !
 Even in its very motion there was rest :
 While every breath of eve that chanced to blow
 Wafted the traveler to the beauteous
 West.
 Emblem, methought, of the departed
 soul !
 To whose white robe the gleam of bliss
 is given ;
 And by the breath of mercy made to roll
 Right onwards to the golden gates of
 Heaven,
 Where, to the eye of faith, it peaceful
 lies
 And tells to man his glorious destinies.

MARY.

THREE days before my Mary's death,
 We walk'd by Grassmere shore ;
 " Sweet Lake ! " she said, with faltering
 breath,
 " I ne'er shall see thee more ! "

Then turning round her languid head,
 She look'd me in the face,
 And whisper'd, " When thy friend is
 dead,
 Remember this lone place. "

Vainly I struggled at a smile,
 That did my fears betray.
 It seem'd that on our darling isle
 Foreboding darkness lay.

My Mary's words were words of truth ;
 None now behold the Maid ;
 Amid the tears of age and youth,
 She in her grave was laid.

Long days, long nights, I ween, were
 past
 Ere ceased her funeral knell ;
 But to the spot I went at last
 Where she had breathed " farewell ! "

Methought I saw the phantom stand Beside the peaceful wave ;
 I felt the pressure of her hand —
 Then look'd towards her grave.

Fair, fair beneath the evening sky
 The quiet church-yard lay :
 The tall pine-grove most solemnly
 Hung mute above her clay.

Dearly she loved their arching spread,
 Their music wild and sweet,
 And, as she wish'd on her deathbed,
 Was buried at their feet.

Around her grave a beauteous fence
 Of wild-flowers shed their breath,
 Smiling like infant innocence
 Within the gloom of death.

Such flowers from bank of mountain brook

At eve we used to bring,
 When every little mossy nook Betray'd returning Spring.

Oft had I fix'd the simple wreath
 Upon her virgin breast ;
 But now such flowers as form'd it,
 breathe
 Around her bed of rest.

Yet all within my silent soul,
 As the hush'd air, was calm ;
 The natural tears that slowly stole,
 Assuaged my grief like balm.

The air that seem'd so thick and dull
 For months unto my eye ;
 Ah me ! how bright and beautiful
 It floated on the sky !

A trance of high and solemn bliss
 From purest ether came ;
 'Mid such a heavenly scene as this,
 Death is an empty name !

The memory of the past return'd
 Like music to my heart, —
 It seem'd that causelessly I mourn'd,
 When we were told to part.

" God's mercy, " to myself I said,
 " To both our souls is given —
 To me, sojourning on earth's shade ;
 To her — a Saint in heaven ! "

THE WIDOWED MOTHER.

BESIDE her babe, who sweetly slept,
A widow'd mother sat and wept O'er years of love gone by;
And as the sobs thick-gathering came,
She murmur'd her dead husband's name
'Mid that sad lullaby.

Well might that lullaby be sad,
For not one single friend she had
On this cold-hearted earth;
The sea will not give back its prey —
And they were wrapt in foreign clay
Who gave the orphan birth.

Steadfastly as a star doth look Upon a little murmuring brook,
She gazed upon the bosom
And fair brow of her sleeping son —
"O merciful Heaven! when I am gone Thine is this earthly blossom!"

While thus she sat — a sunbeam broke Into the room; the babe awoke,
And from its cradle smiled!
Ah me! what kindling smiles met there!
I know not whether was more fair,
The mother or her child!

With joy fresh-sprung from short alarms,
The smiler stretch'd his rosy arms,
And to her bosom leapt —
All tears at once were swept away,
And said a face as bright as day, —
"Forgive me that I wept!"

Sufferings there are from nature sprung,
Ear hath not heard, nor poet's tongue
May venture to declare;
But this as Holy Writ is sure,
"The griefs she bids us here endure
She can herself repair!"

CHILDHOOD.

PICTURED in memory's mellowing glass, how sweet
Our infant days, our infant joys to greet;
To roam in fancy in each cherished
scene,
The village churchyard, and the village
green.
The woodland walk remote, the greenwood glade,
The mossy seat beneath the hawthorn's
shade,
The whitewashed cottage, where the woodbine grew,
And all the favorite haunts our childhood knew!

How sweet, while all the evil shuns the
gaze,
To view the unclouded skies of former
days!
Beloved age of innocence and smiles,
When each winged hour some new delight beguiles,
When the gay heart, to life's sweet day-spring true,
Still finds some insect pleasure to pursue.
Blest Childhood, hail! thee simply will I sing,
And from myself the artless picture
bring;
These long-lost scenes to me the past restore,

Each humble friend, each pleasure, now
no more,
And every stump familiar to my sight,
Recalls some fond idea of delight.

This shrubby knoll was once my favorite seat;
Here did I love at evening to retreat,
And muse alone, till in the vault of night,
Hesper, aspiring, show'd his golden light.
Here, once again, remote from human noise,
I sit me down to think of former joys;
Pause on each scene, each treasured scene, once more,
And once again each infant walk explore,
While as each grove and lawn I recognize,
My melted soul suffuses in my eyes.

THE DAME SCHOOL.

HERE first I entered, though with toil
and pain,
The low vestibule of learning's fane:
Entered with pain, yet soon I found the way, Though sometimes toilsome, many a sweet display.
Much did I grieve, on that ill-fated morn,
When I was first to school reluctant borne, Severe I thought the dame, though oft she tried To soothe my swelling spirits when I sighed,
And oft, when harshly she reprov'd,
I wept,
To my lone corner broken-hearted crept,
And thought of tender home, where anger never kept.

But soon mured to alphabetic toils, Alert I met the dame with jocund
smiles;

First at the form, my task for ever true,
A little favorite rapidly I grew:
And oft she stroked my head with fond
delight,
Held me a pattern to the dunce's sight,
And as she gave my diligence its praise,
Talked of the honors of my future
days.

IRRESISTIBLE TIME.

REAR thou aloft thy standard. — Spirit,
rear
Thy flag on high! — Invincible, and throned
In unparticipated might. Behold Earth's proudest boast, beneath thy silent sway,
Sweep headlong to destruction, thou the
while,
Unmoved and heedless, thou dost hear the rush
Of mighty generations, as they pass
To the broad gulf of ruin, and dost stamp
Thy signet on them, and they rise no
more.
Who shall contend with Time — unvanquished Time,
The conqueror of conquerors, and lord
Of desolation? — Lo! the shadows fly.
The hours and days, and years and centuries,
They fly, they fly, and nations rise and
fall.
The young are old, the old are in their graves.
Heardst thou that shout? It rent the vaulted skies;
It was the voice of people, — mighty crowds, — Again! 'tis hushed — Time speaks, and all is hushed;
In the vast multitude now reigns alone Unruffled solitude. They all are still,
All — yea, the whole — the incalculable
mass,
Still as the ground that clasps their cold
remains.

Rear thou aloft thy standard. — Spirit,
 rear
 Thy flag on high; and glory in thy strength.
 But do thou know, the season yet shall
 come,
 When from its base thine adamantine
 throne
 Shall tumble; when thine arm shall cease to strike,
 Thy voice forget its petrifying power;
 When saints shall shout, and Time shall be no more.
 Yea, He doth come — the mighty champion comes,
 Whose potent spear shall give thee thy death-wound,
 Shall crush the conqueror of conquerors,
 And desolate stern desolation's lord.
 Lo! where He cometh! the Messiah
 comes!
 The King! the Comforter! the Christ!
 — He comes To burst the bonds of death, and overturn
 The power of Time.

SONNET TO MY MOTHER.

AND canst thou, Mother, for a moment
 think
 That we, thy children, when old age shall shed
 Its blanching honors on thy weary
 head,
 Could from our best of duties ever shrink?
 Sooner the sun from his high sphere should sink
 Than we, ungrateful, leave thee in that day,
 To pine in solitude thy life away,
 Or shun thee, tottering on the grave's cold brink.
 Banish the thought! — where'er our steps may roam, O'er smiling plains, or wastes without
 a tree,

Still will fond memory point our hearts to thee,
 And paint the pleasures of thy peaceful home;
 While duty bids us all thy griefs assuage,
 And smooth the pillow of thy sinking
 age.

"I AM PLEASED, AND YET I'M SAD."

I.

WHEN twilight steals along the ground,
 And all the bells are ringing round,
 One, two, three, four, and five;
 I at my study window sit,
 And wrapt in many a musing fit,
 To bliss am all alive.

II.

But though impressions calm and sweet,
 Thrill round my heart a holy heat,
 And I am inly glad;
 The tear-drop stands in either eye,
 And yet I cannot tell thee why,
 I am pleased, and yet I'm sad.

III.

The silvery rack that flies away,
 Like mortal life or pleasure's ray,
 Does that disturb my breast?
 Nay what have I, a studious man,
 To do with life's unstable plan,
 Or pleasure's fading vest?

IV.

Is it that here I must not stop,
 But o'er yon blue hills' woody top,
 Must bend my lonely way?
 Now, surely no, for give but me
 My own fire-side, and I shall be
 At home where'er I stray.

V.

Then is it that yon steeple there,
 With music sweet shall fill the air,
 When thou no more canst hear?
 Oh no! oh no! for then forgiven,
 I shall be with my God in Heaven,
 Released from every fear.

VI.

Then whence it is I cannot tell,
But there is some mysterious spell
That holds me when I'm glad;
And so the tear-drop fills my eye,
When yet in truth I know not why,
Or wherefore I am sad.

ODE TO THE HARVEST MOON.

MOON of harvest, herald mild
Of plenty, rustic labor's child,
Hail! oh hail! I greet thy beam,
As soft it trembles o'er the stream,
And gilds the straw-thatched hamlet wide,
Where innocence and peace reside;
'Tis thou that glad'st with joy the rustic throng,
Promptest the tripping dance, th' exhilarating song.

Moon of harvest, I do love
O'er the uplands now to rove,
While thy modest ray serene Gilds the wide surrounding scene;
And to watch thee riding high
In the blue vault of the sky, Where no thin vapor intercepts thy
ray,
But in unclouded majesty thou walkest on thy way

Pleasing 'tis, O modest moon!
Now the night is at her noon,
'Neath thy sway to musing lie,
While around the zephyrs sigh,
Fanning soft the sun-tanned wheat,
Ripened by the summer's heat:
Picturing all the rustic's joy When boundless plenty greets his
eye,
And thinking soon,
Oh, modest moon!
How many a female eye will roam
Along the road,
To see the load,
The last dear load of harvest
home.

Storms and tempests, floods and rains,
Stern despoilers of the plains,
Hence away, the season flee,
Foes to light-heart jollity;
May no winds careering high,
Drive the clouds along the sky;
But may all nature smile with aspect
boon,
When in the heavens thou show'st thy face, oh, Harvest Moon!

'Neath yon lowly roof he lies,
The husbandman, with sleep-sealed
eyes;
He dreams of crowded barns, and
round
The yard he hears the flail re-
sound;
Oh! may no hurricane destroy
His visionary views of joy:
God of the winds! oh, hear his humble
prayer,
And while the moon of harvest shines, thy blustering whirlwind spare.

Sons of luxury, to you Leave I sleep's dull power to woo:
Press ye still the downy bed, While feverish dreams surround your head;
I will seek the woodland glade,
Penetrate the thickest shade,
Wrapt in contemplation's dreams,
Musing high on holy themes,
While on the gale
Shall softly sail
The nightingale's enchanting tune,
And oft my eyes
Shall grateful rise
To thee, the modest Harvest Moon!

CLIFTON GROVE.

Lo! in the west, fast fades the lingering
light,
And day's last vestige takes its silent
flight.
No more is heard the woodman's measured stroke

Which, with the dawn, from yonder dingle broke;
No more, hoarse clamoring o'er the uplifted head,
The crows, assembling, seek their wind-rock'd bed.
Stilled is the village hum — the woodland sounds
Have ceased to echo o'er the dewy
grounds,
And general silence reigns, save when
below,
The murmuring Trent is scarcely heard to flow;
And save when, swung by 'nighted rustic late,
Oft, on its hinge, rebounds the jarring
gate:
Or, when the sheep bell, in the distant
vale,
Breathes its wild music on the downy
gale.
Now, when the rustic wears the social
smile,
Released from day and its attendant
toil,
And draws his household round their evening fire,
And tells the oft-told tales that never tire:
Or, where the town's blue turrets dimly
rise,
And manufacture taints the ambient
skies,
The pale mechanic leaves the laboring
loom,
The air-pent hold, the pestilential room,
And rushes out, impatient to begin
The stated course of customary sin:
Now, now, my solitary way I bend Where solemn groves in awful state impend,
And cliffs, that boldly rise above the plain,
Bespeak, blest Clifton! thy sublime do-
main.
Here, lonely wandering o'er the sylvan
bower,
I come to pass the meditative hour;
To bid awhile the strife of passion cease,
And woo the calms of solitude and
peace.

And oh! thou sacred power, who rear'st
on high
Thy leafy throne where waving poplars
sigh!
Genius of woodland shades! whose mild control Steals with resistless witchery to the
soul,
Come with thy wonted ardor and inspire
My glowing bosom with thy hallowed
fire.
And thou, too, Fancy! from thy starry sphere,
Where to the hymning orbs thou lend'st thine ear,
Do thou descend, and bless my ravished
sight,
Veiled in soft visions of serene delight.
At thy command the gale that passes by Bears in its whispers mystic harmony.
Thou wav'st thy wand, and lo! what forms appear!
On the dark cloud what giant shapes
career!
The ghosts of Ossian skim the misty
vale,
The hosts of Sylphids on the moon-beam sail.

TO AN EARLY PRIMROSE.

MILD offspring of a dark and sullen
sire!
Whose modest form, so delicately fine,
Was nursed in whirling storms,
And cradled in the winds.

Thee, when young Spring first questioned Winter's sway,
And dared the sturdy blusterer to the fight,
Thee on this bank he threw
To mark his victory.

In this low vale, the promise of the year,
Serene, thou openest to the nipping gale,
Unnoticed and alone,
Thy tender elegance.

No virtue blooms, brought forth amid the storms
Of chill adversity; in some lone walk
Of life she rears her head,
Obscure and unobserved;

While every bleaching breeze that on her blows
Chastens her spotless purity of breast,
And hardens her to bear
Serene the ills of life.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM.

1784-1842.

[Born of comparatively humble parentage in Dumfriesshire. Began life as a stone-mason, but his early literary ability attracted the attention of the public and won for him the esteem and friendship of men of genius. In 1810 he obtained a position of trust in the Studio of Chantrey, a London sculptor, which afforded him an opportunity to employ his active pen and for intercourse with men of literary tastes. His reputation rests chiefly upon his smaller pieces, which are very natural and intensely Scotch, vigorous and even splendid in their higher moods, affectingly pathetic in their sorer strains. His novels, Paul Jones, etc., are full of glittering description and exaggerated and unnatural character.]

THE SUN RISES BRIGHT IN FRANCE.

THE sun rises bright in France,
And fair sets he;
But he has tint the blythe blink he had
In my ain countree.

O it's nae my ain ruin
That saddens aye my e'e,
But the dear Marie I left ahin',
Wi' sweet bairnies three.

My lanely hearth burn'd bonnie,
An' smiled my ain Marie;
I've left a' my heart behin'
In my ain countree.

The bud comes back to summer,
And the blossom to the bee;
But I'll win back — O never,
To my ain countree.

O I am leal to high Heaven,
Where soon I hope to be,
An' there I'll meet ye a' soon
Frae my ain countree!

A WET SHEET AND A FLOWING SEA.

A WET sheet and a flowing sea,
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast.
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.

Oh, for a soft and gentle wind!
I heard a fair one cry;
But give to me the swelling breeze,
And white waves heaving high.
The white waves heaving high, my lad,
The good ship tight and free,—
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we.

SABBATH MORNING.

DEAR is the hallow'd morn to me,
When village bells awake the day;
And, by their sacred minstrelsy,
Call me from earthly cares away.

ur to me the winged hour,
in thy hallow'd courts, O Lord!
devotion's soothing power, catch the manna of thy word.

ur to me the loud Amen,
h echoes through the blest bode, swells and sinks, and swells
gain,
on the walls, but lives to God.

ur the rustic harmony, with the pomp of village art;
ly, heavenly melody,
music of a thankful heart.

t I have often pray'd, still the anxious tear would fall;
thy sacred altar laid,
re descends, and dries them all.

n the world, with iron hands, ound me in its six-days' chain, sts them, like the strong man's ands,
ets my spirit loose again.

ar to me the Sabbath morn;
illage bells, the shepherd's voice;
ft have found my heart forlorn, always bid that heart rejoice.

of pleasure, strike thy lyre, oken Sabbaths sing the charms;
the prophet's car of fire,
bears us to a Father's arms.

*HAST SWORN BY THY
GOD.*

ist sworn by thy God, my Jeanie, at pretty white han' o' thine, all the lowing stars in heaven,
thou wad aye be mine;
ae sworn by my God, my Jeanie,
y that kind heart o' thine,
e stars sown thick o'er heaven,
thou shalt aye be mine.

Then foul fa' the hands that wad loose sic hands,
An' the heart that wad part sic love;
But there's nae hand can loose my band,
But the finger o' God above.

Though the wee wee cot maun be my bield,
And my claithing e'er so mean,
I wad la me up rich i' the faulds o' luv,
Heaven's armfu' o' my Jean.

Her white arm wad be a pillow for me
Far safer than the down;
And love wad winnow owre us his kind kind wings,
And sweetly I'd sleep, an' soun'.
Come here to me, thou lass o' my luv,
Come here, and kneel wi' me,
The morn is fu' o' the presence o' my
God,
And I canna pray but thee.

The morn-wind is sweet 'mang the beds
o' new flowers,
The wee birds sing kindlie an' hie,
Our gude-man leans owre his kale-yard dyke,
And a blythe auld bodie is he.
The Beuk maun be taen when the carle comes hame,
Wi' the holie psalmodie,
And thou maun speak o' me to thy God,
And I will speak o' thee.

BONNIE LADY ANN.

THERE'S kames o' honey 'tween my luve's lips,
An' gowd amang her hair;
Her breasts are lapt in a holie veil,
Nae mortal een keek there.
What lips dare kiss, or what hand dare
touch,
Or what arm o' luv dare span
The honey lips, the creamy loof,
Or the waist o' Lady Ann?

She kisses the lips o' her bonnie red
rose,
Wat wi' the blobs o' dew;

But nae gentle lip nor simple lip Maun touch her Ladie mou';
 But a broidered belt wi' a buckle o' gowd
 Her jimpy waist maun span;
 O she's an armfu' fit for heaven,
 My bonnie Lady Ann!

Her bower casement is latticed wi'
 flowers,
 Tied up wi' silver thread,
 An' comely she sits in the midst,
 Men's longing een to feed.
 She waves the ringlets frae her cheeks,
 Wi' her milky milky han',
 An' her cheeks seem touched wi' the finger o' God;
 My bonnie Lady Ann!

The morning cloud is tassel'd wi' gowd,
 Like my luve's broider'd cap,
 An' on the mantle which my luve wears
 Are monie a gowden drap.
 Her bonnie ee bree's a holic arch,
 Cast by no earthly han',
 An' the breath o' God's atween the lips
 O' my bonnie Lady Ann!

I am her father's gardener lad,
 And poor poor is my fa';
 My auld mither gets my wee wee fee,
 Wi' fatherless bairnies twa.
 My Lady comes, my Lady goes
 Wi' a fu' an' kindly han';
 O the blessing o' God maun mix wi' my luve,
 An' fa' on Lady Ann!

SHE'S GONE TO DWELL IN HEAVEN.

SHE's gone to dwell in heaven, my lassie,
 She's gone to dwell in heaven:
 Ye're owre pure, quo' the voice o' God,
 For dwelling out o' heaven!

O what'll she do in heaven, my lassie?
 O what'll she do in heaven?
 She'll mix her ain thoughts wi' angels' sangs,
 An' make them mair meet for heaven.

She was beloved by a', my lassie,
 She was beloved by a';
 But an angel fell in love wi' her,
 An' took her frae us a'.

Low there thou lies, my lassie,
 Low there thou lies;
 A bonnier form ne'er went to the yird
 Nor frae it will arise!

Fu' soon I'll follow thee, my lassie,
 Fu' soon I'll follow thee;
 Thou left me nought to covet ahin',
 But took gudness itself wi' thee.

I looked on thy death-cold face, my
 lassie,
 I looked on thy death-cold face;
 Thou seemed a lily new cut i' the bud,
 An' fading in its place.

I looked on thy death-shut eye, my
 lassie,
 I looked on thy death-shut eye;
 An' a lovelier light in the brow of heaven
 Fell time shall ne'er destroy.

Thy lips were ruddy and calm, my lassie,
 Thy lips were ruddy and calm;
 But gone was the holy breath o' heaven
 To sing the evening psalm.

There's nought but dust now mine
 lassie,
 There's nought but dust now mine;
 My soul's wi' thee i' the cauld, cauld
 grave,
 An' why should I stay behin'?

MY NANIE O.

RED rows the Nith, 'tween bank and brae,
 Mirk is the night and rainie O, Though heaven and earth should mix in
 storm,
 I'll gang and see my Nanie O;
 My Nanie O, my Nanie O;
 My kind and winsome Nanie O,
 She holds my heart in love's dear hands.
 And nane can do't but Nanie O.

In preaching time sae meek she stands,
 Sae saintly and sae bonnie O,
 I cannot get ae glimpse of grace,
 For thieving looks at Nanie O;
 My Nanie O, my Nanie O;
 The world's in love with Nanie O;
 That heart is hardly worth the wear
 That wadna love my Nanie O.

My breast can scarce contain my heart,
 When dancing she moves finely O;
 I guess what heaven is by her eyes,
 They sparkle sae divinely O;
 My Nanie O, my Nanie O;

The flower o' Nithsdale's Nanie O; Love looks frae 'neath her long brown
 hair,
 And says, I dwell with Nanie O.

Tell not, thou star at gray daylight,
 O'er Tinwald-top so bonnie O,
 My footsteps 'mang the morning dew
 When coming frae my Nanie O;
 My Nanie O, my Nanie O;
 Nane ken o' me and Nanie O;
 The stars and moon may tell't a boon,
 They winna wrang my Nanie O!

TO MY MOTHER SLEEPING.

SLEEP on, my mother! sweet and innocent dreams
 Attend thee, best and dearest! Dreams that gild Life's clouds like setting suns, with pleasures filled,
 And saintly joy, such as thy mind be-seems,— Thy mind where never stormy passion gleams,
 Where their soft nest the dovelike virtues build;
 And calmest thoughts, like violets distill'd,
 Their fragrance mingle with bright wisdom's beams.
 Sleep on, my mother! not the lily's bell
 So sweet; not the enamor'd westwind's sighs
 That shake the dew-drop from her snowy cell
 So gentle; not that dew-drop ere it flies
 So pure. E'en slumber loves with thee to dwell,
 Oh model most beloved of good and wise.

RIENZI'S ADDRESS TO THE ROMANS.

FRIENDS,
 I come not here to talk. Ye know too well
 The story of our thralldom. We are slaves!
 The bright sun rises to his course, and lights
 A race of slaves! He sets, and his last beam Falls on a slave: not such as, swept along
 By the full tide of power, the conqueror leads To crimson glory and undying fame;
 But base ignoble slaves, slaves to a horde
 Of petty tyrants, feudal despots, lords
 Rich in some dozen paltry villages,
 Strong in some hundred spearmen, only great
 In that strange spell, a name. Each hour, dark fraud,
 Or open rapine, or protected murder,
 Cry out against them. But this very day,

An honest man, my neighbor (pointing to PAOLO)—there he stands!— Was struck, struck like a dog, by one who wore
The badge of Ursini, because, forsooth,
He tossed not high his ready cap in air,
Nor lifted up his voice in servile shouts,
At sight of that great ruffian. Be we men, And suffer such dishonor? Men, and wash not
The stain away in blood? Such shames are common;
I have known deeper wrongs. I that speak to ye,
I had a brother once, a gracious boy,
Full of all gentleness, of calmest hope,
Of sweet and quiet joy. There was the look
Of heaven upon his face, which limners
give
To the beloved disciple. How I loved That gracious boy! Younger by fifteen
years,
Brother at once and son! He left my
side;
A summer bloom on his fair cheeks, a
smile
Parting his innocent lips. In one short
hour

The pretty harmless boy was slain! I saw
The corse, the mangled corse, and when I cried
For vengeance—Rouse, ye Romans!
Rouse, ye slaves!
Have ye brave sons? Look in the next fierce brawl
To see them die. Have ye fair daughters? Look
To see them live, torn from your arms, distained,
Dishonored: and, if ye dare call for justice,
Be answered by the lash. Yet, this is Rome,
That sate on her seven hills, and from her throne
Of beauty ruled the world! Yet, we are Romans!
Why; in that elder day, to be a Roman Was greater than a king! And once
again,—
Hear me, ye walls, that echoed to the tread
Of either Brutus! once again, I swear,
The eternal city shall be free; her sons
Shall walk with princes.

FOR MUSIC.

Now whilst he dreams, O Muses, wind him round!
Send down thy silver words, O murmuring Rain!
Haunt him, sweet Music! Fall, with gentlest sound,—

Like dew, like night, upon his weary
brain!
Come, Odors of the rose and violet,—
hear
Into his charmed sleep all visions fair!
So may the lost be found,
So may his thoughts by tender love be crowned,

ope come shining like a vernal
morn,
th its beams adorn ature, till he breathes diviner air, e soft Heaven of joy, beyond the range of Care!

THE SEA.

ea! the Sea! the open Sea!
ie, the fresh, the ever free!
it a mark, without a bound,
eth the earth's wide regions
'round;
; with the clouds; it mocks the
skies;
a cradled creature lies.

the Sea! I'm on the Sea!
here I would ever be;
ie blue above, and the blue below,
ence wheresoe'er I go;
orm should come and awake the
deep,
natter? / shall ride and sleep.

(oh! how I love) to ride fierce foaming bursting tide, every mad wave drowns the
moon,
stles aloft his tempest tune, lls how goeth the world below,
y the south-west blasts do blow.

was on the dull tame shore, lov'd the great Sea more and
more, ackwards flew to her billowy
breast,
bird that seeketh its mother's
nest;
mother she was, and is to me;
was born on the open Sea!

aves were white, and red the
morn,
noisy hour when I was born;
e whale it whistled, the porpoise rolled,
e dolphins bared their backs of
gold;

And never was heard such an outcry wild
As welcomed to life the Ocean-child!

I've lived since then, in calm and strife
Full fifty summers a sailor's life,
With wealth to spend and a power to range,
But never have sought, nor sighed for
change;
And Death, whenever he come to me,
Shall come on the wide unbounded Sea!

A REPOSE.

SHE sleeps amongst her pillows soft,
(A dove, now wearied with her flight),
And all around, and all aloft, Hang flutes and folds of virgin
white:
Her hair out-darkens the dark night,
Her glance out-shines the starry
sky;
But now her locks are hidden quite,
And closed is her fringed eye!

She sleepeth: wherefore doth she start?
She sigheth; doth she feel no pain?
None, none! the Dream is near her
heart;
The Spirit of sleep is in her brain.
He cometh down like golden rain,
Without a wish, without a sound;
He cheers the sleeper (ne'er in vain),
Like May, when earth is winter-
bound.

All day within some cave he lies,
Dethroned from his nightly sway, —
Far fading when the dawning skies
Our souls with wakening thoughts
array.
Two Spirits of might doth man obey;
By each he's wrought, from each he learns:
The one is Lord of life by day.
The other when starry nigh' returns.

A PETITION TO TIME.

TOUCH us gently, Time!
 Let us glide adown thy stream
 Gently,—as we sometimes glide
 Through a quiet dream!
 Humble voyagers are We,
 Husband, wife, and children three — (One is lost, — an angel, fled To the azure overhead!)

Touch us gently, Time!
 We've not proud nor soaring wings:
Our ambition, our content
 Lies in simple things.
 Humble voyagers are We,
 O'er Life's dim unsounded sea,
 Seeking only some calm clime:—
 Touch us gently, gentle Time!

INSCRIPTION FOR A FOUNTAIN

REST! This little Fountain runs
 Thus for aye: — It never stays
 For the look of summer suns,
 Nor the cold of winter days.
 Whosoe'er shall wander near,
 When the Syrian heat is worst,
 Let him hither come, nor fear
 Lest he may not slake his thirst:
 He will find this little river
 Running still, as bright as ever.
 Let him drink, and onwards hie,
 Bearing but in thought, that I,
 EROTAS, bade the Naiad fall,
 And thank the great god Pan for all!

LORD BYRON.

1788-1824.

[BORN in London, Jan. 22, 1788. Educated at Harrow, and Trinity College, Cambridge. Published Hours of Idleness in 1807. A review of this book in the Edinburgh provoked the Satire English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, which was published in March, 1809. After this date Byron travelled in Spain, Greece, and Turkey for two years. On his return he published the two first Cantos of Childe Harold in 1812. During the years 1813-1815 he wrote The Giaour, Bride of Abydos, Corsair, Lara, Hebrew Melodies, Siege of Corinth, Parisina. The two last were published in the spring of 1816, shortly after Byron's separation from the wife whom he had married on Jan. 2, 1815. This year, 1816, was the most important epoch of his life. He left England never to return; settled first at Geneva, where he made the acquaintance of Shelley, composed the third Canto of Childe Harold, Prisoner of Chillon, and Prometheus, and began Manfred. In 1817 he removed to Venice, finished Manfred, wrote the Lament of Tasso, the Fourth Canto of Childe Harold, and Beppo. In the years 1818 and 1819, still residing at Venice, he produced the Ode on Venice, Mazeppa, and the first four Cantos of Don Juan. In 1820 and 1821, while living at Ravenna, he wrote the Prophecy of Dante, Marino Faliero, Sardanapalus, The Two Foscari, Cain, Heaven and Earth, and A Vision of Judgment. Part of the two next years was spent at Pisa in close intimacy with Shelley. Werner, The Deformed Transformed, The Island, and the remaining Cantos of Don Juan, on which Byron had been from time to time at work during his Ravenna residence, were completed. On July 13, 1823, Byron sailed from Genoa for Greece, in order to take active part in the liberation of that country from Turkish rule. He died of fever at Missolonghi on the 19th of April, 1824, at the age of thirty-six years and three months.]

BEAUTY OF GREECE AND THE
GRECIAN ISLES.[The Giaour.]

FAIR clime! where every season
 smiles
 Benignant o'er those blessèd isles,
 Which, seen from far Colonna's height,
 Make glad the heart that hails the sight,

And lend to loneliness delight.
 There mildly dimpling, Ocean's cheek
 Reflects the tints of many a peak Caught by the laughing tides that lave
 These Edens of the Eastern wave:
 And if at times a transient breeze
 Break the blue crystal of the seas,
 Or sweep one blossom from the trees
 How welcome is each gentle air

akes and wafts the odors there!
 ere — the rose o'er crag or vale,
 of the Nightingale,
 maid for whom his melody, thousand songs are heard on
 high,
 blushing to her lover's tale;
 een, the garden queen, his Rose,
 by winds, unchilled by snows,
 m the winters of the West,
 ry breeze and season blest, s the sweets by nature given est incense back to heaven;
 ateful yields that smiling sky rest hue and fragrant sigh.
 any a summer flower is there, any a shade that love might
 share,
 any a grotto, meant for rest, olds the pirate for a guest;
 bark in sheltering cove below,
 or the passing peaceful prow, gay mariner's guitar
 d, and seen the evening star;
 ealing with the muffled oar, ded by the rocky shore
 e night-prowlers on the prey,

ANCIENT AND MODERN GREECE.

[The Giaour.]

HE who hath bent him o'er the dead
 Ere the first day of death is fled,
 The first dark day of nothingness,
 The last of danger and distress,
 (Before Decay's effacing fingers Have swept the lines where beauty lingers),
 And marked the mild angelic air,
 The rapture of repose that's there,
 The fixed yet tender traits that streak
 The languor of the placid cheek,
 And — but for that sad shrouded eye,
 That fires not, wins not, weeps not now,
 And but for that chill changeless
 brow,
 Where cold Obstruction's apathy
 Appals the gazing mourner's heart,
 As if to him it could impart
 The doom he dreads, yet dwells upon;
 Yes, but for these and these alone,
 Some moments, ay, one treacherous
 hour,
 He still might doubt the tyrant's
 power;
 So fair, so calm, so softly sealed,
 The first, last look by death revealed!
 Such is the aspect of this shore;
 'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more!
 So coldly sweet, so deadly fair,
 We start, for soul is wanting there.
 Hers is the loveliness of death,
 That parts not quite with parting
 breath;
 But beauty with that fearful bloom,
 That hue which haunts it to the tomb,
 Expression's last receding ray,
 A gilded halo hovering round decay,
 The farewell beam of Feeling past
 away!
 Spark of that flame, perchance o'
 heavenly birth,
 Which gleams, but warms no more its cherished earth!

Clime of the unforgotten brave!
 Whose land from plain to mountain-
 cave

Was Freedom's home or Glory's grave!
Shrine of the mighty! can it be
That this is all remains of thee?
Approach, thou craven crouching
slave:

Say, is not this Thermopylæ?
These waters blue that round you lave,
Oh, servile offspring of the free — Pronounce what sea, what shore is this?

The gulf, the rock of Salamis!
These scenes, their story not unknown,
Arise, and make again your own;
Snatch from the ashes of your sires,
The embers of the former fires;
And he who in the strife expires
Will add to theirs a name of fear
That Tyranny shall quake to hear,
And leave his sons a hope, a fame,
They too will rather die than shame:
For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed by bleeding Sire to Son,
Though baffled oft is ever won.
Bear witness, Greece, thy living page,
Attest it many a deathless age!
While kings, in dusty darkness hid,
Have left a nameless pyramid,
Thy heroes, though the general doom Hath swept the column from their tomb,
A mightier monument command,
The mountains of their native land!
There points thy muse to stranger's eye
The graves of those that cannot die!

THE PURSUIT OF BEAUTY.

[The Giaour.]

As rising on its purple wing
The insect-queen of eastern spring,
O'er emerald meadows of Kashmeer Invites the young pursuer near,
And leads him on from flower to flower,
A weary chase and wasted hour,
Then leaves him, as it soars on high,
With panting heart and tearful eye:
So Beauty lures the full-grown child,
With hue as bright, and wing as wild;
A chase of idle hopes and fears,
Begun in folly, closed in tears.
If won, to equal ills betrayed,

Woe waits the insect and the maid;
A life of pain, the loss of peace,
From infant's play and man's caprice;
The lovely toy so fiercely sought,
Hath lost its charm by being caught,
For every touch that wooed its stay
Hath brushed its brightest hues away,
Till charm, and hue, and beauty gone,
'Tis left to fly or fall alone.

With wounded wing or bleeding breast
Ah! where shall either victim rest?
Can this with faded pinion soar
From rose to tulip as before?
Or Beauty, blighted in an hour,
Find joy within her broken bower?
No: gayer insects fluttering by Ne'er droop the wing o'er those that
die,

And lovelier things have mercy shown
To every failing but their own,
And every woe a tear can claim,
Except an erring sister's shame.

REMORSE.

[The Giaour.]

THE mind that broods o'er guilty woes
Is like the Scorpion girt by fire,
In circle narrowing as it glows,
The flames around their captive close,
Till inly searched by thousand throes,
And maddening in her ire,
One sad and sole relief she knows,
The sting she nourished for her foes,
Whose venom never yet was vain,
Gives but one pang, and cures all pain,
And darts into her desperate brain:
So do the dark in soul expire,
Or live like Scorpion girt by fire;
So writhes the mind Remorse hath riven
Unfit for earth, undoomed for heaven,
Around it flame, within it death!

LOVE.

[The Giaour.]

YES, Love indeed is light from heaven;
A spark of that immortal fire
With angels shared, by Alla given,
To lift from earth our low desire.

Devotion wafts the mind above,
But heaven itself descends in love;
A feeling from the Godhead caught,
To wean from self each sordid thought;
A Ray of Him who formed the whole;
A glory circling round the soul!

ZULEIKA.

[The Bride of Abydos, Canto i.]

FAIR, as the first that fell of woman-kind,

When on that dread yet lovely serpent smiling,

Whose image then was stamped upon her mind—

But once beguiled—and ever more beguiling;

Dazzling, as that, oh! too transcendent vision

To Sorrow's phantom-peopled slumber given,

When heart meets heart again in dreams Elysian,

And paints the lost on Earth revived in Heaven;

Soft, as the memory of buried love;

Pure, as the prayer which Childhood wafts above;

Was she—the daughter of that rude old Chief,

Who met the maid with tears—but not of grief.

Who hath not proved how feebly words essay

To fix one spark of Beauty's heavenly ray?

Who doth not feel, until his failing sight

Faints into dimness with its own delight,
His changing cheek, his sinking heart confess

The might—the majesty of Loveliness?

Such was Zuleika—such around her shone

The nameless charms unmarked by her alone;

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face.

The heart whose softness harmonized the whole—

And oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

KNOW YE THE LAND.

[The Bride of Abydos, Canto i.]

KNOW ye the land where the cypress and myrtle

Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime,

Where the rage of the vulture, the love of the turtle,

Now melt into sorrow, now madden to crime?

Know ye the land of the cedar and vine,
Where the flowers ever blossom, the beams ever shine;

Where the light wings of Zephyr, oppressed with perfume,

Wax faint o'er the gardens of Gál in her bloom?

Where the citron and olive are fairest of fruit,

And the voice of the nightingale never is mute,

Where the tints of the earth, and the hues of the sky,

In color though varied, in beauty may vie,
And the purple of Ocean is deepest in dye;

Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine,

And all, save the spirit of man, is divine?

'Tis the clime of the East; 'tis the land of the Sun—

Can he smile on such deeds as his children have done?

Oh! wild as the accents of lovers' farewell

Are the hearts which they bear, and the tales which they tell.

THE HELLESPONT.

[The Bride of Abydos, Canto ii.]

THE winds are high on Helle's wave,

As on that night of stormy water,

When Love, who sent, forgot to save

The young, the beautiful, the brave,
 The lonely hope of Sestos' daughter.
 Oh! when alone along the sky
 Her turret-torch was blazing high,
 Though rising gale, and breaking foam,
 And shrieking sea-birds warned him
 home;
 And clouds aloft and tides below,
 With signs and sounds, forbade to go,
 He could not see, he would not hear,
 Or sound or sign foreboding fear;
 His eye but saw the light of love,
 The only star it hailed above;
 His ear but rang with hero's song,
 "Ye waves, divide not lovers long!"
 That tale is old, but love anew May nerve young hearts to prove as true.

The winds are high, and Helle's tide
 Rolls darkly heaving to the main;
 And Night's descending shadows hide That field with blood bedewed in
 vain,
 The desert of old Priam's pride;
 The tombs, sole relics of his reign,
 All—save immortal dreams that could deguile
 The blind old man of Scio's rocky isle!
 Oh! yet—for there my steps have
 been;
 These feet have pressed the sacred
 shore,
 These limbs that buoyant wave hath borne—
 Minstrel! with thee to muse, to mourn,
 To trace again those fields of yore,
 Believing every hillock green
 Contains no fabled hero's ashes,
 And that around the undoubted scene Thine own "broad Hellespont" still dashes,
 Be long my lot, and cold were he
 Who could there gaze, denying thee!

MIDNIGHT IN THE EAST.

[The Siege of Corinth.]

'Tis midnight: on the mountains brown
 The cold round moon shines deeply
 down;

Blue roll the waters, blue the sky
 Spreads like an ocean hung on high,
 Bespangled with those isles of light,
 So wildly, spiritually bright;
 Who ever gazed upon them shining,
 And turned to earth without repining,
 Nor wished for wings to flee away,
 And mix with their eternal ray?
 The waves on either shore lay there,
 Calm, clear, and azure as the air:
 And scarce their foam the pebbles shook.
 But murmured meekly as the brook.
 The winds were pillowed on the waves;
 The banners drooped along their staves,
 And, as they fell around them furling,
 Above them shone the crescent curling;
 And that deep silence was unbroke,
 Save where the watch his signal spoke, Save where the steed neighed oft and shrill

And echo answered from the hill,
 And the wide hum of that wild host Rustled like leaves from coast to coast,
 As rose the Muezzin's voice in air
 In midnight call to wonted prayer:
 It rose, that chanted mournful strain,
 Like some lone spirit's o'er the plain;
 'Twas musical, but sadly sweet,
 Such as when winds and harp-strings
 meet,
 And take a long unmeasured tone,
 To mortal minstrelsy unknown.
 It seemed to those within the wall
 A cry prophetic of their fall:
 It struck even the besieger's ear
 With something ominous and drear,
 An undefined and sudden thrill,
 Which makes the heart a moment still,
 Then beat with quicker pulse, ashamed
 Of that strange sense its silence framed;
 Such as a sudden passing-bell Wakes, though but for a stranger's knell.

TWILIGHT.

[Parisina.]

It is the hour when from the boughs
 The nightingale's high note is heard;
 It is the hour when lovers' vows
 Seem sweet in every whispered word;
 And gentle winds, and waters near,

music to the lonely ear.
 When the dews have lightly wet,
 When the sky the stars are met,
 When the wave is deeper blue,
 When the leaf a browner hue,
 When the heaven that clear obscure,
 When dark, and darkly pure,
 Follows the decline of day,
 Night melts beneath the moon
 away.

FRED'S SOLILOQUY ON THE JUNGFRAU.

[Manfred.]

What I have raised abandon me — Ills which I have studied baffle
 me —
 Alas! I recked of tortured me;
 No more on superhuman aid,
 No power upon the past, and for Sure, till the past be gulfed in Darkness,
 End of my search. — My mother
 Earth!
 Thou, fresh breaking Day, and you,
 O Mountains,
 Are ye beautiful? I cannot love ye.
 Thou, the bright eye of the universe,
 Finest over all, and unto all Light — thou shin'st not on my Heart.
 Thou, ye crags, upon whose extreme
 Edge
 And on the torrent's brink be-Neath
 The tall pines dwindled as to Trunks
 Sense of distance; when a leap,
 No motion, even a breath, would
 Bring
 Me to its rocky bosom's bed
 Or ever — wherefore do I pause?
 The impulse — yet I do not plunge;
 The peril — yet do not recede;
 My brain reels — and yet my foot
 Is firm:
 A power upon me which with-
 Holds,
 Makes it my fatality to live;

If it be life to wear within myself
 This barrenness of spirit, and to be My own soul's sepulchre, for I have Ceased
 To justify my deeds unto myself —
 The last infirmity of evil. Ay, Thou wingèd and cloud-cleaving minister, [An eagle passes.
 Whose happy flight is highest into
 Heaven,
 Well may'st thou swoop so near me — I Should be
 Thy prey, and gorge thine eaglets;
 Thou art gone
 Where the eye cannot follow thee; but
 Thine
 Yet pierces downward, onward, or Above,
 With a pervading vision. — Beautiful!
 How beautiful is all this visible world!
 How glorious in its action and itself!
 But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns, we,
 Half dust, half deity, alike unfit
 To sink or soar, with our mixed essence,
 Make
 A conflict of its elements, and breathe
 The breath of degradation and of
 Pride,
 Contending with low wants and lofty
 Will,
 Till our mortality predominates,
 And men are — what they name not to Themselves,
 And trust not to each other. Hark!
 The note,
 [The shepherd's pipe in the distance is heard.
 The natural music of the mountain
 Reed —
 For here the patriarchal days are
 Not
 A pastoral fable — pipes in the liberal
 Air,
 Mixed with the sweet bells of the sauntering herd;
 My soul would drink those echoes. —
 Oh, that I were
 The viewless spirit of a lovely sound,
 A living voice, a breathing harmony,
 A bodiless enjoyment — born and dying
 With the blest tone which made me!

MANFRED'S MIDNIGHT THOUGHTS.

THE stars are forth, the moon above the tops
Of the snow-shining mountains. — Beautiful!
I linger yet with Nature, for the night
Hath been to me a more familiar face
Than that of man; and in her starry
shade
Of dim and solitary loveliness,
I learned the language of another
world.
I do remember me, that in my youth,
When I was wandering, — upon such a
night
I stood within the Coliseum's wall,
'Midst the chief relics of almighty
Rome;
The trees which grew along the broken arches
Waved dark in the blue midnight, and the stars
Shone through the rents of ruin; from afar
The watch-dog bayed beyond the Tiber;
and More near from out the Cæsars' palace
came
The owl's long cry, and, interruptedly,
Of distant sentinels the fitful song
Begun and died upon the gentle wind.
Some cypresses beyond the time-worn breach Appeared to skirt the horizon, yet they stood
Within a bowshot. Where the Cæsars
dwelt,
And dwell the tuneless birds of night, amidst
A grove which springs through levelled battlements,
And twines its roots with the imperial hearths,
Ivy usurps the laurel's place of growth; —
But the gladiators' bloody Circus stands,
A noble wreck in ruinous perfection!
While Cæsar's chambers, and the Au-gustan halls,

Grovel on earth in indistinct decay. —
And thou didst shine, thou rolling moon, upon
All this, and cast a wide and tender
light,
Which softened down the hoar austerity
Of rugged desolation, and filled up,
As 'twere anew, the gaps of centuries;
Leaving that beautiful which still was so,
And making that which was not, till the place
Became religion, and the heart ran o'er With silent worship of the great of
old! —
The dead, but sceptred sovereigns, who still rule
Our spirits from their urns. —
'Twas such a night!
'Tis strange that I recall it at this time;
But I have found our thoughts take wildest flight
Even at the moment when they should array
Themselves in pensive order.

*MY NATIVE LAND — GOOD
NIGHT.*

[Childe Harold, Canto I.]

“ADIEU, adieu! my native shore
Fades o'er the waters blue;
The night-winds sigh, the breakers
roar,
And shrieks the wild sea-mew.
Yon sun that sets upon the sea
We follow in his flight:
Farewell awhile to him and thee,
My native Land — Good Night!
“A few short hours, and he will rise
To give the morrow birth;
And I shall hail the main and skies,
But not my mother earth.
Deserted is my own good hall,
Its hearth is desolate;
Wild weeds are gathering on the wall;
My dog howls at the gate.
“Come hither, hither, my little page,
Why dost thou weep and wail?
Or dost thou dread the billow's rage,

Or tremble at the gale?
But dash the tear-drop from thine eye;
Our ship is swift and strong:
Our fleetest falcon scarce can fly
More merrily along."

"Let winds be shrill, let waves roll
high,
I fear not wave nor wind:
Yet marvel not, Sir Childe, that I Am sorrowful in mind;
For I have from my father gone,
A mother whom I love,
And have no friend, save these alone,
But thee — and One above.

"My father blessed me fervently,
Yet did not much complain;
But sorely will my mother sigh Till I come back again." —
"Enough, enough, my little lad!"
Such tears become thine eye;
If I thy guileless bosom had,
My own would not be dry.

"Come hither, hither, my stanch yeo-
man,
Why dost thou look so pale?
Or dost thou dread a French foeman?
Or shiver at the gale?" —
"Deem'st thou I tremble for my life?
Sir Childe, I'm not so weak;
But thinking on an absent wife
Will blanch a faithful cheek.

"My spouse and boys dwell near thy
hall,
Along the bordering lake,
And when they on their father call,
What answer shall she make?" —
"Enough, enough, my yeoman good,
Thy grief let none gainsay;
But I, who am of lighter mood,
Will laugh to flee away.

"For who would trust the seeming sighs
Of wife or paramour?
Fresh fecres will dry the bright blue
eyes
We late saw streaming o'er.
For pleasures past I do not grieve,

Nor perils gathering near;
My greatest grief is that I leave
No thing that claims a tear.

"And now I'm in the world alone,
Upon the wide, wide sea:
But why should I for others groan,
When none will sigh for me?
Perchance my dog will whine in vain,
Till fed by stranger hands;
But long ere I come back again
He'd tear me where he stands.

"With thee, my bark, I'll swiftly go Athwart the foaming brine;
Nor care what land thou bear'st me to,
So not again to mine.
Welcome, welcome, ye dark-blue waves!
And when you fail my sight,
Welcome, ye deserts, and ye caves!
My native Land — Good Night!"

PARNASSUS.

[Childe Harold, Canto i.]

OH, thou Parnassus! whom I now
survey,
Not in the frenzy of a dreamer's eye,
Not in the fabled landscape of a
lay,
But soaring snow-clad through thy native sky,
In the wild pomp of mountain majesty!
What marvel if I thus essay to sing?
The humblest of thy pilgrims passing by
Would gladly woo thine echoes with his string,
Though from thy heights no more one
Muse will wave her wing.

Oft have I dreamed of thee! whose glorious name
Who knows not, knows not man's divinest lore;
And now I view thee, 'tis, alas! with
shame
That I, in feeblest accents must adore.
When I recount thy worshippers of yore,

I tremble, and can only bend the knee;
Nor raise my voice, nor vainly dare to soar,
But gaze beneath thy cloudy canopy
In silent joy to think at last I look on
thee!

Happier in this than mightiest bards have been,
Whose fate to distant homes confined their lot,
Shall I unmoved behold the hallowed
scene,
Which others rave of, though they know it not?
Though here no more Apollo haunts his grot,
And thou, the Muses' seat art now their grave,
Some gentle spirit still pervades the
spot,
Sighs in the gale, keeps silence in the cave,
And glides with glassy foot o'er yon melodious wave.

ATHENS.

[Childe Harold, Canto ii.]

ANCIENT of days! august Athena!
where,
Where are thy men of might? thy grand in soul?
Gone—glimmering through the dream of things that were:
First in the race that led to Glory's goal,
They won, and passed away — is this the whole?
A schoolboy's tale, the wonder of an
hour!
The warrior's weapon and the sophist's stole
Are sought in vain, and o'er each mouldering tower,
Dim with the mist of years, gray flits
the shade of power.

Son of the morning, rise! approach you here!
Come — but molest not yon defenceless urn:
Look on this spot — a nation's sepulchre!
Abode of gods, whose shrines no longer burn,
Even gods must yield — religions take their turn:
'Twas Jove's — 'tis Mahomet's — and other creeds
Will rise with other years, till man shall learn Vainly his incense soars, his victim bleeds;
Poor child of Doubt and Death, whose hope is built on reeds.

Bound to the earth, he lifts his eye to heaven —
Is't not enough, unhappy thing! to know Thou art? Is this a boon so kindly
given,
That being, thou would'st be again,
and go,
Thou knowest not, reckest not to what region, so On earth no more, but mingled with the skies?
Still wilt thou dream on future joy
and woe?
Regard and weigh yon dust before it
flies:
That little urn saith more than thousand homilies.

REAL AND UNREAL SOLITUDE.

[Childe Harold, Canto ii.]

To sit on rocks, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady
scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell,
And mortal foot hath ne'er or rarely
been
To climb the trackless mountain all
unseen,

With the wild flock that never needs a fold;
Alone o'er steeps and foaming falls to lean;
This is not solitude; 'tis but to hold Converse with Nature's charms, and view her stores unrolled.

But 'midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men;
To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,
And roam along, the world's tired
denizen,
With none who bless us, none whom we can bless;
Minions of splendor shrinking from distress!
None that, with kindred consciousness
endued,
If we were not, would seem to smile
the less
Of all that flattered, followed, sought, and sued;
This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

*THE NIGHT BEFORE THE BAT-

[Childe Harold, Canto iii.]

THERE was a sound of revelry by
night,
And Belgium's capital had gathered
then
Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and
bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men;
A thousand hearts beat happily; and when Music arose with its voluptuous swell, Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake again,
And all went merry as a marriage-
bell;
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!

Did ye not hear it? — No; 'twas but
the wind,
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street;
On with the dance! let joy be uncon-
fined;
No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet
To chase the glowing Hours with flying feet —
But hark! — that heavy sound breaks in once more,
As if the clouds its echo would repeat;
And nearer, clearer, deadlier than before!
Arm! arm! it is — it is — the cannon's opening roar!

Within a windowed niche of that high
hall Sate Brunswick's fated chieftain; he did hear
That sound the first amidst the festival,
And caught its tone with Death's prophetic ear;
And when they smiled because he deemed it near,
His heart more truly knew that peal too well
Which stretched his father on a bloody bier,
And roused the vengeance blood alone could quell:
He rushed into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.

Ah! then and there was hurrying to and fro,
And gathering tears, and tremblings of distress,
And cheeks all pale, which but an hour ago
Blushed at the praise of their own loveliness;
And there were sudden partings, such as press
The life from out young hearts, and choking sighs
Which ne'er might be repeated: who could guess

If ever more should meet those mutual
eyes,
Since upon night so sweet such awful morn could rise!

And there was mounting in hot haste :
the steed,
The mustering squadron, and the clattering car,
Went pouring forward with impetuous
speed,
And swiftly forming in the ranks of
war;
And the deep thunder peal on peal
afar;
And near, the beat of the alarming drum
Roused up the soidier ere the morning star;
While thronged the citizens with terror dumb,
Or whispering, with white lips — “The foe! They come! they come!”

And wild and high the “Cameron’s gathering” rose,
The war-note of Lochiel, which Albyn’s hills
Have heard, and heard, too, have her Saxon foes: —
How in the noon of night that pibroch thrills
Savage and shrill! But with the breath which fills
Their mountain pipe, so fill the mountaineers
With the fierce native daring which instils
The stirring memory of a thousand
years,
And Evan’s, Donald’s fame rings in each clansman’s ears!

And Ardennes waves above them her green leaves,
Dewy with nature’s tear-drops, as
they pass,
Grieving, if aught inanimate e’er
grieves,
Over the unreturning brave, — alas!
Ere evening to be trodden like the grass

Which now beneath them, but above shall grow
In its next verdure, when this fiery mass
Of living valor, rolling on the foe,
And burning with high hope, shall moulder cold and low.

Last noon beheld them full of lusty
life,
Last eve in Beauty’s circle proudly
gay,
The midnight brought the signal-sound of strife,
The morn the marshalling in arms, —
the day
Battle’s magnificently-stern array!
The thunder-clouds close o’er it, which when rent
The earth is covered thick with other
clay,
Which her own clay shall cover,
heaped and pent,
Rider and horse, — friend, foe, — in one red burial blent!

THE LAKE OF GENEVA.

[Childe Harold, Canto iii.]

CLEAR, placid Lemman! thy contrasted
lake,
While the wild world I dwelt in, is a thing
Which warns me, with its stillness, to forsake
Earth’s troubled waters for a purer
spring.
This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing
To waft me from distraction; once I loved
Torn ocean’s roar, but thy soft murmuring
Sound sweet as if a sister’s voice re-proved,
That I with stern delights should e’er have been so moved.

It is the hush of night, and all between
Thy margin and the mountains, dusk,

THE STARS.

[Childe Harold, Canto iii.]

YE stars! which are the poetry of
heaven!

If in your bright leaves we would read the fate

Of men and empires, — 'tis to be for-
given,

That in our aspirations to be great,
Our destinies o'erleap their mortal
state,

And claim a kindred with you; for ye are

A beauty and a mystery, and create In us such love and reverence from
afar,

That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

THE RHINE.

[Childe Harold, Canto iii.]

THE castled crag of Drachenfels
Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine,
Whose breast of waters broadly swells
Between the banks which bear the vine,
And hills all rich with blossomed trees,
And fields which promise corn and wine,
And scattered cities crowning these,
Whose far white walls along them shine,
Have strewed a scene, which I should see

With double joy wert thou with me.

And peasant girls, with deep blue eyes,
And hands which offer early flowers,
Walk smiling o'er this paradise;
Above, the frequent feudal towers Through green leaves lift their walls of
gray;

And many a rock which steeply lowers,
And noble arch in proud decay,
Look o'er this vale of vintage-bowers;
But one thing want these banks of Rhine, —

Thy gentle hand to clasp in mine!

I send the lilies given to me;
Though long before thy hand they touch,
I know that they must withered be,

But yet reject them not as such;
 For I have cherished them as dear,
 Because they yet may meet thine eye,
 And guide thy soul to mine even here,
 When thou behold'st them drooping
 nigh,
 And know'st them gathered by the Rhine,
 And offered from my heart to thine!

The river nobly foams and flows,
 The charm of this enchanted ground,
 And all its thousand turns disclose
 Some fresher beauty varying round:
 The haughtiest breast its wish might
 bound
 Through life to dwell delighted here;
 Nor could on earth a spot be found
 To nature and to me so dear,
 Could thy dear eyes in following mine
 Still sweeten more these banks of Rhine!

VENICE.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

I stood in Venice, on the Bridge of Sighs;
 A palace and a prison on each hand:
 I saw from out the wave her structures rise
 As from the stroke of the enchanter's wand:
 A thousand years their cloudy wings
 expand
 Around me, and a dying Glory smiles O'er the far times when many a subject land
 Look'd to the wingèd Lion's marble piles,
 Where Venice sat in state, throned on her hundred isles!

She looks a sea Cybele, fresh from ocean,
 Rising with her tiara of proud towers
 At airy distance, with majestic motion,
 A ruler of the waters and their
 powers:

And such she was; — her daughten had their dowers
 From spoils of nations, and the ex-haustless East Pour'd in her lap all gems in sparkling showers.
 In purple was she robed, and of her feast
 Monarchs partook, and deem'd their dignity increased.

In Venice Tasso's echoes are no
 more,
 And silent rows the songless gondo-lier:
 Her palaces are crumbling to the
 shore,
 And music meets not always now the
 ear:
 Those days are gone — but Beauty still is here.
 States fall, arts fade — but Nature doth not die,
 Nor yet forget how Venice once was
 dear,
 The pleasant place of all festivity,
 The revel of the earth, the masque of Italy!

But unto us she hath a spell beyond
 Her name in story, and her long
 array
 Of mighty shadows, whose dim forms despond
 Above the dogeless city's vanish'd
 sway;
 Ours is a trophy which will not decay
 With the Rialto; Shylock and the Moor,
 And Pierre, cannot be swept or worn
 away —
 The keystones of the arch! though all were o'er,
 For us repeopled were the solitary
 shore.

The beings of the mind are not of
 clay;
 Essentially immortal, they create
 And multiply in us a brighter ray

" I stood in Venice, on the Bridge of Sighs .
A palace and a prison on each hand."

more beloved existence: that

MOONLIGHT NIGHT AT VENICE.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

Moon is up, and yet it is not
 night —
 she divides the sky with her — a
 light runs streams along the Alpine
 light the Friuli's mountain; Heaven
 free clouds, but of all colors seems to be, — to one vast Iris of the West, — the Day joins the past Eternity on the other hand, meek an's crest rough the azure air — an island of the blest!

The star is at her side, and reigns ever o'er half the lovely heaven;
 it still the sunny sea heaves brightly, and the rains o'er the peak of the fair Rhae-nan hill,
 and Night contending were,
 till she reclaimed her order; — gently flows
 the deep-dyed Brenta, where their eyes instil
 the glorious purple of a new-born
 life,
 streams upon her stream, and dissolved within it glows.

Filled with the face of heaven, which,
 from afar,
 Comes down upon the waters; all its hues,
 From the rich sunset to the rising
 star,
 Their magical variety diffuse:
 And now they change; a paler shadow strews
 Its mantle o'er the mountains; parting day
 Dies like the dolphin, whom each pang imbues
 With a new color as it gasps away
 The last still loveliest, till — 'tis gone — and all is gray.

ROME.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

OH Rome! my country! city of the soul!
 The orphans of the heart must turn to thee,
 Lone mother of dead empires! and
 control
 In their shut breasts their petty misery.
 What are our woes and sufferance?
 Come and see
 The cypress, hear the owl, and plod your way
 O'er steps of broken thrones and temples, Ye!
 Whose agonies are evils of a day —
 A world is at our feet as fragile as our clay.

The Niobe of nations! there she stands,
 Childless and crownless, in her voiceless woe;
 An empty urn within her withered
 hands,
 Whose holy dust was scattered long ago;
 The Scipios' tomb contains no ashes
 now;
 The very sepulchres lie tenantless
 Of their heroic dwellers: dost thou
 flow,

Old Tiber! through a marble wilderness?
 Rise, with thy yellow waves, and mantle her distress.

The Goth, the Christian, Time, War, Flood, and Fire,
 Have dealt upon the seven-hilled city's pride;
 She saw her glories star by star expire,
 And up the steep barbarian monarchs
 ride,
 Where the car climbed the Capitol;
 far and wide
 Temple and tower went down, nor left a site:
 Chaos of ruins! who shall trace the void,
 O'er the dim fragments cast a lunar
 light,
 And say, "here was, or is," where all is doubly night?

The double night of ages, and of her,
 Night's daughter, Ignorance, hath wrapt and wrap
 All round us: we but feel our way to err:
 The ocean hath its chart, the stars their map,
 And Knowledge spreads them on her ample lap;
 But Rome is as the desert, where we steer Stumbling o'er recollections; now we clap
 Our hands, and cry "Eureka!" it is clear —
 When but some false mirage of ruin rises near.

Alas! the lofty city! and alas!
 The trebly hundred triumphs! and
 the day
 When Brutus made the dagger's edge surpass
 The conqueror's sword in bearing fame away!
 Alas, for Tully's voice, and Virgil's
 lay,
 And Livy's pictured page! — but these shall be

Her resurrection; all beside — decay.
 Alas for Earth, for never shall we see That brightness in her eye she bore when Rome was free!

FREEDOM'S TRUE HEROES.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

CAN tyrants but by tyrants conquered
 be,
 And Freedom find no champion and no child
 Such as Columbia saw arise when she Sprung forth a Pallas, armed and un-defiled?
 Or must such minds be nourished in the wild,
 Deep in the unpruned forest, 'midst the roar
 Of cataracts, where nursing Nature
 smiled
 On infant Washington? Hath Earth
 no more
 Such seeds within her breast, or Europe no such shore?

But France got drunk with blood to vomit crime,
 And fatal have her Saturnalia been To Freedom's cause, in every age and
 clime;
 Because the deadly days which we have seen,
 And vile Ambition, that built up between Man and his hopes an adamantine
 wall,
 And the base pageant last upon the
 scene,
 Are grown the pretext for the eternal thrall
 Which nips life's tree, and dooms man's worst — his second fall.

Yet, Freedom! yet thy banner, torn,
 but flying,
 Streams like the thunder-storm against
 the wind;
 Thy trumpet voice, though broken
 now and dying,
 The loudest still the tempest leaves
 behind;

Thy tree hath lost its blossoms, and the rind,
Chopped by the axe, looks rough and little worth,
But the sap lasts, — and still the seed we find Sown deep, even in the bosom of the North;
So shall a better spring less bitter fruit bring forth.

THE FOUNTAIN OF EGERIA.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

EGERIA! sweet creation of some
heart
Which found no mortal resting-place so fair
As thine ideal breast; whate'er thou art
Or wert, — a young Aurora of the air,
The nympholepsy of some fond despair;
Or, it might be, a beauty of the earth,
Who found a more than common votary there Too much adoring; whatsoe'er thy
birth,
Thou wert a beautiful thought, and softly bodied forth.

The mosses of thy fountain still are sprinkled
With thine Elysian water-drops; the
face
Of thy cave-guarded spring, with years unwrinkled,
Reflects the meek-eyed genius of the
place,
Whose green, wild margin now no more erases Art's works; nor must the delicate waters sleep,
Prisoned in marble, bubbling from the base
Of the cleft statue, with a gentle leap
The rill runs o'er, and round fern, flowers, and ivy creep,

Fantastically tangled: the green hills
Are clothed with early blossoms, through the grass

The quick-eyed lizard rustles, and the bills
Of summer-birds sing welcome as ye
pass;
Flowers fresh in hue, and many in their class,
Implore the pausing step, and with their dyes
Dance in the soft breeze in a fairy
mass;
The sweetness of the violet's deep
blue eyes,
Kissed by the breath of heaven, seems colored by its skies.

Here didst thou dwell, in this enchanted cover, Egeria! thy all heavenly bosom beat-
ing
For the far footsteps of thy mortal
lover;
The purple Midnight veiled that mystic meeting
With her most starry canopy, and seating
Thyself by thine adorer, what befel?
This cave was surely shaped out for the greeting
Of an enamored Goddess, and the cell
Haunted by holy Love — the earliest oracle!

INVOCATION TO NEMESIS.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

AND thou, who never yet of human
Left the unbalanced scale, great Nemesis!
Here, where the ancient paid thee homage long — Thou who didst call the Furies from the abyss,
And round Orestes bade them howl and hiss
For that unnatural retribution — just Had it but been from hands less near — in this Thy former realm, I call thee from the dust!

Dost thou not hear my heart? — Awake!
thou shalt, and must.

And if my voice break forth, 'tis not that now
I shrink from what is suffered: let him speak
Who hath beheld decline upon my
brow,
Or seen my mind's convulsion leave it weak;
But in this page a record will I seek.
Not in the air shall these my words disperse,
Though I be ashes; a far hour shall wreak
The deep prophetic fulness of this verse,
And pile on human heads the mountain of my curse!

That curse shall be Forgiveness. —
Have I not — Hear me, my mother Earth! behold it, Heaven! —
Have I not had to wrestle with my lot?
Have I not suffered things to be for-
given?
Have I not had my brain seared, my heart riven,
Hopes sapped, name blighted, Life's life lied away?
And only not to desperation driven,
Because not altogether of such clay
As rots into the souls of those whom I survey.

From mighty wrongs to petty perfidy
Have I not seen what human things could do?
From the loud roar of foaming calumny
To the small whisper of the as paltry few,
And subtler venom of the reptile crew,
The Janus glance of whose significant
eye,
Learning to lie with silence, would seem true,
And without utterance, save the shrug or sigh,
Deal round to happy fools its speechless obloquy.

But I have lived, and have not lived
in vain:
My mind may lose its force, my blood its fire,
And my frame perish even in conquering pain;
But there is that within me which shall tire Torture and Time, and breathe when I expire.

THE STATUE OF APOLLO.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

OR view the Lord of the unerring
bow,
The God of life, and poesy, and light—
The Sun in human limbs arrayed, and brow
All radiant from his triumph in the fight;
The shaft hath just been shot—the arrow bright
With an immortal's vengeance; in his
eye
And nostril beautiful disdain, and
might
And majesty, flash their full lightnings
by,
Developing in that one glance the Deity.

But in his delicate form — a dream of
Love,
Shaped by some solitary nymph, whose breast Longed for a deathless lover from
above,
And maddened in that vision — are expressed
All that ideal beauty ever blessed
The mind with in its most unearthly
mood,
When each conception was a heavenly guest —
A ray of immortality — and stood Starlike, around, until they gathered to a god!

And if it be Prometheus stole from
Heaven
The fire which we endure, it was repaid

By him to whom the energy was given
Which this poetic marble hath arrayed With an eternal glory—which, if
 made
By human hands, is not of human
 thought;
And Time himself hath hallowed it, nor laid
One ringlet in the dust—nor hath it caught A tinge of years, but breathes the flame with which 'twas wrought.

THE OCEAN.

(Childe Harold, Canto iv.)

ROLL on, thou deep and dark blue Ocean—roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee
 in vain;
Man marks the earth with ruin—his control
Stops with the shore;—upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth
 remain
A shadow of man's ravage, save his
 own,
When, for a moment, like a drop of rain,
He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan,
Without a grave, unknelt, uncoffined, and unknown.

His steps are not upon thy paths,— thy fields
Are not a spoil for him,—thou dost arise
And shake him from thee; the vile strength he wields
For earth's destruction thou dost all
 despise,
Spurning him from thy bosom to the
 skies,
And send'st him, shivering in thy playful spray
And howling, to his gods, where haply
 lies

His petty hope in some near port or
 bay,
And dashest him again to earth:—
 there let him lay.

The armaments which thunderstrike the walls
Of rock-built cities, bidding nations
 quake,
And monarchs tremble in their capitals,
The oak leviathans, whose huge ribs
 make
Their clay creator the vain title take
Of lord of thee, and arbiter of war;
These are thy toys, and, as the snowy flake,
They melt into thy yeast of waves, which mar
Alike the Armada's pride or spoils of Trafalgar.

Thy shores are empires, changed in all save thee—
Assyria, Greece, Rome, Carthage,
 what are they?
Thy waters washed them power while they were free,
And many a tyrant since; their shores
 obey
The stranger, slave, or savage; their
 decay
Has dried up realms to deserts:— not so thou;—
Unchangeable save to thy wild waves'
 play—
Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure
 brow—
Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest now.

Thou glorious mirror, where the Almighty's form
Glasses itself in tempest; in all time, Calm or convulsed—in breeze, or gale, or storm,
Icing the pole, or in the torrid clime
Dark-heaving;—boundless, endless, and sublime—
The image of Eternity—the throne
Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime

The monsters of the deep are made :
 each zone
 Obeys thee ; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless, alone.

And I have loved thee, Ocean ! and my joy
 Of youthful sports was on thy breast
 to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward : from a boy
 I wantoned with thy breakers — they
 to me
 Were a delight ; and if the freshening sea
 Made them a terror — 'twas a pleasing fear,
 For I was as it were a child of thee,
 And trusted to thy billows far and
 near,
 And laid my hand upon thy mane — as I do here.

SOLITUDE.

[Childe Harold, Canto iv.]

OH ! that the desert were my dwelling-place,
 With one fair spirit for my minister,
 That I might all forget the human
 race,
 And, hating no one, love but only her !
 Ye elements ! — in whose ennobling
 stir
 I feel myself exalted — Can ye not Accord me such a being ? Do I err
 In deeming such inhabit many a spot ?
 Though with them to converse can rarely be our lot.

There is a pleasure in the pathless
 woods,
 There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
 There is society, where none intrudes,
 By the deep Sea, and music in its
 roar :
 I love not Man the less, but Nature
 more,
 From these our interviews, in which I steal

From all I may be, or have been before,
 To mingle with the Universe, and
 feel
 What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

SONG OF THE CORSAIRS.

[The Corsair, Canto i.]

O'ER the glad waters of the dark blue
 sea,
 Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,
 Far as the breeze can bear, the billows
 foam, Survey our empire, and behold our
 home !
 These are our realms, no limits to their sway —
 Our flag the sceptre all who meet obey.
 Ours the wild life in tumult still to range
 From toil to rest, and joy in every
 change.
 Oh, who can tell ? not thou, luxurious slave !
 Whose soul would sicken o'er the heaving wave ;
 Not thou, vain lord of wantonness and
 ease !
 Whom slumber soothes not — pleasure cannot please —
 Oh, who can tell save he whose heart hath tried,
 And danced in triumph o'er the waters
 wide,
 The exulting sense — the pulse's maddening play,
 That thrills the wanderer of that trackless way ?
 That for itself can woo the approaching fight,
 And turn what some deem danger to
 delight ;
 That seeks what cravens shun with more than zeal,
 And where the feeble faint — can only feel —
 Feel — to the rising bosom's inmost core,

"O'er the glad waters of the dark blue sea."

hope awaken and its spirit soar?
dread of death — if with us die our foes —

Is that it seems even duller than repose:

When will it — we snatch the life of life —

When lost — what reck's it — by disease or strife?

him who crawls enamored of
decay,

ling to his couch, and sicken years
away;

Give his thick breath, and shake his palsied head;

Is — the fresh turf, and not the feverish bed.

While gasp by gasp he falters forth his
soul,

Is with one pang — one bound — escapes control.

His corse may boast its urn and narrow
cave,

And they who loathed his life may gild his grave:

Is are the tears, though few, sincerely
shed,

When Ocean shrouds and sepulchres our dead.

Is us, even banquets fond regrets supply

the red cup that crowns our memory;

And the brief epitaph in danger's day,

When those who win at length divide
the prey,

And cry, Remembrance saddening o'er each brow,

Who had the brave who fell exulted
now!

CONRAD'S LOVE FOR MEDORA.

WE are all evil — quickening round
his heart,

Is softer feeling would not yet depart;
could he sneer at others as beguiled

passions worthy of a fool or child;

'gainst that passion vainly still he
strove,

And even in him it asks the name of
Love!

Yes, it was love — unchangeable — unchanged,

Felt but for one from whom he never ranged;

Though fairest captives daily met his
eye,

He shunned, nor sought, but coldly passed them by;

Though many a beauty drooped in pris-oned bower,

None ever soothed his most unguarded
hour.

Yes — it was Love — if thoughts of tenderness,

Tried in temptation, strengthened by distress,

Unmoved by absence, firm in every
clime,

And yet — oh, more than all! — untired
by time;

Which nor defeated hope, nor baffled
wile,

Could render sullen, were she near to
smile;

Nor rage could fire, nor sickness fret to vent

On her one murmur of his discontent;

Which still would meet with joy, with calmness part,

Lest that his look of grief should reach her heart;

Which nought removed, nor menaced to remove —

If there be love in mortals — this was
love!

He was a villain — ay — reproaches
shower

On him — but not the passion, nor its
power,

Which only proved all other virtues
gone,

Not guilt itself could quench the loveliest one!

THE PARTING OF CONRAD AND MEDORA.

[The Corsair, Canto i.]

SHE rose — she sprung — she clung to his embrace,

Till his heart heaved beneath her hidden
face,

He dared not raise to his that deep-blue
 eye,
 Which downcast drooped in tearless agony.
 Her long fair hair lay floating o'er his arms,
 In all the wildness of dishevelled
 charms;
 Scarce beat that bosom where his image dwelt
 So full — that feeling seemed almost unfelt!
 Hark — peals the thunder of the signal-
 gun!
 It told 'twas sunset — and he cursed that
 sun.
 Again — again — that form he madly
 pressed,
 Which mutely clasped, imploringly caressed!
 And tottering to the couch his bride he
 bore,
 One moment gazed — as if to gaze no
 more;
 Felt — that for him earth held but her
 alone,
 Kissed her cold forehead — turned — is Conrad gone?

“And is he gone?” — on sudden solitude
 How oft that fearful question will intrude!
 “’Twas but an instant past — and here he stood!
 And now” — without the portal’s porch
 she rushed,
 And then at length her tears in freedom
 gushed;
 Big, — bright — and fast, unknown to her they fell;
 But still her lips refused to send —
 “Farewell!”
 For in that word — that fatal word — howe’er
 We promise — hope — believe — there breathes despair,
 O’er every feature of that still pale
 face,
 Had sorrow fixed what time can ne’er erase:
 The tender blue of that large loving eye

Grew frozen with its gaze on vacancy, Till — oh, how far! — it caught a glimpse of him,
 And then it flowed — and phrensied seemed to swim,
 Through those long, dark, and glistening lashes dewed
 With drops of sadness oft to be renewed.
 “He’s gone!” — against her heart that hand is driven,
 Convulsed and quick — then gently raised to heaven;
 She looked and saw the heaving of the
 main;
 The white sail set — she dared not look
 again;
 But turned with sickening soul within the gate —
 “It is no dream — and I am desolate!”

SUNSET IN THE MOREA.

[The Corsair, Canto iii.]

SLOW sinks, more lovely ere his race be run,
 Along Morea’s hills the setting sun;
 Not, as in northern climes, obscurely
 bright,
 But one unclouded blaze of living light!
 O’er the hushed deep the yellow beam
 he throws, Gilds the green wave, that trembles as it glows.
 On old Ægina’s rock, and Idra’s isle,
 The god of gladness sheds his parting
 smile;
 O’er his own regions lingering, loves to shine,
 Though there his altars are no more
 divine.
 Descending fast the mountain shadows
 kiss
 Thy glorious gulf, unconquered Salamis!
 Their azure arches through the long expanse
 More deeply purpled meet his mellowing glance,
 And tenderest tints, along their summits
 driven,

Mark his gay course, and own the hues
 of heaven,
 Till, darkly shaded from the land and
 deep,
 Behind his Delphian cliff he sinks to
 sleep.

CONRAD AND THE DEAD BODY OF MEDORA.

[The Corsair, Canto iii.]

HE turned not — spoke not — sunk not — fixed his look,
 And set the anxious frame that lately shook:
 He gazed — how long we gaze despite of pain,
 And know, but dare not own, we gaze
 in vain!
 In life itself she was so still and fair,
 That death with gentler aspect withered
 there;
 And the cold flowers her colder hand contained,
 In that last grasp as tenderly were strained
 As if she scarcely felt, but feigned a
 sleep,
 And made it almost mockery yet to
 weep:
 The long dark lashes fringed her lids of
 snow,
 And veiled — thought shrinks from all that lurked below — Oh! o'er the eye death most exerts his
 might,
 And hurls the spirit from the throne of
 light!
 Sinks those blue orbs in that long last eclipse,
 But spares, as yet, the charm around her lips —
 Yet, yet they seem as they forbore to
 smile
 And wished repose — but only for a while;
 But the white shroud, and each extended
 tress,
 Long — fair — but spread in utter lifelessness,
 Which, late the sport of every summer
 wind,

Escaped the baffled wreath that strove
 to bind;
 These, and the pale pure cheek, became the bier,
 But she is nothing — wherefore is he
 here?

He asked no question — all were answered now
 By the first glance on that still, marble
 brow.
 It was enough — she died — what recked it how?
 The love of youth, the hope of better
 years,
 The source of softest wishes, tenderest
 fears,
 The only living thing he could not hate,
 Was reft at once — and he deserved his
 fate,
 But did not feel it less; — the good explore,
 For peace, those realms where guilt can never soar;
 The proud — the wayward — who have fixed below
 Their joy, and find this earth enough
 for woe,
 Lose in that one their all — perchance a mite —
 But who in patience parts with all
 delight?
 Full many a stoic eye and aspect stern Mask hearts where grief hath little left to learn!
 And many a withering thought lies hid,
 not lost,
 In smiles that least befit who wear them most.

A BUNCH OF SWEETS.

[Don Juan, Canto i.]

'Tis sweet to hear
 At midnight on the blue and moonlit deep
 The song and oar of Adria's gondolier, By distance mellowed, o'er the waters
 sweep;
 'Tis sweet to see the evening star appear;

'Tis sweet to listen as the night-winds
 creep
 From leaf to leaf; 'tis sweet to view on
 high
 The rainbow, based on ocean, span the
 sky.

'Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's honest bark

Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home;

'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark

Our coming, and look brighter when we come;

'Tis sweet to be awakened by the lark,
 Or lulled by falling waters; sweet the hum

Of bees, the voice of girls, the song of birds,

The lisp of children, and their earliest
 words.

Sweet is the vintage, when the showering grapes

In Bacchanal profusion reel to earth, Purple and gushing: sweet are our escapes

From civic revelry to rural mirth;
 Sweet to the miser are his glittering heaps,

Sweet to the father is his first-born's
 birth,

Sweet is revenge — especially to women, Pillage to soldiers, prize-money to sea-
 men.

Sweet is a legacy, and passing sweet
 The unexpected death of some old lady,

Or gentleman of seventy years complete,
 Who've made "us youth" wait too,
 too long already,

For an estate, or cash, or country seat,
 Still breaking, but with stamina so steady,

That all the Israelites are fit to mob its Next owner for their double-damned post-obits.

'Tis sweet to win, no matter how, one's laurels,

By blood or ink; 'tis sweet to put an end

To strife; 'tis sometimes sweet to have our quarrels,

Particularly with a tiresome friend:
 Sweet is old wine in bottles, ale in barrels;

Dear is the helpless creature we defend

Against the world; and dear the school boy spot

We ne'er forget, though there we are forgot.

But sweeter still than this, than these,
 than all,

Is first and passionate love — it stands alone,

Like Adam's recollection of his fall;
 The tree of knowledge has been plucked — all's known —

And life yields nothing further to recall Worthy of this ambrosial sin, so
 shown,

No doubt in fable, as the unforgiven Fire which Prometheus filched for us from heaven.

THE DYING BOYS ON THE RAFT.

[Don Juan, Canto ii.]

THERE were two fathers in this ghastly
 crew,

And with them their two sons, of whom the one

Was more robust and hardy to the
 view,

But he died early; and when he was
 gone,

His nearest messmate told his sire, who threw

One glance at him, and said,
 "Heaven's will be done!

I can do nothing," and he saw him
 thrown

Into the deep without a tear or groan.

The other father had a weaklier child,
 Of a soft cheek, and aspect delicate;

But the boy bore up long, and with a mild

And patient spirit held aloof his fate;
Little he said, and now and then he smiled,

As if to win a heart from off the weight,
He saw increasing on his father's heart,
With the deep deadly thought that they must part.

And o'er him bent his sire, and never raised

His eyes from off his face, but wiped the foam
From his pale lips, and ever on him gazed,

And when the wished-for shower at length was come,
And the boy's eyes, which the dull film half glazed,

Brightened, and for a moment seemed to roam,
He squeezed from out a rag some drops of rain
Into his dying child's mouth—but in vain.

The boy expired—the father held the clay,

And looked upon it long, and when at last Death left no doubt, and the dead burden lay

Stiff on his heart, and pulse and hope were past,
He watched it wistfully, until away

'Twas borne by the rude wave wherein 'twas cast;
Then he himself sunk down all dumb and shivering,
And gave no sign of life, save his limbs quivering.

THE ISLES OF GREECE.

[Don Juan, Canto iii.]

THE isles of Greece, the isles of Greece!
Where burning Sappho loved and sung,
Where grew the arts of war and peace,—

Where Delos rose, and Phoebus sprung!

Eternal summer gilds them yet,
But all, except their sun, is set.

The Scian and the Teian muse,
The hero's harp, the lover's lute,
Have found the fame your shores refuse;

Their place of birth alone is mute
To sounds which echo further west
Than your sires' "Islands of the Blest."

The mountains look on Marathon—

And Marathon looks on the sea;
And musing there an hour alone,
I dreamed that Greece might still be free;

For standing on the Persians' grave,
I could not deem myself a slave.

A king sat on the rocky brow

Which looks o'er sea-born Salamis,
And ships, by thousands, lay below,
And men in nations;—all were his!
He counted them at break of day—
And when the sun set, where were they?

And where are they? and where art thou,

My country? On thy voiceless shore
The heroic lay is tuneless now—
The heroic bosom beats no more!
And must thy lyre, so long divine,
Degenerate into hands like mine?

'Tis something, in the dearth of fame,
Though linked among a fettered race,
To feel at least a patriot's shame,
Even as I sing, suffuse my face;
For what is left the poet here?
For Greeks a blush, for Greece a tear.

Must we but weep o'er the days more blest?

Must we but blush?—Our fathers bled.

Earth! render back from out thy breast
A remnant of our Spartan dead!
Of the three hundred grant but three,
To make a new Thermopylæ!

What, silent still? and silent all?

Ah! no; — the voices of the dead
Sound like a distant torrent's fall,
And answer, "Let one living head,
But one arise, — we come, we come!"
'Tis but the living who are dumb.

In vain — in vain; strike other chords;
Fill high the cup with Samian wine!
Leave battles to the Turkish hordes,
And shed the blood of Scio's vine!
Hark! rising to the ignoble call —
How answers each bold Bacchanal!

You have the Pyrrhic dance as yet,
Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
Of two such lessons, why forget
The nobler and the manlier one?
You have the letters Cadmus gave —
Think ye he meant them for a slave?

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
We will not think of themes like
these!
It made Anacreon's song divine:
He served — but served Polycrates —
A tyrant; but our masters then
Were still, at least, our countrymen.

The tyrant of the Chersonese Was freedom's best and bravest
friend;
That tyrant was Miltiades!
Oh! that the present hour would lend
Another despot of the kind!
Such chains as his were sure to bind.

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
On Suli's rock, and Parga's shore,
Exists the remnant of a line
Such as the Doric mothers bore;
And there, perhaps, some seed is sown,
The Heracleidan blood might own.

Trust not for freedom to the Franks —
They have a king who buys and sells:
In native swords, and native ranks,
The only hope of courage dwells;
But Turkish force and Latin fraud Would break your shield, however broad.

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
Our virgins dance beneath the
shade —

I see their glorious black eyes shine;
But gazing on each glowing maid,
My own the burning tear-drop laves,
To think such breasts must suckle slaves.

Place me on Sunium's marbled steep,
Where nothing, save the waves and I,
May hear our mutual murmurs sweep;
There, swan-like, let me sing and
die:

A land of slaves shall ne'er be mine —
Dash down yon cup of Samian wine!

TO THYRZA.

WITHOUT a stone to mark the spot,
And say, what Truth might well have
said,
By all, save one, perchance forgot,
Ah! wherefore art thou lowly laid?

By many a shore and many a sea
Divided, yet beloved in vain!
The past, the future fled to thee,
To bid us meet — no — ne'er again!

Could this have been — a word, a look,
That softly said, "We part in peace,"
Had taught my bosom how to brook,
With fainter sighs, thy soul's release.

And didst thou not, since Death for
thee
Prepared a light and pangless dart,
Once long for him thou ne'er shalt see,
Who held, and holds thee in his
heart?

Oh! who like him had watched thee
here?
Or sadly marked thy glazing eye,
In that dread hour ere death appear,
When silent sorrow fears to sigh.

Till all was past! But when no more
 'Twas thine to reck of human woe, Affection's heart-drops, gushing o'er,
 Had flowed as fast—as now they
 flow.

Shall they not flow, when many a day
 In these, to me, deserted towers,
 Ere called but for a time away,
 Affection's mingling tears were ours?

Ours too the glance none saw beside;
 The smile none else might understand;
 The whispered thought of hearts allied,
 The pressure of the thrilling hand;

The kiss, so guiltless and refined,
 That Love each warmer wish for-
 bore;
 Those eyes proclaimed so pure a mind, Even passion blushed to plead for
 more.

The tone, that taught me to rejoice,
 When prone, unlike thee, to repine;
 The song, celestial from thy voice,
 But sweet to me from none but thine;

The pledge we wore—I wear it still,
 But where is thine?—Ah! where art
 thou?
 Oft have I borne the weight of ill,
 But never bent beneath till now!

Well hast thou left in life's best bloom
 The cup of woe for me to drain.
 If rest alone be in the tomb,
 I would not wish thee here again;

But if in worlds more blest than this Thy virtues seek a fitter sphere,
 Impart some portion of thy bliss,
 To wean me from mine anguish here.

Teach me—too early taught by thee!
 To bear, forgiving and forgiven:
 On earth thy love was such to me,
 It fain would form my hope in heaven!

ONE STRUGGLE MORE, AND I AM FREE.

ONE struggle more, and I am free From pangs that rend my heart in twain;

One last long sigh to love and thee,
 Then back to busy life again.
 It suits me well to mingle now With things that never pleased before:

Though every joy is fled below,
 What future grief can touch me more?

Then bring me wine, the banquet bring!
 Man was not formed to live alone;
 I'll be that light, unmeaning thing,
 That smiles with all, and weeps with none.

It was not thus in days more dear,
 It never would have been, but thou Hast fled, and left me lonely here;
 Thou'rt nothing—all are nothing
 now.

In vain my lyre would lightly breathe!
 The smile that sorrow fain would wear

But mocks the woe that lurks beneath,
 Like roses o'er a sepulchre.

Though gay companions o'er the bowl
 Dispel awhile the sense of ill;
 Though pleasure fires the maddening
 soul,
 The heart—the heart is lonely still!

On many a lone and lovely night
 It soothed to gaze upon the sky;
 For then I deemed the heavenly light Shone sweetly on thy pensive eye:
 And oft I thought at Cynthia's noon,
 When sailing o'er the Ægean wave,
 "Now Thyrsa gazes on that moon"—
 Alas, it gleamed upon her grave!

When stretched on fever's sleepless
 bed,
 And sickness shrunk my throbbing
 veins,

"'Tis comfort still," I faintly said,
 "That Thyrsa cannot know my pains:"

To honor thine abandoned Urn?
 No, no — it is my sorrow's pride
 That last dear duty to fulfil;
 Though all the world forget beside,
 'Tis meet that I remember still.

For well I know, that such had been Thy gentle care for him, who now
 Unmourned shall quit this mortal scene,
 Where none regarded him, but thou:
 And, oh! I feel in that was given
 A blessing never meant for me;
 Thou wert too like a dream of heaven,
 For earthly Love to merit thee.

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY.

[Hebrew Melodies.]

SHE walks in beauty, like the night
 Of cloudless climes, and starry skies:
 And all that's best of dark and bright Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
 Thus mellowed to that tender light
 Which Heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less,
 Had half impaired the nameless
 grace,
 Which waves in every raven tress,
 Or softly lightens o'er her face;
 Where thoughts serenely sweet express,
 How pure, how dear their dwelling-
 place.

And on that cheek, and o'er that brow,
 So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
 The smiles that win, the tints that glow,
 But tell of days in goodness spent,
 A mind at peace with all below,
 A heart whose love is innocent!

THE HARP THE MONARCH MINSTREL SWEPT.

THE harp the monarch minstrel swept,
 The King of men, the loved of
 Heaven,
 Which Music hallowed while she wept O'er tones her heart of hearts had
 given,

Redoubled be her tears, its chords are riven!

It softened men of iron mould,
 It gave them virtues not their own;
 No ear so dull, no soul so cold,
 That felt not, fired not to the tone, Till David's lyre grew mightier than his throne!

It told the triumphs of our King,
 It wafted glory to our God;
 It made our gladdened valleys ring,
 The cedars bow, the mountains nod;
 Its sound aspired to heaven and there abode!

Since then, though heard on earth no
 more,

Devotion and her daughter Love,
 Still bid the bursting spirit soar
 To sounds that seem as from above,
 In dreams that day's broad light can not remove.

IF THAT HIGH WORLD.

IF that high world, which lies beyond
 Our own, surviving Love endears;
 If there the cherished heart be fond,
 The eye the same, except in tears—
 How welcome those untrodden spheres!
 How sweet this very hour to die!
 To soar from earth and find all fears,
 Lost in thy light — Eternity!

It must be so: 'tis not for self
 That we so tremble on the brink;
 And striving to o'erleap the gulf,
 Yet cling to Being's severing link.
 Oh! in that future let us think
 To hold each heart the heart that shares,
 With them the immortal waters drink,
 And soul in soul grow deathless theirs.

ON JORDAN'S BANKS.

ON Jordan's banks the Arab's camels
 stray,
 On Sion's hill the False One's votaries
 pray,

e Baal-adorer bows on Sinai's steep—t there — even there — O God! Thy thunders sleep:

ere — where Thy finger scorched the tablet stone!

ere — where Thy shadow to Thy people shone!

glory shrouded in its garb of fire:
self — none living see and not expire!

! in the lightning let Thy glance
appear;

ep from his shivered hand the oppressor's spear;

aw long by tyrants shall thy land be trod!

aw long Thy temple worshipless, oh
God!

JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER.

CE our Country, our God — oh, my
sire!

and that thy daughter expire;
e thy triumph was bought by thy vow —

ce the bosom that's bared for thee
now!

! the voice of my mourning is o'er,
! the mountains behold me no more:
e hand that I love lay me low,
re cannot be pain in the blow!

! of this, oh, my father! be sure — t the blood of thy child is as pure he blessing I beg ere it flow,
! the last thought that soothes me
below.

ough the virgins of Salem lament,
the judge and the hero unbent!
ave won the great battle for thee,
! my father and country are free!

en this blood of thy giving hath gushed,
en the voice that thou lovest is hushed,

my memory still be thy pride,
! forget not I smiled as I died!

OH! SNATCHED AWAY IN BEAUTY'S BLOOM.

OH! snatched away in beauty's bloom,
On thee shall press no ponderous tomb;
But on thy turf shall roses rear
Their leaves, the earliest of the year;
And the wild cypress wave in tender
gloom.

And oft by yon blue gushing stream
Shall Sorrow lean her drooping head,
And feel deep thought with many a dream,
And lingering pause and lightly tread;
Fond wretch! as if her step disturbed
the dead!

Away! we know that tears are vain,
That death nor heeds nor hears distress:

Will this unteach us to complain?
Or make one mourner weep the less?
And thou — who tell'st me to forget,
Thy looks are wan, thine eyes are wet.

WHEN COLDNESS WRAPS THIS SUFFERING CLAY.

WHEN coldness wraps this suffering
clay,
Ah! whither strays the immortal
mind?

It cannot die, it cannot stay,
But leaves its darkened dust behind.
Then, unembodied, doth it trace
By steps each planet's heavenly way?
Or fill at once the realms of space,
A thing of eyes, that all survey?

Eternal, boundless, undecayed,
A thought unseen, but seeing all,
All, all in earth, or skies displayed,
Shall it survey, shall it recall:
Each fainter trace that memory holds
So darkly of departed years,
In one broad glance the soul beholds,
And all, that was, at once appears.

Before Creation peopled earth,
Its eye shall roll through chaos back;

And where the furthest heaven had
 birth,
 The spirit trace its rising track,
 And where the future mars or makes,
 Its glance dilate o'er all to be,
 While sun is quenched or system breaks,
 Fixed in its own eternity.

Above or Love, Hope, Hate, or Fear,
 It lives all passionless and pure:
 An age shall fleet like earthly year;
 Its years as moments shall endure.
 Away, away, without a wing, O'er all, through all, its thought shall
 fly;
 A nameless and eternal thing,
 Forgetting what it was to die.

THE DESTRUCTION OF SENNACHERIB.

THE Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
 And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;
 And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
 When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

Like the leaves of the forest when Summer is green,
 That host with their banners at sunset were seen:
 Like the leaves of the forest when Autumn hath blown,
 That host on the morrow lay withered and strown.

For the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast,
 And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
 And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
 And their hearts but once heaved, and for ever grew still!

And there lay the steed with his nostrils
 all wide,

But through it there rolled not the breath of his pride:
 And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf,
 And cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

And there lay the rider distorted and
 pale,
 With the dew on his brow and the rust on his mail;
 And the tents were all silent, the banners alone,
 The lances unlifted, the trumpet un-blown.

And the widows of Ashur are loud in their wail,
 And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal;
 And the might of the Gentile, unsmote
 by the sword, Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

STANZAS FOR MUSIC.

[Miscellaneous Poems.]

THERE'S not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,
 When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay.
 'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast, But the tender bloom of heart is gone,
 ere youth itself be past.

Then the few whose spirits float above
 the wreck of happiness, Are driven o'er the shoals of guilt or ocean of excess:
 The magnet of their course is gone, or only points in vain
 The shore to which their shivered sail shall never stretch again.

Then the mortal coldness of the soul like death itself comes down;
 It cannot feel for others' woes, it dare not dream its own;

at heavy chill has frozen o'er the fountain of our tears, id though the eye may sparkle still,
'tis where the ice appears.

ough wit may flash from fluent lips, and mirth distract the breast, rough midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest; as but as ivy-leaves around the ruined tower wreath,
i green and wildly fresh without, but worn and gray beneath.

Could I feel as I have felt, or be what I have been,
weep as I could once have wept, o'er many a vanished scene;
springs in deserts found seem sweet,
all brackish though they be,
midst the withered waste of life,
those tears would flow to me.

REWELL! IF EVER FONDEST PRAYER.

REWELL! if ever fondest prayer
For other's weal availed on high,
ne will not all be lost in air,
But waft thy name beyond the sky.
were vain to speak, to weep, to sigh:
Oh! more than tears of blood can tell,
seen wrung from guilt's expiring eye,
Are in that word — Farewell! —
Farewell!

These lips are mute, these eyes are dry;
but in my breast and in my brain, like the pangs that pass not by,
The thought that ne'er shall sleep
again.

soul nor deigns nor dares complain, though grief and passion there rebel:
only know we loved in vain — only feel — Farewell! — Farewell!

WHEN WE TWO PARTED.

WHEN we two parted
In silence and tears,
Half broken-hearted

To sever for years,
Pale grew thy cheek and cold,
Colder thy kiss;
Truly that hour foretold Sorrow to this.

The dew of the morning
Sank chill on my brow —
It felt like the warning
Of what I feel now.
Thy vows are all broken,
And light is thy fame;
I hear thy name spoken,
And share in its shame.

They name thee before me,
A knell to mine ear;
A shudder comes o'er me —
Why wert thou so dear?
They know not I knew thee,
Who knew thee too well: —
Long, long shall I rue thee,
Too deeply to tell.

In secret we met —
In silence I grieve,
That thy heart could forget,
Thy spirit deceive.
If I should meet thee
After long years,
How should I greet thee? —
With silence and tears.

FARE THEE WELL.

FARE thee well! and if for ever,
Still for ever, fare thee well;
Even though unforgiving, never
'Gainst thee shall my heart rebel.

Would that breast were bared before
thee,
Where thy head so oft hath lain,
While that placid sleep came o'er thee
Which thou ne'er canst know again:

Would that breast, by thee glanced over,
Every inmost thought could show!
Then thou wouldst at last discover
'Twas not well to spurn it so.

Though the world for this commend
thee —

Though it smile upon the blow,
Even its praises must offend thee,
Founded on another's woe :

Although my many faults defaced me,
Could no other arm be found,
Than the one which once embraced me,
To inflict a cureless wound?

Yet, oh yet, thyself deceive not :
Love may sink by slow decay,
But by sudden wrench, believe not Hearts can thus be torn away;

Still thine own life retaineth —
Still must mine, though bleeding, beat;
And the undying thought which paineth
Is — that we no more may meet.

These are words of deeper sorrow
Than the wail above the dead;
Both shall live, but every morrow
Wake us from a widowed bed.

And when thou wouldst solace gather,
When our child's first accents flow,
Wilt thou teach her to say "Father!"
Though his care she must forego?

When her little hands shall press thee,
When her lip to thine is pressed,
Think of him whose prayer shall bless
thee,
Think of him thy love had blessed!

Should her lineaments resemble
Those thou never more mayst see,
Then thy heart will softly tremble
With a pulse yet true to me.

All my faults perchance thou knowest,
All my madness none can know;
All my hopes, where'er thou goest,
Whither, yet with thee they go.

Every feeling hath been shaken;
Pride, which not a world could bow,
Bows to thee — by thee forsaken,
Even my soul forsakes me now :

But 'tis done — all words are idle —
Words from me are vainer still;
But the thoughts we cannot bridle Force their way without the will.

Fare thee well! — thus disunited,
Torn from every nearer tie;
Seared in heart, and lone, and blighted
More than this I scarce can die.

STANZAS TO AUGUSTA (LORD BYRON'S SISTER).

THOUGH the day of my destiny's over,
And the star of my fate hath declined,
Thy soft heart refused to discover
The faults which so many could find;
Though thy soul with my grief was acquainted,
It shrunk not to share it with me,
And the love which my spirit hath painted
It never hath found but in thee.

Then when nature around me is smiling,
The last smile which answers to mine,
I do not believe it beguiling,
Because it reminds me of thine;
And when winds are at war with the ocean,
As the breasts I believed in with me,
If their billows excite an emotion,
It is that they bear me from thee.

Though the rock of my last hope is shivered,
And its fragments are sunk in the
wave,
Though I feel that my soul is delivered
To pain — it shall not be its slave.
There is many a pang to pursue me:
They may crush, but they shall not contemn —
They may torture, but shall not subdue
me —
'Tis of thee that I think — not of
them.

Though human, thou didst not deceive
me,
Though woman, thou didst not forsake,

Though loved, thou forebores to grieve
me,
Though slandered, thou never couldst
shake, —
Though trusted, thou didst not disclaim
me,
Though parted, it was not to fly, Though watchful, 'twas not to defame
me,
Nor mute, that the world might be-
lie.

Yet I blame not the world, nor despise
it,
Nor the war of the many with one —
If my soul was not fitted to prize it,
'Twas folly not sooner to shun:
And if dearly that error hath cost me,
And more than I once could foresee,
I have found that, whatever it lost me,
It could not deprive me of thee.

From the wreck of the past, which hath perished,
Thus much I at least may recall,
It hath taught me that what I most cherished
Deserved to be dearest of all:
In the desert a fountain is springing,
In the wide waste there still is a tree,
And a bird in the solitude singing,
Which speaks to my spirit of thee.

MAID OF ATHENS, ERE WE PART.

MAID of Athens, ere we part,
Give, oh, give me back my heart!
Or, since that has left my breast,
Keep it now, and take the rest!
Hear my vow before I go,
Ζών μου σὺς ἀγαπῶ.

By those tresses unconfined,
Woody by each Ægean wind;
By those lids whose jetty fringe
Kiss thy soft cheeks' blooming tinge;
By those wild eyes like the roe,
Ζών μου σὺς ἀγαπῶ.

By that lip I long to taste;
By that zone-encircled waist;
By all the token-flowers that tell
What words can never speak so well;
By love's alternate joy and woe,
Ζών μου σὺς ἀγαπῶ.

Maid of Athens! I am gone:
Think of me, sweet! when alone.
Though I fly to Istambol,
Athens holds my heart and soul:
Can I cease to love thee? No!
Ζών μου σὺς ἀγαπῶ.

BRIGHT BE THE PLACE OF THY SOUL.

BRIGHT be the place of thy soul!
No lovelier spirit than thine
E'er burst from its mortal control,
In the orbs of the blessed to shine.

On earth thou wert all but divine,
As thy soul shall immortally be;
And our sorrow may cease to repine,
When we know that thy God is with
thee.

Light be the turf of thy tomb!
May its verdure like emeralds be:
There should not be the shadow of
gloom
In aught that reminds us of thee.

Young flowers and an evergreen tree
May spring from the spot of thy rest:
But nor cypress nor yew let us see;
For why should we mourn for the blest?

SONNET ON CHILLON.

ETERNAL Spirit of the chainless Mind!
Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou
art,
For there thy habitation is the heart —
The heart which love of thee alone can bind;
And when thy sons to fetters are con-sign'd —

To fetters, and the damp vault's day-less gloom,
Their country conquers with their martyrdom,
And Freedom's fame finds wings on every wind.
Chillon! thy prison is a holy place,
And thy sad floor an altar — for 'twas
trod,
Until his very steps have left a trace Worn, as if thy cold pavement were a sod,
By Bonnivard! — May none those marks efface!
For they appeal from tyranny to God.

THE PRISONER OF CHILLON.

My hair is gray, but not with years,
Nor grew it white
In a single night,
As men's have grown from sudden
fears:
My limbs are bow'd, though not with
toil,
But rusted with a vile repose,
For they have been a dungeon's spoil,
And mine has been the fate of those
To whom the goodly earth and air
Are bann'd, and barr'd — forbidden fare;
But this was for my father's faith
I suffer'd chains and courted death;
That father perish'd at the stake
For tenets he would not forsake;
And for the same his lineal race
In darkness found a dwelling-place;
We were seven — who now are one,
Six in youth, and one in age,
Finish'd as they had begun,
Proud of Persecution's rage;
One in fire, and two in field,
Their belief with blood have seal'd;
Dying as their father died,
For the God their foes denied;

Three were in a dungeon cast,
Of whom this wreck is left the last.

There are seven pillars of Gothic mould,
In Chillon's dungeons deep and old,
There are seven columns, massy and
gray,

Dim with a dull imprison'd ray,
A sunbeam which hath lost its way,
And through the crevice and the cleft
Of the thick wall is fallen and left;
Creeping o'er the floor so damp,
Like a marsh's meteor lamp;
And in each pillar there is a ring,

And in each ring there is a chain;
That iron is a cankering thing,

For in these limbs its teeth remain,
With marks that will not wear away,
Till I have done with this new day,
Which now is painful to these eyes,
Which have not seen the sun so rise
For years — I cannot count them o'er,
I lost their long and heavy score When my last brother droop'd and
died,
And I lay living by his side.

They chain'd us each to a column stone,
And we were three — yet, each alone:
We could not move a single pace,
We could not see each other's face,
But with that pale and livid light
That made us strangers in our sight;
And thus together — yet apart,
Fetter'd in hand, but pined in heart;
'Twas still some solace in the dearth
Of the pure elements of earth,
To hearken to each other's speech,
And each turn comforter to each
With some new hope, or legend old,
Or song heroically bold;
But even these at length grew cold.
Our voices took a dreary tone,
An echo of the dungeon-stone,
A grating sound — not full and free
As they of yore were wont to be;
It might be fancy — but to me
They never sounded like our own.

JOHN KEBLE.

1792-1866.

[JOHN KEBLE was born on St. Mark's Day (April 25), 1792, at Fairford, in Gloucestershire. He was elected Scholar of Corpus, Oxford, in his fifteenth, and Fellow of Oriel in his nineteenth year. After a few years of tutorship at Oxford and curacy in the country, he became Vicar of Hursley in Hampshire in 1839, where he continued to minister till his death in 1866. He was with Dr. Newman and Dr. Pusey regarded as forming the Triumvirate of the Oxford Catholic movement. His prose works consist of an elaborate edition of Hooker, a careful Life of Bishop Wilson, and various theological treatises. But it is as a poet much more than a scholar or a controversialist that he is known; and of his poetical works, the Lyra Innocentium, the Translation of the Psalter, a posthumous volume of Poems, and The Christian Year (1827), it is by the last that he acquired an universal and undying fame in English literature. As Professor of Poetry at Oxford he wrote in Latin Praelections on Poetry, which are remarkable both for their subtlety and their exquisite Latinity. His Life was written by his friend Mr. Justice Coleridge.]

THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT.

[The Christian Inheritance.]

SEE Lucifer like lightning fall, Dashed from his throne of pride;
 While, answering Thy victorious
 call,
 The Saints his spoils divide;
 This world of Thine, by him usurped too long,
 Now opening all her stores to heal Thy servants' wrong.

So when the first-born of Thy foes
 Dead in the darkness lay,
 When Thy redeemed at midnight
 rose
 And cast their bonds away,
 The orphaned realm threw wide her gates, and told Into freed Israel's lap her jewels and her gold.

And when their wondrous march was o'er,
 And they had won their homes,
 Where Abraham fed his flock of
 yore,

Among their fathers' tombs; —
 A land that drinks the rain of Heaven at will,
 Whose waters kiss the feet of many a vine-clad hill; —

Oft as they watched, at thoughtful
 eve,
 A gale from bowers of balm Sweep o'er the billowy corn, and heave
 The tresses of the palm,
 Just as the lingering Sun had touched with gold,
 Far o'er the cedar shade, some tower of giants old;

It was a fearful joy, I ween,
 To trace the Heathen's toil,
 The limpid wells, the orchards
 green,
 Left ready for the spoil,
 The household stores untouched, the roses bright Wreathed o'er the cottage walls in gar-lands of delight.

And now another Canaan yields
 To Thine all-conquering ark; —

Fly from the "old poetic" fields,
 Ye Paynim shadows dark!
 Immortal Greece, dear land of glorious
 lays,
 Lo! here the "unknown God" of thy unconscious praise!

The olive-wreath, the ivied wand,
 "The sword in myrtles drest,"
 Each legend of the shadowy strand
 Now wakes a vision blest;
 As little children lisp, and tell of
 Heaven,
 So thoughts beyond their thought to those high Bards were given.

And these are ours: Thy partial
 grace
 The tempting treasure lends:
 These relics of a guilty race
 Are forfeit to Thy friends;
 What seemed an idol hymn, now breathes of Thee, Tuned by Faith's ear to some celestial melody.

There's not a strain to Memory
 dear,
 Nor flower in classic grove,
 There's not a sweet note warbled
 here,
 But minds us of Thy Love, O Lord, our Lord, and spoiler of our
 foes,
 There is no light but Thine: with Thee all beauty glows.

FIFTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

[The Lilies of the Field.]

SWEET nurslings of the vernal skies,
 Bathed in soft airs, and fed with dew,
 What more than magic in you lies,
 To fill the heart's fond view?
 In childhood's sports, companions gay,
 In sorrow, on Life's downward way,
 How soothing! in our last decay
 Memorials prompt and true.

Relics ye are of Eden's bowers,
 As pure as fragrant, and as fair,
 As when ye crowned the sunshine hours
 Of happy wanderers there.
 Fall'n all beside—the world of life,
 How is it stained with fear and strife!
 In Reason's world what storms are rife
 What passions range and glare!

But cheerful and unchanged the while
 Your first and perfect form ye show,
 The same that won Eve's matron smile
 In the world's opening glow.
 The stars of heaven a course are taught Too high above our human thought;
 Ye may be found if ye are sought,
 And as we gaze, we know.

Ye dwell beside our paths and homes,
 Our paths of sin, our homes of sorrow,
 And guilty man, where'er he roams,
 Your innocent mirth may borrow.
 The birds of air before us fleet,
 They cannot brook our shame to meet—
 But we may taste our solace sweet
 And come again to-morrow.

Ye fearless in your nests abide —
 Nor may we scorn, too proudly wise,
 Your silent lessons, undescried
 By all but lowly eyes:
 For ye could draw th' admiring gaze
 Of Him who worlds and hearts surveys:
 Your order wild, your fragrant maze,
 He taught us how to prize.

Ye felt your Maker's smile that hour,
 As when He paused and owned you
 good;
 His blessing on earth's primal bower,
 Ye felt it all renewed.
 What care ye now, if winter's storm Sweep ruthless o'er each silken form?
 Christ's blessing at your heart is warm,
 Ye fear no vexing mood.

Alas! of thousand bosoms kind,
 That daily court you and caress,
 How few the happy secret find
 Of your calm loveliness!
 "Live for to-day! to-morrow's light

To-morrow's cares shall bring to sight,
Go sleep like closing flowers at night,
And Heaven thy morn will bless."

• ———
ALL SAINTS' DAY.

WHY blow'st thou not, thou wintry
wind,
Now every leaf is brown and sere,
And idly droops, to thee resigned,
The fading chaplet of the year?
Yet wears the pure ærial sky
Her summer veil, half drawn on high,
Of silvery haze, and dark and still The shadows sleep on every slanting
hill.

How quiet shows the woodland
scene!
Each flower and tree, its duty done,
Reposing in decay serene,
Like weary men when age is won,
Such calm old age as conscience pure
And self-commanding hearts ensure,
Waiting their summons to the sky,
Content to live, but not afraid to die.

Sure if our eyes were purged to trace God's unseen armies hovering
round,
We should behold by angels' grace
The four strong winds of Heaven fast bound,
Their downward sweep a moment stayed
On ocean cove and forest glade,
Till the last flower of autumn shed
Her funeral odors on her dying bed.

So in Thine awful armory, Lord,
The lightnings of the judgment-day
Pause yet awhile, in mercy stored,
Till willing hearts wear quite away
Their earthly stains; and spotless
shine

On every brow in light divine
The Cross by angel hands impressed, The seal of glory won and pledge of promised rest.

Little they dream, those haughty souls Whom empires own with bended
knee,
What lowly fate their own controls,
Together linked by Heaven's decree; —
As bloodhounds hush their baying
wild
To wanton with some fearless child, So Famine waits, and War with greedy eyes,
Till some repenting heart be ready for the skies.

Think ye the spires that glow so
bright
In front of yonder setting sun, Stand by their own unshaken might?
No—where th' upholding grace is won,
We dare not ask, nor Heaven would tell,
But sure from many a hidden dell,
From many a rural nook unthought of there,
Rises for that proud world the saints' prevailing prayer.

On Champions blest, in Jesus' name, Short be your strife, your triumph
full,
Till every heart have caught your
flame,
And, lightened of the world's mis-
rule,
Ye soar those elder saints to meet,
Gathered long since at Jesus' feet,
No world of passions to destroy,
Your prayers and struggles o'er, your task all praise and joy.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY.

1792-1822.

[PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY, eldest son of Timothy Shelley (afterwards Sir Timothy Shelley, Bart.), was born at Field Place, near Horsham in Sussex, August 4, 1792. He was educated at Eton and at University College, Oxford; but was expelled from Oxford in 1811 on account of his authorship of a tract on The Necessity of Atheism. In the same year he married Harriet Westbrook, a girl of sixteen, daughter of a coffee-house keeper, but separated from her in 1814. His intimacy with Mary Godwin, daughter of William Godwin, author of Political Justice, and of Mary Wollstonecraft, led to a marriage with her after his first wife's death in 1816. In 1817 he was deprived by Lord Eldon of the custody of his children by his first marriage, and in 1818 he left England for Italy, in which country he resided, mainly at Naples, Leghorn, and Pisa, till his death by drowning in the Gulf of Spezia, July 8, 1822. Queen Mab, his first work of any note, was privately printed in 1813; Alastor was published in 1816; and Laon and Cythna, published and withdrawn in 1817, was reissued as The Revolt of Islam in 1818. The Cenci and Prometheus Unbound were both published in 1820. Epipsychidion was printed, and Adonais published in 1821, and the list is ended by Hellas published in 1822, — the year of the poet's untimely death.]

IANTHE SLEEPING.

[Queen Mab.]

How wonderful is Death,
 Death and his brother, Sleep!
 One, pale as yonder waning moon,
 With lips of lurid blue;
 The other, rosy as the morn
 When throned on ocean's wave,
 It blushes o'er the world:
 Yet both so passing wonderful!
 Hath then the gloomy Power
 Whose reign is in the tainted sepulchres
 Seized on her sinless soul;
 Must then that peerless form Which love and admiration cannot
 view
 Without a beating heart, those azure
 veins
 Which steal like streams along a field
 of snow,
 That lovely outline, which is fair
 As breathing marble, perish?
 Must putrefaction's breath Leave nothing of this heavenly
 sight
 But loathsomeness and ruin?
 Spare nothing but a gloomy theme,
 On which the lightest heart might moralize?
 Or is it only a sweet slumber
 Stealing o'er sensation,
 Which the breath of roseate morning
 Chaseth into darkness?

Will Ianthe wake again,
 And give that faithful bosom joy
 Whose sleepless spirit waits to catch Light, life, and rapture, from her
 smile?

THE FAIRY AND IANTHE'S
SOUL.[Queen Mab.]

STARS! your balmiest influence
 shed!
 Elements! your wrath suspend!
 Sleep, Ocean, in the rocky bounds
 That circle thy domain!
 Let not a breath be seen to stir
 Around yon grass-grown ruin's height,
 Let even the restless gossamer
 Sleep on the moveless air!
 Soul of Ianthe! thou, Judged alone worthy of the envied
 boon
 That waits the good and the sincere;
 that waits
 Those who have struggled, and with resolute will Vanquished earth's pride and meanness burst the chains,
 The icy chains of custom, and have shone
 The day-stars of their age; — Soul of Ianthe!
 Awake! arise!

Sudden arose
 Ianthe's Soul; it stood
 All beautiful in naked purity,
 The perfect semblance of its bodily frame.
 Instinct with inexpressible beauty and
 grace,
 Each stain of earthliness
 Had passed away, it reassumed
 Its native dignity, and stood Immortal amid ruin.

Upon the couch the body lay,
 Wrapt in the depth of slumber:
 Its features were fixed and meaningless,
 Yet animal life was there,
 And every organ yet performed
 Its natural functions; 'twas a sight Of wonder to behold the body and soul.

The self-same lineaments, the same
 Marks of identity were there; Yet, oh how different! One aspires to heaven,
 Pants for its sempiternal heritage,
 And ever-changing, ever-rising still,
 Wantons in endless being.
 The other, for a time the unwilling sport
 Of circumstance and passion, struggles on;
 Fleets through its sad duration rapidly;
 Then like a useless and worn-out machine,
 Rots, perishes, and passes.

TO THE NIGHT.

SWIFTLY walk over the western wave, Spirit of Night!
 Out of the misty eastern cave
 Where all the long and lone daylight
 Thou wovest dreams of joy and fear
 Which make thee terrible and dear, —
 Swift be thy flight!

Wrap thy form in a mantle gray
 Star-inwrought!
 Blind with thine hair the eyes of day,

Kiss her until she be wearied out, Then wander o'er city, and sea, and
 land
 Touching all with thine opiate wand —
 Come, long-sought!

When I arose and saw the dawn,
 I sigh'd for thee;
 When light rode high, and the dew was
 gone,
 And noon lay heavy on flower and tree,
 And the weary Day turn'd to his rest
 Lingered like an unloved guest,
 I sigh'd for thee!

Thy brother Death came, and cried
 Wouldst thou me?
 Thy sweet child Sleep, the filmy-eyed,
 Murmur'd like a noon-tide bee
 Shall I nestle near thy side?
 Wouldst thou me? — And I replied
 No, not thee!

Death will come when thou art dead,
 Soon, too soon —
 Sleep will come when thou art fled;
 Of neither would I ask the boon
 I ask of thee, beloved Night —
 Swift be thine approaching flight,
 Come soon, soon!

A DREAM OF THE UNKNOWN.

I DREAM'D that as I wander'd by the
 way
 Bare Winter suddenly was changed to Spring,
 And gentle odors led my steps astray, Mix'd with a sound of waters murmuring
 Along a shelving bank of turf, which lay Under a copse, and hardly dared to fling
 Its green arms round the bosom of the
 stream,
 But kiss'd it and then fled, as Thou mightest in dream.

There grew pied wind-flowers and violets,
 Daisies, those pearl'd Arcturi of the
 earth,

The constellated flower that never sets; Faint oxlips; tender blue-bells, at whose birth
 The sod scarce heaved; and that tall flower that wets
 Its mother's face with heaven-collected
 tears,
 When the low wind, its playmate's voice,
 it hears.

And in the warm hedge grew lush eg-lantine,
 Green cow-bind and the moonlight-color'd May,
 And cherry-blossoms, and white cups, whose wine
 Was the bright dew yet drain'd not by the day;
 And wild roses, and ivy serpentine
 With its dark buds and leaves, wandering astray;
 And flowers azure, black, and streak'd
 with gold,
 Fairer than any waken'd eyes behold.

And nearer to the river's trembling edge
 There grew broad flag-flowers, purple pranked with white.
 And starry river-buds among the sedge,
 And floating water-lilies, broad and
 bright,
 Which lit the oak that overhung the hedge
 With moonlight beams of their own watery light;
 And bulrushes, and reeds of such deep
 green
 As soothed the dazzled eye with sober sheen.

Methought that of these visionary flowers
 I made a nosegay, bound in such a
 way
 That the same hues, which in their natural bowers
 Were mingled or opposed, the like
 array
 Kept these imprison'd children of the Hours
 Within my hand, — and then, elate and gay,

I hasten'd to the spot whence I
 come
 That I might there present it — O!
 Whom?

INVOCATION.

RARELY, rarely, comest thou,
 Spirit of Delight!
 Wherefore hast thou left me now
 Many a day and night?
 Many a weary night and day
 'Tis since thou art fled away.

How shall ever one like me
 Win thee back again?
 With the joyous and the free
 Thou wilt scoff at pain.
 Spirit false! thou hast forgot
 All but those who need thee not.

As a lizard with the shade
 Of a trembling leaf,
 Thou with sorrow art dismay'd;
 Even the sighs of grief
 Reproach thee, that thou art not
 And reproach thou wilt not bear.

Let me set my mournful ditty
 To a merry measure; —
 Thou wilt never come for pity, Thou wilt come for pleasure; —
 Pity then will cut away
 Those cruel wings, and thou wilt st

I love all that thou lovest,
 Spirit of Delight!
 The fresh Earth in new leaves dre
 And the starry night;
 Autumn evening, and the morn
 When the golden mists are born.

I love snow and all the forms
 Of the radiant frost;
 I love waves, and winds, and storm Everything almost Which is Nature's, and may be Untainted by man's misery.

I love tranquil solitude,
 And such society
 As is quiet, wise, and good;

Between thee and me
What difference? but thou dost possess
The things I seek, not love them less.

I love Love — though he has wings,
And like light can flee,
But above all other things,
Spirit, I love thee —
Thou art love and life! O come!
Make once more my heart thy home!

STANZAS WRITTEN IN DEJECTION NEAR NAPLES.

THE sun is warm, the sky is clear,
The waves are dancing fast and
bright,
Blue isles and snowy mountains wear
The purple noon's transparent light:
The breath of the moist air is light
Around its unexpanded buds;
Like many a voice of one delight —
The winds', the birds', the ocean-floods' —

The City's voice itself is soft like Soli-tude's.

I see the Deep's untrampled floor
With green and purple sea-weeds strown;

I see the waves upon the shore
Like light dissolved in star-showers
thrown:

I sit upon the sands alone;
The lightning of the noon-tide ocean
Is flashing round me, and a tone Arises from its measured motion —

How sweet! did any heart now share in my emotion.

Alas! I have nor hope nor health,
Nor peace within nor calm around,
Nor that Content surpassing wealth
The sage in meditation found,
And walk'd with inward glory
crown'd —

Nor fame, nor power, nor love, nor leisure;

Others I see whom these surround —

Smiling they live, and call life pleasure;
To me that cup has been dealt in another measure.

Yet now despair itself is mild Even as the winds and waters are;
I could lie down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care Which I have borne, and yet must
bear,
Till death like sleep might steal on
me,
And I might feel in the warm air My cheek grow cold, and hear the
sea
Breathe o'er my dying brain its last monotony.

THE FLIGHT OF LOVE.

WHEN the lamp is shatter'd
The light in the dust lies dead —
When the cloud is scatter'd,
The rainbow's glory is shed.
When the lute is broken,
Sweet tones are remember'd not;
When the lips have spoken,
Loved accents are soon forgot.

As music and splendor
Survive not the lamp and the lute,
The heart's echoes render
No song when the spirit is mute —
No song but sad dirges,
Like the wind through a ruin'd cell,
(Or the mournful surges
That ring the dead seaman's knell.

When hearts have once mingled,
Love first leaves the well-built nest;
The weak one is singled
To endure what it once possessed.
O Love! who bewailest
The frailty of all things here,
Why choose you the frailest For your cradle, your home, and your bier?

Its passions will rock thee
As the storms rock the ravens on high;

Bright reason will mock thee
 Like the sun from a wintry sky.
 From thy nest every rafter
 Will rot, and thine eagle home
 Leave thee naked to laughter,
 When leaves fall and cold winds come.

THE INVITATION.

[To Jane.]

BEST and Brightest, come away,
 Fairer far than this fair day,
 Which, like thee, to those in sorrow
 Comes to bid a sweet good-morrow
 To the rough year just awake
 In its cradle on the brake.
 The brightest hour of unborn Spring
 Through the winter wandering,
 Found, it seems, the halcyon morn
 To hoar February born;
 Bending from Heaven, in azure mirth,
 It kiss'd the forehead of the earth,
 And smiled upon the silent sea,
 And bade the frozen streams be free,
 And waked to music all their fountains,
 And breathed upon the frozen mountains,
 And like a prophetess of May Strew'd flowers upon the barren way,
 Making the wintry world appear
 Like one on whom thou smilest, Dear.

Away, away, from men and towns,
 To the wild wood and the downs—
 To the silent wilderness
 Where the soul need not repress
 Its music, lest it should not find
 An echo in another's mind,
 While the touch of Nature's art,
 Harmonizes heart to heart.

Radiant Sister of the Day
 Awake! arise! and come away!
 To the wild woods and the plains,
 To the pools where winter rains
 Image all their roof of leaves,
 Where the pine its garland weaves
 Of sapless green, and ivy dun,
 Round stems that never kiss the sun,
 Where the lawns and pastures be
 And the sandhills of the sea,

Where the melting hoar-frost we
 The daisy-star that never sets,
 And wind-flowers and violets
 Which yet join not scent to hue
 Crown the pale year weak and m
 When the night is left behind
 In the deep east, dim and blind,
 And the blue noon is over us,
 And the multitudinous Billows murmur at our feet,
 Where the earth and ocean meet
 And all things seem only one In the universal Sun.

LINES TO AN INDIAN A

I ARISE from dreams of Thee
 In the first sweet sleep of nig
 When the winds are breathi
 And the stars are shining bri
 I arise from dreams of thee,
 And a spirit in my feet
 Has led me — who knows h
 To thy chamber-window, Sw
 The wandering airs they fain
 On the dark, the silent stre
 The champak odors fail
 Like sweet thoughts in a dre
 The nightingale's complaint
 It dies upon her heart,
 As I must die on thine
 O belovéd as thou art!

O lift me from the grass!
 I die, I faint, I fail!
 Let thy love in kisses rain
 On my lips and eyelids pale.
 My cheek is cold and white,
 My heart beats loud and fast
 O! press it close to thine ag
 Where it will break at last.

ODE TO THE WEST W

I.

O WILD West Wind, thou br Autumn's being,
 Thou, from whose unseen preser leaves dead
 Are driven, like ghosts from chanter fleeing,

low, and black, and pale, and hectic
red,
silence-stricken multitudes: O thou, no chariotest to their dark wintry bed e winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
ch like a corpse within its grave, until ne azure sister of the spring shall blow

r clarion o'er the dreaming earth, and fill riving sweet birds like flocks to feed in air)
ch living hues and odors plain and
hill:

ld Spirit, which art moving everywhere;
stroyer and preserver; hear, oh hear!

II.

ou on whose stream, 'mid the steep sky's commotion, se clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed, ok from the tangled boughs of Heaven and Ocean,

gels of rain and lightning: there are spread
the blue surface of thine airy surge, e the bright hair uplifted from the
head

some fierce Maenad, even from the dim verge
the horizon to the zenith's height, e locks of the approaching storm.
Thou dirge

the dying year, to which this closing
night
ll be the dome of a vast sepulchre, alted with all thy congregated might vapors, from whose solid atmosphere ck rain, and fire, and hail, will burst:
Oh hear!

III.

Thou who didst waken from his summer dreams
The blue Mediterranean, where he lay Lulled by the coil of his crystalline
streams,

Beside a pumice isle in Baiae's bay,
And saw in sleep old palaces and towers
Quivering within the wave's intenser
day,

All overgrown with azure moss and
flowers
So sweet, the sense faints picturing them! Thou
For whose path the Atlantic's level
powers

Cleave themselves into chasms, while far below
The sea-blooms and the oozy woods which wear
The sapless foliage of the ocean, know Thy voice, and suddenly grow gray
with fear,
And tremble and despoil themselves:
Oh hear!

IV.

If I were a dead leaf thou mightest
bear;
If I were a swift cloud to fly with thee,
A wave to pant beneath thy power, and
share

The impulse of thy strength, only less
free
Than thou, O uncontrollable! If even
I were as in my boyhood, and could be The comrade of thy wanderings over
heaven,
As then, when to outstrip the skiey
speed
Scarce seemed a vision, I would ne'er have striven

As thus with thee in prayer in my sore need.

Oh! lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud!
I fall upon the thorns of life! I bleed!

A heavy weight of hours has chained and bowed
One too like thee: tameless, and swift, and proud.

V.

Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is:
What if my leaves are falling like its
own!

The tumult of thy mighty harmonies

Will take from both a deep autumnal
tone,

Sweet though in sadness. Be thou, spirit fierce,
My spirit! Be thou me, impetuous one!

Drive my dead thoughts over the universe

Like withered leaves to quicken a new birth;

And, by the incantation of this verse,

Scatter, as from an unextinguished
hearth

Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind!

Be through my lips to unawakened
earth

The trumpet of a prophecy! O wind, If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

TO THE SENSITIVE PLANT.

A SENSITIVE PLANT in a garden grew,
And the young winds fed it with silver
dew,

And it opened its fan-like leaves to the
light,

And closed them beneath the kisses of
night.

And the spring arose on the garden
fair,

And the Spirit of Love fell everywhere;
And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast

Rose from the dreams of its wintry rest.

But none ever trembled and panted with bliss

In the garden, the field, or the wilderness,

Like a doe in the noontide with love's sweet want,

As the companionless Sensitive Plant.

The snowdrop, and then the violet, Arose from the ground with warm rain
wet,

And their breath was mixed with fresh odor, sent

From the turf, like the voice and the instrument.

Then the pied wind-flowers and the tulip tall,

And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,

Till they die of their own dear loveliness.

And the naiad-like lily of the vale,
Whom youth makes so fair and passion so pale,

That the light of its tremulous bells is seen

Through their pavilions of tender green;

And the hyacinth purple, and white,
and blue,

Which flung from its bells a sweet peal
anew

Of music so delicate, soft and intense,
It was felt like an odor within the sense;

And the rose like a nymph to the bath address,

Which unveiled the depth of her glowing breast,

Till, fold after fold, to the fainting air
The soul of her beauty and love lay bare;

And the wand-like lily, which lifted up,
As a Maenad, its moonlight-colored
cup,

Till the fiery star, which is its eye, Gazed through the clear dew on the tender sky;

And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tuberose,
The sweetest flower for scent that blows;
And all rare blossoms from every clime
Grow in that garden in perfect prime.

And on the stream whose inconstant
bosom
Is pranked, under boughs of embow-ering blossom,
The golden and green light, slanting through
The air heaven of many a tangled hue,

And water-lilies lay tremulously,
And starry river-buds glimmered by,
And around them the soft stream did glide and dance
With a motion of sweet sound and ra-diance.

And the sinuous paths of lawn and of moss,
Which led through the garden along and across,
Were open at once to the sun and the
breeze,
Were lost among bowers of blossoming
trees,

Where all paved with daisies and delicate bells,
As fair as the fabulous asphodels,
And flowerets which drooping as day drooped too,
Were into pavilions, white, purple, and
blue,
To shield the glow-worm from the evening
dew.

And from this undefiled Paradise
The flowers (as an infant's awakening
eyes
Lie on its mother, whose singing
sweet
First lull, and at last must awaken
it),

When heaven's blithe winds had unfolded them,
The nine-lamps enkindle a hidden gem,

Shone smiling to heaven, and every one Shared joy in the light of the gentle
sun;

For each one was interpenetrated
With the light and the odor its neighbor shed,
Like young lovers whom youth and love make dear, Wrapped and filled by their mutual atmosphere.

But the Sensitive Plant, which could give small fruit
Of the love which it felt from the leaf to the root,
Received more than all, it loved more than ever,
Where none wanted but it, could belong to the giver —

For the Sensitive Plant has no bright
flower;
Radiance and odor are not its dower;
It loves, even like Love, its deep heart is full,
It desires what it has not, the beautiful !

The light winds, which from unsustain-
ing wings
Shed the music of many murmurings;
The beams which dart from many a star
Of the flowers whose hues they bear
afar;

The plumed insects, swift and free,
Like golden boats on a sunny sea,
Laden with light and odor, which pass
Over the gleam of the living grass;

The unseen clouds of the dew, which
lie
Like fire in the flowers till the sun rides
high,
Then wander like spirits among the spheres,
Each cloud faint with the fragrance it
bears;

The quivering vapors of dim noontide,
Which, like a sea, o'er the warm earth
glide,

In which every sound, and odor, and
beam,
Move, as reeds in a single stream;

Each and all like ministering angels were
For the Sensitive Plant sweet joy to
bear,
Whilst the lagging hours of the day went by Like windless clouds o'er a tender sky.

And when evening descended from heaven above,
And the earth was all rest, and the air was all love,
And delight, though less bright, was far more deep,
And the day's veil fell from the world of sleep,

And the beasts, and the birds, and the insects were drowned
In an ocean of dreams without a sound; Whose waves never mark, though they ever impress
The light sand which paves it, consciousness;

(Only overhead the sweet nightingale Ever sang more sweet as the day might fail,
And snatches of its elysian chant
Were mixed with the dreams of the Sensitive Plant.)

The Sensitive Plant was the earliest
Up-gathered into the bosom of rest;
A sweet child weary of its delight,
The feeblest, and yet the favorite,
Cradled within the embrace of night.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY.

THE fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean,
The winds of heaven mix for ever
With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things by a law divine

In one another's being mingle —
Why not I with thine?

See the mountains kiss high heaven,
And the waves clasp one another;
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdained its brother:
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea; —
What are all these kissings worth,
If thou kiss not me.

ADONAI'S.

A LAMENT FOR JOHN KEATS.

I WEEP for Adonais — he is dead!
Oh, weep for Adonais! though our
tears
Thaw not the frost which binds so dear a head!
And thou, sad Hour, selected from all years
To mourn our loss, rouse thy obscure compeers,
And teach them thine own sorrow;
say: with me
Died Adonais; till the Future dares Forget the Past, his fate and fame
shall be
An echo and a light unto eternity!

Where wert thou, mighty Mother when he lay,
When thy son lay, pierced by the shaft which flies
In darkness? where was lorn Urania
When Adonais died? With veiled
eyes,
'Mid listening Echoes, in her Paradise
She sate, while one, with soft enamored breath,
Rekindled all the fading melodies,
With which, like flowers that mock the corse beneath,
He had adorned and hid the coming bulk of death.

Oh, weep for Adonais — he is dead!
Wake, melancholy Mother, wake and
weep!

Yet wherefore? Quench within their burning bed
Thy fiery tears, and let thy loud heart
keep,
Like his, a mute and uncomplaining
sleep;
For he is gone, where all things wise
and fair
Descend: — oh, dream not that the amorous Deep
Will yet restore him to the vital air; Earth feeds on his mute voice, and laughs at our despair.

Most musical of mourners, weep
again!
Lament anew, Urania! — He died,
Who was the sire of an immortal
strain,
Blind, old, and lonely, when his country's pride
The priest, the slave, and the liber-ticide,
Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite
Of lust and blood; he went, unterrified,
Into the gulf of death; but his clear
Sprite
Yet reigns o'er earth; the third among the sons of light.

Most musical of mourners, weep
anew!
Not all to that bright station dared to climb:
And happier they their happiness who knew,
Whose tapers yet burn through that night of time
In which suns perished; others more
sublime,
Struck by the envious wrath of man or God,
Have sunk, extinct in their refulgent
prime:
And some yet live, treading the thorny road
Which leads, through toil and hate, to Fame's serene abode.
But now thy youngest, dearest one,
has perished,

The nursling of thy widowhood, who
grew,
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,
And fed with true love tears instead of dew;
Most musical of mourners, weep
anew!
Thy extreme hope, the loveliest and
the last,
The bloom, whose petals nipt before they blew,
Died on the promise of the fruit, is waste;
The broken lily lies — the storm is over-
past.

A LAMENT.

O WORLD! O life! O time!
On whose last steps I climb, Trembling at that where I had stood
before;
When will return the glory of your prime?
No more — oh, never more!

Out of the day and night
A joy has taken flight:
Fresh spring, and summer, and winter hoar, Move my faint heart with grief, but with delight
No more — oh, never more!

ANARCHY SLAIN BY TRUE LIBERTY.

[The Masque of Anarchy.]

LAST came Anarchy; he rode
On a white horse splashed with blood;
He was pale even to the lips,
Like death in the Apocalypse.

And he wore a kingly crown;
In his hand a sceptre shone;
On his brow this mark I saw —
“I am God, and King, and Law!”

With a pace stately and fast,
Over English land he past,
Trampling to a mire of blood
The adoring multitude.

And a mighty troop around,
With their trampling shook the ground,
Waving each a bloody sword,
For the service of their Lord.

And with glorious triumph, they Rode through England, proud and gay, Drunk as with intoxication
Of the wine of desolation.

O'er fields and towns, from sea to sea,
Passed the pageant swift and free,
Tearing up and trampling down,
Till they came to London town.

And each dweller, panic-stricken,
Felt his heart with terror sicken,
Hearing the tremendous cry
Of the triumph of Anarchy.

For with pomp to meet him came,
Clothed in arms like blood and flame,
The hired murderers who did sing,
"Thou art God, and Law, and King.

"We have waited, weak and lone,
For thy coming, Mighty One!
Our purses are empty, our swords are
cold,
Give us glory, and blood, and gold."

Lawyers and priests, a motley crowd,
To the earth their pale brows bowed,
Like a bad prayer not over loud, Whispering — "Thou art Law and
God."

Then all cried with one accord,
"Thou art King, and Law, and Lord;
Anarchy to thee we bow,
Be thy name made holy now!"

And Anarchy, the skeleton, Bowed and grinned to every one,
As well as if his education
Had cost ten millions to the nation.

For he knew the palaces
Of our kings were nightly his;
His the sceptre, crown, and globe,
And the gold-inwoven robe.

So he sent his slaves before
To seize upon the Bank and Tower,
And was proceeding with intent
To meet his pensioned parliament,

When one fled past, a maniac maid,
And her name was Hope, she said:
But she looked more like Despair;
And she cried out in the air:

"My father, Time, is weak and gray
With waiting for a better day;
See how idiot-like he stands,
Trembling with his palsied hands!

"He has had child after child,
And the dust of death is piled Over every one but me — Misery! oh, misery!"

Then she lay down in the street,
Right before the horses' feet,
Expecting, with a patient eye,
Murder, Fraud, and Anarchy.

When between her and her foes
A mist, a light, an image rose,
Small at first, and weak and frail
Like the vapor of the vale:

Till as clouds grow on the blast,
Like tower-crowned giants striding fast,
And glare with lightnings as they fly,
And speak in thunder to the sky,

It grew — a shape arrayed in mail
Brighter than the viper's scale,
And upborne on wings whose grain
Was like the light of sunny rain.

On its helm, seen far away,
A planet, like the morning's, lay:
And those plumes it light rained through
Like a shower of crimson dew.

With step as soft as wind it passed O'er the heads of men — so fast

ey knew the presence there, ked — and all was empty air.

on the towers of my skiey bow-rs,
 ning my pilot sits,
 ern under is fettered the thun-ler,

It struggles and howls at fits;
 Over earth and ocean, with gentle motion,

This pilot is guiding me,
 Lured by the love of the genii that
 move

In the depths of the purple sea; Over the rills, and the crags, and the hills,

Over the lakes and the plains, Wherever he dream, under mountain or
 stream,

The Spirit he loves remains;
 And I all the while bask in heaven's blue smile,

Whilst he is dissolving in rains.

The sanguine sunrise, with his meteor
 eyes,

And his burning plumes outspread,
 Leaps on the back of my sailing rack,
 When the morning star shines dead.

As on the jag of a mountain crag,
 Which an earthquake rocks and swings,

An eagle alit one moment may sit
 In the light of its golden wings.
 And when sunset may breathe, from the lit sea beneath,

Its ardors of rest and of love,
 And the crimson pall of eve may fall
 From the depth of heaven above,
 With wings folded I rest, on mine airy
 nest,

As still as a brooding dove.

That orb'd maiden with white fire laden,

Whom mortals call the moon, Glides glimmering o'er my fleece-like
 floor,

By the midnight breezes strewn;
 And wherever the beat of her unseen
 feet,

Which only the angels hear,
 May have broken the woof of my tent's thin roof,

The stars peep behind her and peer;
 And I laugh to see them whirl and flee,
 Like a swarm of golden bees,
 When I widen the rent in my wind-built tent,

Till the calm rivers, lakes, and seas,
Like strips of the sky fallen through me
on high,
Are each paved with the moon and
these.

I bind the sun's throne with a burning zone,
And the moon's with a girdle of pearl;
The volcanoes are dim, and the stars reel and swim,
When the whirlwinds my banner un-furl.

From cape to cape, with a bridge-like
shape,

Over a torrent sea,
Sunbeam-proof, I hang like a roof,
The mountains its columns be.
The triumphal arch through which I
march

With hurricane, fire, and snow,
When the powers of the air are chained to my chair,

Is the million-colored bow;
The sphere-fire above its soft colors wove,
While the moist earth was laughing
below.

I am the daughter of earth and water,
And the nursling of the sky;
I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores;

I change, but I cannot die.
For after the rain when with never a stain

The pavilion of heaven is bare,
And the winds and sunbeams with their convex gleams,

Build up the blue dome of air,
I silently laugh at my own cenotaph,
And out of the caverns of rain,
Like a child from the womb, like a ghost from the tomb,
I arise and unbuild it again.

TO A SKYLARK.

HAIL to thee, blithe spirit!
Bird thou never wert,
That from heaven, or near it,

Pourest thy full heart
In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.

Higher still and higher,
From the earth thou springest,
Like a cloud of fire;
The blue deep thou wingest,
And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

In the golden lightning
Of the sunken sun,
O'er which clouds are brightening
Thou dost float and run;
Like an unbodied joy whose race is begun.

The pale purple even Melts around thy flight;
Like a star of heaven
In the broad day-light
Thou art unseen, but yet I hear shrill delight.

Keen as are the arrows
Of that silver sphere,
Whose intense lamp narrows
In the white dawn clear, Until we hardly see, we feel that
there.

All the earth and air
With thy voice is loud,
As, when night is bare,
From one lonely cloud
The moon rains out her beams, heaven is overflowed.

What thou art we know not;
What is most like thee?
From rainbow clouds there flow Drops so bright to see,
As from thy presence showers a melody.

Like a poet hidden,
In the light of thought,
Singing hymns unbidden,
Till the world is wrought
To sympathy with hopes and fears heeded not:

Like a high-born maiden
In a palace tower,
Soothing her love-laden
Soul in secret hour
With music sweet as love, which overflows her bower :

Like a glow-worm golden
In a dell of dew,
Scattering unbeholden
Its ærial hue
Among the flowers and grass which screen it from the view :

Like a rose embowered
In its own green leaves,
By warm winds deflowered,
Till the scent it gives Makes faint with too much sweet these heavy-winged thieves :

Sound of vernal showers
On the twinkling grass,
Rain-awakened flowers,
All that ever was Joyous, and clear, and fresh, thy music doth surpass :

Teach us, sprite or bird,
What sweet thoughts are thine;
I have never heard
Praise of love or wine
That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.

Chorus hymeneal,
Or triumphal chant,
Matched with thine would be all
But an empty vaunt, —
A thing wherein we feel there is some hidden want.

What objects are the fountains
Of thy happy strain?
What fields, or waves, or mountains?
What shapes of sky or plain?
What love of thine own kind? What ignorance of pain?

With thy clear keen joyance Languor cannot be :
Shadow of annoyance

Never came near thee;
Thou lovest; but ne'er knew love's sad satiety.

Waking or asleep,
Thou of death must deem Things more true and deep
Than we mortals dream,
Or how could thy notes flow in such a crystal stream?

We look before and after,
And pine for what is not :
Our sincerest laughter
With some pain is fraught :
Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.

Yet if we could scorn
Hate, and pride, and fear;
If we were things born
Not to shed a tear,
I know not how thy joy we ever could come near.

Better than all measures
Of delight and sound,
Better than all treasures
That in books are found, Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground.

Teach me half the gladness
That thy brain must know,
Such harmonious madness
From my lips would flow,
The world should listen then, as I am listening now.

A LAMENT.

SWIFTER far than summer's flight,
Swifter far than youth's delight,
Swifter far than happy night,
Art thou come and gone;
As the earth when leaves are dead,
As the night when sleep is sped,
As the heart when joy is fled,
I am left lone, alone.

The swallow, summer, comes again;
 The owlet, night, resumes her reign;
 But the wild swan, youth, is fain
 To fly with thee, false as thou.
 My heart each day desires the morrow,
 Sleep itself is turned to sorrow;
 Vainly would my winter borrow Sunny leaves from any bough.

Lilies for a bridal bed,
 Roses for a matron's head, Violets for a maiden dead —
 Pansies let my flowers be;
 On the living grave I bear,
 Scatter them without a tear,
 Let no friend, however dear,
 Waste one hope, one fear for me.

FROM "PROMETHEUS UN-BOUND."

ACT II., SCENE II.

Semi-chorus I. of Spirits (as Asia and Panthea pass into the forest).

THE path through which that lovely twain
 Have passed, by cedar, pine, and yew,
 And each dark tree that ever grew,
 Is curtained out from heaven's wide
 blue.
 Nor sun nor moon nor wind nor rain
 Can pierce its interwoven bowers; Nor aught save where some cloud of
 dew,
 Drifted along the earth-creeping
 breeze
 Between the trunks of the hoar
 trees,
 Hangs each a pearl in the pale flowers
 Of the green laurel blown anew,
 And bends, and then fades silently,
 One frail and fair anemone.
 Or, when some star, of many a one That climbs and wanders through steep night,
 Has found the cleft through which
 alone

Beams fall from high those depths upon, —
 Ere it is borne away, away,
 By the swift heavens that cannot stay, —
 It scatters drops of golden light,
 Like lines of rain that ne'er unite:
 And the gloom divine is all around,
 And underneath is the mossy ground.

Semi-chorus II.

There the voluptuous nightingales Are awake through all the broad noonday.
 When one with bliss or sadness fails,
 And through the windless ivy-boughs, Sick with sweet love, droops dying
 away
 On its mate's music-panting bosom;
 Another, from the swinging blossom Watching to catch the languid close
 Of the last strain, then lifts on high
 The wings of the weak melody, —
 Till some new strain of feeling bear
 The song, and all the woods are
 mute;
 When there is heard through the dim
 air
 The rush of wings, and, rising there
 Like many a lake-surrounded flute,
 Sounds overflow the listener's brain
 So sweet that joy is almost pain.

[From the same.]

VOICE in the air, singing.

ACT II., SCENE V.

LIFE of Life! thy lips enkindle
 With their love the breath between
 them;
 And thy smiles, before they dwindle,
 Make the cold air fire, — then screen
 them
 In those looks where whoso gazes
 Faints, entangled in their mazes.
 Child of Light! thy limbs are burning Through the vest which seems to hide
 them,
 As the radiant lines of morning

Through the clouds, ere they divide
 them;
 and this atmosphere divinest hrouds thee wheresoe'er thou shinest.

air are others; none beholds thee (But thy voice sounds low and tender, like the fairest), for it folds thee
 From the sight — that liquid splendor;
 and all feel, yet see thee never,
 as I feel now, lost for ever!

amp of Earth! where'er thou movest,
 Its dim shapes are clad with bright-
 ness,
 and the souls of whom thou lovest Walk upon the winds with lightness, till they fail, as I am failing, dizzy, lost, yet unbewailing!

HYMN OF PAN.

FROM the forests and highlands
 We come, we come;
 From the river-girt islands,
 Where loud waves are dumb
 Listening to my sweet pipings.
 The wind in the reeds and the rushes,

The bees on the bells of thyme,
 The birds on the myrtle-bushes,
 The cicale above in the lime,
 And the lizards below in the grass,

'ere as silent as ever old Tmolus was,
 Listening to my sweet pipings.

Liquid Peneus was flowing,
 And all dark Tempe lay
 In Pelion's shadow, outgrowing
 The light of the dying day,
 Speeded by my sweet pipings.

The Sileni and Sylvans and Fauns,
 And the Nymphs of the woods and waves.

To the edge of the moist river-lawns,
 And the brink of the dewy
 caves,

And all that did then attend and follow,
 Were silent with love, — as you now, Apollo,
 With envy of my sweet pipings.

I sang of the dancing stars,
 I sang of the dædal earth,
 And of heaven, and the Giant wars,
 And love, and death, and birth.
 And then I changed my pipings, — Singing how down the vale of Mænalus

I pursued a maiden, and clasped
 a reed:
 Gods and men, we are all deluded
 thus;
 It breaks in our bosom, and then we bleed.

All wept — as I think both ye now would,
 If envy or age had not frozen your blood —
 At the sorrow of my sweet pipings.

WAR.

WAR is the statesman's game, the priest's
 delight,
 The lawyer's jest, the hired assassin's
 trade,
 And to those royal murderers whose mean thrones
 Are bought by crimes of treachery and
 gore,
 The bread they eat, the staff on which they lean.
 Guards, garbed in blood-red livery, sur-
 round
 Their palaces, participate the crimes That force defends, and from a nation's rage
 Secure the crown, which all the curses reach
 That famine, frenzy, woe, and penury
 breathe.
 These are the hired bravos who defend
 The tyrant's throne.

ONE WORD IS TOO OFTEN PROFANED.

ONE word is too often profaned
 For me to profane it,
 One feeling too falsely disdain'd
 For thee to disdain it.
 One hope is too like despair
 For prudence to smother,
 And Pity from thee more dear
 Than that from another.

I can give not what men call love;
 But wilt thou accept not
 The worship the heart lifts above
 And the Heavens reject not:
 The desire of the moth for the star,
 Of the night for the morrow,
 The devotion to something afar
 From the sphere of our sorrow?

THE VOICE OF SPRING.

I COME, I come! ye have called me
 long,
 I come o'er the mountains with light and
 song;
 Ye may trace my step o'er the waken-ing earth,
 By the winds which tell of the violet's
 birth,
 By the primrose stars in the shadowy
 grass,
 By the green leaves opening as I pass.
 I have breathed on the South, and the chestnut-flowers
 By thousands have burst from the forest-
 bowers:
 And the ancient graves, and the fallen fanes,
 Are veiled with wreaths on Italian
 plains.
 — But it is not for me, in my hour of
 bloom,
 To speak of the ruin or the tomb!
 I have passed o'er the hills of the stormy North,
 And the larch has hung all his tassels
 forth,
 The fisher is out on the sunny sea,

And the reindeer bounds through the pasture free,
 And the pine has a fringe of softer green,
 And the moss looks bright where my step has been.

I have sent through the wood-paths a gentle sigh,
 And called out each voice of the deep-blue sky,
 From the night-bird's lay through the starry time,
 In the groves of the soft Hesperia
 clime,
 To the swan's wild note by the Iceland lakes,
 When the dark fir-bough into verdure breaks.

From the streams and founts I have loosed the chain;
 They are sweeping on to the silvery
 main,
 They are flashing down from the mountain-brows,
 They are flinging spray on the forestboughs,
 They are bursting fresh from their sparry
 caves,
 And the earth resounds with the joy of waves.

Come forth, O ye children of gladness,
 come!
 Where the violets lie may now be your
 home.
 Ye of the rose-cheek and dew-bright
 eye,
 And the bounding footstep, to meet me
 fly,
 With the lyre, and the wreath, and the joyous lay,
 Come forth to the sunshine, — I may not stay.

Away from the dwellings of care-worn
 men,
 The waters are sparkling in wood and glen;
 Away from the chamber and dusky
 hearth,
 The young leaves are dancing in breezy mirth,
 Their light stems thrill to the wild-wood
 strains,
 And Youth is abroad in my green domains.

THE PILGRIM FATHERS.

THE breaking waves dash'd high
 On a stern and rock-bound coast;
 And the woods, against a stormy sky,
 Their giant branches toss'd;

And the heavy night hung dark,
 The hills and waters o'er,
 When a band of exiles moor'd their bark
 On the wild New England shore.

Not as the conqueror comes,
 They, the true-hearted, came; —
 Not with the roll of the stirring drums,
 And the trumpet that sings of fame; —

Not as the flying come,
 In silence, and in fear; —
 They shook the depths of the desert's
 gloom
 With their hymns of lofty cheer.

Amidst the storm they sang:
 Till the stars heard, and the sea;

And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang
 To the anthem of the free.

The ocean-eagle soar'd
 From his nest, by the white wave's
 foam,
 And the rocking pines of the forest roar'd: —
 Such was their welcome home.

There were men with hoary hair
 Amidst that pilgrim band:
 Why had they come to wither there,
 Away from their childhood's land?

There was woman's fearless eye,
 Lit by her deep love's truth;
 There was manhood's brow serenely
 high,
 And the fiery heart of youth.

What sought they thus afar?
 Bright jewels of the mine?
 The wealth of seas? the spoils of
 war? —
 No — 'twas a faith's pure shrine.

Yes, call that holy ground, —
 Which first their brave feet trod!
 They have left unstain'd what there they found —
 Freedom to worship God!

THE HOMES OF ENGLAND.

THE stately homes of England,
 How beautiful they stand,
 Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
 O'er all the pleasant land!
 The deer across their greensward bound
 Through shade and sunny gleam,
 And the swan glides past them with the
 sound
 Of some rejoicing stream.

The merry homes of England —
 Around their hearths by night, What gladsome looks of household
 love
 Meet in the ruddy light!

There woman's voice flows forth in
 song,
 Or childhood's tale is told;
 Or lips move tunefully along
 Some glorious page of old.

The blessed homes of England,
 How softly on their bowers,
 Is laid the holy quietness
 That breathes from Sabbath hours!
 Solemn, yet sweet, the church bells'
 chime

Floats through their woods at morn,
 All other sounds in that still time
 Of breeze and leaf are born.

The cottage homes of England
 By thousands on her plains,
 They are smiling o'er the silvery brooks,
 And round the hamlet fanes.
 Through glowing orchards forth they peep,

Each from its nook of leaves,
 And fearless there the lowly sleep,
 As the bird beneath their eaves.

The free fair homes of England,
 Long, long, in hut and hall,
 May hearts of native proof be reared
 To guard each hallowed wall.
 And green for ever be the groves,
 And bright the flowery sod,
 Where first the child's glad spirit loves
 Its country and its God.

THE VOICES OF HOME.

[The Forest Sanctuary.]

THE voices of my home! — I hear them still!

They have been with me through the dreamy night —

The blessed household voices, wont to fill

My heart's clear depths with unal-loy'd delight!

I hear them still, unchanged: — though some from earth

Are music parted, and the tones of mirth —

Wild, silvery tones, that rang through days more bright!

Have died in others, — yet to me they
 come,
 Singing of boyhood back — the voices of my home!

They call me through this hush of woods reposing,

In the gray stillness of the summer
 morn;

They wander by when heavy flowers are closing,

And thoughts grow deep, and winds and stars are born;

Even as a fount's remember'd gushings burst

On the parch'd traveller in his hour of thirst,

E'en thus they haunt me with sweet sounds, till worn —

By quenchless longings, to my soul I
 say —

O for the dove's swift wings, that I might flee away, —

And find mine ark! — yet whither?
 — I must bear

A yearning heart within me to the grave.

I am of those o'er whom a breath of
 air —

Just darkening in its course the lake's bright wave,

And sighing through the feathery canes — hath power

To call up shadows, in the silent
 hour,

From the dim past, as from a wizard's
 cave! —

So must it be! — these skies above me spread,

Are they my own soft skies? — ye rest not here, my dead!

EVENING RECOLLECTIONS OF THE EXILE.

[The Forest Sanctuary.]

I SEE a star — eve's firstborn! — in whose train

Past scenes, woods, looks, come back
 The arrowy spire

Of the lone cypress, as of wood-girt fane,
Rests dark and still amidst a heaven
of fire;
The pine gives forth its odors, and the lake
Gleams like one ruby, and the soft winds wake,
Till every string of nature's solemn lyre
Is touch'd to answer; its most secret
tone
Drawn from each tree, for each hath whispers all its own.

And hark! another murmur on the
air,
Not of the hidden rills, nor quivering
shades!
—That is the cataract's, which the breezes bear,
Filling the leafy twilight of the glades
With hollow surge-like sounds, as from the bed
Of the blue mournful seas, that keep
the dead:
But they are far! — the low sun here pervades
Dim forest-arches, bathing with red
gold
Their stems, till each is made a marvel to behold.

Gorgeous, yet full of gloom! — In such an hour,
The vesper-melody of dying bells Wanders through Spain, from each gray convent's tower O'er shining rivers pour'd, and olive-dells,
By every peasant heard, and muleteer,
And hamlet, round my home: — and I am here,
Living again through all my life's farewells,
In these vast woods, where farewell ne'er was spoken,
And sole I lift to Heaven a sad heart — yet unbroken!

In such an hour are told the hermit's beads;
With the white sail the seaman's hymn floats by:
Peace be with all! whate'er their varying creeds,
With all that send up holy thoughts
on high!
Come to me, boy! — by Guadalquivir's vines,
By every stream of Spain, as day declines,
Man's prayers are mingled in the rosy
sky.
— We, too, will pray; nor yet unheard, my child!
Of Him whose voice we hear at eve amidst the wild.

At eve? — oh! — through all hours!
— from dark dreams oft Awakening, I look forth, and learn the might
Of solitude, while thou art breathing soft,
And low, my loved one! on the breast of night:
I look forth on the stars — the shadowy
sleep
Of forests — and the lake, whose gloomy deep
Sends up red sparkles to the fire-flies'
light.
A lonely world! — ev'n fearful to man's thought,
But for His presence felt, whom here my soul hath sought.

THE SONGS OF OUR FATHERS.

Sing them upon the sunny hills,
When days are long and bright,
And the blue gleam of shining rills
Is loveliest to the sight.
Sing them along the misty moor,
Where ancient hunters roved,
And swell them through the torrent's
roar —
The songs our fathers loved!

The songs their souls rejoiced to hear
 When harps were in the hall,
 And each proud note made lance and spear
 Thrill on the banner'd wall:
 The songs that through our valleys
 green,
 Sent on from age to age,
 Like his own river's voice, have been
 The peasant's heritage.

The reaper sings them when the vale
 Is fill'd with plummy sheaves;
 The woodman, by the starlight pale Cheer'd homeward through the
 leaves:
 And unto them the glancing oars
 A joyous measure keep,
 Where the dark rocks that crest our shores
 Dash back the foaming deep.

So let it be! — a light they shed
 O'er each old fount and grove;
 A memory of the gentle dead,
 A spell of lingering love:
 Murmuring the names of mighty men,
 They bid our streams roll on,
 And link high thoughts to every glen
 Where valiant deeds were done.

Teach them your children round the hearth,
 When evening fires burn clear,
 And in the fields of harvest mirth,
 And on the hills of deer!
 So shall each unforgotten word,
 When far those loved ones roam,
 Call back the hearts that once it stirr'd,
 To childhood's holy home.

The green woods of their native land Shall whisper in the strain,
 The voices of their household band
 Shall sweetly speak again:
 The heathery heights in vision rise
 Where like the stag they roved —
 Sing to your sons those melodies,
 The songs your fathers loved.

ELYSIUM.

FAIR wert thou, in the dreams
 Of elder time, thou land of glories
 flowers,
 And summer-winds, and low-toned silvery streams,
 Dim with the shadows of thy laurel-
 bowers!
 Where as they pass'd, bright hours Left no faint sense of parting, such as clings
 To earthly love, and joy in loveliest things!

Fair wert thou, with the light
 On thy blue hills and sleepy waters
 cast,
 From purple skies ne'er deepening into
 night,
 Yet soft, as if each moment were their
 last
 Of glory, fading fast
 Along the mountains! — but thy golden
 day
 Was not as those that warn us of decay.

And ever, through thy shades,
 A swell of deep Eolian sound went by,
 From fountain-voices in their secret
 glades,
 And low reed-whispers, making sweet reply
 To summer's breezy sigh!
 And young leaves trembling to the wind's light breath,
 Which ne'er had touch'd them with a hue of death!

And the transparent sky Rung as a dome, all thrilling to the strain
 Of harps that, 'midst the woods, made harmony Solemn and sweet; yet troubling not the brain
 With dreams and yearnings vain,
 And dim remembrances, that still draw
 birth
 From the bewildering music of the earth.

And who, with silent tread, loved o'er the plains of waving Asphodel?
 Who, call'd and sever'd from the countless dead, midst the shadowy Amaranth-bowers
 might dwell,
 And listen to the swell of those majestic hymn-notes, and inhale the spirit wandering in th' immortal
 gale?

They of the sword, whose praise, with the bright wine at nation's feasts,
 went round!
 They of the lyre, whose unforgotten lays on the morn's wing had sent their mighty sound,
 And in all regions found their echoes 'midst the mountains! — and become a man's deep heart, as voices of his
 home!

They of the daring thought!
 daring and powerful, yet to dust allied;
 whose flight through stars, and seas, and depths had sought the soul's far birth-place — but without a guide!

Sages and seers, who died, and left the world their high mysterious dreams,
 born, 'midst the olive-woods by Grecian streams.

But they, of whose abode midst her green valleys earth retain'd no trace,
 have a flower springing from their burial-sod, a shade of sadness on some kindred
 face,

A void and silent place a some sweet home; thou hadst no wreaths for these,
 thou sunny land! with all thy deathless trees!

The peasant, at his door might sink to die, when vintage-feasts were spread,

And songs on every wind! From thy bright shore
 No lovelier vision floated round his
 head,
 Thou wert for nobler dead!
 He heard the bounding steps which round him fell,
 And sigh'd to bid the festal sun farewell!

The slave, whose very tears Were a forbidden luxury, and whose
 breast
 Shut up the woes and burning thoughts of years,
 As in the ashes of an urn compress'd;
 — He might not be thy guest!
 No gentle breathings from thy distant
 sky
 Came o'er his path, and whisper'd
 "Liberty!"

Calm, on its leaf strewn bier,
 Unlike a gift of nature to decay,
 Too rose-like still, too beautiful, too
 dear,
 The child at rest before its mother lay;
 E'en so to pass away,
 With its bright smile! — Elysium! what wert thou,
 To her, who wept o'er that young slumberer's brow?

Thou hadst no home, green land!
 For the fair creature from her bosom
 gone,
 With life's first flowers just opening in her hand,
 And all the lovely thoughts and dreams
 unknown,
 Which in its clear eye shone Like the spring's wakening! — but that light was past — — Where went the dew-drop, swept before the blast?

Not where thy soft winds play'd,
 Not where thy waters lay in glassy
 sleep! —
 Fade, with thy bowers, thou land of visions, fade!
 From thee no voice came o'er the gloomy deep,

And bade man cease to weep!
 Fade, with the amaranth-plain, the myrtle-grove,
 Which could not yield one hope to sorrowing love!

For the most loved are they,
 Of whom Fame speaks not with her clarion-voice
 In regal halls! — the shades o'erhang
 their way,
 The vale, with its deep fountains, is their choice,
 And gentle hearts rejoice Around their steps! — till silently they
 die,
 As a stream shrinks from summer's burning eye

And the world knows not then,
 Not then, nor ever, what pure thoughts are fled!
 Yet these are they, that on the souls of
 men
 Come back, when night her folding veil hath spread,
 The long-remember'd dead!
 But not with thee might aught save glory dwell —
 — Fade, fade away, thou shore of Asphodel!

THE TREASURES OF THE DEEP.

What hidest thou in thy treasure-caves and cells,
 Thou hollow-sounding and mysterious
 Man
 — Pale glistening pearls, and rainbow-colored shells,
 Bright things which gleam unrecked of, and unseen
 — Keep, keep thy riches, melancholy
 Sea!
 We ask not such from thee.

Yet more, the Depths have more! What wealth untold Far down, and shining through their stillness lies!

Thou hast the starry gems, the burning
 gold,
 Won from ten thousand royal Argosies.
 — Sweep o'er thy spoils, thou wild and wrathful Main!
 Earth claims not these again!

Yet more, the Depths have more! Thy waves have rolled Above the cities of a world gone by!
 Sand hath filled up the palaces of old,
 Sea-weed o'ergrown the halls of revelry!
 — Dash o'er them, Ocean! in thy scornful play —
 Man yields them to decay!

Yet more! the Billows and the Depths have more!
 High hearts, and brave are gathered to thy breast!
 They hear not now the booming waters
 roar,
 The battle-thunders will not break their
 rest —
 — Keep thy red gold and gems, thou stormy grave —
 Give back the true and brave!

Give back the lost and lovely! those for whom
 The place was kept at board and hearth so long,
 The prayer went up through midnight's breathless gloom,
 And the vain yearning woke 'midst ter-tal song!
 Hold fast thy buried isles, thy towers o'erthrown, —
 But all is not thine own!

To thee the love of woman hath gone
 down,
 Dark flow thy tides o'er manhood's noble head,
 O'er youth's bright locks and beauty's flowery crown;
 — Yet must thou hear a voice — Restore the Dead!
 Earth shall reclaim her precious things from thee —
 Restore the Dead, thou Sea!

COME HOME.

COME home.

Would I could send my spirit o'er the
deep,
Would I could wing it like a bird to
thee,
To commune with thy thoughts, to fill thy sleep
With these unwearying words of melody,
Brother, come home.

Come home.

Come to the hearts that love thee, to the eyes
That beam in brightness but to gladden thine;
Come where fond thoughts like holiest incense rise,
Where cherish'd Memory rears her altar's shrine.
Brother, come home.

Come home.

Come to the hearth-stone of thy earlier
days,
Come to the ark, like the o'erwearied dove,
Come with the sunlight of thy heart's warm rays,
Come to the fire-side circle of thy
love.
Brother, come home.

Come home.

It is not home without thee; the lone seat
Is still unclaim'd where thou wert wont to be;
In every echo of returning feet
In vain we list for what should herald
thee.
Brother, come home.

Come home.

We've nursed for thee the sunny buds
of spring,
Watch'd every germ a full-blown flow'et rear,
Saw o'er their bloom the chilly winter
bring

Its icy garlands, and thou art not
here.

Brother, come home.

Come home.

Would I could send my spirit o'er the
deep,
Would I could wing it like a bird to
thee,
To commune with thy thoughts, to fill
thy sleep
With these unwearying words of melody,
Brother, come home.

THE GRAVES OF A HOUSEHOLD

THEY grew in beauty side by side,
They filled one home with glee,
Their graves are severed far and wide,
By mount, and stream, and sea.
The same fond mother bent at night
O'er each fair sleeping brow,
She had each folded flower in sight —
Where are those dreamers now?

One midst the forests of the West,
By a dark stream, is laid;
The Indian knows his place of rest
Far in the cedar shade.
The sea, the blue lone sea, hath one,
He lies where pearls lie deep,
He was the loved of all, yet none
O'er his low bed may weep.

One sleeps where southern vines are drest
Above the noble slain;
He wrapt his colors round his breast
On a blood-red field of Spain.
And one — o'er her the myrtle showers
Its leaves, by soft winds fanned;
She faded midst Italian flowers,
The last of that bright band.

And, parted thus, they rest — who played
Beneath the same green tree,
Whose voices mingled as they prayed
Around one parent knee!
They that with smiles lit up the hall,
And cheered with song the hearth, —
Alas for love if thou wert all,
And nought beyond, oh earth.

JOHN KEATS.

1795-1821.

[JOHN KEATS was born in London on the 29th of October, 1795. His father was in the employment of a livery-stable keeper in Moorfields, whose daughter he married. Our poet was born prematurely. He lost his father when he was nine years old, and his mother when he was fifteen. He and his brothers were sent to a good school at Enfield kept by Mr. Clarke, whose son, Charles Cowden Clarke, well known afterwards from his connection with letters and literary men, was a valuable friend to John Keats. As a schoolboy, Keats seems to have been at first remarked chiefly for his pugnacity and high spirit, but he soon showed a love of reading. On leaving school in 1810 he was apprenticed for five years to a surgeon at Edmonton; he was thus still in the neighborhood of the Clarks, who continued to see him, took interest in his awakening powers, and lent him books,—amongst them the Fairy Queen of Spenser the poet,—whose influence has left on the poetry of Keats so deep an impression. The young surgeon's apprentice took to verse-making; when he went to London to walk the hospitals, he was introduced by the Clarks to their literary friends there, and knew Leigh Hunt, Hazlitt, Basil Montagu, Haydon, Shelley, and Godwin. In 1817 he brought out his first volume of verse, and abandoned the profession of surgery, for which, however, disagreeable though it was to him, he had shown aptitude and dexterity. His first volume contained the Epistles, which we now read amongst his collected poems; it had no success. But his friends saluted his genius with warm admiration and confidence, and in 1818 he published his Endymion. It was mercilessly treated by Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine and by the Quarterly Review. Meanwhile Keats's small fortune was melting away, and signs of disease began to show themselves in him. Nevertheless, in the next year or two he produced his best poems; but his health and circumstances did not mend, while a passionate attachment, with which he was at this time seized, added another cause of agitation. The seeds of consumption were in him, he had the temperament of the consumptive; his poetry seared him, his embarrassments fretted him, his love-passion shook him to pieces. He had an attack of bleeding from the lungs; he got better, but it returned: change of climate was recommended, and after publishing his third volume, Lamia, Isabella, and other Poems, he sailed for Italy in September, 1820, accompanied by his friend Severn. Italy could not restore him. He established himself at Rome with Severn, but, in spite of the devoted care and kindness of this admirable friend, he rapidly grew worse, and on the 23rd of February, 1821, he died. He was twenty-five years old. John Keats was buried in the Protestant cemetery at Rome, and on his gravestone is the inscription which he himself told his friend to place there: Here lies one whose name was writ in water.]

BEAUTY.

[From Endymion, Book I.]

A THING of beauty is a joy for ever:
 Its loveliness increases: it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep
 A bower quiet for us, and a sleep Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.
 Therefore, on every morrow, are we wreathing
 A flowery band to bind us to the earth, Spite of despondence, of the inhuman
 dearth
 Of noble natures, of the gloomy days,
 Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darkened
 ways
 Made for our searching: yes, in spite of
 all,
 Some shape of beauty moves away the pall

From our dark spirits. Such the sun, the moon,
 Trees old and young, sprouting a shady boon
 For simple sheep; and such are daffodils
 With the green world they live in; and clear rills
 That for themselves a cooling covert
 make
 'Gainst the hot season; the mid-forest
 brake,
 Rich with a sprinkling of fair muskrose blooms;
 And such too is the grandeur of the dooms
 We have imagined for the mighty dead;
 All lovely tales that we have heard or read:
 An endless fountain of immortal drink, Pouring unto us from the heaven's brink.

ENDYMION.

[From Miscellaneous Poems.]

HE was a Poet, sure a lover too,
 Who stood on Latmus' top, what time there blew
 Soft breezes from the myrtle vale below,
 And brought, in faintness solemn, sweet,
 and slow,
 A hymn from Dian's temple; while upswelling,
 The incense went to her own starry dwelling.
 But though her face was clear as infants'
 eyes,
 Though she stood smiling o'er the sacrifice,
 The poet wept at her so piteous fate,
 Wept that such beauty should be desolate.
 So in fine wrath some golden sounds he won,
 And gave meek Cynthia her Endymion.

HYMN TO PAN.

[From Endymion, Book I.]

O HEARKENER to the loud-clapping
 shears,
 While ever and anon to his shorn peers
 A ram goes bleating: Winder of the horn,
 When snouted wild-boars routing tender corn Anger our huntsman: Breather round our farms,
 To keep off mildews, and all weather harms:
 Strange ministrant of undescribed
 sounds,
 That come a-swooning over hollow
 grounds,
 And wither drearily on barren moors:
 Dread opener of the mysterious doors Leading to universal knowledge — see,
 Great son of Dryope,
 The many that are come to pay their vows
 With leaves about their brows!

BACCHUS.

[From Endymion, Book IV.]

AND as I sat, over the light blue hills There came a noise of revellers: the rills
 Into the wide stream came of purple hue —
 'Twas Bacchus and his crew!
 The earnest trumpet spake, and silver thrills
 From kissing cymbals made a merry din —
 'Twas Bacchus and his kin!
 Like to a moving vintage down they
 came,
 Crown'd with green leaves, and faces
 all on flame;
 All madly dancing through the pleasant valley,
 To scare thee, Melancholy!

CYNTHIA'S BRIDAL EVENING.

[From Miscellaneous Poems.]

THE evening weather was so bright and
 clear,
 That men of health were of unusual
 cheer;
 Stepping like Homer at the trumpet's
 call,
 Or young Apollo on the pedestal:
 And lovely women were as fair and
 warm,
 As Venus looking sideways in alarm.
 The breezes were ethereal and pure,
 And crept through half-closed lattices to cure
 The languid sick; it cooled their fevered
 sleep,
 And soothed them into slumbers full
 and deep.
 Soon they awoke clear-eyed: nor burned with thirsting, Nor with hot fingers, nor with temples bursting:
 And springing up, they met the wondering sight
 Of their dear friends, nigh foolish with delight;

Who feel their arms and breasts, and kiss, and stare,
 And on their placid foreheads part the
 hair.
 Young men and maidens at each other gazed,
 With hands held back, and motionless,
 amazed
 To see the brightness in each other's
 eyes;
 And so they stood, filled with a sweet surprise,
 Until their tongues were loosed in poesy.
 Therefore no lover did of anguish die:
 But the soft numbers, in that moment spoken,
 Made silken ties, that never may be broken.

 SATURN.

[From Hyperion, Book I.]

DEEP in the shady sadness of a vale Far sunken from the healthy breath of
 morn,
 Far from the fiery noon, and eve's one
 star,
 Sat gray-hair'd Saturn, quiet as a stone,
 Still as the silence round about his lair;
 Forest on forest hung about his head Like cloud on cloud. No stir of air was there,
 Not so much life as on a summer's day
 Robs not one light seed from the feathered grass,
 But where the dead leaf fell, there did it rest.
 A stream went voiceless by, still deadened more
 By reason of his fallen divinity Spreading a shade: the Naiad 'mid her reeds
 Pressed her cold finger closer to her lips.

Along the margin-sand large foot-marks went,
 No further than to where his feet had
 strayed,
 And slept there since. Upon the sodden ground

His old right hand lay nerveless, listless
 dead, Unsceptred; and his realmless eyes were closed;
 While his bowed head seem'd listening to the Earth,
 His ancient mother, for some comfort yet.

It seem'd no force could wake him from his place;
 But there came one, who with a kindred
 hand
 Touched his wide shoulders, after bending low
 With reverence, though to one who knew it not.
 She was a Goddess of the infant world;
 By her in stature the tall Amazon Had stood a pigmy's height: she would have ta'en
 Achilles by the hair and bent his neck;
 Or with a finger stayed Ixion's wheel.
 Her face was large as that of Mem-phian sphinx,
 Pedestal'd haply in a palace-court,
 When sages look'd to Egypt for their
 lore.
 But oh! how unlike marble was that
 face:
 How beautiful, if sorrow had not made Sorrow more beautiful than Beauty's
 self.
 There was a listening fear in her regard.
 As if calamity had but begun;
 As if the vanward clouds of evil days
 Had spent their malice, and the sullen
 rear
 Was with its stored thunder laboring up.
 One hand she pressed upon that aching spot
 Where beats the human heart, as if just
 there,
 Though an immortal, she felt cruel
 pain:
 The other upon Saturn's bended neck
 She laid, and to the level of his ear Leaning with parted lips, some words
 she spake
 In solemn tenor and deep organ tone:
 Some mourning words, which in our feeble tongue

uld come in these like accents; O how frail that large utterance of the early Gods!

CÆLUS TO HYPERION.

BRIGHTEST of my children dear, earth-born
I sky-engendered, Son of Mysteries!
unrevealed even to the powers which met at thy creating! at whose joys,
I palpitations sweet, and pleasures
soft,
Cælus, wonder how they came and whence;
I at the fruits thereof what shapes they be,
distinct, and visible; symbols divine, manifestations of that beauteous life which used unseen throughout eternal space;
these new-formed art thou, O brightest child!
these, thy brethren and the Goddesses!
there is sad feud among ye, and rebellion won against his sire. I saw him fall, how my firstborn tumbled from his throne!
when his arms were spread, to me his voice
and way from forth the thunders round his head!
How woe I, and in vapors hid my face.
thou, too, near such doom? vague fear there is:
I have seen my sons most unlike Gods.
when ye were created, and divine demeanor, solemn, undisturbed, suffled, like high Gods, ye lived and ruled:
I behold in you fear, hope, and wrath;
sons of rage and passion; even as I them, on the mortal world beneath, men who die. — This is the grief, O Son!

Sad sign of ruin, sudden dismay, and
fall!

Yet do thou strive; as thou art capable,
As thou canst move about, an evident
God,

And canst oppose to each malignant
hour

Ethereal presence. — I am but a voice;
My life is but the life of winds and tides;

No more than winds and tides can I avail; —

But thou canst. — Be thou therefore in the van

Of circumstance; yea, seize the arrow's barb

Before the tense string murmur. — To the earth!

For there thou wilt find Saturn, and his woes.

Meantime I will keep watch on thy bright sun,

And of thy seasons be a careful nurse." —

Ere half this region-whisper had come
down

Hyperion arose, and on the stars Lifted his curved lids, and kept them
wide

Until it ceased; and still he kept them
wide:

And still they were the same bright, patient stars.

Then with a slow incline of his broad
breast,

Like to a diver in the pearly seas,
Forward he stooped over the airy shore,

And plunged all noiseless into the deep
night.

OCEANUS.

[From Hyperion, Book II.]

So ended Saturn; and the God of
the Sea,

Sophist and sage, from no Athenian
grove,

But cogitation in his watery shades,
Arose, with locks not oozy, and began,

In murmurs, which his first endeavoring
tongue

Caught infant-like from the far-foamed sands.

"O ye, whom wrath consumes! who,
passion-stung,
Writhe at defeat, and nurse your agonies!

Shut up your senses, stifle up your ears,
My voice is not a bellows unto ire.

Yet listen, ye who will, whilst I bring proof

How ye, perforce, must be content to stoop:

And in the proof much comfort will I
give,

If ye will take that comfort in its truth.
We fall by course of Nature's law, not force

Of thunder, or of Jove. Great Saturn, thou

Hast sifted well the atom-universe;
But for this reason, that thou art the King,

And only blind from sheer supremacy,
One avenue was shaded from thine eyes,
Through which I wandered to eternal truth.

And first, as thou wast not the first of
powers,

So art thou not the last; it cannot be.
Thou art not the beginning nor the end.
From chaos and parental darkness
came

Light, the first fruits of that intestine broil,

That sullen ferment, which for wondrous ends

Was ripening in itself. The ripe hour
came,

And with it light, and light engendering Upon its own producer, forthwith touched

The whole enormous matter into life.
Upon that very hour, our parentage,
The Heavens and the Earth, were manifest:

Then thou first-born, and we the giant-
race,

Found ourselves ruling new and beau-teous realms.

Now comes the pain of truth, to whom
'tis pain;

O folly! for to bear all naked truths,

And to envisage circumstance, all calm,
That is the top of sovereignty. Mark
well!

As Heaven and Earth are fairer, fairer far

Than Chaos and blank Darkness, though once chiefs;

And as we show beyond that Heaven and Earth

In form and shape compact and beautiful,

In will, in action free, companionship,
And thousand other signs of purer life;
So on our heels a fresh perfection treads,

A power more strong in beauty, born of
us

And fated to excel us, as we pass
In glory that old Darkness: nor are we Thereby more conquered than by us the rule

Of shapeless Chaos. Say, doth the dull soil

Quarrel with the proud forests it hath fed,

And feedeth still, more comely than itself?

Can it deny the chieftdom of green
groves?

Or shall the tree be envious of the dove
Because it cooeth, and hath snowy wings

To wander wherewithal and find its joys?

We are such forest-trees, and our fair
boughs

Have bred forth, not pale solitary doves,
But eagles golden-feathered, who do tower

Above us in their beauty, and must reign

In right thereof; for 'tis the eternal law That first in beauty should be first in
might:

Yea, by that law, another race may drive

Our conquerors to mourn as we do
now.

Have ye beheld the young God of the Seas,

My dispossessor? Have ye seen his
face?

Have ye beheld his chariot, foam'd
 along
 By noble winged creatures he hath
 made?
 I saw him on the calmed waters scud,
 With such a glow of beauty in his eyes,
 That it enforced me to bid sad farewell
 To all my empire: farewell sad I took,
 And hither came, to see how dolorous
 fate
 Had wrought upon ye; and how I might best
 Give consolation in this woe extreme.
 Receive the truth, and let it be your balm."

HYPERION'S ARRIVAL.

ALL eyes were on Enceladus's face,
 And they beheld, while still Hyperion's
 name Flew from his lips up to the vaulted
 rocks,
 A pallid gleam across his features stern:
 Not savage, for he saw full many a
 God
 Wroth as himself. He looked upon them all,
 And in each face he saw a gleam of
 light,
 But splendor in Saturn's, whose hoar locks
 Shone like the bubbling foam about a keel
 When the prow sweeps into a midnight cove.
 In pale and silver silence they remained,
 Till suddenly a splendor, like the morn,
 Pervaded all the beetling gloomy steeps,
 All the sad spaces of oblivion,
 And every gulf, and every chasm old,
 And every height, and every sullen depth, Voiceless, or hoarse with loud tormented
 streams:
 And all the everlasting cataracts,
 And all the headlong torrents far and
 near,
 Mantled before in darkness and huge
 shade,
 Now saw the light and made it terrible.
 It was Hyperion: — a granite peak

His bright feet touched, and there he stayed to view
 The misery his brilliance had betrayed
 To the most hateful seeing of itself.
 Golden his hair of short Numidian curl,
 Regal his shape majestic, a vast shade
 In midst of his own brightness, like the bulk
 Of Memnon's image at the set of sun
 To one who travels from the dusking
 East:
 Sighs, too, as mournful as that Memnon's harp,
 He uttered, while his hands, contemplative,
 He pressed together, and in silence
 stood.

THE FLIGHT.

[From the Eve of St. Agnes.]

FULL on this casement shone the wintry moon,
 And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast,
 As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon;
 Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together
 prest,
 And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
 And on her hair a glory, like a saint:
 She seem'd a splendid angel, newly
 drest,
 Save wings, for heaven: — Porphyro grew faint:
 She knelt, so pure a thing, so free from mortal taint.
 Anon his heart revives: her vespers
 done,
 Of all its wreathed pearls her hair she frees;
 Unclasps her warmed jewels one by one;
 Loosens her fragrant bodice; by degrees
 Her rich attire creeps rustling to her knees:
 Half-hidden, like a mermaid in seaweed,
 Pensive awhile she dreams awake,
 and sees,

She stood in tears amid the alien corn;
The same that oft-times hath Charmed magic casements, opening on the foam
Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

Forlorn! the very word is like a bell
To toll me back from thee to my sole
self!
Adieu! the fancy cannot cheat so well
As she is fabled to do, deceiving elf.
Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades
Past the near meadows, over the still
stream,
Up the hill-side; and now 'tis buried deep
In the next valley-glades:
Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
Fled is that music: — do I wake or
sleep?

ODE ON A GRECIAN URN.

Thou still unravished bride of quiet-
ness!
Thou foster-child of Silence and slow
Time,
Sylvan historian, who canst thus express
A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme:
What leaf-fringed legend haunts about thy shape
Of deities or mortals, or of both,
In Tempe or the dales of Arcady?
What men or gods are these? What maidens loath?
What mad pursuit? What struggle to escape?
What pipes and timbrels? What wild ecstasy?

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;
Not to the sensual ear, but, more endeared,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone:

Fair youth, beneath the trees, thou canst not leave
Thy song, nor ever can those trees be bare;
Bold Lover, never, never canst thou kiss,
Though winning near the goal — yet
do not grieve;
She cannot fade, though thou hast not thy bliss,
For ever wilt thou love, and she be
fair!

Ah, happy, happy boughs! that cannot
shed
Your leaves, nor ever bid the Spring
adieu;
And, happy melodist, unwearied,
For ever piping songs for ever new;
More happy love! more happy, happy
love!
For ever warm and still to be enjoyed,
For ever panting and for ever
young;
All breathing human passion far above,
That leaves a heart high sorrowful and cloyed,
A burning forehead, and a parching tongue.

Who are these coming to the sacrifice?
To what green altar, O mysterious priest, Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the
skies,
And all her silken flanks with gar-lands drest?
What little town by river or sea-shore,
Or mountain-built with peaceful citi-
del,
Is emptied of its folk, this pious
morn?
And, little town, thy streets for ever
more
Will silent be; and not a soul to tell Why thou art desolate, can e'er return.

O Attic shape! Fair attitude! with brede
Of marble men and maidens over-
wrought,

forest branches and the trodden
weed;
O thou, silent form! dost tease us out of thought both eternity. Cold pastoral!
When old age shall this generation
waste,
Thou shalt remain, in midst of other
woe
than ours, a friend to man, to whom thou say'st:
"Truth is truth, truth beauty, — that is
all Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

SONNETS ON THE MERMAID TAVERN.

Of poets dead and gone,
In Elysium have ye known,
By field or mossy cavern,
Farther than the Mermaid Tavern?
Ye tipped drink more fine
Than mine host's Canary wine?
The fruits of Paradise
Farther than those dainty pies
In Elysium? O generous food!
As though bold Robin Hood Had, with his maid Marian,
And bowse from horn and can.

I have heard that on a day
The host's sign-board flew away,
And knew whither, till
The astrologer's old quill
The sheepskin gave the story, —
He saw you in your glory,
Beneath a new old-sign
Of beverage divine,
Pledging with contented smack
The Mermaid in the Zodiac.

Of poets dead and gone,
In Elysium have ye known,
By field or mossy cavern,
Farther than the Mermaid Tavern?

SONNETS.

ON FIRST LOOKING INTO CHAP-MAN'S HOMER.

MUCH have I travelled in the realms of
gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms
seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told That deep-browed Homer ruled as his demesne:
Yet did I never breathe its pure serene Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:
Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He stared at the Pacific — and all his men Looked at each other with a wild surmise —
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

WRITTEN IN JANUARY, 1817.

AFTER dark vapors have oppressed our
plains
For a long dreary season, comes a day
Born of the gentle South, and clears away
From the sick heavens all unseemly stains.
The anxious mouth, relieved from its pains,
Takes as a long-lost right the feel of
May,
The eyelids with the passing coolness
play,
Like rose leaves with the drip of summer rains.
And calmest thoughts come round us, — as, of leaves
Budding, — fruit ripening in stillness, — autumn suns
Smiling at eve upon the quiet sheaves, — Sweet Sappho's cheek, — a sleeping infant's breath, —
The gradual sand that through an hour glass runs, —
A woodland rivulet, — a Poet's death.

WRITTEN IN JANUARY, 1818.

WHEN I have fears that I may cease to
be Before my pen has gleaned my teeming
brain,
Before high piled books, in charact'ry, Hold like full garnerers the full-ripened grain;
When I behold, upon the night's starred
face,
Huge cloudy symbols of a high romance,
And feel that I may never live to trace Their shadows, with the magic hand of chance;
And when I feel, fair creature of an
hour!
That I shall never look upon thee more,
Never have relish in the faery power Of unreflecting love! — then on the
shore
Of the wide world I stand alone, and think
Till Love and Fame to nothingness do sink.

ADDRESSED TO HAYDON.

GREAT spirits now on earth are sojourn-
ing:
He of the cloud, the cataract, the lake,
Who on Helvellyn's summit, wide
awake,
Catches his freshness from Archangel's
wing:
He of the rose, the violet, the spring,
The social smile, the chain for Freedom's sake:
And lo' whose steadfastness would never take A meaner sound than Raphael's whispering.
And other spirits there are, standing apart
Upon the forehead of the age to come;
These, these will give the world another
heart,
And other pulses. Hear ye not the hum
Of mighty workings? —
Listen awhile, ye nations, and be dumb.

ON THE GRASSHOPPE CRICKET.

THE poetry of earth is never When all the birds are faint hot sun,
And hide in cooling trees, a run
From hedge to hedge about mown mead:
That is the grasshopper's, — the lead
In summer luxury, — he has n
With his delights, for, when with fun,
He rests at ease beneath some weed.
The poetry of earth is ceasing
On a long winter evening,
frost
Has wrought a silence, from there shrills
The Cricket's song, in warm ing ever,
And seems to one in drows
lost,
The Grasshopper's among so
hills.

KEATS'S LAST SONNET.

BRIGHT star! would I were steadfast as thou art —

Not in lone splendor hung aloft the
 night,

And watching, with eternal lids apart,
 Like Nature's patient sleepless Eremite,
 The moving waters at their priestlike task
 Of pure ablution round earth's human shores,

Or gazing on the new soft fallen mask
 Of snow upon the mountains and the moors. —

No — yet still steadfast, still unchangeable,

Pillowed upon my fair love's ripening
 breast,

To feel for ever its soft fall and swell,
 Awake for ever in a sweet unrest;

Still, still to hear her tender-taken
 breath,

And so live ever — or else swoon to death.

SONNET.

e a child, and still a child, n years

ted manhood on my cheek,
 I, —

ived like one not born to die;
 ss prodigal of smiles and

s,
 needed, and I knew no fears.

though sweet, is only sleep,
 waking,

sleep no more, at once o'er-ng

uard of my age, with all ars

n my back. Nor child, nor
 ,

Nor youth, nor sage, I find my head is
 gray,

For I have lost the race I never ran :
 A rathe December blights my lagging

May;
 And still I am a child, though I be old,

Time is my debtor for my years untold.

TO A LOFTY BEAUTY, FROM HER POOR KINSMAN.

FAIR maid, had I not heard thy baby
 cries,

Nor seen thy girlish, sweet vicissitude,
 Thy mazy motions, striving to elude, Yet wooing still a parent's watchful
 eyes,

Thy humors, many as the opal's dyes,
 And lovely all; — methinks thy scornful mood,
 And bearing high of stately womanhood, —
 Thy brow, where Beauty sits to tyrannize
 O'er humble love, had made me sadly fear thee,
 For never sure was seen a royal bride,
 Whose gentleness gave grace to so much pride —
 My very thoughts would tremble to be near thee:
 But when I see thee at thy father's
 side,
 Old times unqueen thee, and old loves endear thee.

MAY, 1840.

A LOVELY morn, so still, so very still,
 It hardly seems a growing day of Spring, Though all the odorous buds are blossoming,
 And the small matin birds were glad and shrill
 Some hours ago; but now the woodland rill
 Murmurs along, the only vocal thing, Save when the wee wren fits with stealthy wing,
 And cons by fits and bits her evening trill.
 Lovers might sit on such a morn as
 this
 An hour together, looking at the sky, Nor dare to break the silence with a
 kiss,
 Long listening for the signal of a sigh;
 And the sweet Nun, diffused in voice-
 less prayer,
 Feel her own soul through all the brooding air.

TO A DEAF AND DUMB LITTLE GIRL.

LIKE a loose island on the wide expanse,
 Unconscious floating on the fickle sea,

Herself her all, she lives in privacy;
 Her waking life as lonely as a trance,
 Doomed to behold the universal dance.
 And never hear the music which expounds
 The solemn step, coy slide, the merry,
 bounds,
 The vague, mute language of the countenance.
 In vain for her I smooth my antique
 rhyme;
 She cannot hear it, all her little being Concentred in her solitary seeing — What can she know of beaut[eous] or sublime?
 And yet methinks she looks so calm and good,
 God must be with her in her solitude.

STANZAS.

SHE was a queen of noble Nature's crowning,
 A smile of her's was like an act of
 grace;
 She had no winsome looks, no pretty frowning,
 Like daily beauties of the vulgar race:
 But if she smiled, a light was on her
 face,
 A clear, cool kindness, a lunar beam
 Of peaceful radiance, silvering o'er the
 stream
 Of human thought with unabiding
 glory;
 Not quite a waking truth, not quite a dream,
 A visitation, bright and transitory.
 But she is changed, — hath felt the touch of sorrow,
 No love hath she, no understanding
 friend;
 Oh grief! when heaven is forced to earth to borrow
 What the poor niggard earth has not to lend;
 But when the stalk is snapt, the root must bend.
 The tallest flower that skyward rears its
 head,

Grows from the common ground, and there must shed
Its delicate petals. Cruel fate, too surely,
That they should find so base a bridal
bed,
Who lived in virgin pride, so sweet and purely.

She had a brother, and a tender father,
And she was loved, but not as others
are
From whom we ask return of love, — but rather
As one might love a dream; a phantom
fair
Of something exquisitely strange and
rare,
Which all were glad to look on, men and maids,
Yet no one claimed — as oft, in dewy
glades
The peering primrose, like a sudden gladness, Gleams on the soul, yet unregarded
fades; —
The joy is ours, but all its own the sadness.

'Tis vain to say — her worst of grief is only
The common lot, which all the world
have known;
To her 'tis more, because her heart is lonely,
And yet she hath no strength to stand
alone, —
Once she had playmates, fancies of her
own,
And she did love them. They are past
away
As Fairies vanish at the break of day;
And like a spectre of an age departed,
Or unsphered Angel woefully astray,
She glides along — the solitary hearted.

SONG.

SHE is not fair to outward view
As many maidens be,
Her loveliness I never knew
Until she smiled on me;
Oh! then I saw her eye was bright,
A well of love, a spring of light.

But now her looks are coy and cold,
To mine they ne'er reply,
And yet I cease not to behold
The love-light in her eye:
Her very frowns are fairer far,
Than smiles of other maidens are.

SUMMER RAIN.

THICK lay the dust, uncomfortably
white,
In glaring mimicry of Arab sand.
The woods and mountains slept in hazy
light;
The meadows look'd athirst and tawny tanned;
The little rills had left their channels
bare,
With scarce a pool to witness what
they were;
And the shrunk river gleamed 'mid oozy stones,
That stared like any famished giant's
bones.

Sudden the hills grew black, and hot as stove
The air beneath; it was a toil to be.
There was a growling as of angry Jove,
Provoked by Juno's prying jealousy —
A flash — a crash — the firmament was split,
And down it came in drops — the smallest fit
To drown a bee in fox-glove bell con-ceal'd;
Joy filled the brook, and comfort cheered the field.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL.

1797-1834.

[WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, born in Glasgow in 1797, became a "limb of the law" in 1819, being then appointed to the office of Sheriff Clerk Depute at Paisley. In 1828 he put his literary talent at the service of his party, edited a Tory newspaper, The Paisley Advertiser, and afterwards The Glasgow Courier. The strain of journalism proved too much for him, and he died of apoplexy at the early age of thirty-seven. A small volume of poems, narrative and lyrical, published in 1832, was the only fruit of his fine poetic gifts.]

TRUE LOVE'S DIRGE.

SOME love is light and fleets away,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Some love is deep and scorns decay,
Ah, well-a-day! in vain.

Of loyal love I sing this lay,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
'Tis of a knight and lady gay,
Ah, well-a-day! bright twain.

He loved her, — heart loved ne'er so
well,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
She was a cold and proud damsel,
Ah, well-a-day! and vain.

He loved her, — oh, he loved her long,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
But she for love gave bitter wrong,
Ah, well-a-day! Disdain!

It is not meet for knight like me,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Though scorned, love's recreant to be,
Ah, well-a-day! Refrain.

That brave knight buckled on his brand,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
And fast he sought a foreign strand,
Ah, well-a-day! in pain.

He wandered wide by land and sea,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
A mirror of bright constancy.
Ah, well-a-day! in vain.

He would not chide, he would not blame,
Heigho! the wind and rain,

But at each shrine he breathed her
name,
Ah, well-a-day! Amen!

He would not carp, he would not sing,
Heigho! the wind and rain,
That broke his heart with love-longing.
Ah, well-a-day! poor brain.

He scorned to weep, he scorned to sigh,
Heigho! the wind and rain,
But like a true knight he could die, —
Ah, well-a-day! life's vain.

The banner which that brave knight
bore,
Heigho! the wind and rain:
Had scrolled on it, "Faith Evermore."
Ah, well-a-day! again.

That banner led the Christian van.
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Against Seljuck and Turcoman.
Ah, well-a-day! bright train.

The fight was o'er, the day was done,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
But lacking was that loyal one, —
Ah, well-a-day! sad pain.

They found him on the battle-field,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
With broken sword and cloven shield,
Ah, well-a-day! in twain.

They found him pillowed on the dead,
Heigho! the wind and rain:
The blood-soaked sod his bridal bed,
Ah, well-a-day! the Slain.

And his pale brow and paler cheek,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
The white moonshine did fall so meek,
Ah! well-a-day! sad strain.

They lifted up the True and Brave,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
And bore him to his lone cold grave,
Ah! well-a-day! in pain.

They buried him on that far strand,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
His face turned towards his love's own
land,
Ah, well-a-day! how vain.

The wearied heart was laid at rest,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
The dream of her he liked best,
Ah, well-a-day! again.

They nothing said, but many a tear,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Rained down on that knight's lowly
bier,
Ah, well-a-day! amain.

They nothing said, but many a sigh,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Told how they wished like him to die,
Ah, well-a-day! sans stain.

With solemn mass and orison,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
They reared to him a cross of stone,
Ah, well-a-day! in pain.

And on it graved with daggers bright,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
"Here lies a true and gentle knight."
Ah, well-a-day! Amen!

JEANIE MORRISON.

I'VE wandered east, I've wandered west,
Through mony a weary way;
But never, never can forget
The love o' life's young day!
The fire that's blawn on Beltane e'en
May weel be black gin Yule;
But blacker fa' awaits the heart
Where first fond luve grows cule.

Oh dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
The thochts o' bygone years
Still fling their shadows ower my path,
And blind my een wi' tears!
They blind my een wi' saut, saut tears,
And sair and sick I pine,
As memory idly summons up
The blithe blinks o' langsyne.

'Twas then we luvit ilk ither weel,
'Twas than we twa did part;
Sweet time, sad time! twa bairns at schule,
Twa bairns, and but ae heart!
'Twas then we sat on ae high bink,
To leir¹ ilk ither lear²:
And tones, and looks, and smiles were
shed,
Remembered ever mair.

I wonder, Jeanie, often yet
When sitting on that bink, Cheek touchin' cheek, loof³ locked in loof,
What our wee heads could think.
When baith bent down ower ae braid
page,
Wi' ae buik on our knee,
Thy lips were on thy lesson, but My lesson was in thee.

Oh mind ye how we hung our heads,
How cheeks brent red wi' shame, Whene'er the school-weans laughin'
said,
We cleeked⁴ thegither hame?
And mind ye o' the Saturdays
(The schule then skail't⁵ at noon)
When we ran aft to speel⁶ the braes —
The broomy braes o' June?

My head rins round and round about,
My heart flows like a sea,
As ane by ane the thochts rush back
O' schuletime and o' thee.
O mornin' life! O mornin' luve!
O lichtsome days and lang,
When hinnied hopes around our hearts,
Like summer blossoms sprang!

⁴ lit., hooked = clung. ⁵ dispersed. ⁶ climb

Oh, mind ye, luv, how oft we left
The deavin' dinsome town,
To wander by the green burnaide,
And hear its water croon.
The summer leaves hung ower our heids,
The flowers burst round our feet,
And in the gloamin' i' the wud
The throstle whusslit sweet.

The throstle whusslit i' the wud,
The burn sang to the trees,
And we with Nature's heart in tune,
Concerted harmonies;
And on the knowe abune the burn,
For hours thegither sat
In the silentest o' joy, till baith
Wi' very gladness grat!

Aye, aye, dear Jeanie Morrison,
Tears trinkled down your cheek,
Like dew-beads on a rose, yet nane
Had ony power to speak!
That was a time, a blessed time,
When hearts were fresh and young,
When freely gushed all feelings forth Unsyllabled — unsung!

I marvel, Jeanie Morrison,
Gin I hae been to thee,
As closely twined wi' earliest thochts
As ye hae been to me?
Oh, tell me gin their music fills Thine ear as it does mine;
Oh, say gin e'er your heart grows grit
Wi' dreamings o' langsyne?

I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
I've borne a weary lot;
But in my wanderings, far or near,
Ye never were forgot.
The fount that first burst frae this heart,
Still travels on its way;
And channels deeper as it rins
The luv o' life's long day.

O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
Since we were sindered young,
I've never seen your face, nor heard
The music of your tongue;
But I could hug all wretchedness,
And happy could I die,
Did I but ken your heart still dreamed
O' bygone days and me.

SAMUEL LOVER.

1797-1868.

[BORN at Dublin, early attained some distinction as a painter, poet, and singer. His earliest work, except contributions to journals, was Legends and Songs of Ireland. THE FOUR-LEAVED SHAMROCK.

I'LL seek a four-leaved shamrock
In all the fairy dells,
And if I find the charmed leaf,
Oh, how I'll weave my spells!
I would not waste my magic might
On diamond, pearl, or gold,
For treasure tires the weary sense —
Such triumph is but cold;

But I will play the enchanter's
part
In casting bliss around;
Oh! not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.
To worth I would give honor,
I'd dry the mourner's tears,
And to the pallid lip recall
The smile of happier years;

And hearts that had been long estranged,
And friends that had grown cold,
Should meet again like parted streams,
And mingle as of old.

Oh! thus I'd play the enchanter's part

In casting bliss around;
Oh! not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.

The heart that had been mourning
O'er vanish'd dreams of love,
Should see them all returning,
Like Noah's faithful dove.
And Hope should launch her blessed bark

On Sorrow's darkening sea,
And Misery's children have an ark,
And saved from sinking be.

Oh! thus I'd play the enchanter's part

In casting bliss around;
Oh! not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.

THE ANGELS' WHISPER.

A BABY was sleeping, its mother was weeping,

For her husband was far on the wild raging sea;

And the tempest was swelling, round the fisherman's dwelling,

And she cried, "Dermot darling, oh! come back to me."

Her beads while she numbered, the baby still slumbered,

And smiled in her face, as she bended her knee.

"Oh! blessed be that warning, my child, thy sleep adorning,

For I know that the angels are whispering with thee.

"And while they are keeping bright watch o'er thy sleeping,

Oh! pray to them softly, my baby, with me;

And say thou wouldst rather they'd watch'd o'er thy father.

For I know that the angels are whispering with thee."

The dawn of the morning saw Dermot returning,

And the wife wept with joy her babe's father to see,

And closely caressing her child, with a blessing,

Said, "I knew that the angels were whispering with thee."

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLEY.

[BORN in 1797, the son of an eminent and wealthy solicitor near Bath. Destined for the church, he studied for some time at Oxford, but ultimately came to depend chiefly on literature for support. His latter years were marked by misfortune. Died in 1839. He was, next to Moore, the most successful song writer of our age. Several of them, as She Wore a Wreath of Roses and Oh, no, we Never Mention Him, attained to an extraordinary degree of popularity.]

OH, NO! WE NEVER MENTION HIM.

Oh, no! we never mention him, his name is never heard;

My lips are now forbid to speak that once familiar word:

From sport to sport they hurry me, to banish my regret;

And when they win a smile from me, they think that I forget.

They bid me seek in change of scene the charms that others see;

But were I in a foreign land, they'd find no change in me
 'Tis true that I behold no more the valley where we met,
 I do not see the hawthorn-tree; but how can I forget?

For oh! there are so many things recall the past to me, —
 The breeze upon the sunny hills, the billows of the sea;
 The rosy tint that decks the sky before the sun is set; — Ay, every leaf I look upon forbids me to forget.

They tell me he is happy now, the gayest of the gay;
 They hint that he forgets me too, — but I heed not what they say:
 Perhaps like me he struggles with each feeling of regret:
 But if he loves as I have loved, he never can forget.

HARK! THE CONVENT-BELLS ARE RINGING.

HARK! the convent-bells are ring-
 ing,
 And the nuns are sweetly singing;
 Holy Virgin, hear our prayer!
 See the novice comes to sever
 Every worldly tie for ever;
 Take, oh, take her to your care!
 Still radiant gems are shining,
 Her jet-black locks entwining;
 And her robes around her flowing
 With many tints are glowing,
 But all earthly rays are dim.
 Splendors brighter
 Now invite her,
 While thus we chant our vesper-hymn.

Now the lovely maid is kneeling,
 With uplifted eyes appealing;
 Holy Virgin, hear our prayer!
 See the abbess, bending o'er her,
 Breathes the sacred vow before her;
 Take, oh, take her to your care!

Her form no more possesses
 Those dark luxuriant tresses.
 The solemn words are spoken,
 Each earthly tie is broken,
 And all earthly joys are dim.
 Splendors brighter
 Now invite her,
 While thus we chant our vesper-hymn.

ISLE OF BEAUTY, FARE THEE WELL.

SHADES of ev'ning close not o'er us,
 Leave our lonely bark awhile;
 Morn, alas! will not restore us
 Yonder dim and distant isle.
 Still my fancy can discover Sunny spots where friends may dwell;
 Darker shadows round us hover,—
 Isle of Beauty, fare thee well!

'Tis the hour when happy faces Smile around the taper's light;
 Who will fill our vacant places?
 Who will sing our songs to-night?
 Through the mist that floats above us
 Faintly sounds the vesper-bell,
 Like a voice from those who love us,
 Breathing fondly, Fare thee well!

When the waves are round me breaking,
 As I pace the deck alone,
 And my eye is vainly seeking
 Some green leaf to rest upon;
 When on that dear land I ponder,
 Where my old companions dwell,
 Absence makes the heart grow fonder—
 Isle of Beauty, fare thee well!

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR.

THE matron at her mirror, with her hand upon her brow, Sits gazing on her lovely face — as lovely even now:
 Why doth she lean upon her hand with such a look of care?
 Why steals that tear across her cheek?—
 She sees her first gray hair.

e from her form hath ta'en away but little of its grace; touch of thought hath dignified the beauty of her face;
 she might mingle in the dance
 where maidens gaily trip, bright is still her hazel eye, so beautiful her lip.

e faded form is often mark'd by sorrow more than years;
 e wrinkle on the cheek may be the course of secret tears;
 e mournful lip may murmur of a love it ne'er confest, d the dimness of the eye betray a heart that cannot rest.

she hath been a happy wife; — the lover of her youth
 y proudly claim the smile that pays the trial of his truth;
 ense of slight — of loneliness — hath never banish'd sleep;
 e life hath been a cloudless one; — then, wherefore doth she weep?

look'd upon her raven locks; — what thoughts did they recall?
 not of nights when they were deck'd for banquet or for ball; — y brought back thoughts of early youth, e'er she had learnt to check,
 h artificial wreaths, the curls that sported o'er her neck.

She seem'd to feel her mother's hand pass lightly through her hair, And draw it from her brow, to leave a kiss of kindness there;
 She seem'd to view her father's smile,
 and feel the playful touch That sometimes feign'd to steal away the curls she prized so much.

And now she sees her first gray hair!
 oh, deem it not a crime
 For her to weep — when she beholds the first footmark of Time!
 She knows that, one by one, those mute mementos will increase,
 And steal youth, beauty, strength away, till life itself shall cease.

'Tis not the tear of vanity for beauty on the wane —
 Yet though the blossom may not sigh to bud, and bloom again,
 It cannot but remember with a feeling of regret,
 The Spring for ever gone — the Summer sun so nearly set.

Ah, Lady! heed the monitor! Thy mirror tells the truth, Assume the matron's folded veil, resign
 the wreath of youth;
 Go! — bind it on thy daughter's brow,
 in her thou'lt still look fair;
 'Twere well would all learn wisdom who behold the first gray hair!

THOMAS HOOD.

1799-1845.

[THOMAS HOOD was born in London in May, 1799. His chief poetical works, scattered ig his lifetime in various publications, are contained in two volumes entitled respectively as, 1846, and Poems of Wit and Humour, 1847. A complete edition of his works appeared 362. He died in May, 1845, and was buried in Kensal Green Cemetery, where some years his death a monument was erected to him by public subscription.]

THE SONG OF THE SHIRT.

RH fingers weary and worn,
 With eyelids heavy and red,
 A man sat, in unwomanly rags,

Plying her needle and thread —
 Stitch — stitch — stitch!
 In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
 And still with a voice of dolorous pitch
 She sang the "Song of the Shirt!"

"Work — work — work!
While the cock is crowing aloof;
And work -- work — work
Till the stars shine through the roof!
It's O! to be a slave
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where woman has never a soul to save
If this is Christian work!

"Work — work — work
Till the brain begins to swim;
Work — work — work
Till the eyes are heavy and dim!
Seam, and gusset, and band, —
Band, and gusset, and seam,
Till over the buttons I fall asleep,
And sew them on in a dream!

"O! men with Sisters dear!
O! men with Mothers and Wives!
It is not linen you're wearing out,
But human creatures' lives!
Stitch — stitch — stitch,
In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
Sewing at once with a double thread,
A Shroud as well as a Shirt.

"But why do I talk of Death!
That phantom of grisly bone,
I hardly fear his terrible shape,
It seems so like my own —
It seems so like my own,
Because of the fasts I keep;
Oh God! that bread should be so dear,
And flesh and blood so cheap!

"Work — work -- work!
My labor never flags;
And what are its wages? A bed of straw,
A crust of bread — and rags.
That shattered roof, — and this naked
floor, —
A table, — a broken chair, —
And a wall so blank, my shadow I thank For sometimes falling there.

"Work — work -- work!
From weary chime to chime,
Work — work — work
As prisoners work for crime!
Band, and gusset, and seam,
Seam, and gusset, and band,

Till the heart is sick, and the brain numbed,
As well as the weary hand.

"Work — work — work,
In the dull December light,
And work — work — work,
When the weather is warm and bright While underneath the eaves
The brooding swallows cling,
As if to show me their sunny backs
And twit me with the Spring.

"Oh! but to breathe the breath
Of the cowslip and primrose sweet —
With the sky above my head,
And the grass beneath my feet,
For only one short hour
To feel as I used to feel,
Before I knew the woes of want
And the walk that costs a meal!

"Oh! but for one short hour!
A respite however brief!
No blessed leisure for Love or Hope,
But only time for Grief!
A little weeping would ease my heart
But in their briny bed
My tears must stop, for every drop Hinders needle and thread!"

With fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat, in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread —
Stitch — stitch — stitch!
In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,
Would that its tone could reach the Ric
She sang this "Song of the Shirt!"

THE BRIDGE OF SIGHS.

ONE more unfortunate,
Weary of breath,
Rashly importunate,
Gone to her death!

Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care;
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young, and so fair.

Look at her garments
 Clinging like cerements;
 Whilst the wave constantly
 Drips from her clothing;
 Take her up instantly,
 Loving, not loathing.

Touch her not scornfully;
 Think of her mournfully;
 Gently and humanly;
 Not of the stains of her;
 All that remains of her
 Now is pure womanly.

Make no deep scrutiny
 Into her mutiny
 Rash and undutiful;
 Past all dishonor,
 Death has left on her
 Only the beautiful.

Still, for all slips of hers,
 One of Eve's family,
 Wipe those poor lips of hers,
 Oozing so clammy.

Loop up her tresses,
 Escaped from the comb,
 Her fair auburn tresses;
 Whilst wonderment guesses
 Where was her home?
 Who was her father?
 Who was her mother?
 Had she a sister?
 Had she a brother?
 Or was there a dearer one Still, or a nearer one Yet, than all other?

Alas! for the rarity
 Of Christian charity
 Under the sun!
 Oh! it was pitiful,
 Near a whole city full,
 Home she had none!

Sisterly, brotherly,
 Fatherly, motherly,
 Feelings had changed;
 Love, by harsh evidence
 Thrown from its eminence,
 Even God's providence
 Seeming estranged.

When the lamps quiver
 So far in the river,
 With many a light
 From many a casement,
 From garret to basement,
 She stood, with amazement,
 Houseless by night.

The bleak wind of March
 Made her tremble and shiver,
 But not the dark arch
 Or the black flowing river.
 Mad from life's history,
 Glad to death's mystery,
 Swift to be hurled Anywhere! anywhere
 Out of the world!

In she plunged boldly,
 No matter how coldly
 The rough river ran;
 Over the brink of it,
 Picture it — think of it,
 Dissolute man!
 Lave in it — drink of it Then, if you can.

Take her up tenderly,
 Lift her with care,
 Fashioned so slenderly,
 Young, and so fair.

Ere her limbs frigidly Stiffen too rigidly, Decently, kindly Smooth and compose them;
 And her eyes, close them,
 Staring so blindly!

Dreadfully staring
 Through muddy impurity,
 As when with the daring,
 Last look of despairing,
 Fixed on futurity.

Perishing gloomily,
 Spurned by contumely
 Bold inhumanity,
 Burning insanity,
 Into her rest;
 Cross her hands humbly,
 As if praying dumbly,
 Over her breast!

Owning her weakness,
Her evil behavior,
And leaving, with meekness,
Her sins to her Saviour.

SONG.

THE stars are with the voyager,
Wherever he may sail;
The moon is constant to her time,
The sun will never fail,
But follow, follow, round the world,
The green earth and the sea;
So love is with the lover's heart,
Wherever he may be.

Wherever he may be, the stars
Must daily lose their light,
The moon will veil her in the shade,
The sun will set at night;
The sun may set, but constant love
Will shine when he's away,
So that dull night is never night,
And day is brighter day.

RUTH.

SHE stood breast high amid the corn,
Clasped by the golden light of morn,
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who many a glowing kiss had won.

On her cheek an autumn flush Deeply ripened — such a blush
In the midst of brown was born —
Like red poppies grown with corn.

Round her eyes her tresses fell,
Which were blackest none could tell,
But long lashes veiled a light
That had else been all too bright.

And her hat, with shady brim,
Made her tressy forehead dim: —
Thus she stood amid the stooks, Praising God with sweetest looks: —

Sure, I said, Heav'n did not mean
Where I reap thou shouldst but glean, Lay thy sheaf adown and come Share my harvest and my home.

I LOVE THEE! I LOVE THEE

I LOVE thee! I love thee!
'Tis all that I can say; —
It is my vision in the night,
My dreaming in the day;
The very echo of my heart,
The blessing when I pray,
I love thee! I love thee!
Is all that I can say.

I love thee! I love thee!
Is ever on my tongue;
In all my proudest poesy,
That chorus still is sung.
It is the verdict of my eyes
Amidst the gay and young;
I love thee! I love thee!
A thousand maids among.

I love thee! I love thee!
Thy bright and hazel glance,
The mellow lute upon those lips
Whose tender tones entrance.
But most, dear heart of hearts, thy proof
That still these words enhance;
I love thee! I love thee!
Whatever be thy chance.

FAIR INES.

O SAW you not fair Ines?
She's gone into the West,
To dazzle when the sun is down,
And rob the world of rest.
She took our daylight with her,
The smiles that we love best,
With morning blushes on her cheek,
And pearls upon her breast.

Oh, turn again, fair Ines!
Before the fall of night,
For fear the moon should shine alone,
And stars unrivalled bright.
And blessed will the lover be,
That walks beneath their light,
And breathes the love against thy cheek
I dare not even write!

Would I had been, fair Ines,
That gallant cavalier,

ode so gaily by thy side whispered thee so near! — here no loving dames at home, o true lovers here,
 e should cross the seas to win dearest of the dear?

hee, lovely Ines,
 end along the shore, band of noble gentlemen,
 banners waved before,
 ntle youths and maidens gay — snowy plumes they wore;
 d have been a beauteous dream, it had been no more!

Alas, Alas, fair Ines!
 She went away with song,
 With music waiting on her steps,
 And shoutings of the throng.
 And some were sad, and felt no mirth,
 But only music's wrong,
 In sounds that sang, Farewell, farewell
 To her you've loved so long.

Farewell, farewell, fair Ines,
 That vessel never bore
 So fair a lady on its decks,
 Nor danced so light before.
 Alas for pleasure on the sea,
 And sorrow on the shore;
 The smile that blest one lover's heart,
 Has broken many more!

ROBERT POLLOK.

1799-1827.

BN in Renfrewshire, Scotland, 1799: educated for the church, but produced, before he had his twenty-sixth year, a very remarkable poem, entitled The Course of Time, which l the most unqualified admiration in the religious world. The young poet's constitution l, and was undermined by his intense application. He was preparing to start for Italy, at Southampton in 1827.]

THE GENIUS OF BYRON.

[The Course of Time.]

ouched his harp, and nations heard, entranced.
 ie vast river of unfailing source, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
 ed new fountains in the human
 heart.
 Fancy halted, weary in her flight, er men, his, fresh as morning,
 rose,
 oared untrodden heights, and seemed at home, angels bashful looked. Others, though great,
 h their argument seemed struggling whiles;
 m above descending, stooped to touch oftiest thought; and proudly stooped as though

It scarce deserved his verse. With Nature's self
 He seemed an old acquaintance, free to jest
 At will with all her glorious majesty.
 He laid his hand upon "the Ocean's mane,"
 And played familiar with his hoary
 locks:
 Stood on the Alps, stood on the Apen-nines,
 And with the thunder talked as friend to friend;
 And wove his garland of the lightning's
 wing,
 In sportive twist, the lightning's fiery
 wing,
 Which, as the footsteps of the dreadful
 God,
 Marching upon the storm in vengeance, seemed;
 Then turned, and with the grasshopper, who sung

His evening song beneath his feet, conversed.
Suns, moons, and stars, and clouds, his sisters were;
Rocks, mountains, meteors, seas, and winds, and storms;
His brothers, younger brothers, whom he scarce
As equals deemed. All passions of all
men,
The wild and tame, the gentle and severe;
All thoughts, all maxims, sacred and profane;
All creeds, all seasons, Time, Eternity;
All that was hated, and all that was
dear;
All that was hoped, all that was feared,
by man,
He tossed about, as tempest-withered
leaves;
Then, smiling, looked upon the wreck
he made.
With terror now he froze the cowering
blood,
And now dissolved the heart in tender-
ness;
Yet would not tremble, would not weep
himself;

But back into his soul retired, alone,
Dark, sullen, proud, gazing contemptuously
On hearts and passions prostrate at his feet.
So Ocean, from the plains his waves had late
To desolation swept, retired in pride, Exulting in the glory of his might,
And seemed to mock the ruin he had wrought.
As some fierce comet of tremendous size,
To which the stars did reverence as it passed,
So he, through learning and through fancy, took His flights sublime, and on the loftiest top
Of Fame's dread mountain sat; not soiled and worn,
As if he from the earth had labored
up;
But, as some bird of heavenly plumage
fair,
He looked, which down from higher regions came,
And perched it there, to see what lay beneath.

LORD MACAULAY.

1800-1859.

[THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY was born at Rothley Temple, Leicestershire, Oct. 25, 1800, and died at Holly Lodge, Campden Hill, Dec. 28, 1859. His Lays of Ancient Rome were published in 1843; other ballads and poems were written from time to time, his earliest published piece, an Epitaph on Henry Martyn, being dated 1812.]

HENRY OF NAVARRE.

Now glory to the Lord of hosts, from whom all glories are!
And glory to our Sovereign Liege, King
Henry of Navarre!
Now let there be the merry sound of music and of dance,

Through thy corn-fields green, and sunny vines, oh pleasant land of France!
And thou, Rochelle, our own Rochelle,
proud city of the waters,
Again let rapture light the eyes of all thy mourning daughters.
As thou wert constant in our ills, be joyous in our joy,

For cold, and stiff, and still are they who wrought thy walls annoy.
 Hurrah! hurrah! a single field hath turned the chance of war, Hurrah! hurrah! for Ivry, and King
 Henry of Navarre.

Oh! how our hearts were beating, when at the dawn of day
 We saw the army of the League drawn out in long array;
 With all its priest-led citizens, and all its rebel peers,
 And Appenzel's stout infantry, and Egmont's Flemish spears.
 There rode the brood of false Lorraine,
 the curses of our land!
 And dark Mayenne was in the midst, a truncheon in his hand!
 And as we looked on them, we thought of Seine's empurpled flood,
 And good Coligni's hoary hair all dabbled with his blood;
 And we cried unto the living God, who rules the fate of war,
 To fight for his own holy name, and Henry of Navarre.

The King is come to marshal us, in all his armor drest,
 And he has bound a snow-white plume upon his gallant crest.
 He looked upon his people, and a tear was in his eye;
 He looked upon the traitors, and his glance was stern and high.
 Right graciously he smiled on us, as rolled from wing to wing, Down all our line, a deafening shout,
 "God save our Lord the King!"
 "And if my standard-bearer fall, as fall full well he may,
 For never saw I promise yet of such a bloody fray,
 Press where ye see my white plume shine,
 amidst the ranks of war,
 And be your oriflamme to-day the helmet of Navarre."

Hurrah! the foes are moving. Hark to the mingled din

Of life, and steed, and tramp and drum, and roaring culverin!
 The fiery Duke is pricking fast across Saint André's plain,
 With all the hireling chivalry of Guel-ders and Almayne.
 Now by the lips of those ye love, fair
 gentlemen of France, Charge for the Golden Lilies now—upon them with the lance!
 A thousand spurs are striking deep, a thousand spears in rest, A thousand knights are pressing close behind the snow-white crest;
 And in they burst, and on they rushed,
 while, like a guiding star, Amidst the thickest carnage blazed the helmet of Navarre.

Now, God be praised, the day is ours!
 Mayenne hath turned his rein.
 D'Aumale hath cried for quarter. The Flemish Count is slain.
 Their ranks are breaking like thin clouds before a Biscay gale;
 The field is heaped with bleeding steeds,
 and flags, and cloven mail;
 And then, we thought on vengeance,
 and all along our van,
 "Remember St. Bartholomew," was passed from man to man;
 But out spake gentle Henry, "No
 Frenchman is my foe:
 Down, down with every foreigner, but let your brethren go."
 Oh! was there ever such a knight, in friendship or in war,
 As our Sovereign Lord King Henry, the soldier of Navarre!

Ho! maidens of Vienna! Ho! matrons of Lucerne!
 Weep, weep, and rend your hair for those who never shall return.
 Ho! Philip, send, for charity, thy Mexican pistoles,
 That Antwerp monks may sing a mass for thy poor spearmen's souls!
 Ho! gallant nobles of the League, look that your arms be bright!
 Ho! burghers of Saint Genevieve, keep watch and ward to-night!

For our God hath crushed the tyrant,
 our God hath raised the slave,
 And mocked the counsel of the wise,
 and the valor of the brave.
 Then glory to His holy name, from whom all glories are;
 And glory to our Sovereign Lord, King
 Henry of Navarre!

NASEBY.

O! WHEREFORE come ye forth in triumph from the North,
 With your hands and your feet, and your raiment all red?
 And wherefore do your rou send forth a joyous shout?
 And whence are the grapes of the winepress that ye tread?

O! evil was the root, and bitter was the fruit,
 And crimson was the juice of the vintage that we trod;
 For we trampled on the throng of the haughty and the strong,
 Who sate in the high places and slew the saints of God.

It was about the noon of a glorious day of June,
 That we saw their banners dance and their cuirasses shine,
 And the Man of Blood was there, with his long essenced hair,
 And Astley, and Sir Marmaduke, and Rupert of the Rhine.

Like a servant of the Lord, with his Bible and his sword,
 The General rode along us to form us for the fight;
 When a murmuring sound broke out,
 and swell'd into a shout Among the godless horsemen upon the tyrant's right.

And hark! like the roar of the billow on the shore,
 The cry of battle rises along their charging line:

For God! for the Cause! for the C for the Laws!
 For Charles, King of England, as part of the Rhine!

The furious German comes, wi trumpets and his drums,
 His bravoës of Alsatia and pa
 Whitehall;
 They are bursting on our flanks!
 your pikes! Close your r For Rupert never comes, but to a or to fall.

They are here — they rush on — broken — we are gone —
 Our left is borne before them like ble on the blast.
 O Lord, put forth thy might! O defend the right!
 Stand back to back, in God's nam fight it to the last!

Stout Skippen hath a wound — th tre hath given ground.
 But hark! what means this tra of horsemen in the rear?
 What banner do I see, boys? 'T
 thank God! 'tis he, boys!
 Bear up another minute! Brave
 is here!

Their heads are stooping low, thei
 all in a row:
 Like a whirlwind on the trees,
 deluge on the dykes,
 Our cuirassiers have burst on the
 of the Accurst,
 And at a shock have scatter'd the
 of his pikes.
 Fast, fast, the gallants ride, in son nook to hide
 Their coward heads, predestined on Temple Bar.
 And he — he turns! he flies! sh:
 those cruel eyes
 That bore to look on torture, an not look on war.

Ho, comrades! scour the plain, a ye strip the slain,
 First give another stab to mak quest secure;

n shake from sleeves and pockets their broad pieces and lockets, tokens of the wanton, the plunder of the poor.

Is! your doublets shone with gold, and your hearts were gay and bold, then you kiss'd your lily hands to your lovers to-day;
to-morrow shall the fox from her chambers in the rocks
d forth her tawny cubs to howl above
the prey

ere be your tongues, that late mock'd at heaven, and hell, and fate?
the fingers that once were so busy with your blades?
r perfumed satin clothes, your catches and your oaths?

Your stage-plays and your sonnets? your diamonds and your spades?

Down! down! for ever down with the mitre and the crown!
With the Belial of the Court, and the Mammon of the Pope!
There is woe in Oxford halls, there is wail in Durham stalls;
The Jesuit smites his bosom, the Bishop rends his cope.

And she of the Seven Hills shall mourn her children's ills,
And tremble when she thinks on the edge of England's sword;
And the Kings of earth in fear shall tremble when they hear What the hand of God hath wrought for the Houses and the Word!

SIR HENRY TAYLOR.

1800-1886.

[BORN in 1800: entered the colonial office in 1824, in which he has been for many years one of the senior clerks; author of several volumes of dramas and essays, of which Philip Van Artevelde, a tragedy (1834), and Edwin the Fair, an historical drama (1842), are accounted his best works. A collected edition of his plays and poems was issued in 3 vols. in 1863.]

REPENTANCE AND IMPROVEMENT.

[Philip Van Artevelde.]

that lacks time to mourn, lacks time to mend.
mity mourns that. 'Tis an ill cure life's worst ills, to have no time to feel them.
ere sorrow's held intrusive and turned out,
re wisdom will not enter, nor true
power,
ought that dignifies humanity.
such the barrenness of busy life!
m shelf to shelf ambition clambers
up,
reach the naked'st pinnacle of all, ilst magnanimity, absolved from
toil,
loses self-included at the base.

GREATNESS AND SUCCESS.

[Philip Van Artevelde.]

HE was one
Of many thousand such that die betimes, Whose story is a fragment known to few.
Then comes the man who has the luck to live,
And he's a prodigy. Compute the chances,
And deem there's never one in dangerous times
Who wins the race of glory, but than
him
A thousand men more gloriously endowed
Have fallen upon the course; a thousand others
Have had their fortunes foundered by a chance,

Whilst lighter barks pushed past them;
 to whom add
 A smaller tally, of the singular few,
 Who, gifted with predominating powers, Bear yet a temperate will and keep the peace.
 The world knows nothing of its greatest
 men.

REPOSE OF THE HEART.

[Philip Van Artevelde.]

THE heart of man, walk it which way it
 will,
 Sequestered or frequented, smooth or rough,
 Down the deep valley amongst tinkling
 flocks,
 Or mid the clang of trumpets and the march
 Of clattering ordnance, still must have its halt,
 Its hour of truce, its instant of repose,
 Its inn of rest; and craving still must seek
 The food of its affections, — still must slake
 Its constant thirst of what is fresh and pure,
 And pleasant to behold.

A WIFE.

[Philip Van Artevelde.]

SHE was a creature framed by love
 divine
 For mortal love to muse a life away
 In pondering her perfections; so unmoved

Amidst the world's contentions, if they touched
 No vital chord nor troubled what she loved,
 Philosophy might look her in the face,
 And like a hermit stooping to the west
 That yields him sweet refreshment, might therein
 See but his own serenity reflected With a more heavenly tenderness of hue!
 Yet whilst the world's ambitious empty
 cares,
 Its small disquietudes and insect stings, Disturbed her never, she was one made
 up
 Of feminine affections, and her life
 Was one full stream of love from fount to sea.

A SCHOLAR.

[Edwin the Fair.]

THIS life, and all that it contains, to him
 Is but a tissue of illuminous dreams Filled with book-wisdom, pictured thought and love
 That on its own creations spends itself.
 All things he understands, and nothing
 does.
 Profusely eloquent in copious praise
 Of action, he will talk to you as one Whose wisdom lay in dealings and transactions;
 Yet so much action as might tie his shoe Cannot his will command; himself alone
 By his own wisdom not a jot the gainer.
 Of silence, and the hundred thousand things
 'Tis better not to mention, he will speak,
 And still most wisely.

LETITIA ELIZABETH LANDON.

1802-1838.

Brompton, England, 1802; acquired considerable reputation by a number of poems in the Literary Gazette over the signature "L. E. L.," by which she was thenceforth known. She soon became a regular contributor to the various literary journals and annuals, and for many years supported her family by her pen. She published several volumes of poems, all of which were successful, many of them reprinted in the United States. In 1825 she married Mr. George Maclean, governor of Cape Coast Castle, West Africa, and accompanied him to that place, where she died Oct. 15, 1838.]

CRESCENTUS.

On his brow — no sign
Of fear was there;
Proud by that death-shrine
O'er despair
Power; in his eye
Unquenchless energy,
That could dare
That form that death could take,
For the daring's sake.

He fetters on his hand,
And them haughtily;
That grasp been on the brand,
Not wave on high
Pride than it waved now;
Look'd with changeless brow
A torture nigh;
The chain, the axe, the wheel,
Of all, his own red steel.

Once before; he rode
On a black steed,
Thousands throng'd the road,
To their warrior speed.
His breastplate, were of gold,
With many dint, that told
A soldier's deed;
None on his sparkling mail,
His snow-plume on the gale.

He stood chain'd and alone,
Beside him by his side,
The helm, the charger gone;
And, which had defied
The storm, lay broken near;
No sign or sound of fear
In that lip of pride;
No sign of conqueror's brow
Or look than did his now.

He bent beneath the headsman's stroke
With an uncover'd eye;
A wild shout from the numbers broke
Who throng'd to see him die.
It was a people's loud acclaim,
The voice of anger and of shame,
A nation's funeral cry,
Rome's wail above her only son,
Her patriot and her latest one.

NIGHT AT SEA.

THE lovely purple of the noon's bestow-
ing
Has vanish'd from the waters, where it flung
A royal color, such as gems are throwing
Tyrian or regal garniture among.
'Tis night, and overhead the sky is gleaming, Thro' the slight vapor trembles each dim star;
I turn away — my heart is sadly dream-
ing
Of scenes they do not light, of scenes
afar.
My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, as I think
of you?

By each dark wave around the vessel sweeping,
Farther am I from old dear friends removed;
Till the lone vigil that I now am keeping,
I did not know how much you were beloved.

How many acts of kindness little heeded, Kind looks, kind words, rise half reproachful now!

Hurried and anxious, my vex'd life has speeded,
And memory wears a soft accusing
brow.

My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, as I think
of you?

The very stars are strangers, as I catch
them

Athwart the shadowy sails that swell
above;

I cannot hope that other eyes will watch
them

At the same moment with a mutual
love.

They shine not there, as here they now are shining;

The very hours are changed. — Ah, do ye sleep?

O'er each home pillow midnight is declining —

May some kind dream at least my image keep!

My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, as I think
of you?

Yesterday has a charm, To-day could never

Fling o'er the mind, which knows not till it parts

How it turns back with tenderest endeavor

To fix the past within the heart of hearts.

Absence is full of memory, it teaches
The value of all old familiar things;
The strengthener of affection, while it reaches

O'er the dark parting, with an angel's wings.

My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me as I think
of you?

The world, with one vast element omitted —

Man's own especial element, the
earth;

Yet, o'er the waters is his rule
omitted

By that great knowledge where power its birth.

How oft on some strange love while gazing

Have I wish'd for you — bear
new,

The purple waves like some wil-raising

Their snowy banners as the ship through.

My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, as I think
of you?

Bearing upon its wings the hope
morning,

Up springs the flying fish like false joy,

Which of the sunshine asks to be adorning

Whose very light is fated to die
Ah, so doth genius on its rainbow

Spring from the depths of an un-
world;

So spring sweet fancies from the dominion —

Too soon in death the scorwing is furl'd.

My friends, my absent friends!
Whate'er I see is linked thoughts of you.

No life is in the air, but in the waters
Are creatures, huge, and terrible
strong;

The sword-fish and the shark their slaughters,

War universal reigns these
along.

Like some new island on the springing,

Floats on the surface some whale,

From its vast head a silver flashing,

Bright as the fountain in a fairy
My friends, my absent friends!

I read such fairy legends
with you.

Light is amid the gloomy canvas spread-
ing,
The moon is whitening the dusky
sails,
From the thick bank of clouds she masters, shedding
The softest influence that o'er night prevails.
Pale is she like a young queen pale with splendor,
Haunted with passionate thoughts too fond, too deep;
The very glory that she wears is tender,
The very eyes that watch her beauty fain would weep.
My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, as I think
of you?

Sunshine is ever cheerful, when the morning
Wakens the world with cloud-dispelling eyes;
The spirits mount to glad endeavor, scorning
What toil upon a path so sunny lies.
Sunshine and hope are comrades, and their weather
Calls into life an energy like Spring's;
But memory and moonlight go together,
Reflected in the light that either brings.
My friends, my absent friends!
Do you think of me, then? I think of you.

The busy deck is hush'd, no sounds are waking
But the watch pacing silently and
slow;
The waves against the sides incessant breaking,
And rope and canvas swaying to and fro.
The topmost-sail, it seems like some dim pinnacle Cresting a shadowy tower amid the
air;
While red and fitful gleams come from the binnacle,
The only light on board to guide us
— where?

My friends, my absent friends!
Far from my native land, and far from you.

On one side of the ship, the moonbeam's shimmer
In luminous vibrations sweeps the sea,
But where the shadow falls, a strange, pale glimmer Seems, glow-worm like, amid the waves to be.
All that the spirit keeps of thought and feeling,
Takes visionary hues from such an
hour;
But while some phantasy is o'er me stealing,
I start — remembrance has a keener
power:
My friends, my absent friends!
From the fair dream I start to think of you.

A dusk line in the moonlight — I discover
What all day long vainly I sought to catch;
Or is it but the varying clouds that hover Thick in the air, to mock the eyes that watch?
No; well the sailor knows each speck, appearing,
Upon the tossing waves, the far-off
strand;
To that dark line our eager ship is steer-
ing.
Her voyage done — to-morrow we shall land.

HANNIBAL'S OATH.

AND the night was dark and calm,
There was not a breath of air;
The leaves of the grove were still,
And the presence of death was there;—
Only a moaning sound
Came from the distant sea;
It was as if, like life,
It had no tranquillity.

A warrior and a child
 Pass'd through the sacred wood,
 Which, like a mystery,
 Around the temple stood.

The warrior's brow was worn
 With the weight of casque and plume,
 And sun-burnt was his cheek,
 And his eye and brow were gloom.

The child was young and fair,
 But the forehead large and high,
 And the dark eyes' flashing light
 Seem'd to feel their destiny.

They enter'd in the temple,
 And stood before the shrine;
 It stream'd with the victim's blood,
 With incense and with wine.

The ground rock'd beneath their feet,
 The thunder shook the dome;
 But the boy stood firm, and swore Eternal hate to Rome.

There's a page in history
 O'er which tears of blood were wept,
 And that page is the record
 How that oath of hate was kept.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED.

1802-1839.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED was born in London on the 26th of July, 1802. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge. He died on the 15th of July, 1839. TIME'S SONG.

O'ER the level plains, where mountains greet me as I go, O'er the desert waste, where fountains at my bidding flow,
 On the boundless beam by day, on the cloud by night,
 I am riding hence away: who will chain my flight?

War his weary watch was keeping, —
 I have crushed his spear;
 Grief within her bower was weeping, —
 I have dried her tear;
 Pleasure caught a minute's hold, — then I hurried by,
 Leaving all her banquet cold, and her goblet dry.

Power had won a throne of glory:
 where is now his fame?
 Genius said "I live in story": who hath heard his name?
 Love beneath a myrtle bough whispered
 "Why so fast?"
 And the roses on his brow withered as I past.

I have heard the heifer lowing o'er the wild wave's bed;
 I have seen the billow flowing where the cattle fed;
 Where began my wanderings? Memory will not say!
 Where will rest my weary wings? Science turns away!

FUIMUS!

Go to the once loved bowers;
 Wreath blushing roses for the lady's
 hair:
 Winter has been upon the leaves and flowers, —
 They were!

Look for the domes of kings;
 Lo! the owl's fortress, or the tiger's
 lair;
 Oblivion sits beside them; mockery sings
 They were!

Waken the minstrel's lute;
 Bid the smooth pleader charm the listening air :
 The chords are broken, and the lips are mute; —
 They were !

Visit the great and brave;
 Worship the witcheries of the bright
 and fair.
 Is not thy foot upon a new-made
 grave? —
 They were !

Speak to thine own heart; prove The secrets of thy nature. What is
 there?
 Wild hopes, warm fancies, fervent faith, fond love, —
 They were !

We too, we too must fall;
 A few brief years to labor and to bear; —
 Then comes the sexton, and the old trite tale,
 " We were ! "

THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES.

1803-1849.

[THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES was born at Rodney Place, Clifton, on the 29th of July, 1803; he was the son of the famous physician, Dr. Thomas Beddoes, and nephew of the no-less famous Maria Edgeworth. He was educated at Bath and at the Charterhouse, and entered Pembroke College, Oxford, in 1820. From 1825 to 1846 he resided in Germany and Switzerland. He left England again after a stay of a few months, and died under somewhat mysterious circumstances in the hospital at Basle, Jan. 26, 1849. He published during his lifetime The Improvisatore, 1821, and The Bride's Tragedy, 1822, besides various works in German; after his death appeared Death's Jest Book, 1850, and Poems, 1851.]

WOLFRAM'S DIRGE.

If thou wilt ease thine heart
 Of love and all its smart,
 Then sleep, dear, sleep;
 And not a sorrow
 Hang any tear on your eyelashes;
 Lie still and deep,
 Sad soul, until the sea-wave washes
 The rim o' the sun to-morrow,
 In eastern sky.

But wilt thou cure thine heart
 Of love and all its smart,
 Then die, dear, die;
 'Tis deeper, sweeter,
 Than on a rose bank to lie dreaming
 With folded eye;
 And then alone, amid the beaming
 Of love's stars, thou'lt meet her
 In eastern sky.

SONG.

A HO! A ho!
 Love's horn doth blow,
 And he will out a-hawking go.
 His shafts are light as beauty's sighs,
 And bright as midnight's brightest eyes,
 And round his starry way
 The swan-winged horses of the skies,
 With summer's music in their manes,
 Curve their fair necks to zephyr's reins,
 And urge their graceful play.

A ho! A ho!
 Love's horn doth blow,
 And he will out a-hawking go.
 The sparrows flutter round his wrist,
 The feathery thieves that Venus kissed
 And taught their morning song,
 The linnets seek the airy list,
 And swallows two, small pets of spring,
 Beat back the gale with swifter wing,
 And dart and wheel along.

A ho! A ho!
 Love's horn doth blow,
 And he will out a-hawking go.
 Now woe to every gnat that skips
 To fish the fruit of ladies' lips,

His felon blood is shed;
 And woe to flies, whose airy ships
 On beauty cast their anchoring bite,
 And bandit wasp, that naughty wight,
 Whose sting is slaughter-red.

THE SECRET WAY.

[From The Lost Tales of Miletus.]

In haste he sent to gather fresh recruits Among the fiercest tribes his fathers
 ruled,

They whom a woman led When to her feet they tossed the head of Cyrus.

And the tribes answered — "Let the Scythian King

Return repentant to old Scythian ways,
 And laugh with us at foes.

Wains know no sieges — Freedom moves her cities."

Soon came the Victor with his Persian guards,

And all the rallied vengeance of his Medes;

One night, sprang up dread camps
 With lurid watch-lights circling doomed ramparts,

'As hunters round the wild beasts in their lair

Marked for the javelin, wind a belt of fire.

Omarthes scanned his walls
 And said, "Ten years Troy baffled Agamemnon."

Yet pile up walls, out-topping Babylon, Manned foot by foot with sleepless sentinels,

And to and fro will pass,
 Free as the air thro' keyholes,
 Love and Treason.

Be elsewhere told the horrors of that siege,

The desperate sally, slaughter, and repulse

Repelled in turn the foe,
 With Titan ladders scaling cloud-cap bulwarks,

Hurled back and buried under rocks heaved down

By wrathful hands from scatheless battlements.

With words of holy charm,
 Soothing despair and leaving resignation.

Mild thro' the city moved Argiope,
Pale with a sorrow too divine for fear;
And when, at morn and eve,
She bowed her meek head to her father's blessing,

Omartes felt as if the righteous gods Could doom no altars at whose foot she prayed.

Only, when all alone,
Stole from her lips a murmur like complaint,

Shaped in these words, "Wert thou,
then, but a dream?
Or shall I see thee in the Happy Fields?"
Now came with stony eye
The livid vanquisher of cities,
Famine;

And moved to pity now, the Persian sent Heralds with proffered peace on terms that seem Gentle to Asian kings,
And unendurable to Europe's Freemen;

"I from thy city will withdraw my hosts,
And leave thy people to their chiefs and laws,
Taking from all thy realm Nought save the river, which I make my border,

If but, in homage to my sovereign
throne,
Thou pay this petty tribute once a year;
Six grains of Scythian soil,
One urn of water spared from Scythian fountains."

And the Scyth answered—"Let the Mede demand
That which is mine to give, or gold or
life;
The water and the soil
Are, every grain and every drop,
my country's:

"And no man hath a country where a
King
Pays tribute to another for his crown."
And at this stern reply,
The Persian doomed to fire and sword the city.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE EYES.

THOSE eyes, those eyes, how full of heaven they are,
When the calm twilight leaves the heaven most holy,
Tell me, sweet eyes, from what divinest
star
Did ye drink in your liquid melancholy?
Tell me, beloved eyes!

Was it from yon lone orb, that ever by The quiet moon, like hope on patience, hovers,
The star to which hath sped so many a sigh,
Since lutes in Lesbos hallowed it to lovers?
Was that your fount, sweet
eyes?

Ye sibyl books, in which the truths foretold,
Inspire the heart, your dreaming priest, with gladness, Bright alchemists that turn to thoughts
of gold
The leaden cares ye steal away from sadness,
Teach only me, sweet eyes!

Hush! when I ask ye how at length to
gain
The cell where Love the sleeper yet lies hidden,
Loose not those arch lips from their rosy chain;
Be every answer, save your own, for-bidden,—
Feelings are words for eyes!

THE HOLLOW OAK.

HOLLOW is the oak beside the sunny waters drooping;
Thither came, when I was young, happy children trooping; Dream I now, or hear I now — far, their mellow whooping?

Gay below the cowslip bank, see the billow dances,
There I lay, beguiling time — when I lived romances;
Dropping pebbles in the wave, fancies into fancies; —

Farther, where the river glides by the wooded cover,
Where the merlin singeth low, with the hawk above her,
Came a foot and shone a smile — woe is me, the lover!

Leaflets on the hollow oak still as greenly quiver, Musical amid the reeds in murmurs on the river;
But the footstep and the smile! — woe is me for ever!

FRANCIS MAHONEY

(FATHER PROUT).

1805–1866.

[BORN in Cork, Ireland, about 1805; educated at Jesuit colleges in Paris and Rome; took orders in the Catholic church, and relinquished that profession to connect himself with Fraser's Magazine, about 1831; he was also a contributor to Bentley's Miscellany, 1837, and afterwards Paris correspondent for the Globe. His closing years were passed in a monastery at Paris, where he died, May 19, 1866.]

THE BELLS OF SHANDON.

WITH deep affection and recollection
I often think of the Shandon bells, Whose sounds so wild would, in days of childhood,

Fling round my cradle their magic spells.

On this I ponder, where'er I wander,
And thus grow fonder, sweet Cork,
of thee;

With thy bells of Shandon,
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

I have heard bells chiming full many a clime in,

Tolling sublimely in cathedral shrine;
While at a glib rate brass tongues would vibrate,

But all their music spoke naught to
thine;

For memory dwelling on each proud swelling

Of thy belfry knelling its bold notes
free,

Made the bells of Shandon
Sound far more grand on
The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

I have heard bells tolling "old Adrian's mole" in,

Their thunder rolling from the Vatican,

With cymbals glorious, swinging uproarious

In the gorgeous turrets of Notre Dame;

But thy sounds were sweeter than the dome of Peter

Flings o'er the Tiber, pealing solemnly.

Oh the bells of Shandon
Sound far more grand on

The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

There's a bell in Moscow, while on tower and kiosko

In St. Sophia the Turkman gets,
And loud in air, calls men to prayer,
From the tapering summit of tall minarets.
Such empty phantom, I freely grant
them,

But there's an anthem more dear to
me,
It's the bells of Shandon,
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the river
Lee.

JOHN STERLING.

1806-1844.

[BORN at Kames Castle, Isle of Bute, July 20, 1806; son of Edward Sterling, editor of the London Times; was for a short time on the editorial staff of the Athenæum, afterwards a curate, but soon gave his attention to literary studies and pursuits. Among his works are Arthur Comingsby (1833), The Onyx Ring (1836), Minor Poems (1839), The Election (1841), and Stratford, a drama (1843). Died at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, Sept. 18, 1844.]

ON A BEAUTIFUL DAY.

O UNSEEN Spirit! now a calm divine Comes forth from thee, rejoicing earth and air!

Trees, hills, and houses, all distinctly
shine,
And thy great ocean slumbers everywhere.

The mountain ridge against the purple
sky
Stands clear and strong, with darkened rocks and dells,
And cloudless brightness opens wide
and high
A home aerial, where thy presence dwells.

The chime of bells remote, the murmuring sea,
The song of birds in whispering copse and wood,
The distant voice of children's thoughtless glee,
And maiden's song, are all one voice of good.

Amid the leaves' green mass a sunny
play
Of flash and shadow stirs like inward
life:

The ship's white sail glides onward far
away,
Unhaunted by a dream of storm or strife.

THE SPICE-TREE.

THE Spice-Tree lives in the garden
green;
Beside it the fountain flows;
And a fair bird sits the boughs between,
And sings his melodious woes.

No greener garden e'er was known
Within the bounds of an earthly king;
No lovelier skies have ever shone
Than those that illumine its constant Spring.

That coil-bound stem has branches three;
On each a thousand blossoms grow;
And, old as aught of time can be,
The root stands fast in the rocks below.

In the spicy shade ne'er seems to tire
The fount that builds a silvery dome;
And flakes of purple and ruby fire
Gush out, and sparkle amid the foam.

The fair white bird of flaming crest,
And azure wings bedropt with gold,
Ne'er has he known a pause of rest,
But sings the lament that he framed of
old:

"O Princess bright! how long the night
Since thou art sunk in the waters clear!
How sadly they flow from the depth below —
How long must I sing and thou wilt not hear?

"The waters play, and the flowers are
gay,
And the skies are sunny above;
I would that all could fade and fall,
And I, too, cease to mourn my love.

"Oh! many a year, so wakeful and drear,
I have sorrowed and watched, beloved,
for thee!
But there comes no breath from the chambers of death,
While the lifeless fount gushes under
the tree."

The skies grow dark, and they glare with red;
The tree shakes off its spicy bloom;

The waves of the fount in a black pool
spread;
And in thunder sounds the garden's doom.

Down springs the bird, with a long shrill
cry,
Into the sable and angry flood;
And the face of the pool, as he falls from high,
Curdles in circling stains of blood.

But sudden again upswells the fount;
Higher and higher the waters flow — In a glittering diamond arch they mount,
And round it the colors of morning
glow.

Finer and finer the watery mound
Softens and melts to a thin-spun veil,
And tones of music circle around,
And bear to the stars the fountain's tale.

And swift the eddying rainbow screen
Falls in dew on the grassy floor;
Under the Spice-Tree the garden's
Queen
Sits by her lover, who wails no more.

LADY DUFFERIN.

1807-1867.

[HELEN SELINA SHERIDAN, sister of Caroline Norton and granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, born in 1807; became, in 1825, wife of Hon. Price Blackwood, afterwards Lord Dufferin. Her husband died in 1841, and in 1862 she married the Earl of Gifford. She died June 23, 1867. Her son, the present Earl of Dufferin, is widely known as an accomplished statesman and author. Lady Dufferin was the author of many popular songs and ballads, of which The Irish Emigrant's Lament is the best known.]

LAMENT OF THE IRISH EMI- GRANT.

I'm sittin' on the stile, Mary,
Where we sat side by side
On a bright May mornin' long ago,
When first you were my bride;
The corn was springin' fresh and green,
And the lark sang loud and high;

And the red was on your lip, Mary,
And the love-light in your eye.

The place is little changed, Mary;
The day is bright as then;
The lark's loud song is in my ear,
And the corn is green again;
But I miss the soft clasp of your hand,
And your breath, warm on my cheek;

ll keep list'nin' for the words evermore will speak.

step down yonder lane,
e little church stands near, — ch where we were wed, Mary;
ne spire from here.
graveyard lies between, Mary, y step might break your rest, — laid you, darling, down to leep,
our baby on your breast.

lonely now, Mary, — e poor make no new friends;
hey love the better still w our Father sends!
were all I had, Mary, — assin' and my pride:
othing left to care for now, ny poor Mary died.

is the good, brave heart, Mary,
till kept hoping on, e trust in God had left my soul, ny arm's young strength was one;
is comfort ever on your lip, ie kind look on your brow, — ou, Mary, for that same,
h you cannot hear me now.

I thank you for the patient smile
When your heart was fit to break, —
When the hunger-pain was gnawin'
there,
And you hid it for my sake;
I bless you for the pleasant word,
When your heart was sad and sore, —
O, I'm thankful you are gone, Mary,
Where grief can't reach you more!

I'm biddin' you a long farewell,
My Mary, — kind and true!
But I'll not forget you, darling,
In the land I'm goin' to;
They say there's bread and work for
all,
And the sun shines always there, —
But I'll not forget old Ireland,
Were it fifty times as fair!

And often in those grand old woods
I'll sit, and shut my eyes,
And my heart will travel back again
To the place where Mary lies;
And I'll think I see the little stile
Where we sat side by side,
And the springin' corn, and the bright
May morn,
When first you were my bride.

LADY NORTON

(CAROLINE ELIZABETH SARAH NORTON).

1808-1877.

Daughter of Thomas Sheridan, born in 1808; at the age of nineteen married the Hon. Norton. In 1829 published the Sorrows of Rosalie; the following year achieved her reputation as a poetess by the production of the Undying One, which the Quarterly Review deemed worthy of Lord Byron. Subsequent works in prose and poetry obtained a large circle; her most quoted poem is Bingen on the Rhine. Died June 15, 1877.]

LOVE NOT.

t, love not, ye hapless sons of ay!
s gayest wreaths are made of earthly flowers — hat are made to fade and fall
away, they have blossomed but a few short hours.

Love not, love not! The thing you love may die —
May perish from the gay and glad-some earth;
The silent stars, the blue and smiling
sky,
Beam on its grave as once upon its
birth.

Love not, love not! The thing you love may change,
 The rosy lip may cease to smile on
 you;
 The kindly-beaming eye grow cold and strange,
 The heart still warmly beat, yet not be true.

Love not, love not! Oh warning vainly said
 In present years as in the years gone
 by;
 Love flings a halo round the dear one's
 head,
 Faultless, immortal — till they change or die.

NOT LOST, BUT GONE BEFORE.

How mournful seems, in broken dreams,
 The memory of the day,
 When icy Death hath sealed the breath
 Of some dear form of clay.

When pale, unmoved, the face we loved,
 The face we thought so fair,
 And the hand lies cold, whose fervent
 hold
 Once charmed away despair.

Oh, what could heal the grief we feel
 For hopes that come no more,
 Had we ne'er heard the Scripture
 word,
 "Not lost, but gone before."

Oh sadly yet with vain regret
 The widowed heart must yearn;
 And mothers weep their babes asleep
 In the sunlight's vain return.

The brother's heart shall rue to part
 From the one through childhood
 known;
 And the orphan's tears lament for
 years
 A friend and father gone.

For death and life, with ceaseless strife, Beat wild on this world's shore,
 And all our calm is in that balm,
 "Not lost, but gone before."

Oh! world wherein nor death, nor sin,
 Nor weary warfare dwells;
 Their blessed home we parted from
 With sobs and sad farewells.

Where eyes awake, for whose dear sake
 Our own with tears grow dim,
 And faint accords of dying words
 Are changed for heaven's sweet
 hymn;

Oh! there at last, life's trials past,
 We'll meet our loved once more,
 Whose feet have trod the path to God —
 "Not lost, but gone before."

NONE REMEMBER THEE.

NONE remember thee! thou whose
 heart
 Poured love on all around;
 Thy name no anguish can impart —
 'Tis a forgotten sound.
 Thy old companions pass me by
 With a cold bright smile, and a vacant
 eye,
 And none remember thee
 Save me!

None remember thee! thou wert not Beauteous as some things are;
 My glory beamed upon thy lot,
 My pale and quiet star!
 Like a winter bud that too soon hath burst,
 Thy cheek was fading from the first —
 And none remember thee
 Save me!

None remember thee! they could spy
 Nought when they gazed on thee,
 But thy soul's deep love in thy quiet
 eye —
 It hath passed from their memory.

The gifts of genius were not thine,
Proudly before the world to shine —
And none remember thee
Save me!

None remember thee now thou'rt gone!
Or they could not choose but weep,
When they thought of thee, my gentle
one,
In thy long and lonely sleep.
Fain would I murmur thy name, and tell How fondly together we used to dwell —
But none remember thee
Save me!

WE HAVE BEEN FRIENDS TO-GETHER.

We have been friends together,
In sunshine and in shade;
Since first beneath the chestnut trees
In infancy we play'd.

But coldness dwells within thy heart —
A cloud is on thy brow;
We have been friends together —
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been gay together;
We have laugh'd at little jests;
For the fount of hope was gushing,
Warm and joyous, in our breasts.
But laughter now hath fled thy lip,
And sullen glooms thy brow;
We have been gay together —
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been sad together —
We have wept, with bitter tears, O'er the grass-grown graves, where slumber'd
The hopes of early years.
The voices which are silent there Would bid thee clear thy brow;
We have been sad together —
O! what shall part us now?

THE BRAVE OLD OAK.

A SONG to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who hath ruled in the greenwood
long;
Here's health and renown to his broad green crown,
And his fifty arms so strong.
There's fear in his frown when the sun
goes down,
And the fire in the west fades out;
And he showeth his might on a wild midnight,
When the storms through his branches shout.
Then here's to the oak, the brave
old oak,
Who stands in his pride alone;
And still flourish he, a hale green
tree,
When a hundred years are gone!

In the days of old, when the spring
with gold
Had brightened his branches gray,
Through the grass at his feet crept maidens sweet,
To gather the dew of May.
And on that day to the rebeck gay
They frolicked with lovesome swains;
They are gone, they are dead, in the churchyard laid,
But the tree it still remains.
Then here's, etc.

He saw the rare times when the Christmas chimes
Were a merry sound to hear,
When the squire's wide hall and the cottage small
Were filled with good English cheer.
Now gold hath the sway we all obey,
And a ruthless king is he;

But he never shall send our ancient
friend
To be tossed on the stormy sea.
Then here's to the oak, the brave
old oak,

Who stands in his pride :
And still flourish he, a hale
tree,
When a hundred years
gone!

A few years after completing his university course at Cambridge he was elected to Parliament, and distinguished himself as a zealous supporter of all questions relative to popular education and complete religious liberty. His literary efforts were various in kind and of an excellent character. He was also the author of the Life, Letters, and Literary Reminiscences of John Keats, and a contributor to the Westminster Review.]

GOOD NIGHT AND GOOD MORNING.

A FAIR little girl sat under a tree
Sewing as long as her eyes could see;
Then smoothed her work and folded it
right,
And said, "Dear work, good night, good night!"

Such a number of rooks came over her
head, Crying "Caw, caw!" on their way to
bed,
She said, as she watched their curious
flight,
"Little black things, good night, good
night!"

The horses neighed, and the oxen lowed,
The sheep's "Bleat! bleat!" came over the road;
All seeming to say, with a quiet delight,
"Good little girl, good night, good
night!"

She did not say to the sun, "Good
night!"
Though she saw him there like a ball of light;
For she knew he had God's time to keep
All over the world and never could
sleep.

The tall pink foxglove bowed his
head,
The violets courtesied, and went
And good little Lucy tied up her
And said, on her knees, her
prayer.

And, while on her pillow she so She knew nothing more till :
was day;
And all things said to the beautiful
"Good morning, good morning work is begun."

THE MEN OF OLD.

I KNOW not that the men of old
Were better than men now,
Of heart more kind, of hand
bold,
Of more ingenuous brow;
I heed not those who pine for
A ghost of time to raise,
As if they thus could check the
Of these appointed days.

Still it is true, and over-true,
That I delight to close This book of life self-wise and
And let my thoughts repose
On all that humble happiness
The world has since foregone
The daylight of contentedness
That on those faces shone!

With rights, though not too closely scanned,
Enjoyed as far as known,
With will by no reverse unmanned,
With pulse of even tone,
They from to-day, and from to-
night,
Expected nothing more Than yesterday and yesternight
Had proffered them before.

To them was life a simple art
Of duties to be done,
A game where each man took his
part,
A race where all must run;
A battle whose great scheme and scope
They little cared to know,
Content, as men-at-arms, to cope
Each with his fronting foe.

Man now his virtue's diadem
Puts on, and proudly wears. — Great thoughts, great feelings, came
to them,
Like instincts unawares;
Blending their souls' sublimest needs
With tasks of every day
They went about their gravest deeds
As noble boys at play.

And what if Nature's fearful wound
They did not probe and bare,
For that their spirits never swooned
To watch the misery there,
For that their love but flowed more
fast,
Their charities more free,
Not conscious what mere drops they cast
Into the evil sea.

A man's best things are nearest him,
Lie close about his feet;
It is the distant and the dim
That we are sick to greet;
For flowers that grow our hands beneath
We struggle and aspire, —

Our hearts must die, except they breathe
The air of fresh desire.

Yet, brothers, who up reason's hill
Advance with hopeful cheer, —
Oh, loiter not, those heights are chill,
As chill as they are clear;
And still restrain your haughty gaze
The loftier that ye go,
Remembering distance leaves a haze
On all that lies below.

THE BROOKSIDE.

I WANDERED by the brookside,
I wandered by the mill;
I could not hear the brook flow, —
The noisy wheel was still;
There was no burr of grasshopper,
No chirp of any bird,
But the beating of my own heart
Was all the sound I heard.

I sat beneath the elm-tree;
I watched the long, long shade,
And, as it grew still longer,
I did not feel afraid;
For I listened for a footfall,
I listened for a word, —
But the beating of my own heart
Was all the sound I heard.

He came not, — no, he came not, —
The night came on alone, —
The little stars sat one by one,
Each on his golden throne;
The evening wind passed by my cheek,
The leaves above were stirred, —
But the beating of my own heart
Was all the sound I heard.

Fast silent tears were flowing,
When something stood behind;
A hand was on my shoulder, —
I knew its touch was kind:
It drew me nearer, — nearer, —
We did not speak one word,
For the beating of our own hearts
Was all the sound we heard.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

She died at Florence, June 29, 1861, with the reputation of being the greatest poetess England had ever produced.]

COWPER'S GRAVE.

It is a place where poets crowned may feel the hearts' decaying —

It is a place where happy saints may weep amid their praying:

Yet let the grief and humbleness, as low as silence, languish!

Earth surely now may give her calm to whom she gave her anguish.

O poets! from a maniac's tongue was poured the deathless singing!

O Christians! at your cross of hope a hopeless hand was clinging!

O men! this man in brotherhood your weary paths beguiling,

Groaned inly while he taught you peace,
and died while ye were smiling!

And now, what time ye all may read through dimming tears his story,

How discord on the music fell, and darkness on the glory,

And how, when one by one, sweet sounds and wandering lights departed,

He wore no less a loving face because so broken-hearted.

He shall be strong to sanctify the poet's high vocation.

And bow the meekest Christian down in meeker adoration;

Nor ever shall he be, in praise, by wise or good forsaken,

Named softly as the household name of one whom God hath taken.

With quiet sadness and no gloom I learn to think upon him,

With meekness that is gratefulness to God whose heaven hath won
him —

Who suffered once the madness-cloud to His own love to blind him,

But gently led the blind along where breath and bird could find him;

And wrought within his shatter'd brain, such quick poetic senses

As hills have language for, and stars harmonious influences!

The pulse of dew upon the grass kept his within its number,

And silent shadow from the trees refreshed him like a slumber.

Wild timid hares were drawn from woods to share his home-caresses,

Uplooking to his human eyes with silvan tenderesses;

The very world, by God's constraint, from falsehood's ways removing,

Its women and its men became beside him true and loving.

But while in blindness he remained in-conscious of the guiding,

And things provided came without the sweet sense of providing,

He testified this solemn truth though phrenzy desolated —

Nor man nor nature satisfy, whom only God created!

Like a sick child that knoweth not his mother whilst she blesses, And drops upon his burning brow the coolness of her kisses;
That turns his fevered eyes around — “My mother! where’s my mother?” —

As if such tender words and looks could come from any other! —

The fever gone, with leaps of heart he sees her bending o’er him,
Her face all pale from watchful love, the unweary love she bore him! — Thus woke the poet from the dream his life’s long fever gave him, Beneath those deep pathetic Eyes, which closed in death to save him!

Thus? oh, not thus! no type of earth could image that awaking, Wherein he scarcely heard the chant of seraphs round him breaking,
Or felt the new immortal throb of soul from body parted,
But felt those eyes alone, and knew,
“My Saviour! not deserted!”

Deserted! who hath dreamt that when the cross in darkness rested Upon the Victim’s hidden face no love was manifested!
What frantic hands outstretched have e’er the atoning drops averted?
What tears have washed them from the soul, that one should be deserted?

Deserted! God could separate from His own essence rather,
And Adam’s sins have swept between the righteous Son and Father; Yea, once, Immanuel’s orphaned cry his universe hath shaken —
It went up single, echoless, “My God,
I am forsaken!”

It went up from the Holy’s lips amid his lost creation,
That, of the lost, no son should use those words of desolation,

That earth’s worst phrenzies, marring hope, should mar not hope’s fruition,
And I, on Cowper’s grave, should see his rapture in a vision!

A DEAD ROSE.

O ROSE! who dares to name thee?
No longer roseate now, nor soft, nor
sweet;
But barren, and hard, and dry as stubble-wheat,
Kept seven years in a drawer — thy titles shame thee.

The breeze that used to blow thee Between the hedge-row thorns, and take
away
An odor up the lane, to last all day —
If breathing now — unsweetened would forego thee.

The sun that used to smite thee,
And mix his glory in thy gorgeous urn,
Till beam appeared to bloom and flower to burn —
If shining now — with not a hue would light thee.

IRREPARABLENESS.

I HAVE been in the meadows all the
day,
And gathered there the nosegay that you see,
Singing within myself as bird or bee
When such do field-work on a morn of
May.
But, now I look upon my flowers, decay
Has met them in my hands more fatally
Because more warmly clasped, — and sobs are free
To come instead of songs. What you
say,
Sweet counsellors, dear friends? that I should go

Back straightway to the fields and gather more?
Another, sooth, may do it, but not I!
My heart is very tired, my strength is
low,
My hands are full of blossoms plucked
before,
Held dead within them till myself shall die.

GRIEF.

I TELL you, hopeless grief is passion-
less;
That only men incredulous of despair, Half-taught in anguish, through the midnight air
Beat upward to God's throne in loud access
Of shrieking and reproach. Full desert-
ness
In souls as countries lieth silent-bare
Under the blanching vertical eye-glare Of the absolute heavens. Deep-hearted man, express Grief for thy Dead in silence like to
death—
Most like a monumental statue set
In everlasting watch and moveless woe,
Till itself crumble to the dust beneath.
Touch it; the marble eyelids are not
wet:
If it could weep, it could arise and go.

SONNETS FROM THE PORTU-GUESE.

I THOUGHT once how Theocritus had
sung
Of the sweet years, the dear and wished
for years,
Who each one in a gracious hand appears
To bear a gift for mortals, old or young:
And, as I mused it in his antique
tongue,

I saw, in gradual vision through my
tears,
The sweet, sad years, the melancholy
years, —
Those of my own life, who by turns had flung A shadow across me. Straightway I was 'ware,
So weeping, how a mystic Shape did
move
Behind me, and drew me backward by
the hair;
And a voice said in mastery while I strove, —
"Guess now who holds thee?" —
"Death," I said. But, there,
The silver answer rang, — "Not Death, but Love."

Thou hast thy calling to some palace
floor,
Most gracious singer of high poems!
where
The dancers will break footing from the care
Of watching up thy pregnant lips for
more.
And dost thou lift this house's latch, too poor
For hand of thine? and canst thou think and bear
To let thy music drop here unaware
In folds of golden fulness at my door?
Look up and see the casement broken in,
The bats and owlets builders in the roof!
My cricket chirps against thy mandolin.
Hush! call no echo up in further proof
Of desolation! there's a voice within That weeps — as thou must sing — alone, aloof.

Go from me. Yet I feel that I shall stand Henceforward in thy shadow. Never
more
Alone upon the threshold of my door
Of individual life, I shall command
The uses of my soul, nor lift my hand
Serenely in the sunshine as before,

Without the sense of that which I fore-
bore, —
Thy touch upon the palm. The widest
land
Doom takes to part us, leaves thy heart in mine
With pulses that beat double. What I do
And what I dream include thee, as the wine
Must taste of its own grapes. And when I sue God for myself, He hears that name of
thine,
And sees within my eyes the tears of two.

My own beloved, who hast lifted me
From this dear flat of earth where I was thrown,
And in betwixt the languid ringlets,
blown
A life breath, till the forehead hopefully Shines out again, as all the angels see, Before thy saving kiss! My own, my
own,
Who camest to me when the world was
gone,
And I who looked for only God, found
thee!
I find thee; I am safe, and strong, and glad.
As one who stands in dewless asphodel, Looks backward on the tedious time he had
In the upper life — so I, with bosom-
swell,
Make witness, here, between the good and bad,
That Love, as strong as Death, retrieves as well.

My letters! all dead paper, mute and
white!
And yet they seem alive and quivering Against my tremulous hands which loose the string
And let them drop down on my knee to-night.
This said, — he wished to have me in his sight

Once, as a friend: this fixed a day in spring
To come and touch my hand — a simple
thing,
Yet I weep for it! this — the paper's
light —
Said, Dear, I love thee; and I sank and quailed
As if God's future thundered on my
past.
This said, I am thine — and so its ink has paled
With lying at my heart that beat too
fast:
And this — O Love, thy words have ill availed,
If, what this said, I dared repeat at
last!

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of
sight
For the ends of Being and Ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of every day's Most quiet need, by sun and candle-
light.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from
Praise;
I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith;
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints, — I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life! — and, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

FROM "CASA GUIDI WINDOWS."

THEN, gazing, I beheld the long-drawn street
Live out, from end to end, full in the
sun,

With Austria's thousand; sword and bayonet,
 Horse, foot, artillery, — cannons rolling
 on Like blind slow storm-clouds gestant with the heat
 Of undeveloped lightnings, each bestrode
 By a single man, dust-white from head to heel, Indifferent as the dreadful thing he rode,
 Like sculptured Fate serene and terrible.
 As some smooth river which has overflowed,
 Will slow and silent down its current wheel
 A loosened forest, all the pines erect,
 So swept, in mute significance of
 storm,
 The marshalled thousands; not an eye deflects
 To left or right, to catch a novel
 form
 Of Florence city adorned by architect And carver, or of Beauties live and warm
 Scared at the casements, — all, straightforward eyes
 And faces, held as steadfast as their swords,
 And cognizant of acts, not imageries.
 The key, O Tuscans, too well fits the wards!
 Ye asked for mimes, — these bring you tragedies:
 For purple, — these shall wear it as your lords.
 Ye played like children, — die like in-nocents.
 Ye mimicked lightnings with a torch, — the crack
 Of the actual bolt, your pastime circum-vents.
 Ye called up ghosts, believing they were slack
 To follow any voice from Gilboa's tents, . . .
 Here's Samuel! — and, so, Grand-dukes come back!

A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT.

WHAT was he doing, the great God
 Pan,
 Down in the reeds by the river?
 Spreading ruin and scattering ban, Splashing and paddling with hoofs of a goat,
 And breaking the golden lilies afloat
 With the dragon-fly on the river.

He tore out a reed, the great God Pan
 From the deep cool bed of the river.
 The limpid water turbidly ran,
 And the broken lilies a-dying lay,
 And the dragon-fly had fled away,
 Ere he brought it out of the river.

High on the shore sat the great God
 Pan,
 While turbidly flowed the river;
 And hacked and hewed as a great God
 can,
 With his hard bleak steel at the patient
 reed,
 Till there was not a sign of the leaf indeed
 To prove it fresh from the river.

He cut it short, did the great God Pan,
 (How tall it stood in the river!)
 Then drew the pith, like the heart of a
 man,
 Steadily from the outside ring,
 And notched the poor dry empty thing
 In holes, as he sat by the river.

"This is the way," laughed the great God Pan,
 (Laughed while he sat by the river.)
 "The only way, since Gods began To make sweet music, they could succeed."
 Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,
 He blew in power by the river.

Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!
 Piercing sweet by the river!
 Blinding sweet, O great God Pan!
 The sun on the hill forgot to die,

And the lilies revived, and the dragonfly
Came back to dream on the river.

Yet half a beast is the great God Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river,
Making a poet out of a man:
The true Gods sigh for the cost and
pain, —
For the reed which grows never more
again
As a reed with the reeds in the river.

AURORA'S HOME.

[From Aurora Leigh.]

I HAD a little chamber in the house,
As green as any privet-hedge a bird Might choose to build in, though the nest itself
Could show but dead brown sticks and straws; the walls
Were green, the carpet was pure green, the straight Small bed was curtained greenly, and the folds Hung green about the window which let in
The out-door world with all its greenery.
You could not push your head out and escape
A dash of dawn-dew from the honeysuckle,
But so you were baptized into the grace
And privilege of seeing. . . .
First, the lime,
(I had enough there, of the lime, be sure, —
My morning-dream was often hummed
away
By the bees in it); past the lime, the lawn,
Which, after sweeping broadly round
the house,
Went trickling through the shrubberies
in a stream,
Of tender turf, and wore and lost itself
Among the acacias, over which you saw

The irregular line of elms by the deep lane
Which stopped the grounds and dammed the overflow
Of arbutus and laurel. Out of sight
The lane was; sunk so deep, no foreign tramp
Nor drover of wild ponies out of Wales
Could guess if lady's hall or tenant's lodge Dispensed such odors, — though his stick well-crooked Might reach the lowest trail of blossoming briar Which dipped upon the wall. Behind the elms,
And through their tops, you saw the folded hills Striped up and down with hedges (burly oaks
Projecting from the line to show themselves)
Through which my cousin Romney's chimney smoked
As still as when a silent month in frost
Breathes, showing where the woodlands hid Leigh Hall;
While, far above, a jut of table-land,
A promontory without water stretched, —
You could not catch it if the days were thick,
Or took it for a cloud; but, otherwise,
The vigorous sun would catch it up at
eve
And use it for an anvil till he had filled
The shelves of heaven with burning thunderbolts,
Protesting against night and darkness:
— then,
When all his setting trouble was resolved
To a trance of passive glory, you might see
In apparition on the golden sky (Alas, my Giotto's background!) the sheep run
Along the fine clear outline, small as mice
That run along a witch's scarlet thread.

THE BEAUTY OF ENGLAND.

[From Aurora Leigh.]

I LEARNT to love that England. Very oft,
 Before the day was born, or otherwise Through secret windings of the afternoons,
 I threw my hunters off and plunged myself
 Among the deep hills, as a hunted stag Will take the waters, shivering with the fear
 And passion of the course. And when at last Escaped, so many a green slope built on slope Betwixt me and the evening's house behind,
 I dared to rest, or wander, in a rest Made sweeter for the step upon the grass,
 And view the ground's most gentle dimplement, (As if God's finger touched, but did not press
 In making England) such an up and
 down
 Of verdure, — nothing too much up or
 down,
 A ripple of land; such little hills, the
 sky
 Can stoop so tenderly and the wheat-fields climb;
 Such nooks of valleys lined with orchises,
 Fed full of noises by invisible streams;
 And open pastures where you scarcely
 tell White daisies from white dew, — at intervals
 The mythic oaks and elm-trees standing out
 Self-poised upon their prodigy of
 shade, —
 I thought my father's land was worthy
 too
 Of being my Shakespeare's.

After we walked only two,
 My cousin Romney pleased to walk with
 me.

We read, or talked, or quarrelled, as it chanced.

We were not lovers, nor even friends well-matched:

Say rather, scholars upon different tracks,

And thinkers disagreed, he, overfull
 Of what is, and I, haply, overbold
 For what might be.

But then the thrushes sang,
 And shook my pulses and the elms' new
 leaves;

At which I turned, and held my finger
 up,

And bade him mark that, howsoe'er the
 world

Went ill, as he related, certainly The thrushes still sang in it. At the word

His brow would soften, — and he bore
 with me

In melancholy patience, not unkind,
 While breaking into voluble ecstasy
 I flattered all the beauteous country
 round,

As poets use, the skies, the clouds, the fields,

The happy violets hiding from the roads

The primroses run down to, carrying
 gold;

The tangled hedgerows, where the cows push out

Impatient horns and tolerant churning mouths

'Twixt dripping ash-boughs, — hedge-rows all alive

With birds and gnats and large white butterflies,

Which look as if the May-flower had caught life

And palpitated forth upon the wind;
 Hills, vales, woods, netted in a silver
 mist,

Farms, granges, doubled up among the hills;

And cattle grazing in the watered vales,

And cottage-chimneys smoking from the woods,

And cottage-gardens smelling everywhere,

confused with smell of orchards.
 "See," I said,
 and see! is God not with us on the
 earth?
 and shall we put him down by aught
 we do?
 who says there's nothing for the poor and vile in poverty and wickedness? behold!" and ankle-deep in English grass I leaped and clapped my hands, and called all very fair.

MARIAN'S CHILD.

[From Aurora Leigh.]

THERE he lay upon his back, the yearling creature, warm and moist with life
 the bottom of his dimples, — to the ends
 the lovely tumbled curls about his
 face;
 for since he had been covered over-
 much to keep him from the light-glare, both his cheeks were hot and scarlet as the first live
 rose
 the shepherd's heart-blood ebbed away into the faster for his love. And love was here
 instant; in the pretty baby-mouth, not close as if for dreaming that it sucked,
 the little naked feet, drawn up the way nestled birdlings; everything so soft and tender, — to the tiny holdfast
 hands,
 which, closing on a finger into sleep,
 had kept the mould of 't.

While we stood there dumb, for oh, that it should take such innocence
 to prove just guilt, I thought, and stood there dumb, —
 the light upon his eyelids pricked them
 wide,

And, staring out at us with all their
 blue,
 As half perplexed between the angel-
 hood
 He had been away to visit in his sleep,
 And our most mortal presence, gradually
 He saw his mother's face, accepting it In change for heaven itself with such a
 smile
 As might have well been learnt there, — never moved,
 But smiled on, in a drowse of ecstasy,
 So happy (half with her and half with heaven)
 He could not have the trouble to be stirred,
 But smiled and lay there. Like a rose,
 I said;
 As red and still indeed as any rose,
 That blows in all the silence of its leaves,
 Content in blowing to fulfil its life.

SOUNDS.

I.

HEARKEN, hearken!
 The rapid river carrieth
 Many noises underneath
 The hoary ocean:
 Teaching his solemnity
 Sounds of inland life and glee,
 Learnt beside the waving tree,
 When the winds in summer prank
 Toss the shades from bank to bank,
 And the quick rains, in emotion Which rather gladdens earth than grieves,
 Count and visibly rehearse
 The pulse of the universe
 Upon the summer leaves —
 Learnt among the lilies straight,
 When they bow them to the weight
 Of many bees whose hidden hum Seemeth from themselves to come — Learnt among the grasses green,
 Where the rustling mice are seen
 By the gleaming, as they run,
 Of their quick eyes in the sun;
 And lazy sheep are browsing through,
 With their noses trailed in dew;

And the squirrel leaps adown,
 Holding fast the filbert brown;
 And the lark, with more of mirth
 In his song than suits the earth,
 Droppeth some in soaring high,
 To pour the rest out in the sky:
 While the woodland doves, apart
 In the copse's leafy heart, Solitary, not ascetic, Hidden and yet vocal seem Joining in a lovely psalm,
 Man's despondence Nature's calm,
 Half mystical and half pathetic,
 Like a sighing in a dream.
 All these sounds the river telleth,
 Softened to an undertone
 Which ever and anon he swelleth
 By a burden of his own,
 In the ocean's ear.
 Ay! and ocean seems to hear
 With an inward gentle scorn,
 Smiling to his caverns worn.

II.

Hearken, hearken!
 The child is shouting at his play
 Just in the tramping funeral's way:
 The widow moans as she turns aside
 To shun the face of the blushing bride, While, shaking the tower of the ancient church,
 The marriage-bells do swing:
 And in the shadow of the porch
 An idiot sits, with his lean hands full
 Of hedgerow flowers and a poet's skull,
 Laughing loud and gibbering,
 Because it is so brown a thing,
 While he sticketh the gaudy poppies red
 In and out the senseless head
 Where all sweet fancies grew instead.
 And you may hear, at the self-same time,
 Another poet who reads his rhyme,
 Low as a brook in summer air, —
 Save when he droppeth his voice adown,
 To dream of the amaranthine crown
 His mortal brow shall wear.
 And a baby cries with a feeble sound
 'Neath the weary weight of the life new-found;
 And an old man groans, — with his testament

Only half signed, — for the life that's spent:
 And lovers twain do softly say,
 As they sit on a grave, "for aye, for aye!" And foemen twain, while Earth their mother
 Looks greenly upward, curse each other.
 A school-boy drones his task, with looks Cast over the page to the elm-tree rooks.
 A lonely student cries aloud
Eureka! clasping at his shroud;
 A beldame's age-cracked voice doth sin
 To a little infant slumbering:
 A maid forgotten weeps alone,
 Muffling her sobs on the trysting stone;
 A sick man wakes at his own mouth's wail;
 A gossip coughs in her thrice-told tale;
 A muttering gamester shakes the dice;
 A reaper foretells good luck from the
 skies;
 A monarch vows as he lifts his hand to
 them;
 A patriot leaving his native land to them,
 Cries to the world against perjured state;
 A priest disserts upon linen skirts;
 A sinner screams for one hope more;
 A dancer's feet do palpitate
 A piper's music out on the floor;
 And nigh to the awful Dead, the living Low speech and stealthy steps are giving,
 Because he cannot hear;
 And he who on that narrow bier
 Has room enow, is closely wound
 In a silence piercing more than sound.

III.

Hearken, hearken!
 God speaketh to thy soul;
 Using the supreme voice which doth confound
 All life with consciousness of Deity,
 All senses into one;
 As the seer-saint of Patmos, loving John,
 For whom did backward roll
 The cloud-gate of the future, turned to see
 The Voice which spake. It speaketh
 now —

Through the regular breath of the calm creation,
Through the moan of the creature's desolation
Striking, and in its stroke, resembling
The memory of a solemn vow,
Which pierceth the din of a festival
To one in the midst, — and he letteth fall
The cup, with a sudden trembling.

IV.

Hearken, hearken!
God speaketh in thy soul;
Saying, "O thou that movest With feeble steps across this earth of
mine,
To break beside the fount thy golden bowl
And spill its purple wine, — Look up to heaven and see how, like a scroll,
My right hand hath thine immortality In an eternal grasping! Thou, that lovest
The songful birds and grasses underfoot,
And also what change mars and tombs pollute —
I am the end of love! — give love to me!
O thou that sinnest, grace doth more abound
Than all thy sin! sit still beneath my rood,
And count the droppings of my victim-
blood,
And seek none other sound!"

V.

Hearken, hearken!
Shall we hear the lapsing river
And our brother's sighing ever,
And not the voice of God?

MOTHER AND POET.

[Turin. After news from Gaeta, 1861.]

DEAD! one of them shot by the sea in the east,
And one of them shot in the west by
the sea.

Dead! both my boys! When you sit at the feast
And are wanting a great song for Italy free,
Let none look at me!

Yet I was a poetess only last year,
And good at my art, for a woman,
men said.
But this woman, this, who is agonized
here,
The east sea and west sea rhyme on in her head
Forever instead.

What art can a woman be good at?
Oh vain!
What art is she good at, but hurting her breast
With the milk-teeth of babes, and a smile at the pain?
Ah, boys, how you hurt! you were strong as you pressed,
And I proud, by that test.

What art's for a woman? to hold on her knees
Both darlings! to feel all their arms round her throat
Cling, strangle a little! to sew by degrees,
And 'broider the long clothes and neat little coat!
To dream and to dote.

To teach them . . . It stings there. I made them indeed Speak plain the word "country." I taught them, no doubt,
That a country's a thing men should die for at need.
I prated of liberty, rights, and about
The tyrant turned out.

And when their eyes flashed . . . O my beautiful eyes!
I exulted! nay, let them go forth at the wheels
Of the guns, and denied not. But then the surprise,
When one sits quite alone! Then one weeps, then one kneels!
— God! how the house feels!

At first happy news came, in gay letters moiled

With my kisses, of camp-life and glory
and how

They both loved me, and soon, coming home to be spoiled,

In return would fan off every fly from my brow

With their green-laurel bough.

Then was triumph at Turin. "Ancona was free!"

And some one came out of the cheers in the street,

With a face pale as stone, to say something to me.

— My Guido was dead! — I fell down at his feet,

While they cheered in the street.

I bore it — friends soothed me: my grief looked sublime

As the ransom of Italy. One boy remained

To be leant on and walked with, recalling the time

When the first grew immortal, while both of us strained

To the height he had gained.

And letters still came, — shorter, sadder, more strong,

Writ now but in one hand. "I was not to faint.

One loved me for two . . . would be with me ere long:

And "Viva Italia" he died for, our saint,

Who forbids our complaint.

My Nanni would add "he was safe and aware

Of a presence that turned off the balls
. . . was imprest

It was Guido himself, who knew what I could bear.

And how 'twas impossible, quite dis-
possessed,

To live on for the rest."

On which without pause up the telegraph line

Swept smoothly the next news from Gaeta: — Shot.

Tell his mother, Ah, ah, — "his,"
"their" mother: not "mine."

No voice says "my mother" again to me. What!

You think Guido forgot?

Are souls straight so happy that, dizzy with Heaven,

They drop earth's affection, conceive not of woe?

I think not. Themselves were too lately forgiven

Through that Love and Sorrow which reconciled so

The Above and Below.

O Christ of the seven wounds, who look'dst through the dark

To the face of Thy mother! consider,
I pray,

How we common mothers stand desolate, mark,

Whose sons, not being Christs, die with eyes turned away,

And no last word to say!

Both boys dead! but that's out of nature. We all

Have been patriots, yet each house must always keep one

'Twere imbecile, hewing out roads to a wall.

And, when Italy's made, for what end is it done

If we have not a son?

Ah, ah, ah! when Gaeta's taken, what
then?

When the fair wicked queen sits no more at her sport

Of the fire-balls of death crashing souls out of men?

When your guns of Cavalli with final retort

Have cut the game short, —

When Venice and Rome keep their new jubilee,

When your flag takes all heaven for its white, green, and red,

When you have your country from mountain to sea,
When King Victor has Italy's crown on his head,
(And I have my dead,) .

What then? Do not mock me? Ah, ring your bells low,
And burn your lights faintly. My country is there,
Above the star pricked by the last peak
of snow.
My Italy's there — with my brave civic Pair,
To disfranchise despair.

Forgive me. Some women bear children in strength,
And bite back the cry of their pain in self-scorn.
But the birth-pangs of nations will wring us at length
Into wail such as this! — and we sit on forlorn
When the man-child is born.

Dead! — one of them shot by the sea in the west!
And one of them shot in the east by
the sea!
Both! both my boys! — If in keeping the feast
You want a great song for your Italy
free,
Let none look at me!

THE SLEEP.

OF all the thoughts of God that are Borne inward unto souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if that any is For gift or grace surpassing this —
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

What would we give to our beloved?
The hero's heart, to be unmoved —
The poet's star-tuned harp to sweep —
The senate's shout to patriot's vows —
The monarch's crown, to light the brows?
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

What do we give to our beloved?
A little faith, all undisproved —
A little dust to overweep —
And bitter memories, to make
The whole earth blasted for our sake! —
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

“Sleep soft, beloved!” we sometimes
say,
But have no tune to charm away Sad dreams that through the eyelid
creep,
But never doleful dream again Shall break the happy slumber when
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

O earth, so full of dreary noises!
O men, with wailing in your voices!
O delved gold the wailers' heap!
O strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
God makes a silence through you all,
“And giveth His beloved sleep.”

His dew drops mutely on the hill;
His cloud above it saileth still,
Though on its slope men toil and reap.
More softly than the dew is shed,
Or cloud is floated overhead,
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

Yea! men may wonder while they scan
A living, thinking, feeling man
In such a rest his heart to keep;
But angels say — and through the word
I ween their blessed smile is heard —
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

For me, my heart that erst did go
Most like a tired child at a show,
That sees through tears the juggler's leap,
Would now its wearied vision close —
Would, childlike, on His love repose
Who “giveth His beloved sleep.”

And friends! — dear friends! — when it shall be
That this low breath is gone from me,
And round my bier ye come to weep,
Let one, most loving of you all,
Say “Not a tear must o'er her fall” —
“He giveth His beloved sleep.”

THE FORGING OF THE ANCHOR.

COME, see the Dolphin's anchor forged!
'tis at a white heat now —

The bellows ceased, the flames decreased;
though, on the forge's brow,

The little flames still fitfully play through the sable mound;

And fitfully you still may see the grim smiths ranking round;

All clad in leathern panoply, their broad hands only bare,

Some rest upon their sledges here, some work the windlass there.

The windlass strains the tackle-chains
— the black mould heaves below;

And red and deep, a hundred veins burst out at every throe.

It rises, roars, rends all outright — O, Vulcan, what a glow!

'Tis blinding white, 'tis blasting bright
— the high sun shines not so!

The high sun sees not, on the earth, such fiery fearful show!

The roof-ribs swarth, the candent hearth, the ruddy lurid row

Of smiths — that stand, an ardent band, like men before the foe!

As, quivering through his fleece of flame, the sailing monster slow

Sinks on the anvil — all about, the faces fiery grow:

"Hurrah!" they shout, "leap out, leap out!" bang, bang! the sledges
go;

Hurrah! the jetted lightnings are hissing high and low;

A hailing fount of fire is struck at every squashing blow;

The leathern mail rebounds the hail;
the rattling cinders strew

The ground around; at every bound the sweltering fountains flow;

And, thick and loud, the swinking crowd at every stroke pant "ho!"

Leap out, leap out, my masters! leap out, and lay on load!

Let's forge a goodly anchor — a bower thick and broad;

For a heart of oak is hanging on every blow, I bode;

And I see the good ship riding, all in a perilous road —

The low reef roaring on her lea; the roll of ocean poured

From stem to stern, sea after sea; the main-mast by the board;

The bulwarks down; the rudder gone;
the boats stove at the chains;

But courage still, brave mariners — the bower yet remains!

And not an inch to flinch he deigns — save when ye pitch sky high;

Then moves his head, as though he said,
"Fear nothing — here am I!"

Swing in your strokes in order! let foot and hand keep time;

Your blows make music sweeter far than any steeple's chime.

But while ye swing your sledges, sing;
and let the burden be,

The anchor is the anvil king, and royal craftsmen we!

Strike in, strike in! — the sparks begin to dull their rustling red;

hammers ring with sharper din — our work will soon be sped; anchor soon must change his bed of fiery rich array a hammock at the roaring bows, or an oozy couch of clay;
 anchor soon must change the lay of merry craftsmen here the yeo-heav-o, and the heave-away, and the sighing seamen's cheer —

en, weighing slow, at eve they go, far, far from love and home;
 I sobbing sweethearts, in a row, wail o'er the ocean foam.

ivid and obdurate gloom, he darkens down at last;

hapely one he is, and strong, as e'er from cat was cast.

usted and trustworthy guard! if thou hadst life like me, at pleasures would thy toils reward beneath the deep green sea!

leep sea-diver, who might then behold such sights as thou? — hoary monster's palaces! — Methinks what joy 'twere now go plumb-plunging down, amid the assembly of the whales,

I feel the churned sea round me boil beneath their scourging tails!

en deep in tangle-woods to fight the fierce sea-unicorn,

I send him foiled and bellowing back, for all his ivory horn;

leave the subtle sworder-fish of bony blade forlorn;

I for the ghastly-grinning shark, to laugh his jaws to scorn;

leap down on the kraken's back, where 'mid Norwegian isles lies, a lubber anchorage for sudden shallowed miles —

, snorting like an under-sea volcano, off he rolls;

anwhile to swing, a-buffeting the far astonished shoals

Of his back-browsing ocean-calves; or, haply, in a cove Shell-strown, and consecrate of old to some Undine's love,
 To find the long-haired mermaidens; or,
 hard by icy lands,
 To wrestle with the sea-serpent, upon cerulean sands.

O broad-armed fisher of the deep! whose sports can equal thine?

The dolphin weighs a thousand tons,
 that tugs thy cable line;

And night by night 'tis thy delight, thy glory day by day,

Through sable sea and breaker white the giant game to play.

But, shamer of our little sports! forgive the name I gave:

A fisher's joy is to destroy — thine office is to save.

O lodger in the sea-kings' halls! couldst thou but understand

Whose be the white bones by thy side — or who that dripping band,

Slow swaying in the heaving wave, that round about thee bend,

With sounds like breakers in a dream blessing their ancient friend —

Oh, couldst thou know what heroes glide with larger steps round thee,

Thine iron side would swell with pride — thou'dst leap within the sea!

Give honor to their memories who left the pleasant strand

To shed their blood so freely for the love of father-land —

Who left their chance of quiet age and grassy churchyard grave

So freely, for a restless bed amid the tossing wave!

Oh, though our anchor may not be all I have fondly sung,

Honor him for their memory whose bones he goes among!

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER.

1810-1889.

[BORN in London, July 17, 1810; educated at the Charterhouse School and at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated in 1831; studied law but never practised; published anonymously a volume of poems (1832), and in 1838 issued the work by which he is best known, Proverbial Philosophy (second series, 1842; third, 1867). Mr. Tupper has written many other volumes of prose and verse. In 1851 and 1876 he visited the United States.]

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

[Proverbial Philosophy.]

INQUIREST thou, O man, wherewithal may I come unto the Lord?

And with what wonder-working sounds may I move the majesty of
heaven?

There is a model to thy hand; upon that do thou frame thy supplication.

Wisdom hath measured its words, and redemption urgeth thee to use
them.

Call thy God thy Father, and yet not thine alone,

For thou art but one of many, thy brotherhood is with all:

Remember his high estate, that he dwelleth King of Heaven;

So shall thy thoughts be humbled, nor love be unmixed with reverence:

Be thy first petition unselfish, the honor of him who made thee,

And that in the depths of thy heart his memory be shrined in holiness.

Pray for that blessed time when good shall triumph over evil,

And one universal temple echo the per-fections of Jehovah:

Bend thou to his good-will, and subserve his holy purposes,

Till in thee, and those around thee, grow a little heaven upon earth:

Humbly, as a grateful aimsman, beg thy bread of God, —

Bread for thy triple estate, for thou hast a trinity of nature:

Humility smootheneth the way, and gratitude softeneth the heart,

Be then thy prayer for pardon mingled with the tear of penitence;

Yea, and while, all unworthy, thou leanest on the hand that should smite,

Thou canst not from thy fellows withhold thy less forgiveness.

To thy father thy weaknesses are known,
and thou hast not hid thy sin,

Therefore ask him, in all trust, to lead thee from the dangers of temptation:

While the last petition of the soul that breatheth on the confines of
prayer

Is deliverance from sin and the evil one, the miseries of earth and
hell.

And wherefore, child of hope, should the rock of thy confidence be sure?

Thou knowest that God heareth, and promiseth an answer of peace;

Thou knowest that he is King, and none can stay his hand,

Thou knowest his power to be boundless, for there is none other:

And to Him thou givest glory, as a creature of his workmanship and favor,

For the never-ending term of thy saved and bright existence.

ALL'S FOR THE BEST.

ALL's for the best! be sanguine and cheerful,

Trouble and sorrow are friends in disguise,

Nothing but Folly goes faithless and fearful,
Courage forever is happy and wise :
All for the best, — if a man would but know it,
Providence wishes us all to be blest,
This is no dream of the pundit or poet, Heaven is gracious, and — All's for the best !
All for the best ! set this on your standard,
Soldier of sadness, or pilgrim of
love,
Who to the shores of Despair may have wander'd, A waywearied swallow, or heart-stricken dove :
All for the best ! — be a man but confiding,

Providence tenderly governs the rest,
And the frail bark of His creature is guiding Wisely and warily all for the best.
All for the best ! then fling away terrors,
Meet all your fears and your foes in
the van,
And in the midst of your dangers or errors
Trust like a child, while you strive like a man :
All's for the best ! — unbiass'd, unbounded,
Providence reigns from the East to the West ;
And, by both wisdom and mercy surrounded,
Hope and be happy that All's for the best !

IN THE DAYS O' LANGSYNE.

In the days o' langsyne, when we carles
were young,
An' nae foreign fashions amang us had
sprung ;
When we made our ain bannocks, and brew'd our ain yill,
An' were clad frae the sheep that gaed white on the hill ;
O ! the thocht o' thae days gars my auld heart aye fill !
In the days o' langsyne we were happy and free,
Proud lords on the land, and kings on
the sea !
To our foes we were fierce, to our friends
we were kind,
An' where battle raged loudest, you ever clid find
The banner of Scotland float high in the wind !

In the days o' langsyne we aye rantet and sang
By the warm ingle side, or the wild braes amang ;
Our lads busk'd braw, and our lasses look'd fine,
An' the sun on our mountains seem'd ever to shine ;
O ! where is the Scotland o' bonnie langsyne ?
In the days o' langsyne ilka glen had its tale,
Sweet voices were heard in ilk breath o'
the gale ;
An' ilka wee burn had a sang o' its
ain,
As it trotted alang through the valley or
plain ;
Shall we e'er hear the music o' stream-lets again ?

In the days o' langsyne there were feasting and glee,
 Wi' pride in ilk heart, and joy in ilk ee;
 And the auld, 'mang the nappy, their eild seem'd to tyme,
 It was your stoup the nicht, and the morn 'twas mine:
 O! the days o' langsyne — O! the days
 o' langsyne.

THE EXILE'S SONG.

OH! why left I my hame?
 Why did I cross the deep?
 Oh! why left I the land
 Where my forefathers sleep?
 I sigh for Scotia's shore,
 And I gaze across the sea,
 But I canna get a blink
 O' my ain countrie!

The palm-tree waveth high,
 And fair the myrtle springs;

And, to the Indian maid,
 The bulbul sweetly sings.
 But I dinna see the broom Wi' its tassels on the lea,
 Nor hear the lintie's sang
 O' my ain countrie!

Oh! here no Sabbath bell Awakes the Sabbath morn,
 Nor song of reapers heard
 Amang the yellow corn:
 For the tyrant's voice is here,
 And the wail of slavery;
 But the sun of freedom shines
 In my ain countrie!

There's a hope for every woe,
 And a balm for every pain;
 But the first joys o' our heart
 Come never back again.
 There's a track upon the deep
 And a path across the sea;
 But the weary ne'er return
 To their ain countrie!

LADY MARY.

THOU wert fair, Lady Mary,
 As the lily in the sun:
 And fairer yet thou mightest be,
 Thy youth was but begun:
 Thine eye was soft and glancing,
 Of the deep bright blue;
 And on the heart thy gentle words
 Fell lighter than the dew.

They found thee, Lady Mary,
 With thy palms upon thy breast,
 Even as thou hadst been praying,
 At thine hour of rest:
 The cold pale moon was shining
 On thy cold pale cheek;
 And the morn of the Nativity
 Had just begun to break.

They carved thee, Lady Mary,
 All of pure white stone,
 With thy palms upon thy breast,
 In the chancel all alone:

And I saw thee when the winter moon Shone on thy marble cheek,
 When the morn of the Nativity
 Had just begun to break.

But thou kneelest, Lady Mary,
 With thy palms upon thy breast,
 Among the perfect spirits,
 In the land of rest:
 Thou art even as they took thee
 At thine hour of prayer,
 Save the glory that is on thee
 From the sun that shineth there.

We shall see thee, Lady Mary,
 On that shore unknown,
 A pure and happy angel
 In the presence of the throne;
 We shall see thee when the light divine Plays freshly on thy cheek,
 And the resurrection morning
 Hath just begun to break.

"She said, 'I am awcary, awcary ;
I would that I were dead!' "

ALFRED TENNYSON.

1809- .

omersby, Lincolnshire, England, 1809, being the third of the seven sons of Rev. Tennyson, D.D., rector of Somersby; entered Trinity College, Cambridge, about 1827 with his two elder brothers, Frederick and Charles. A small anonymous volume of Brothers (1827) contained the earliest published verses of Charles and Alfred; in 1828 his brother, Frederick, gained the medal for a Greek poem, and in 1829 Alfred obtained the Chancellor's medal for an English poem (Timbuctoo) of 250 lines. One of his chief prizes was his most intimate college friend, Arthur H. Hallam (d. 1833), to whom in later years, the poem In Memoriam was dedicated. In 1830 he published a volume of Poems Chiefly Lyrical; in 1832 his third volume of poems appeared, containing Calontarf, Cædmon, The May Queen, and The Lotos Eaters. In 1842 a new edition of two volumes, was issued, which contained Morte d'Arthur, Locksley Hall, and The Princess. The Princess was given to the public in 1847, In Memoriam in 1850. In 1850 he was elected Wordsworth as Poet Laureate. Maud and other poems appeared in 1855. The Idylls of the King was issued in 1858, and has been generally accepted as his greatest poetical effort. Enoch Arden and other poems, published in 1869, completed the Arthurian legend. His other poems include Enoch Arden (1864), Gareth and Lynette (1872), Queen Mary, a drama (1877). He has lived for the most part a retired life in the Isle of Wight, not much in society, but greatly beloved by his intimate friends. Wordsworth probably "decidedly the first of our living poets," an opinion which has been accepted by reviewers on both sides of the Atlantic. In December, 1883, Mr. Tennyson was elected a member of the United Kingdom.]

She only said, "The night is dreary,

She said, "I am weary, weary,

Upon the middle of the night,
Waking she heard the night-fowl crow:

The cock sung out an hour ere light:
From the dark fen the oxen's low
Came to her: without hope of change,
In sleep she seemed to walk forlorn, Till cold winds woke the gray-eyed
morn

About the lonely moated grange.
She only said, "The day is dreary;

She said, "I am weary, weary,

About a stone-cast from the wall
A sluice with blacken'd waters slept,
And o'er it many, round and small,
The cluster'd marish-mosses crept.
Hard by a poplar shook alway,
All silver-green with gnarled bark:

For leagues no other tree did mark
The level waste, the rounding gray.

She only said, "My life is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am weary, weary,
I would that I were dead!"

And ever when the moon was low,
And the shrill winds were up and
away,

In the white curtain, to and fro,
She saw the gusty shadows sway.
But when the moon was very low,
And wild winds bound within their
cell,

The shadow of the poplar fell Upon her bed, across her brow.

She only said, "The night is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am weary, weary,
I would that I were dead!"

All day within the dreamy house,
The doors upon their hinges creak'd;
The blue fly sung in the pane; the mouse

Behind the mouldering wainscot shriek'd,

Or from the crevice peered about.
Old faces glimmer'd thro' the doors,
Old footsteps trod the upper floors, Old voices called her from without.

She only said, "My life is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am weary, weary,
I would that I were dead!"

The sparrow's chirrup on the roof,
The slow clock ticking, and the sound
Which to the wooing wind aloof
The poplar made, did all confound Her sense; but most she loathed the
hour

When the thick-moted sunbeam lay
Athwart the chambers, and the day
Was sloping toward his western bower.
Then said she, "I am very dreary,
He will not come," she said;
She wept, "I am weary, weary,
O God, that I were dead!"

THE LADY OF SHALOTT.

PART I.

ON either side the river lie
Long fields of barley and of rye,
That clothe the wold and meet the sky;
And thro' the field the road runs by

To many-tower'd Camelot;
And up and down the people go,
Gazing where the lilies blow
Round an island there below,
The island of Shalott.

Willows whiten, aspens quiver,
Little breezes dusk and shiver
Thro' the wave that runs forever
By the island in the river

Flowing down to Camelot.
Four gray walls, and four gray towers,
Overlook a space of flowers,
And the silent isle imbowers
The Lady of Shalott.

By the margin, willow-veil'd,
Slide the heavy barges trail'd
By slow horses; and unhail'd
The shallop flitteth silken-sail'd

Skimming down to Camelot:
But who hath seen her wave her hand?
Or at the casement seen her stand?
Or is she known in all the land,
The Lady of Shalott?

Only reapers, reaping early
In among the bearded barley,
Hear a song that echoes cheerly
From the river winding clearly,
Down to tower'd Camelot:
And by the moon the reaper weary,
Piling sheaves in uplands airy, Listening, whispers, "'Tis the fairy Lady of Shalott."

PART II.

There she weaves by night and day
A magic web with colors gay.
She has heard a whisper say,
A curse is on her if she stay
To look down to Camelot.
She knows not what the curse may be,

she weaveth steadily,
 title other care hath she,
 The Lady of Shalott.

moving thro' a mirror clear images before her all the year, things of the world appear.
 she sees the highway near Winding down to Camelot:
 the river eddy whirls,
 there the surly village-churls,
 the red cloaks of market girls, Pass onward from Shalott.

comes a troop of damsels glad,
 heron on an ambling pad,
 comes a curly shepherd-lad, long-hair'd page in crimson clad,
 Goes by to tower'd Camelot;
 sometimes thro' the mirror blue knights come riding two and two:
 no loyal knight and true,
 The Lady of Shalott.

her web she still delights to weave the mirror's magic sights, for often thro' the silent night her soul that full of dreams,
 And music, went to Camelot:
 when the moon was overhead,
 two young lovers lately wed;
 "A half-sick of shadows," said
 The Lady of Shalott.

PART III.

shot from her bower-eaves, where between the barley-sheaves, in came dazling thro' the leaves, armed upon the brazen greaves
 Of bold Sir Lancelot, cross knight forever kneeled at the foot of her altar-shield, sunk long on the yellow field, Beside remote Shalott.

her emmy bridle glitter'd free, above some branch of stars we see four angels in the golden Galaxy;
 then bells rang merrily
 As he rode down to Camelot:
 from his blazon'd baldrick hung a great silver bugle hung, and he rode his armor rung,
 Beside remote Shalott

All in the blue unclouded weather
 Thick-jewell'd shone the saddle-leather
 The helmet and the helmet-feather Burned like one burning flame together,
 As he rode down to Camelot.
 As often thro' the purple night,
 Below the starry clusters bright,
 Some bearded meteor, trailing light,
 Moves over still Shalott.

His broad clear brow in sunlight glow'd;
 On burnish'd hooves his war-horse trode:

From underneath his helmet flow'd
 His coal-black curls as on he rode,
 As he rode down to Camelot.
 From the bank and from the river
 He flash'd into the crystal mirror,
 "Tirra lirra," by the river Sang Sir Lancelot.

She left the web, she left the loom,
 She made three paces thro' the room,
 She saw the water-lily bloom,
 She saw the helmet and the plume,
 She look'd down to Camelot.
 Out flew the web and floated wide;
 The mirror crack'd from side to side;
 "The curse is come upon me," cried
 The Lady of Shalott.

PART IV.

In the stormy east-wind straining,
 The pale yellow woods were waning,
 The broad stream in his banks complaining,
 Heavily the low sky raining
 Over tower'd Camelot;
 Down she came and found a boat
 Beneath a willow left afloat,
 And round about the prow she wrote
 The Lady of Shalott.

And down the river's dim expanse —
 Like some bold seer in a trance, Seeing all his own mischance —
 With a glassy countenance
 Did she look to Camelot.
 And at the closing of the day
 She loos'd the chain, and down she lay;
 The broad stream bore her far away,
 The Lady of Shalott.

Lying, robed in snowy white
That loosely flew to left and right,
The leaves upon her falling light —
Thro' the noises of the night

She floated down to Camelot:
lot:

And as the boat-head wound along
The willowy hills and fields among,
They heard her singing her last song,
The Lady of Shalott.

Heard a carol, mournful, holy,
Chanted loudly, chanted lowly,
Till her blood was frozen slowly,
And her eyes were darkened wholly,
Turn'd to tower'd Camelot;
For ere she reach'd upon the tide
The first house by the water-side,
Singing in her song she died,
The Lady of Shalott.

Under tower and balcony,
By garden-wall and gallery,
A gleaming shape she floated by,
A corse between the houses high,
Silent into Camelot.
Out upon the wharfs they came,
Knight and burgher, lord and dame,
And round the prow they read her name,
The Lady of Shalott.

Who is this? and what is here?
And in the lighted palace near Died the sound of royal cheer:
And they cross'd themselves for fear,
All the knights at Camelot:
But Lancelot mused a little space:
He said, "She has a lovely face:
God in his mercy lend her grace,
The Lady of Shalott."

THE MILLER'S DAUGHTER.

It is the miller's daughter,
And she is grown so dear, so dear,
That I would be the jewel
That trembles at her ear:
For hid in ringlets day and night,
I'd touch her neck so warm and white.

And I would be the girdle
About her dainty, dainty waist,
And her heart would beat against me,
In sorrow and in rest:
And I should know if it beat right,
I'd clasp it round so close and tight.

And I would be the necklace,
And all day long to fall and rise
Upon her halmy bosom,
With her laughter or her sighs,
And I would lie so light, so light,
I scarce should be unclasp'd at night.

THE SISTERS.

We were two daughters of one race:
She was the fairest in the face:
The wind is blowing in turret and
tree.
They were together, and she fell;
Therefore revenge became me well.
O the Earl was fair to see!

She died: she went to burning flame:
She mix'd her ancient blood with shame.
The wind is howling in turret and
tree.
Whole weeks and months, and early and late,
To win his love I lay in wait:
O the Earl was fair to see!

I made a feast; I bade him come;
I won his love, I brought him home.
The wind is roaring in turret and tree.
And after supper, on a bed,
Upon my lap he laid his head:
O the Earl was fair to see!

I kiss'd his eyelids into rest:
His ruddy cheek upon my breast.
The wind is raging in turret and tree.
I hated him with the hate of hell,
But I loved his beauty passing well.
O the Earl was fair to see!

I rose up in the silent night:
I made my dagger sharp and bright.
The wind is raving in turret and tree.

 weet eyes, your low replies:

A great enchantress you may be;
 But there was that across his throat
 Which you had hardly cared to see.

Lady Clara Vere de Vere,
 When thus he met his mother's view,
 She had the passions of her kind,
 She spake some certain truths of you.
 Indeed I heard one bitter word
 That scarce is fit for you to hear;
 Her manners had not that repose
 Which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere.

Lady Clara Vere de Vere,
 There stands a spectre in your hall:
 The guilt of blood is at your door:
 You changed a wholesome heart to gall.
 You held your course without remorse,
 To make him trust his modest worth,
 And, last, you fix'd a vacant stare,
 And slew him with your noble birth.

Trust me, Clara Vere de Vere,
 From yon blue heavens above us bent
 The grand old gardener and his wife Smile at the claims of long descent.
 Howe'er it be, it seems to me,
 'Tis only noble to be good.
 Kind hearts are more than coronets,
 And simple faith than Norman blood.

I know you, Clara Vere de Vere:
 You pine among your halls and
 towers:
 The languid light of your proud eyes
 Is wearied of the rolling hours.
 In glowing health, with boundless wealth,
 But sickening of a vague disease,
 You know so ill to deal with time,
 You needs must play such pranks as these.

Clara, Clara Vere de Vere,
 If Time be heavy on your hands,
 Are there no beggars at your gate,
 Nor any poor about your lands?
 Oh! teach the orphan-boy to read,
 Or teach the orphan-girl to sew,
 Pray Heaven for a human heart,
 And let the foolish yeoman go.

THE LOTOS-EATERS.

"COURAGE!" he said, and pointed toward the land,
 "This mounting wave will roll us shoreward soon."
 In the afternoon they came unto a land,
 In which it seemed always afternoon.
 All round the coast the languid air did swoon,
 Breathing like one that hath a weary dream.
 Full-faced above the valley stood the moon;
 And like a downward smoke, the slender stream Along the cliff to fall and pause and fall did seem.

A land of streams! some, like a downward smoke,
 Slow-dropping veils of thinnest lawn, did go;
 And some thro' wavering lights and shadows broke,
 Rolling a slumbrous sheet of foam below.
 They saw the gleaming river seaward flow
 From the inner land: far off, three mountain-tops,
 Three silent pinnacles of aged snow,
 Stood sunset-flush'd: and, dew'd with showery drops,
 Up-clomb the shadowy pine above the woven copse.
 The charmed sunset linger'd low adown
 In the red West: thro' mountain clefts the dale
 Was seen far inland, and the yellow down
 Border'd with palm, and many a winding vale
 And meadow, set with slender galingale:
 A land where all things always seem'd the same!
 And round about the keel with faces pale,
 Dark faces pale against that rosy flame,
 The mild-eyed melancholy Lotos-eaters came.

Branches they bore of that enchanted stem, Laden with flower and fruit, whereof they gave
 To each, but whoso did receive of them,
 And taste, to him the gushing of the wave
 Far far away did seem to mourn and rave
 On alien shores; and if his fellow spake,
 His voice was thin, as voices from the grave;
 And deep-asleep he seem'd, yet all awake,
 And music in his ears his beating heart did make.

They sat them down upon the yellow sand,
 Between the sun and moon upon the shore;
 And sweet it was to dream of Fatherland,
 Of child, and wife, and slave; but evermore
 Most weary seem'd the sea, weary the oar,
 Weary the wandering fields of barren foam.
 Then some one said, "We will return no more";
 And all at once they sang, "Our island home
 Is far beyond the wave; we will no longer roam."

MORTE D'ARTHUR.

So all day long the noise of battle roll'd
 Among the mountains by the winter sea;
 Until King Arthur's table, man by man,
 Had fall'n in Lyonness about their Lord,
 King Arthur: then, because his wound was deep,
 The bold Sir Bedivere uplifted him,
 Sir Bedivere, the last of all his knights,
 And bore him to a chapel nigh the field,
 A broken chancel with a broken cross,

That stood on a dark strait of barren
land.

On one side lay the Ocean, and on one Lay a great water, and the moon was full.

Then spake King Arthur to Sir Bedi-
vere:

"The sequel of to-day unsolders all The goodliest fellowship of famous knights

Whereof this world holds record. Such a sleep

They sleep — the men I loved. I think that we Shall never more, at any future time, Delight our souls with talk of knightly

deeds,

Walking about the gardens and the halls

Of Camelot, as in the days that were.

I perish by this people which I made, —

Tho' Merlin sware that I should come
again

To rule once more — but let what will be, be,

I am so deeply smitten thro' the helm
That without help I cannot last till
morn.

Thou therefore take my brand Excalibur,

Which was my pride: for thou rememberest how

In those old days, one summer noon, an arm

Rose up from out the bosom of the lake, Clothed with white samite, mystic, wonderful,

Holding the sword — and how I rowed across

And took it, and have worn it, like a
king:

And, wheresoever I am sung or told
In aftertime, this also shall be known:

But now delay not: take Excalibur,
And fling him far into the middle mere:

Watch what thou seest, and lightly bring me word."

Then quickly rose Sir Bedivere, and ran,

And, leaping down the ridges lightly, plunged

Among the bulrush-beds, and clutch'd
the sword,

And strongly wheel'd and threw it.
The great brand

Made lightnings in the splendor of the moon,

And flashing round and round, and whirl'd in an arch,

Shot like a streamer of the northern
morn,

Seen where the moving isles of winter
shock

By night, with noises of the northern
sea.

So flash'd and fell the brand Excalibur:
But ere he dipt the surface, rose an arm

Cloth'd in white samite, mystic, wonderful,

And caught him by the hilt, and bran-dish'd him

Three times, and drew him under in the mere.

And lightly went the other to the King.

Then spoke King Arthur, drawing thicker breath:

"Now see I by thine eyes that this is
done.

Speak out: what is it thou hast heard, or seen?"

And answer made the bold Sir Bedi-
vere:

"Sir King, I closed mine eyelids, lest the gems

Should blind my purpose, for I never saw,

Nor shall see, here or elsewhere, till I
die,

Not tho' I live three lives of mortal
men,

So great a miracle as yonder hilt.

Then with both hands I flung him, wheeling him;

But when I look'd again, behold an
arm,

Clothed in white samite, mystic, wonderful,

That caught him by the hilt, and bran-dish'd him

Three times, and drew him under in the mere."

And answer made King Arthur, breathing hard:

"My end draws nigh; 'tis time that I were gone.

Make broad thy shoulders to receive my weight,

And bear me to the margin; yet I
fear

My wound hath taken cold, and I shall
die."

So saying, from the pavement he half
rose,

Slowly, with pain, reclining on his arm,
And looking wistfully with wide blue
eyes

As in a picture. Him Sir Bedivere Remorsefully regarded thro' his tears,
And would have spoken, but he found not words,

Then took with care, and kneeling on one knee,

O'er both his shoulders drew the languid hands,

And rising bore him thro' the place of tombs.

But, as he walk'd, King Arthur panted
hard,

Like one that feels a nightmare on his bed

When all the house is mute. So sigh'd
the King,

Muttering and murmuring at his ear
"Quick, quick!

I fear it is too late, and I shall die."

But the other swiftly strode from ridge to ridge,

Clothed with his breath, and looking,
as he walk'd,

Larger than human on the frozen hills.
He heard the deep behind him, and a a cry

Before. His own thought drove him like a goad.

Dry clash'd his harness in the icy caves
And barren chasms, and all to left and right

The bare black cliff clang'd round him, as he based

His feet on juts of slippery crag that rang

Sharp-smitten with the dint of armed heels —

And on a sudden, lo! the level lake,
And the long glories of the winter
moon.

Then saw they how there hove a dusky barge,

Dark as a funeral scarf from stem to stern,

Beneath them; and descending they were ware

That all the decks were dense with stately forms

Black-stoled, black-hooded, like a dream — by these

Three Queens with crowns of gold — and from them rose

A cry that shiver'd to the tingling stars,
And, as it were one voice, an agony

Of lamentation, like a wind, that shrills
All night in a waste land, where no one comes,

Or hath come, since the making of the
world.

Then murmur'd Arthur, "Place me in the barge,"

And to the barge they came. There those three Queens

Put forth their hands, and took the King, and wept.

But she that rose the tallest of them all
And fairest, laid his head upon her lap,

And loosed the shatter'd casque, and chafed his hands

And call'd him by his name, complaining loud,

And dropping bitter tears against his
brow

Striped with dark blood: for all his face was white

And colorless, and like the wither'd
moon

Smote by the fresh beam of the springing east;

And all his grieves and cuisses dash'd with drops

Of onset; and the light and lustrous curls —

That made his forehead like a rising
sun

High from the dais-throne — were parch'd with dust;

Dr, clotted into points and hanging loose,
Mix'd with the knightly growth that fringed his lips.

So like a shatter'd column lay the King;

Not like that Arthur who, with lance in
rest,

From spur to plume a star of tournament,

Shot thro' the lists at Camelot, and charged

Before the eyes of ladies and of kings.

Then loudly cried the bold Sir Bedi-
vere,

"Ah! my Lord Arthur, whither shall I
go?

Where shall I hide my forehead and
my eyes?

For now I see the true old times are
dead,

When every morning brought a noble
chance,

And every chance brought out a noble knight.

Such times have been not since the light hath led

The holy Elders with the gift of myrrh.

But now the whole ROUND TABLE is dissolved

Which was an image of the mighty
world;

And I, the last, go forth companionless,
And the days darken round me, and the
years,

Among new men, strange faces, other minds."

And slowly answer'd Arthur from the
barge;

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new,

And God fulfils himself in many ways, Lest one good custom should corrupt
the world.

Comfort thyself: what comfort is in
me?

I have lived my life, and that which I have done

May He within himself make pure! but
thou,

If thou shouldst never see my face
again,

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer

Than this world dreams of. Wherefore, let thy voice

Rise like a fountain for me night and
day.

For what are men better than sheep or goats

That nourish a blind life within the
brain,

If, knowing God, they lift not hands of
prayer

Both for themselves and those who call them friend?

For so the whole round earth is every
way

Bound by gold chains about the feet of
God.

But now farewell. I am going a long
way

With these thou seest—if indeed I
go—

(For all my mind is clouded with a doubt)

To the island-valley of Avilion; Where falls not hail, or rain, or any

snow,
Nor ever wind blows loudly; but it lies

Deep-meadow'd, happy, fair with orchard-lawns

And bowery hollows crown'd with summer sea,

Where I will heal me of my grievous wound."

So said he, and the barge with oar and sail

Moved from the brink, like some full-breasted swan—

That, fluting a wild carol ere her
death,

Ruffles her pure cold plume, and takes the flood

With swarthy webs. Long stood Sir
Bedivere

Revolving many memories, till the hull Look'd one black dot against the verge of dawn,

And on the mere the wailing died

away.

ST. AGNES.

DEEP on the convent-roof the snows
 Are sparkling to the moon:
 My breath to heaven like vapor goes:
 May my soul follow soon!
 The shadows of the convent-towers
 Slant down the snowy sward,
 Still creeping with the creeping hours
 That lead me to my Lord:
 Make Thou my spirit pure and clear
 As are the frosty skies;
 Or this first snowdrop of the year
 That in my bosom lies.

As these white robes are soiled and dark,
 To yonder shining ground;
 As this pale taper's earthly spark,
 To yonder argent round;
 So shows my soul before the Lamb,
 My spirit before Thee;
 So in mine earthly house I am,
 To that I hope to be.
 Break up the heavens, O Lord! and far,
 Thro' all yon starlight keen,
 Draw me, thy bride, a glittering star,
 In raiment white and clean.

He lifts me to the golden doors;
 The flashes come and go;
 All heaven bursts her starry floors,
 And strews her lights below,
 And deepens on and up! the gates Roll back, and far within
 For me the Heavenly Bridegroom waits,
 To make me pure of sin.
 The sabbaths of Eternity,
 One sabbath deep and wide —
 A light upon the shining sea —
 The Bridegroom with his bride!

SIR GALAHAD.

My good blade carves the casques of
 men,
 My tough lance thrusteth sure,
 My strength is as the strength of ten,
 Because my heart is pure.
 The shattering trumpet shrilleth high,
 The hard brands shiver on the steel,

The splinter'd spear-shafts crack and fly.
 The horse and rider reel:
 They reel, they roll in clanging lists,
 And when the tide of combat stands,
 Perfume and flowers fall in showers,
 That lightly rain from ladies' hands.

How sweet are looks that ladies bend
 On whom their favors fall!
 For them I battle to the end,
 To save from shame and thrall:
 But all my heart is drawn above,
 My knees are bow'd in crypt and
 shrine:

I never felt the kiss of love,
 Nor maiden's hand in mine.
 More bounteous aspects on me beam, Me mightier transports move and thrill;
 So keep I fair thro' faith and prayer
 A virgin heart in work and will.

When down the stormy crescent goes,
 A light before me swims,
 Between dark stems the forest glows,
 I hear a noise of hymns:
 Then by some secret shrine I ride:
 I hear a voice, but none are there;
 The stalls are void, the doors are wide.
 The tapers burning fair.
 Fair gleams the snowy altar-cloth,
 The silver vessels sparkle clean,
 The shrill bell rings, the censer swings,
 And solemn chants resound between.

Sometimes on lonely mountain-meres
 I find a magic bark;
 I leap on board: no helmsman steers:
 I float till all is dark.
 A gentle sound, an awful light!
 Three angels bear the holy Grail:
 With folded feet, in stoles of white,
 On sleeping wings they sail.
 Ah, blessed vision! blood of God!
 My spirit beats her mortal bars,
 As down dark tides the glory slides,
 And star-like mingles with the stars.

When on my goodly charger borne Thro' dreaming towns I go,
 The cock crows ere the Christmas morn,
 The streets are dumb with snow.

A FAREWELL

 But not by thee my steps shall be,
 Forever and forever.

 On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
 And I would that my tongue could utter
 The thoughts that arise in me.

O well for the fisherman's boy,
 That he shouts with his sister at play!
 O well for the sailor lad,
 That he sings in his boat on the bay!

And the stately ships go on
 To their haven under the hill;
 But O for the touch of a vanish'd hand,
 And the sound of a voice that is still!

Break, break, break,
 At the foot of thy crags, O Sea!
 But the tender grace of a day that is dead
 Will never come back to me.

AS THRO' THE LAND AT EVE WE WENT.

[The Princess, Part I.]

As thro' the land at eve we went,
 And pluck'd the ripen'd ears,
 We fell out, my wife and I,
 O we fell out I know not why,
 And kiss'd again with tears.

For when we came where lies the child
 We lost in other years,
 There above the little grave,
 O there above the little grave,
 We kiss'd again with tears.

SWEET AND LOW, SWEET AND LOW.

[The Princess, Part II.]

SWEET and low, sweet and low,
 Wind of the western sea,

Low, low, breathe and blow,
 Wind of the western sea!
 Over the rolling waters go,
 Come from the dying moon, and blow,
 Blow him again to me;
 While my little one, while my pretty one, sleeps.

Sleep and rest, sleep and rest,
 Father will come to thee soon;
 Rest, rest, on mother's breast,
 Father will come to thee soon:
 Father will come to his babe in the nest,
 Silver sails all out of the west
 Under the silver moon:
 Sleep, my little one, sleep, my pretty one, sleep.

THE BUGLE SONG.

[The Princess, Part III.]

THE splendor falls on castle walls
 And snowy summits old in story.
 The long light shakes across the lakes,
 And the wild cataract leaps in glory.
 Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes
 flying,
 Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying,
 dying, dying.

O hark, O hear! how thin and clear,
 And thinner, clearer, farther going!
 O sweet and far from cliff and scar
 The horns of Elfland faintly blowing!
 Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying:
 Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying,
 dying, dying.

O love, they die in yon rich sky,
 They faint on hill or field or river:
 Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
 And grow forever and forever.
 Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes
 flying,
 And answer, echoes, answer, dying,
 dying, dying.

TEARS, IDLE TEARS.

[The Princess, Part IV.]

"TEARS, idle tears, I know not what they mean.
 Tears from the depth of some divine despair
 Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes,
 In looking on the happy Autumn-fields,
 And thinking of the days that are no
 more.

"Fresh as the first beam glittering on a sail,
 That brings our friends up from the under-world,
 Sad as the last which reddens over one That sinks with all we love below the verge;
 So sad, so fresh, the days that are no
 more.

"Ah, sad and strange as in dark summer dawns
 The earliest pipe of half-awaken'd birds
 To dying ears, when unto dying eyes
 The casement slowly grows a glimmering square;
 So sad, so strange, the days that are no
 more.

"Dear as remember'd kisses after
 death,
 And sweet as those by hopeless fancy feign'd
 On lips that are for others; deep as
 love,
 Deep as first love, and wild with all regret;
 O Death in Life, the days that are no
 more."

O SWALLOW, SWALLOW, FLYING, FLYING SOUTH.

[The Princess, Part IV.]

"O SWALLOW, Swallow, flying, flying South,
 Fly to her, and fall upon her gilded
 eaves,
 And tell her, tell her what I tell to thee

O tell her, Swallow, that thou knowest each,
 t bright and fierce and fickle is the South, l dark and true and tender is the North.

O Swallow, Swallow, if I could follow and light on her lattice, I would pipe and trill, l cheep and twitter twenty million loves.

O were I thou that she might take me in,
 l lay me on her bosom, and her heart uld rock the snowy cradle till I died.

Why lingereth she to clothe her heart with love, aying as the tender ash delays clothe herself, when all the woods are green?

O tell her, Swallow, that thy brood is flown:
 to her, I do but wanton in the South, in the North long since my nest is made.

O tell her, brief is life, but love is long,
 l brief the sun of summer in the North,
 l brief the moon of beauty in the South.

O Swallow, flying from the golden woods, to her, and pipe and woo her, and make her mine, l tell her, tell her, that I follow thee."

OME THEY BROUGHT HER WARRIOR DEAD.

[The Princess, Part V.]

ME they brought her warrior dead:
 he nor swoon'd, nor utter'd cry:
 her maidens, watching, said,
 She must weep or she will die."

Then they praised him, soft and low,
 Call'd him worthy to be loved,
 Truest friend and noblest foe;
 Yet she neither spoke nor moved.

Stole a maiden from her place,
 Lightly to the warrior stept,
 Took the face-cloth from the face;
 Yet she neither moved nor wept.

Rose a nurse of ninety years,
 Set his child upon her knee —
 Like summer tempest came her tears —
 "Sweet my child, I live for thee."

ASK ME NO MORE.

[The Princess, Part VI.]

ASK me no more: the moon may draw
 the sea;
 The cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape,
 With fold to fold, of mountain or of cape;
 But O too fond, when have I answer'd
 thee?

Ask me no more.

Ask me no more: what answer should I give?
 I love not hollow cheek or faded eye:
 Yet, O my friend, I will not have thee
 die!
 Ask me no more, lest I should bid thee
 live;

Ask me no more.

Ask me no more: thy fate and mine are seal'd:
 I strove against the stream and all in
 vain:
 Let the great river take me to the
 main:
 No more, dear love, for at a touch I yield;

Ask me no more.

STRONG SON OF GOD, IMMORTAL LOVE.[In Memoriam.]

STRONG Son of God, immortal Love,
 Whom we, that have not seen thy face,
 By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
 Believing where we cannot prove;

Thine are these orbs of light and shade;
 Thou madest life in man and brute;
 Thou madest Death; and lo, thy foot
 Is on the skull which thou hast made.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust:
 Thou madest man, he knows not why;
 He thinks he was not made to die;
 And thou hast made him: thou art just.

Thou seemest human and divine,
 The highest, holiest manhood, thou:
 Our wills are ours, we know not how;
 Our wills are ours, to make them thine.

Our little systems have their day;
 They have their day and cease to be:
 They are but broken lights of thee,
 And thou, O Lord, art more than they.

We have but faith: we cannot know;
 For knowledge is of things we see;
 And yet we trust it comes from thee,
 A beam in darkness: let it grow.

Let knowledge grow from more to more,
 But more of reverence in us dwell;
 That mind and soul, according well,
 May make one music as before,

But vaster. We are fools and slight;
 We mock thee when we do not fear:
 But help thy foolish ones to bear;
 Help thy vain worlds to bear thy light.

Forgive what seem'd my sin in me;
 What seem'd my worth since I began;
 For merit lives from man to man,
 And not from man, O Lord, to thee.

Forgive my grief for one removed,
 Thy creature, whom I found so fair.
 I trust he lives in thee, and there
 I find him worthier to be loved.

Forgive these wild and wandering cries,
 Confusions of a wasted youth;
 Forgive them where they fail in truth
 And in thy wisdom make me wise.

I SOMETIMES HOLD IT HALF A SIN.[In Memoriam, V.]

I SOMETIMES hold it half a sin
 To put in words the grief I feel;
 For words, like Nature, half reveal
 And half conceal the Soul within.

But, for the unquiet heart and brain,
 A use in measured language lies;
 The sad mechanic exercise,
 Like dull narcotics, numbing pain.

In words, like weeds, I'll wrap me o'er,
 Like coarsest clothes against the cold;
 But that large grief which these enfold
 Is given in outline and no more.

LO, AS A DOVE WHEN UP SHE SPRINGS.[In Memoriam, XII.]

LO, as a dove when up she springs
 To bear thro' Heaven a tale of woe,
 Some dolorous message knit below
 The wild pulsation of her wings;

Like her I go; I cannot stay;
 I leave this mortal ark behind,
 A weight of nerves without a mind,
 And leave the cliffs, and haste away

O'er ocean-mirrors rounded large,
 And reach the glow of southern skies,
 And see the sails at distance rise,
 And linger weeping on the marge,

" Comes he thus, my friend?
 ' end of all my care? "
 ' moaning in the air:
 end? Is this the end?"

I dart again, and play
 ' prow, and back return
 the body sits, and learn, been an hour away.

4TH BY WHICH WE WAIN DID GO.

[Memoriam, XXII.]

 e sits and waits for me.

NOT IN ANY MOODS.

[Memoriam, XXVII.]

in any moods
 ve void of noble rage,
 t born within the cage,
 knew the summer woods:

I envy not the beast that takes
 His license in the field of time,
 Unfetter'd by the sense of crime,
 To whom a conscience never wakes:

Nor, what may count itself as blest,
 The heart that never plighted troth,
 But stagnates in the weeds of sloth
 Nor any want-begotten rest.

I hold it true, whate'er befall;
 I feel it, when I sorrow most;
 'Tis better to have loved and lost
 Than never to have loved at all.

O YET WE TRUST THAT SOME HOW GOOD.

[In Memoriam, LIII.]

O YET we trust that somehow good
 Will be the final goal of ill,
 To pangs of nature, sins of will,
 Defects of doubt, and taints of blood.

That nothing walks with aimless feet;
 That not one life shall be destroy'd,
 Or cast as rubbish to the void,
 When God hath made the pile complete;

That not a worm is cloven in vain;
 That not a moth with vain desire
 Is shrivell'd in a fruitless fire,
 Or but subserves another's gain.

Behold we know not anything;
 I can but trust that good shall fall
 At last — far off — at last, to all,
 And every winter change to spring.

So runs my dream: but what am I?
 An infant crying in the night;
 An infant crying for the light;
 And with no language but a cry.

RING OUT, WILD BELLS, TO THE WILD SKY.

[In Memoriam, CV.]

RING out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
 The flying cloud, the frosty light:
 The year is dying in the night;
 Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
 Ring, happy bells, across the snow:
 The year is going, let him go;
 Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
 For those that here we see no more;
 Ring out the feud of rich and poor,
 Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
 And ancient forms of party strife;
 Ring in the nobler modes of life,
 With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
 The faithless coldness of the times;
 Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes,
 But ring the fuller minstrel in.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
 The civic slander and the spite;
 Ring in the love of truth and right,
 Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
 Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
 Ring out the thousand wars of old,
 Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
 The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
 Ring out the darkness of the land,
 Ring in the Christ that is to be.

IT IS THE DAY WHEN HE WAS BORN.

[In Memoriam, CVI.]

It is the day when he was born,
 A bitter day that early sank Behind a purple-frosty bank
 Of vapor, leaving night forlorn.

The time admits not flowers or leaves
 To deck the banquet. Fiercely flies
 The blast of North and East, and ice
 Makes daggers at the sharpen'd eaves,

And bristles all the brakes and thorns
 To yon hard crescent, as she hangs Above the wood which grides and clangs
 Its leafless ribs and iron horns

Together, in the drifts that pass
 To darken on the rolling brine That breaks the coast. But fetch the wine,
 Arrange the board and brim the glass;

Bring in great logs and let them lie,
 To make a solid core of heat;
 Be cheerful-minded, talk and treat
 Of all things ev'n as he were by;

We keep the day. With festal cheer,
 With books and music, surely we Will drink to him whate'er he be,
 And sing the songs he loved to hear.

COME INTO THE GARDEN, MAUD.

COME into the garden, Maud,
 For the black bat, night, has flown,
 Come into the garden, Maud,
 I am here at the gate alone;
 And the woodbine spices are wafted
 abroad,
 And the musk of the roses blown.

For a breeze of morning moves,
 And the planet of Love is on high, Beginning to faint in the light that she loves
 On a bed of daffodil sky,
 To faint in the light of the sun she loves,
 To faint in his light, and to die.

All night have the roses heard
 The flute, violin, bassoon;
 All night has the casement jessamine stirr'd
 To the dancers dancing in tune;
 Till a silence fell with the waking bird
 And a hush with the setting moon.

I said to the lily, "There is but one
With whom she has heart to be gay.
When will the dancers leave her alone?
She is weary of dance and play."
Now half to the setting moon are gone,
And half to the rising day;
Low on the sand and loud on the stone
The last wheel echoes away.

I said to the rose, "The brief night
goes
In babble and revel and wine.
O young lord-lover, what sighs are those,
For one that will never be thine?
But mine, but mine," so I swore to the
rose,
"For ever and ever, mine."

And the soul of the rose went into my
blood,
As the music clash'd in the hall;
And long by the garden lake I stood,
For I heard your rivulet fall From the lake to the meadow and on to the wood,
Our wood, that is dearer than all;

From the meadow your walks have left so sweet
That whenever a March-wind sighs
He sets the jewel-print of your feet
In violets blue as your eyes,
To the woody hollows in which we meet
And the valleys of Paradise.

The slender acacia would not shake
One long milk-bloom on the tree;
The white lake-blossom fell into the lake,
As the pimpernel dozed on the lea;
But the rose was awake all night for your sake,
Knowing your promise to me;
The lilies and roses were all awake,
They sigh'd for the dawn and thee.

Queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls,
Come hither, the dances are done,
In gloss of satin and glimmer of pearls,
Queen lily and rose in one;

Shine out, little head, sunning over with curls,
To the flowers, and be their sun.

There has fallen a splendid tear
From the passion-flower at the gate.
She is coming, my dove, my dear;
She is coming, my life, my fate;
The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near";
And the white rose weeps, "She is late";
The larkspur listens, "I hear, I hear";
And the lily whispers, "I wait."

She is coming, my own, my sweet;
Were it ever so airy a tread,
My heart would hear her and beat,
Were it earth in an earthy bed;
My dust would hear her and beat,
Had I lain for a century dead;
Would start and tremble under her feet,
And blossom in purple and red.

THE BROOK.

I COME from haunts of coot and hern,
I make a sudden sally
And sparkle out among the fern,
To bicker down a valley.

By thirty hills I hurry down,
Or slip between the ridges,
By twenty thorps, a little town,
And half a hundred bridges.

Till last by Philip's farm I flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I chatter over stony ways,
In little sharps and trebles,
I bubble into eddying bays,
I babble on the pebbles.

With many a curve my banks I fret
By many a field and fallow,
And many a fairy foreland set
With willow-weed and mallow.

I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I wind about, and in and out,
With here a blossom sailing,
And here and there a lusty trout,
And here and there a grayling,

And here and there a foamy flake
Upon me, as I travel
With many a silver waterbreak
Above the golden gravel,

And draw them all along, and flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

I steal by lawns and grassy plots,
I slide by hazel covers;
I move the sweet forget-me-nots
That grow for happy lovers.

I slip, I slide, I gloom, I glance,
Among my skimming swallows;
I make the netted sunbeam dance
Against my sandy shallows.

I murmur under moon and stars
In brambly wildernesses;
I linger by my shingly bars;
I loiter round my cresses;

And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

TURN, FORTUNE, TURN THY WHEEL.

[Idyls of the King: Enid.]

"TURN, Fortune, turn thy wheel and lower the proud;
Turn thy wild wheel thro' sunshine,
storm, and cloud;
Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate.

"Turn, Fortune, turn thy wheel with smile or frown;
With that wild wheel we go not up or
down;
Our hoard is little, but our hearts are great.

"Smile and we smile, the lords of many lands:
Frown and we smile, the lords of our own hands;
For man is man and master of his fate.

"Turn, turn thy wheel above the staring crowd;
Thy wheel and thou are shadows in the cloud;
Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate."

IN LOVE, IF LOVE BE LOVE.

[Idyls of the King: Vivien.]

"IN Love, if Love be Love, if Love be ours,
Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal
powers:
Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.

"It is the little rift within the lute,
That by and by will make the music mute,
And ever widening slowly silence all.

"The little rift within the lover's lute,
Or little pitted speck in garner'd fruit,
That rotting inward slowly moulders all.

"It is not worth the keeping: let it go:
But shall it? answer, darling, answer, no.
And trust me not at all or all in all."

SWEET IS TRUE LOVE.

[Idyls of the King: Elaine.]

"SWEET is true love, tho' given in vain, in vain;
And sweet is death who puts an end to
pain:
I know not which is sweeter, no, not I.

"Love, art thou sweet? then bitter death must be:
Love, thou art bitter; sweet is death to
me.
O Love, if death be sweeter, let me die.

"Sweet Love, that seems not made to fade away,
Sweet death, that seems to make us loveless clay,
I know not which is sweeter, no, not I.

"I fain would follow love, if that could
be;
I needs must follow death, who calls for
me;
Call and I follow, I follow! let me die."

ARTHUR'S FAREWELL TO GUINEVERE.

[Idyls of the King: Guinevere.]

"YET think not that I come to urge thy crimes,
I did not come to curse thee, Guinevere,
I, whose vast pity almost makes me die
To see thee, laying there thy golden
head,
My pride in happier summers, at my
feet.
The wrath which forced my thoughts on that fierce law,
The doom of treason and the flaming
death,
(When first I learnt thee hidden here)
is past.
The pang—which while I weigh'd thy heart with one Too wholly true to dream untruth in thee, Made my tears burn—is also past, in
part.
And all is past, the sin is sinn'd, and I,
Lo! I forgive thee, as Eternal God Forgives: do thou for thine own soul
the rest.
But how to take last leave of all I loved?
O golden hair, with which I used to
play
Not knowing! O imperial-moulded form,
And beauty such as woman never wore,

Until it came a kingdom's curse with
thee—
I cannot touch thy lips, they are not
mine,
But Lancelot's: nay, they never were the King's.
I cannot take thy hand; that too is flesh,
And in the flesh thou hast sinn'd; and mine own flesh,
Here looking down on thine polluted, ories
'I loathe thee'; yet not less, O Guine-
vere,
For I was ever virgin save for thee, My love thro' flesh hath wrought into my life
So far, that my doom is, I love thee
still.
Let no man dream but that I love thee
still
Perchance, and so thou purify thy soul,
And so thou lean on our fair father
Christ,
Hereafter in that world where all are pure
We two may meet before high God, and thou
Wilt spring to me, and claim me thine, and know
I am thine husband—not a smaller soul, Nor Lancelot, nor another. Leave me
that,
I charge thee, my last hope. Now must
I hence.
Thro' the thick night I hear the trumpet
blow:
They summon me their King to lead mine hosts
Far down to that great battle in the west, Where I must strike against my sister's
son,
Leagued with the lords of the White Horse and knights Once mine, and strike him dead, and meet myself
Death, or I know not what mysterious doom.
And thou remaining here wilt learn the event;
But hither shall I never come again,
Never lie by thy side, see thee no more,
Farewell!"

WHAT DOES LITTLE BIRDIE SAY?

[Sea Dreams.]

WHAT does little birdie say
In her nest at peep of day?
Let me fly, says little birdie,
Mother, let me fly away.
Birdie, rest a little longer,
Till the little wings are stronger.
So she rests a little longer,
Then she flies away.

What does little baby say,
In her bed at peep of day?
Baby says, like little birdie,
Let me rise and fly away.
Baby, sleep a little longer,
Till the little limbs are stronger.
If she sleeps a little longer,
Baby too shall fly away.

THE SAILOR-BOY.

HE rose at dawn, and, fired with hope,
Shot o'er the seething harbor-bar,
And reach'd the ship and caught the rope,
And whistled to the morning star.

And while he whistled long and loud
He heard a fierce mermaiden cry,
"O Boy, tho' thou art young and proud,
I see the place where thou wilt lie.

"The sands and yeasty surges mix
In caves about the dreary bay,
And on thy ribs the limpet sticks,
And in thy heart the scrawl shall
play."

"Fool," he answer'd, "death is sure
To those that stay and those that roam,
But I will never more endure
To sit with empty hands at home.

"My mother clings about my neck,
My sisters crying, 'Stay, for shame';
My father raves of death and wreck,
They are all to blame, they are all to blame.

"God help me! save I take my part
Of danger on the roaring sea,
A devil rises in my heart,
Far worse than any death to me."

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY.

1811-1863.

[BORN at Calcutta, India, in 1811. Son of a gentleman in the civil service of the East India Company; came to England in 1818. Educated at the Charter House School, London, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, but left without taking a degree. Travelled and studied in the continent with a view to becoming a painter. In 1838 became a correspondent of the Times, and adopted literature as a profession, in which he became very successful, and in popular estimation a rival of Dickens for the first place in modern English fiction. He also studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1848, but never practiced. He founded the Cornhill Magazine, 1859. Died at Kensington Palace Gardens, London, Dec. 24, 1863.]

THE END OF THE PLAY.

THE play is done, — the curtain drops,
Slow falling to the prompter's bell;
A moment yet the actor stops,
And looks around, to say farewell.

It is an irksome word and task;
And, when he's laughed and said his say,
He shows, as he removes the mask,
A face that's anything but gay.

One word, ere yet the evening ends, —

Let's close it with a parting rhyme;
And pledge a hand to all young friends,
As flits the merry Christmas time;
On life's wide scene you, too, have parts

That fate ere long shall bid you play;
Good night! — with honest, gentle hearts

A kindly greeting go away!

Good night! — I'd say the griefs, the joys,

Just hinted in this mimic page,
The triumphs and defeats of boys,
Are but repeated in our age;
I'd say your woes were not less keen,
Your hopes more vain, than those of men, —

Your pangs or pleasures of fifteen
At forty-five played o'er again.

I'd say we suffer and we strive
Not less nor more as men than boys, —

With grizzled beards at forty-five,
As erst at twelve in corduroys;
And if, in time of sacred youth,
We learned at home to love and pray,

Pray Heaven that early love and truth
May never wholly pass away.

And in the world, as in the school,
I'd say how fate may change and shift, —

The prize be sometimes with the fool,
The race not always to the swift:
The strong may yield, the good may fall,

The great man be a vulgar clown,
The knave be lifted over all,
The kind cast pitilessly down.

Who knows the inscrutable design?
Blessèd be He who took and gave!
Why should your mother, Charles, not mine,

Be weeping at her darling's grave?
We bow to Heaven that willed it so,
That darkly rules the fate of all,
That sends the respite or the blow,
That's free to give or to recall.

This crowns his feast with wine and wit, —

Who brought him to that mirth and state?

His betters, see, below him sit,
Or hunger hopeless at the gate.
Who bade the mud from Dives' wheel
To spurn the rags of Lazarus?
Come, brother, in that dust we'll kneel, Confessing Heaven that ruled it thus.

So each shall mourn, in life's advance,
Dear hopes, dear friends, untimely killed;

Shall grieve for many a forfeit chance
And longing passion unfulfilled.
Amen! — whatever fate be sent,
Pray God the heart may kindly glow,
Although the head with cares be bent,
And whitened with the winter snow.

Come wealth or want, come good or ill,

Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the awful will,
And bear it with an honest heart.
Who misses, or who wins the prize, —
Go, lose or conquer as you can;
But if you fail, or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

A gentleman, or old or young!
(Bear kindly with my humble lays;)
The sacred chorus first was sung
Upon the first of Christmas days;
The shepherds heard it overhead, —
The joyful angels raised it then:
Glory to Heaven on high, it said,
And peace on earth to gentle men!

My song, save this, is little worth;
I lay the weary pen aside,
And wish you health and love and mirth,

As fits the solemn Christmas-tide.
As fits the holy Christmas birth,
Be this, good friends, our carol still, —
Be peace on earth, be peace on earth,
To men of gentle will.

THE MAHOGANY-TREE.

CHRISTMAS is here;
Winds whistle shrill,
Icy and chill,
Little care we;
Little we fear Weather without,
Sheltered about
The mahogany-tree.

Once on the boughs
Birds of rare plume
Sang, in its bloom;
Night-birds are we;
Here we carouse,
Singing, like them,
Perched round the stem
Of the jolly old tree.

Here let us sport,
Boys, as we sit, — Laughter and wit
Flashing so free.
Life is but short, —
When we are gone,
Let them sing on,
Round the old tree.

Evenings we knew,
Happy as this;
Faces we miss,
Pleasant to see.

Kind hearts and true,
Gentle and just,
Peace to your dust!
We sing round the tree.

Care, like a dun,
Lurks at the gate:
Let the dog wait;
Happy we'll be!
Drink, every one;
Pile up the coals;
Fill the red bowls,
Round the old tree!

Drain we the cup. —
Friend, art afraid?
Spirits are laid
In the Red Sea.
Mantle it up;
Empty it yet;
Let us forget,
Round the old tree!

Sorrows, begone!
Life and its ills,
Duns and their bills,
Bid we to flee.
Come with the dawn,
Blue-devil spite;
Leave us to-night,
Round the old tree!

1811-1887.

[BORN at Camberwell Grove, Surrey, May 20, 1811. Entered Cambridge in 1829, as a member of St. John's College, but after three years' residence left the university without graduating. In 1832 he published a volume of poems. Travelled in America for two years; after his return contributed some poems to Blackwood's Magazine. One of these, A Christmas Hymn, was much admired, and has been frequently reprinted. Went to New Zealand in 1842, where he became Colonial Secretary, Secretary for Crown Lands, and held various other important positions in the government of that colony. Returned to England in 1871. Since his return has published a volume of poems, Flotsam and Jetsam, Rhymes, Old and New, 1877. He also published in 1872, Ranolf and Amohia, a South Sea Dream.]

A CHRISTMAS HYMN.

It was the calm and silent night!
Seven hundred years and fifty-three Had Rome been growing up to might,
And now was queen of land and sea.

No sound was heard of clashing weapons, Peace brooded o'er the human domain:
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, and Mars

Held undisturb'd their ancient reign,
In the solemn midnight,
Centuries ago.

'Twas in the calm and silent night!
The senator of haughty Rome,
Impatient, urged his chariot's flight,
From lordly revel rolling home;
Triumphal arches, gleaming, swell
His breast with thoughts of boundless sway;
What reck'd the Roman what befell
A paltry province far away,
In the solemn midnight,
Centuries ago?

Within that province far away
Went plodding home a weary boor;
A streak of light before him lay,
Fallen through a half-shut stable-
door Across his path. He pass'd — for naught
Told what was going on within;
How keen the stars, his only thought —
The air how calm, and cold, and thin,
In the solemn midnight,
Centuries ago!

O, strange indifference! low and high Drowsed over common joys and cares;

The earth was still — but knew not why

The world was listening, unawares.
How calm a moment may precede One that shall thrill the world for ever!

To that still moment, none would heed, Man's doom was link'd no more to sever —

In the solemn midnight
Centuries ago!

It is the calm and solemn night!
A thousand bells ring out, and throw
Their joyous peals abroad, and smite
The darkness — charm'd and holy
now!

The night that erst no shame had worn,
To it a happy name is given;
For in that stable lay, new-born,
The peaceful Prince of earth and
heaven,
In the solemn midnight,
Centuries ago!

ROBERT BROWNING.

1812-1889.

[ROBERT BROWNING, one of the most distinguished of modern English poets, was born in Camberwell, near London, in 1812. In 1835 he published Paracelsus, which was favorably received, and in 1837 produced Strafford, a tragedy, in which Mr. Macready the actor personated the hero. Among his other works are Sordello, 1840, Pippa Passes; A Blot in the Scutcheon, 1843; King Victor and King Charles; Return of the Druses; Dramatic Lyrics, Men and Women, 1855. The Soul's Errand, 1864. The Ring and the Book, 1869. Dramatic Idylls, 1879; Fifine at the Fair, 1872. Red Cotton Nightcaps, 1873; and Jocoseria, 1881. In Nov., 1846, he married Miss Elizabeth Barrett, the distinguished poet, and after his marriage he resided for some years in Italy, chiefly at Florence, making occasional visits to France and England. The second edition, enlarged, of a Bibliography of Robert Browning from 1813 to 1881, compiled by Frederick J. Furnivall, was published at London in 1882. His poetry, although difficult to be understood, has many admirers.]

HOW THEY BROUGHT THE GOOD NEWS FROM GHENT TO AIX.

I SPRANG to the stirrup, and Joris, and
he;
I galloped, Dirck galloped, we galloped all three;
"Good speed!" cried the watch, as the gate-bolts undrew;

"Speed!" echoed the wall to us galloping through;
Behind shut the postern, the lights sank
to rest,
And into the midnight we galloped abreast.

Not a word to each other; we kept the great pace
 Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place;
 I turned in my saddle and made its girths tight,
 Then shortened each stirrup, and set the pique right, Rebuckled the cheek-strap, chained
 slacker the bit,
 Nor galloped less steadily Roland a whit.

'Twas moonset at starting; but while we drew near Lokeren, the cocks crew, and twilight dawned clear;
 At Boom, a great yellow star came out
 to see;
 At Düffeld, 'twas morning as plain as could be;
 And from Mecheln church-steeple we heard the half chime, So Joris broke silence with "Yet there is time!"

At Aerschot, up leaped of a sudden the
 sun,
 And against him the cattle stood black every one,
 To stare through the mist at us galloping past,
 And I saw my stout galloper Roland at
 last,
 With resolute shoulders, each butting
 away
 The haze, as some bluff river headland its spray.

And his low head and crest, just one sharp ear bent back For my voice, and the other pricked out on his track;
 And one eye's black intelligence — ever that glance
 O'er its white edge at me, his own master, askance!
 And the thick heavy spume-flakes which aye and anon
 His fierce lips shook upwards in galloping on.

By Hasselt, Dirck groaned; and cried Joris, "Stay spur!
 Your Ross galloped bravely, the fault's not in her,
 We'll remember at Aix" — for one heard the quick wheeze
 Of her chest, saw her stretched neck and staggering knees,
 And sunk tail, and horrible heave of the flank,
 As down on her haunches she shuddered and sank.

So we were left galloping, Joris and I,
 Past Looz and past Tongres, no cloud
 in the sky;
 The broad sun above laughed a pitiless laugh,
 'Neath our feet broke the brittle bright stubble like chaff;
 Till over by Dalhem a dome-spire sprang
 white,
 And "Gallop" gasped Joris, "for Aix is in sight!"

"How they'll greet us!" and all in a moment his roan Rolled neck and crop over; lay dead as a stone;
 And there was my Roland to bear the whole weight
 Of the news which alone could save Aix from her fate,
 With his nostrils like pits full of blood to the brim,
 And with circles of red for his eye-socket's rim.

Then I cast loose my buff-coat, each holster let fall,
 Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all,
 Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted
 his ear,
 Called my Roland his pet-name, my horse without peer;
 Clapped my hands, laughed and sang,
 any noise, bad or good,
 Till at length into Aix Roland galloped and stood.

And all I remember is, friends flocking
 round
 As I sat with his head 'twixt my knees on the ground,
 And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine,
 As I poured down his throat our last measure of wine,
 Which (the burgesses voted by common consent)
 Was no more than his due who brought good news from Ghent.

LOVE AMONG THE RUINS.

WHERE the quiet-colored end of evening smiles,
 Miles and miles,
 On the solitary pastures where our sheep Half-asleep
 Tinkle homeward through the twilight, stray or stop
 As they crop —
 Was the site once of a city great and gay
 (So they say),
 Of our country's very capital, its prince,
 Ages since,
 Held his court in, gathered councils, wielding far Peace or war.

Now, — the country does not even boast
 a tree,
 As you see,
 To distinguish slopes of verdure, certain rills
 From the hills Intersect and give a name to (else they run
 Into one),
 Where the domed and daring palace shot its spires
 Up like fires
 O'er the hundred-gated circuit of a wall Bounding all,
 Made of marble, men might march on nor be pressed,
 Twelve abreast.

And such plenty and perfection, see,
 of grass
 Never was!
 Such a carpet as, this summer-time, o'er-spreads
 And embeds
 Every vestige of the city, guessed alone,
 Stock or stone —
 Where a multitude of men breathed joy and woe
 Long ago;
 Lust of glory pricked their hearts up, dread of shame
 Struck them tame;
 And that glory and that shame alike,
 the gold
 Bought and sold.

Now, — the single little turret that remains
 On the plains,
 By the caper overrooted, by the gourd
 Overscored,
 While the patching houseleek's head of blossom winks
 Through the chinks — Marks the basement whence a tower in ancient time
 Sprang sublime,
 And a burning ring, all round, the chariots traced
 As they raced,
 And the monarch and his minions and his dames
 Viewed the games.

And I know — while thus the quiet-colored eve
 Smiles to leave
 To their folding, all our many tinkling fleece
 In such peace,
 And the slopes and rills in undistinguished gray
 Melt away —
 That a girl with eager eyes and yellow
 hair
 Waits me there
 In the turret whence the charloteers caught soul
 For the goal,

When the king looked, where she looks now, breathless, dumb Till I come.

But he looked upon the city, every side,
Far and wide,
All the mountains topped with temples, all the glades Colonnades,
All the causeys, bridges, aqueducts, — and then,
All the men!

When I do come, she will speak not,
she will stand,
Either hand

On my shoulder, give her eyes the first embrace
Of my face,
Ere we rush, ere we extinguish sight and speech
Each on each.

In one year they sent a million fighters forth

South and North,
And they built their gods a brazen pillar high

As the sky,
Yet reserved a thousand chariots in full force —

Gold, of course.
O heart! O blood that freezes, blood that burns!

Earth's returns
For whole centuries of folly, noise and sin!

Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest!
Love is best.

EVELYN HOPE.

BEAUTIFUL Evelyn Hope is dead —
Sit and watch by her side an hour,
That is her book-shelf, this her bed;
She plucked that piece of geranium
flower,
Beginning to die, too, in the glass.
Little has yet been changed, I think —

The shutters are shut, no light may
pass,
Save two long rays through the hinge's chink.

Sixteen years old when she died!
Perhaps she had scarcely heard my
name —

It was not her time to love: beside,
Her life had many a hope and aim,
Duties enough and little cares,
And now was quiet, now astir —
Till God's hand beckoned unawares, And the sweet white brow is all of her.

Is it too late, then, Evelyn Hope?
What, your soul was pure and true,
The good stars met in your horoscope,
Made you of spirit, fire, and dew —
And just because I was thrice as old,
And our paths in the world diverged
so wide,
Each was nought to each, must I be told?
We were fellow-mortals, nought beside?

No, indeed! for God above
Is great to grant, as mighty to make,
And creates the love to reward the
love, —
I claim you still, for my own love's sake!

Delayed it may be for more lives yet,
Through worlds I shall traverse, not a few —
Much is to learn and much to forget
Ere the time be come for taking you

But the time will come, — at last it will,
When, Evelyn Hope, what meant, I shall say,
In the lower earth, in the years long
still,

That body and soul so pure and gay?
Why your hair was amber, I shall divine,
And your mouth of your own geranium's red —

And what you would do with me, in fine,
In the new life come in the old one's stead.

I have lived, I shall say, so much since then,

Given up myself so many times,
Gained me the gains of various men,
Ransacked the ages, spoiled the climes,

Yet one thing, one, in my soul's full scope,

Either I missed or itself missed me—
And I want and find you, Evelyn Hope!

What is the issue? let us see!

I loved you, Evelyn, all the while;

My heart seemed full as it could hold—

There was space and to spare for the frank young smile,

And the red young mouth, and the hair's young gold.

So hush,—I will give you this leaf to keep,—

See, I shut it inside the sweet cold hand.

There, that is our secret! go to sleep;
You will wake, and remember, and understand.

THE LOST LEADER.

Just for a handful of silver he left us;

Just for a riband to stick in his coat—
Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,

Lost all the others she lets us devote
They, with the gold to give, doled him out silver,

So much was theirs who so little allow'd.

How all our copper had gone for his service!

Rags—were they purple, his heart had been proud!

We that had loved him so, follow'd him, honor'd him;

Lived in his mild and magnificent eye,

Learn'd his great language, caught his clear accents,

Made him our pattern to live and to die!

Shakspeare was of us, Milton was for us,
Burns, Shelley, were with us—they watch from their graves!

He alone breaks from the van and the freemen;

He alone sinks to the rear and the slaves!

We shall march prospering—not through his presence;

Songs may inspirit us—not from his lyre;

Deeds will be done—while he boasts his quiescence,

Still bidding crouch whom the rest bade aspire.

Blot out his name, then—record one lost soul more,

One task more declined, one more footpath untrod,

One more triumph for devils, and sorrow for angels,

One wrong more to man, one more insult to God!

Life's night begins; let him never come back to us!

There would be doubt, hesitation and pain,

Forced praise on our part—the glimmer of twilight,

Never glad confident morning again!

Best fight on well, for we taught him—

strike gallantly,

Aim at our heart ere we pierce through his own;

Then let him receive the new knowledge and wait us,

Pardon'd in Heaven, the first by the throne!

SONG FROM "PIPPA PASSES."

THE year's at the spring,

And day's at the morn;

Morning's at seven;

The hill-side's dew-pearled;

The lark's on the wing;

The snail's on the thorn;

God's in his heaven—

All's right with the world.

SONG FROM "PARACELSUS."

HEAP cassia, sandal-buds, and stripes
Of labdanum, and aloe-balls, Smeared with dull nard an Indian wipes

From out her hair: such balsam falls
Down seaside mountain pedestals, From tree-tops where tired winds are fain,
Spent with the vast and howling main,
To treasure half their island gain.

And strew faint sweetness from some
old

Egyptian's fine worm-eaten shroud
Which breaks to dust when once unrolled;

Or shredded perfume, like a cloud
From closet long to quiet vowed,
With moth'd and dropping arras hung,
Mouldering her lute and books among,
As when a queen, long dead, was young.

THE LOST MISTRESS.

ALL's over, then: does truth sound bitter

As one at first believes?
Hark, 'tis the sparrows' good-night twitter

About your cottage eaves!

And the leaf-buds on the vine are woolly,
I noticed that to-day;
One day more bursts them open fully:
You know the red turns gray.

To-morrow we meet the same then, dearest?

May I take your hand in mine?
Mere friends are we, — well, friends the merest

Keep much that I resign.

Each glance of the eye so bright and
black,

Though I keep with heart's endeavor, —
Your voice, when you wish the snowdrops back,
Though it stay in my soul forever, —

Yet I will but say what mere friends say,
Or only a thought stronger;
I will hold your hand but as long as all
may,
Or so very little longer!

ONE WAY OF LOVE.

ALL June I bound the rose in sheaves.
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves And strew them where Pauline may pass.

She will not turn aside? Alas!
Let them lie. Suppose they die?
The chance was they might take her
eye.

How many a month I strove to suit
These stubborn fingers to the lute!
To-day I venture all I know.
She will not hear my music? So!
Break the string; fold music's wing:
Suppose Pauline had bade me sing!

My whole life long I learned to love.
This hour my utmost art I prove And speak my passion — heaven or hell?

She will not give me heaven? To
well!

Lose who may — I still can say,
Those who win heaven, blest are they!

IN A YEAR.

NEVER any more,
While I live,
Need I hope to see his face
As before.
Once his love grown chill,
Mine may strive:
Bitterly we re-embrace,
Single still.

Was it something said,
Something done,
Vexed him? was it touch of hand,
Turn of head?

! that very way
love begun :
e understand love's decay.

sewed or drew,
recall
looked as if I sung,
— Sweetly too,
ke a word,
first of all cheek the color sprung, then he heard.

xy my side,
At my feet,
reathed but air I breathed, atisfied !
t love's brim
'ouched the sweet :
die if death bequeathed weet to him.

, I love thee best ! ”
He exclaimed :
y love my own foretell ! ” confessed :
my heart on thine
ow unblamed, on thy soul as well langeth mine ! ”

wrong to own,
being truth ?
ould all the giving prove his alone ?
ealth and ease,
eauty, youth :
y lover gave me love,
gave these.

s all I meant,
— To be just,
passion I had raised,
'o content.
: chose to change
old for dust,
e him what he praised
Was it strange ?

re loved me yet,
n and on,
found some way undreamed

— Paid my debt !
Gave more life and more,
Till all gone,
He should smile “ She never seemed Mine before.

“ What, she felt the while,
Must I think ?
Love's so different with us men ! ”
He should smile :
“ Dying for my sake —
White and pink !
Can't we touch these bubbles then But they break ? ”

Dear, the pang is brief,
Do thy part,
Have thy pleasure ! How perplexed Grows belief !
Well, this cold clay clod
Was man's heart :
Crumble it, and what comes next ?
Is it God ?

MY STAR.

ALL that I know
Of a certain star
Is, it can throw (Like the angled spar)
Now a dart of red,
Now a dart of blue ;
Till my friends have said
They would fain see, too,
My star that dartles the red and the blue !
Then it stops like a bird ; like a flower,
hangs furled :
They must solace themselves with the Saturn above it.
What matter to me if their star is a
world ?
Mine has opened its soul to me ;
therefore I love it.

A FACE.

If one could have that little head of hers Painted upon a background of pale
gold,

Such as the Tuscan's early art prefers!
 No shade encroaching on the matchless
 mould
 Of those two lips, which should be opening soft
 In the pure profile; not as when she laughs,
 For that spoils all: but rather as if aloft
 Von hyacinth, she loves so, leaned its staff's Burden of honey-colored buds, to kiss
 And capture 'twixt the lips apart for
 this.
 Then her lithe neck, three fingers might surround.
 How it should waver, on the pale gold
 ground,

Up to the fruit-shaped, perfect chin it lifts!
 I know, Correggio loves to mass, in rifts
 Of heaven, his angel faces, orb on
 orb
 Breaking its outline, burning shades absorb:
 But these are only massed there, I should think,
 Waiting to see some wonder momentarily Grow out, stand full, fade slow against
 the sky
 (That's the pale ground you'd see this sweet face by),
 All heaven, meanwhile, condensed into one eye
 Which fears to lose the wonder, should it wink.

THE LOST DAY.

FAREWELL, oh day misspent;
 Thy fleeting hours were lent
 In vain to my endeavor.
 In shade and sun
 Thy race is run
 For ever! oh, for ever!
 The leaf drops from the tree,
 The sand falls in the glass,
 And to the dread Eternity
 The dying minutes pass.

 It was not till thine end
 I knew thou wert my friend;
 But now, thy worth recalling,
 My grief is strong
 I did thee wrong,

And scorned thy treasures falling.
 But sorrow comes too late;
 Another day is born; —
 Pass, minutes, pass; may better fate Attend to-morrow morn.

 Oh, birth! oh, death of Time!
 Oh, mystery sublime!
 Ever the rippling ocean
 Brings forth the wave
 To smile or rave,
 And die of its own motion.
 A little wave to strike
 The sad responsive shore,
 And be succeeded by its like
 Ever and evermore.

Oh, change from same to same!
 Oh, quenched, yet burning flame!
 Oh, new birth, born of dying!
 Oh, transient ray!
 Oh, speck of day!
 Approaching and yet flying; — Pass to Eternity.
 Thou day, that came in vain!
 A new wave surges on the sea —
 The world grows young again.
 Come in, To-day, come in!
 I have confessed my sin
 To thee, young promise-bearer!
 New Lord of Earth!
 I hail thy birth —
 The crown awaits the wearer.
 Child of the ages past!
 Sire of a mightier line!
 On the same deeps our lot is cast!
 The world is thine — and mine!

SISYPHUS.

A STUDY FROM THE ANTIQUE.

EVER and evermore
 Upon the steep life-shore
 Of Death's dark main,
 Bare to the bitter skies,
 His mournful task he plies
In vain, in vain!
 Sometimes he looks to Heaven
 And asks to be forgiven
 The grievous pain.
 The stars look sadly down,
 The cold sun seems to frown —
In vain, in vain!

But kindly mother Earth,
 Remembering his birth,
 Doth not disdain
 To sympathize with him,
 So worn of heart and limb;
In vain, in vain!

Is not his fate her own?
 The rolling toilsome stone Rolled back again?
 Are not her children's woes
 The very same he knows? —
In vain, in vain!

Do not all Earth and Sea
 Repeat Eternally
 Th' unvarying strain?
 The old and sad lament
 With human voices blent,
In vain, in vain!

Through the green forest arch
 The wild winds in their march Sigh and complain;
 The torrent on the hill
 Moans to the midnight chill,
In vain, in vain!

The hoarse monotonous waves
 Attune from all their caves,
 Through storm and rain,
 The melancholy cry,
 To listening Earth and sky,
In vain, in vain!

Love mourns its early dead;
 Hope its illusions fled,
 Or rudely slain;
 And Wealth and Power prolong
 The same, th' eternal song,
In vain, in vain!

Toil, Sisyphus, toil on!
 Thou'rt many, though but one!
 Toil heart and brain!
 • One — but the type of all Rolling the dreadful ball
In vain! in vain!

I LOVE MY LOVE.

WHAT is the meaning of the song
 That rings so clear and loud,
 Thou nightingale amid the copse —
 Thou lark above the cloud?
 What says thy song, thou joyous thrush,
 Up in the walnut-tree?
 "I love my Love, because I know
 My Love loves me."

What is the meaning of thy thought,
 O maiden fair and young?
 There is such pleasure in thine eyes,
 Such music on thy tongue;
 There is such glory on thy face —

What can the meaning be?
 "I love my Love, because I know
 My Love loves me."

O happy words! at Beauty's feet
 We sing them ere our prime;
 And when the early summers pass,
 And Care comes on with Time, Still be it ours, in Care's despite,
 To join the chorus free —
 "I love my Love, because I know
 My Love loves me."

YOUTH'S WARNING.

BEWARE, exulting youth, beware,
 When life's young pleasures woo,
 That ere you yield you shrive your
 heart,
 And keep your conscience true!
 For sake of silver spent to-day,
 Why pledge to-morrow's gold?
 Or in hot blood implant Remorse,
 To grow when blood is cold?
If wrong you do, if false you play,
In summer among the flowers,
You must atone, you shall repay,
In winter among the showers.
 To turn the balances of Heaven
 Surpasses mortal power;

For every white there is a black,
 For every sweet a sour.
 For every up there is a down,
 For every folly, shame;
 And retribution follows guilt,
 As burning follows flame.
If wrong you do, if false you play,
In summer among the flowers,
You must atone, you shall repay,
In winter among the showers.

I LAY IN SORROW, DEEP DISTRESSED.

I LAY in sorrow, deep distressed:
 My grief a proud man heard;
 His looks were cold, he gave me gold,
 But not a kindly word.
 My sorrow passed, — I paid him back
 The gold he gave to me;
 Then stood erect and spoke my thanks,
 And blessed his Charity.
 I lay in want, in grief and pain:
 A poor man passed my way;
 He bound my head, he gave me bread,
 He watched me night and day.
 How shall I pay him back again,
 For all he did to me?
 Oh, gold is great, but greater far
 Is heavenly Sympathy!

AUBREY THOMAS DE VERE.

1814—

[THIRD son of Sir Aubrey De Vere of Curragh Chase, Limerick Co. Born in 1814, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, a poet and political writer; author of May Carols, The Sisters, Irish Odes, etc., besides numerous prose works on political subjects.]

EARLY FRIENDSHIP.

THE half-seen memories of childish days,
 When pains and pleasures lightly came and went;
 The sympathies of boyhood rashly spent In fearful wanderings through forbidden
 ways;
 The vague, but manly wish to tread the maze

Of life to noble ends, — whereon intent, Asking to know for what man here is sent,
 The bravest heart must often pause, and gaze;
 The firm resolve to seek the chosen end Of manhood's judgment, cautious and mature, —
 Each of these viewless bonds binds friend to friend

With strength no selfish purpose can secure:
My happy lot is this, that all attend That friendship which first came, and which shall last endure.

SONG.

SING the old song, amid the sounds dispersing
That burden treasured in your hearts
too long;
Sing it with voice low-breathed,
but never name her:
She will not hear you, in her turrets nursing High thoughts, — too high to mate with mortal song; — Bend o'er her, gentle Heaven, but do not claim her!

At twilight caves, and secret lonelineses,
She shades the bloom of her unearthly
days;
The forest winds alone approach to woo her.
Far off we catch the dark gleam of her tresses;
And wild birds haunt the wood-walks where she strays,
Intelligible music warbling to her.

That spirit charged to follow and defend
her,

He also doubtless suffers this love-
pain;
And she perhaps is sad, hearing his sighing.
And yet that face is not so sad as tender;
Like some sweet singer's when her sweetest strain
From the heaved heart is gradually dying!

SAD IS OUR YOUTH, FOR IT IS EVER GOING.

SAD is our youth, for it is ever going,
Crumbling away beneath our very feet;
Sad is our life, for onward it is flowing
In current unperceived, because so fleet;
Sad are our hopes, for they were sweet in sowing, —
But tares, self-sown, have overtopped
the wheat;
Sad are our joys, for they were sweet in blowing, —
And still, O, still their dying breath is
sweet;
And sweet is youth, although it hath bereft us
Of that which made our childhood sweeter still;
And sweet is middle life, for it hath left us
A nearer good to cure an older ill;
And sweet are all things, when we learn to prize them,
Not for their sake, but His who grants them or denies them!

WE ARE BRETHREN A'.

HAPPY bit hame this auld world would
be,
If men, when they're here, could make shift to agree,

An' ilk said to his neighbor, in cottage

"Come, gi'e me your hand — we are brethren a'."

I ken na why ane wi' anither should fight,
When to 'gree would make a'body cosie an' right,
When man meets wi' man, 'tis the best way ava,
To say, "Gi'e me your hand—we are brethren a'."

My coat is a coarse ane, an' yours may be fine,
And I maun drink water, while you may drink wine;
But we baith ha'e a leal heart, unspotted
 to shaw:
Sae gi'e me your hand—we are breth-

The knave ye would scorn, the unfaithfu' deride;
Ye would stand like a rock, wi' the truth on your side; Sae would I, an' nought else would I value a straw;
Then gi'e me your hand—we are brethren a'.

Ye would scorn to do fausely by woman or man;
I haud by the right aye, as weel as I
 can;

We are ane in our joys, our affect

Come, gi'e me your hand—we brethren a'.

Your mither has lo'ed you as mi can lo'e;
An' mine has done for me what mi

We are ane high an' laigh, an

Sae gi'e me your hand—we are b

We love the same simmer day, s

Hame! O, how we love it, an' a

Frae the pure air of heaven the

Come, gi'e me your hand—we

Frail shakin' auld age will soon

LITTLE BELL.

"He prayeth well, who loveth well Both man and bird and beast."
 The Ancient Mariner.

PIPED the Blackbird, on the beechwood
 spray,

"Pretty maid, slow wandering this What's your name?" quoth
"What's your name? O, stop straight unfold,
Pretty maid, with showery curls of gold
 "Little Bell," said she.

Little Bell sat down beneath the rocks, Laid aside her gleaming, golden locks, —

"Bonny bird!" quoth she,
Bring me your best song, before I go."
There's the very finest song I know, Little Bell," said he.

Little the Blackbird piped — you never heard
So gay a song from any bird;
Full of quips and wiles,
Forsound and rich, now soft and slow,
For love of that sweet face below,
Dimpled o'er with smiles.

Little while that bonny bird did pour Full heart out, freely, o'er and o'er,
'Neath the morning skies,
The little childish heart below
The sweetness seemed to grow and
grow,
Little shine forth in happy overflow
From the brown, bright eyes.

When the dell she tripped, and through the glade —
Piped the squirrel from the hazel-shade,
And from out the tree
Came and leaped and frolicked, void of fear,
The bold Blackbird piped, that all might hear,
"Little Bell!" piped he.

Little Bell sat down amid the fern:
Squirrel, Squirrel! to your task return!
Bring me nuts!" quoth she.
Away! the frisky Squirrel hies,
Ten wood-lights glancing in his eyes,
And adown the tree,
At ripe nuts, kissed brown by July sun,
The little lap drop, one by one — Look! how Blackbird pipes, to see the fun!
"Happy Bell!" pipes he.

Little Bell looked up and down the
glade:
Squirrel, Squirrel, from the nut-tree
shade,
Bonny Blackbird, if your're not afraid,
Come and share with me!"

Down came Squirrel, eager for his fare,
Down came bonny Blackbird, I declare;
Little Bell gave each his honest share —
Ah! the merry three!

And the while those frolic playmates twain Piped and frisked from bough to bough
again,
'Neath the morning skies,
In the little childish heart below,
All the sweetness seemed to grow and
grow,
And shine out in happy overflow,
From her brown, bright eyes.

By her snow-white cot, at close of day, Knelt sweet Bell, with folded palms, to pray.
Very calm and clear
Rose the praying voice, to where, unseen,
In blue heaven, an angel-shape serene Paused awhile to hear.

"What good child is this," the angel said,
"That, with happy heart, beside her bed, Prays so lovingly?"
Low and soft, O, very low and soft, Crooned the Blackbird in the orchard croft,
"Bell, dear Bell!" crooned he.

"Whom God's creatures love," the angel
fair Murmured, "God doth bless with angel's
care;
Child, thy bed shall be Folded safe from harm; love, deep and
kind,
Shall watch round and leave good gifts
behind,
Little Bell, for thee."

UNDER MY WINDOW.

UNDER my window, under my window,
All in the Midsummer weather,
Three little girls with fluttering curls
Flit to and fro together: — There's Bell with her bonnet of satin
sheen,

And Maud with her mantle of silver-
green,
And Kate with her scarlet feather.

Under my window, under my window,
Leaning stealthily over,
Merry and clear, the voice I hear,
Of each glad-hearted rover.
Ah! sly little Kate, she steals my roses;
And Maud and Bell twine wreaths and posies,
As merry as bees in clover.

Under my window, under my window,
In the blue Midsummer weather,

Stealing slow, on a hushed tiptoe,
I catch them all together: —
Bell with her bonnet of satin sheen,
And Maud with her mantle of silver-
green,
And Kate with the scarlet feather.

Under my window, under my window,
And off through the orchard closes;
While Maud she flouts, and Bell she pouts,
They scamper and drop their posies;
But dear little Kate takes naught amiss, And leaps in my arms with a loving
kiss,
And I give her all my roses.

1814-1863.

[AN English theologian and poet. Born at Durham, June 28, 1814; graduated at Oxford in 1836; became vicar of Elton in 1843; went over to the Roman Catholic Church in 1845; founded the oratory of the brotherhood of St. Philip Neri in London in 1849, and in 1854 removed with it to Brompton, where he died Sept. 26, 1863. THE RIGHT MUST WIN.

O, IT is hard to work for God,
To rise and take his part
Upon this battle-field of earth,
And not sometimes lose heart!

He hides himself so wondrously,
As though there were no God;
He is least seen when all the powers
Of ill are most abroad.

Or he deserts us at the hour
The fight is all but lost;
And seems to leave us to ourselves
Just when we need him most.

Ill masters good; good seems to change
To ill with greatest ease;
And, worst of all, the good with good
Is at cross-purposes.

Ah! God is other than we think;
His ways are far above,

Far beyond reason's height, and reached
Only by childlike love.

Workman of God! O, lose not heart,
But learn what God is like;
And in the darkest battle-field
Thou shalt know where to strike.

Thrice blest is he to whom is given
The instinct that can tell That God is on the field when he Is most invisible.

Blest, too, is he who can divine
Where real right doth lie,
And dares to take the side that seems Wrong to man's blindfold eye.

For right is right, since God is God;
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin!

LOVE OF GOD AND MAN.

It is the happy privilege of the
mind —
It is the reason of all living things.
Infinity there seems of principles,
Which represent and rule created life —
Love of self, our fellows, and our
God.
All throughout one common feeling reigns:
It doth maintain, and is maintained by the other:
We are compatible — all needful; one life, — to virtue one, — and one to
bliss:
Which thus together make the power,
the end,
the perfection of created Being.
In these three principles doth every
deed,
re, and will, and reasoning, good or bad, come:
Hence they all determine — sum and scheme:
Three are one in centre and in round;
Supporting the world of life as do the skies world. Hail! air of love, by which we live!
Sweet, how fragrant! Spirit, though
unseen —
A sign of gross sign — is scarce a simple essence,
Mortal, immaterial, though it be.
Only simple essence liveth — God, — Creator, uncreate. The brutes beneath, angels high above us, with ourselves,
but compounded things of mind and
form.
All things animate is therefore cored elemental sameness of existence;

For God, being Love, in love created all,
As he contains the whole and penetrates.
Seraphs love God, and angels love the
good:
We love each other; and these lower lives,
Which walk the earth in thousand diverse shapes,
According to their reason, love us too:
The most intelligent affect us most.
Nay, man's chief wisdom's love — the love of God.
The new religion — final, perfect, pure —
Was that of Christ and love. His great command —
His all-sufficing precept — was't not
love?
Truly to love ourselves we must love
God, —
To love God we must all his creatures
love, —
To love his creatures, both ourselves and
Him.
Thus love is all that's wise, fair, good,
and happy!

LIKE AN ISLAND IN A RIVER.

Like an island in a river
Art thou, my love, to me;
And I journey by thee ever
With a gentle ecstasy.
I arise to fall before thee;
I come to kiss thy feet:
To adorn thee and adore thee, —
Mine only one, my sweet!

And thy love hath power upon me,
Like a dream upon a brain;
For the loveliness which won me,
With the love, too, doth remain.

And my life it beautifieth,
 Though love be but a shade,
 Known of only ere it dieth, —
 By the darkness it hath made.

THE END OF LIFE.

WE live in deeds, not years; in thoughts,
 not breaths;
 In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
 We should count time by heart-throbs.
 He most lives,
 Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts
 the best.
 And he whose heart beats quickest lives
 the longest:
 Lives in one hour more than in years do some Whose fat blood sleeps as it slips along their veins.
 Life is but a means unto an end; that
 end,

Beginning, mean, and end to all things,
 — God.
 The dead have all the glory of the world.

GREAT THOUGHTS.

WHO can mistake great thoughts?
 They seize upon the mind; arrest, and search,
 And shake it; bow the tall soul as by
 wind;
 Rush over it like rivers over reeds,
 Which quaver in the current; turn us
 cold,
 And pale, and voiceless; leaving in the brain
 A rocking and a ringing, — glorious,
 But momentary; madness might it last,
 And close the soul with Heaven as with a seal.

LOSSES.

UPON the white sea-sand
 There sat a pilgrim band, Telling the losses that their lives had
 known;
 While evening waned away
 From breezy cliff and bay,
 And the strong tides went out with weary moan.
 One spake, with quivering lip,
 Of a fair freighted ship,
 With all his household to the deep gone
 down;

But one had wilder woe —
 For a fair face, long ago Lost in the darker depths of a great town.

There were who mourned their youth
 With a most loving ruth,
 For its brave hopes and memories ever
 green;
 And one upon the west Turned an eye that would not
 rest,
 For far-off hills whereon its joy had been.

Some talked of vanished gold,
Some of proud honors told,
Some spake of friends that were their trust no more;
And one of a green grave
Beside a foreign wave,
That made him sit so lonely on the
shore.

But when their tales were done,
There spake among them one,
A stranger, seeming from all sorrow
free:

"Sad losses have ye met,
But mine is heavier yet;
For a believing heart hath gone from
me."

"Alas!" these pilgrims said,
"For the living and the dead —
For fortune's cruelty, for love's sure cross,
For the wrecks of land and sea;
But, however it came to thee, Thine, stranger, is life's last and heaviest loss."

THE OLD ARM CHAIR.

I LOVE it—I love it, and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm chair!
I've treasured it long as a sainted
prize —
I've bedewed it with tears, and embalmed it with sighs;
'Tis bound by a thousand bands to my
heart,
Not a tie will break, not a link will start.
Would you learn the spell? a mother
sat there;
And a sacred thing is that old arm
chair.

In childhood's hour I lingered near
The hallowed seat with listening ear;
And gentle words that mother would
give,
To fit me to die, and teach me to live.
She told me shame would never betride,

With truth for my creed, and God for my guide;
She taught me to lisp my earliest
prayer,
As I knelt beside that old arm chair.

I sat and watched her many a day,
When her eyes grew dim and her locks were gray,
And I almost worshipped her when she smiled
And turned from her Bible to bless her child.
Years rolled on, but the last one sped —
My idol was shattered — my earth star
fled:
I learnt how much the heart can bear,
When I saw her die in that old arm chair.

'Tis past! 'tis past! but I gaze on it
now
With quivering breath and throbbing
brow.
'Twas there she nursed me — 'twas there she died,

And memory flows with lava tide —
Say it is folly, and deem me weak, While the scalding tears run down my cheek.

But I love it — I love it, and cannot tear

My soul from my mother's old arm chair.

THE OLD WATER-MILL.

AND is this the old mill-stream that ten years ago
Was so fast in its current, so pure in its
flow;
Whose musical waters would ripple and
shine
With the glory and dash of a miniature Rhine?

Can this be its bed? — I remember it well
When it sparkled like silver through meadow and dell;
When the pet-lamb reposed on its emerald side,
And the minnow and perch darted swift through its tide.

Yes! here was the miller's house, peaceful abode!
Where the flower-twined porch drew all eyes from the road;
Where roses and jasmine embower'd a door
That never was closed to the wayworn or poor.

Where the miller, God bless him! oft gave us "a dance,"
And led off the ball with his soul in his glance;
Who, forgetting gray hairs, was as loud in his mirth
As the veriest youngsters that circled his hearth.

Blind Ralph was the only musician we had,
But his tunes — oh, such tunes — would make any heart glad!

"The Roast Beef of Old England," and "Green grow the Rushes," Woke our eyes' brightest beams, and our cheeks' warmest flushes.

No lustre resplendent its brilliancy
shed,
But the wood fire blazed high, and the board was well spread;
Our seats were undamask'd, our partners were rough,
Yet, yet we were happy, and that was enough.

And here was the mill where we idled
away
Our holiday hours on a clear summer
day;
Where Roger, the miller's boy, lol'd on a sack,
And chorus'd his song to the merry click-clack.

But lo! what rude sacrilege here hath been done!
The streamlet no longer purls on in the
sun;
It's course has been turn'd, and the desolate edge
Is now mournfully cover'd with duck-weed and sedge.

The mill is in ruins. No welcoming
sound
In the mastiff's gruff bark and the wheels dashing round;
The house, too, untenanted — left to
decay —
And the miller, long dead: all I loved pass'd away!

This play-place of childhood was graved on my heart
In rare Paradise colors that now must depart;
The old water-mill's gone, the fair vision is fled,
And I weep o'er its wreck as I do for the dead.

EMILY BRONTË.

1819-1848.

[EMILY BRONTË was born at Hartshead-cum-Clifton, near Leeds, in 1819, and lived at the parsonage at Haworth from 1820 to her death. The monotony of this existence was broken only by a brief attempt to be a governess and by a short stay at Brussels in 1842, all exile from home being excessively painful and hurtful to her. She died of consumption at Haworth on the 19th of December, 1848. She published, in conjunction with her sisters, Poems, by Currer, Ellis, and Acton Bell, in 1846, and, alone, the novel of Wuthering Heights in 1847.]

LAST LINES.

No coward soul is mine,
No trembler in the world's storm-troubled sphere:

I see Heaven's glories shine,
And faith shines equal, arming me from fear.

O God within my breast,
Almighty, ever-present Deity!
Life — that in me has rest,
As I — undying Life — have power in
thee!

Vain are the thousand creeds
That move men's hearts. unutterably
vain;

Worthless as withered weeds,
Or idlest froth amid the boundless main,

To waken doubt in one Holding so fast by thine infinity;
So surely anchored on
The steadfast rock of immortality.

With wide-embracing love
Thy spirit animates eternal years,
Pervades and broods above, Changes, sustains, dissolves, creates, and rears.

Though earth and man were gone,
And suns and universes ceased to be,
And Thou were left alone,
Every existence would exist in Thee.

There is not room for Death, Nor atom that his might could render
void:

Thou — THOU art Being and Breath,
And what THOU art may never be destroyed.

STANZAS.

OFTEN rebuked, yet always back returning

To those first feelings that were born
with me,
And leaving busy chase of wealth and learning
For idle dreams of things which cannot
be:

To-day, I will seek not the shadowy region;

Its unsustaining vastness waxes drear;
And visions rising, legion after legion,
Bring the unreal world too strangely
near.

I'll walk, but not in old heroic traces,
And not in paths of high morality,
And not among the half-distinguished faces,
The clouded forms of long-past history.

I'll walk where my own nature would be leading:

It vexes me to choose another guide:
Where the gray flocks in ferny glens are feeding;

Where the wild wind blows on the mountain side.

THE OLD STOIC.

RICHES I hold in light esteem,
And Love I laugh to scorn;
And lust of fame was but a dream,
That vanished with the morn:

And if I pray, the only prayer
That moves my lips for me
Is, "Leave the heart that now I bear,
And give me liberty!"

Yes, as my swift days near their goal,
'Tis all that I implore;
In life and death, a chainless soul,
With courage to endure.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH.

1819-1861.

[BORN at Liverpool, Jan. 1, 1819; passed some years of his childhood at Charlestown, in Virginia; was at school at Rugby from 1829 to 1837; was Scholar of Balliol and afterwards Fellow and Tutor of Oriel; resigned his offices in Oxford in 1848; was Principal of University Hall, London, for a short time afterwards; again went to America; returned in 1853 to take a post in the Education Office. He died at Florence, Nov. 13, 1861. His poems were chiefly written between 1840 and 1850, The Bothie being published in 1848, and many of the shorter poems appearing in a volume called Ambarvalia in the next year.]

QUA CURSUM VENTUS.

As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay
With canvas drooping, side by side,
Two towers of sail at dawn of day
Arescarce long leagues apart desried;

When fell the night, upsprung the breeze,
And all the darkling hours they plied,
Nor dreamt but each the self-same seas
By each was cleaving, side by side:

E'en so — but why the tale reveal
Of those, whom year by year unchanged,
Brief absence joined anew to feel,
Astounded, soul from soul estranged?

At dead of night their sails were filled,
And onward each rejoicing steered —
Ah, neither blame, for neither willed,
Or wist, what first with dawn appeared!

To veer, how vain! On, onward strain, Brave barks! In light, in darkness
too,
Through winds and tides one compass guides —
To that, and your own selves, be true.

But O blithe breeze! and O great seas, Though ne'er, that earliest parting
past,
On your wide plain they join again,
Together lead them home at last.

One port, methought, alike they sought,
One purpose hold where'er they fare,—
O bounding breeze, O rushing seas!
At last, at last, unite them there!

QUI LABORAT, ORAT.

O ONLY Source of all our light and life, Whom as our truth, our strength, we see and feel,
But whom the hours of mortal moral strife
Alone aright reveal!

Mine inmost soul, before Thee inly
brought,
Thy presence owns ineffable, divine;
Chastised each rebel self-centered
thought,
My will adareth Thine.

With eye down-dropt, if then this earthly mind Speechless remain, or speechless e'en
depart;
Nor seek to see — for what of earthly
kind
Can see Thee as Thou art? —

If well-assured 'tis but profanely bold
In thought's abstractest forms to seem
to see,
It dare not dare the dread communion
hold
In ways unworthy Thee,

O not unowned, thou shalt unnamed forgive,

In wordly walks the prayerless heart prepare;

And if in work its life it seem to live,
Shalt make that work be prayer.

Nor times shall lack, when while the work it plies,

Unsummoned powers the blinding film shall part,

And scarce by happy tears made dim,
the eyes

In recognition start.

But, as thou willest, give or e'en forbear

The beatific supersensual sight,
So, with Thy blessing blest, that humbler

prayer

Approach Thee morn and night.

"WITH WHOM IS NO VARIABLE-NESS, NEITHER SHADOW OF TURNING"

It fortifies my soul to know
That, though I perish, Truth is so:
That, howsoever I stray and range,
Whate'er I do, Thou dost not change.
I steadier step when I recall
That, if I slip, Thou dost not fall.

WHERE LIES THE LAND?

WHERE lies the land to which the ship
would go?

Far, far ahead, is all her seamen know.
And where the land she travels from?

Away,

Far, far behind, is all that they can say.

On sunny noons upon the deck's smooth
face,

Linked arm in arm, how pleasant here
to pace;

Or, o'er the stern reclining, watch below
The foaming wake far widening as we
go.

On stormy nights when wild northwesters rave,

How proud a thing to fight with wind and wave!

The dripping sailor on the reeling mast Exults to bear, and scorns to wish it
past.

Where lies the land to which the ship
would go?

Far, far ahead, is all her seamen know.
And where the land she travels from?

Away,

Far, far behind, is all that they can say.

CHARLES KINGSLEY.

1819-1875.

[Born at Holne Vicarage, Devonshire, in 1819, and educated, partly at Helston Grammar School, and partly at King's College, London, and at Magdalene College, Cambridge. He was Rector of Eversley in Hampshire, Professor of Modern History at his old university from 1860 to 1869; and Canon of Westminster in 1872. Chief among his thirty-five publications are The Saint's Tragedy (1848), Alton Locke and Yeast (1849), Hypatia (1853), The Heroes (1856), Andromeda (1858), The Water-Babies (1863), and Prose Idylls (1873). He died in 1875.]

THE SANDS OF DEE.

"OH, Mary, go and call the cattle
home,

And call the cattle home,
And call the cattle home,

Across the sands of Dee."

The western wind was wild and dark with foam,

And all alone went she.

The western tide crept up along the sand,

And o'er and o'er the sand,

And round and round the sand,
As far as eye could see.
The rolling mist came down and hid the
land:
And never home came she.

"Oh! is it weed, or fish, or floating
hair —
A tress of golden hair,
A drowned maiden's hair,
Above the nets at sea?"
Was never salmon yet that shone so fair
Among the stakes of Dee.

They rowed her in across the rolling
foam,
The cruel crawling foam,
The cruel hungry foam,
To her grave beside the sea.
But still the boatmen hear her call the cattle home,
Across the sands of Dee.

THREE FISHERS.

THREE fishers went sailing out into the west,
Out into the west, as the sun went
down,
Each thought of the woman who loved him best,
And the children stood watching them out of the town;
For men must work, and women must
weep,
And there's little to earn, and many to keep,
Though the harbor-bar be moaning.

Three wives sat up in the lighthouse
tower,
And they trimmed the lamps as the sun went down;

They looked at the squall, and they looked at the shower,
And the night-rack came rolling up ragged and brown;
But men must work, and women must
weep,
Though storms be sudden, and waters
deep,
And the harbor-bar be moaning.

Three corpses lie out in the shining
sands,
In the morning gleam, as the tide
goes down,
And the women are weeping and wringing their hands,
For those who will never come home to the town.
For men must work, and women must
weep,
And the sooner it's over, the sooner to
sleep,
And good-bye to the bar and its moaning.

THE "OLD, OLD SONG."

WHEN all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green;
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad,
And all the trees are brown;
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down:
Creep home, and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among:
God grant you find one face there
You loved when all was young.

GEORGE ELIOT

(MARIAN EVANS LEWES CROSS).

1819-1880.

[BORN at South Farm, Colton, Warwickshire, Nov. 22, 1819. Was the daughter of a poor curate, but was adopted by a wealthy clergyman, who gave her a careful education. She became a pupil of Herbert Spencer, and under his training acquired great breadth of mental development, learning Greek, French, and Italian, studying music and art as well as metaphysics and logic. In 1851, she went to London to join the staff of the Westminster Review. One of the chief writers for this quarterly was George H. Lewes, whose wife she subsequently became, and after his death (1878) she married Mr. J. N. Cross, May 6, 1880. Her death took place Dec. 22, 1880, and her biography, prepared by Mr. Cross, will, it is anticipated, be published during the year (1884). Her first novel was Scenes of Clerical Life (1858), and was rapidly followed by others which proved marvellously successful, and gave her an enduring position among the writers of fiction. Her poems, The Spanish Gipsy (1868), and Jubal and other Poems (1870), though containing many beautiful passages, do not, in popular estimation, rank with her prose works.]

FROM "BROTHER AND SISTER."

His sorrow was my sorrow, and his joy Sent little leaps and laughs through all my frame;

My doll seemed lifeless and no girlish
toy
Had any reason when my brother came.

I knelt with him at marbles, marked his fling Cut the ringed stem and make the apple drop,
Or watched him winding close the spiral string
That looped the orbits of the humming top.

Grasped by such fellowship my vagrant
thought Ceased with dream-fruit dream-wishes to fulfil;
My airy-picturing fantasy was taught Subjection to the harder, truer skill,

That seeks with deeds to grave a thought-tracked line,
And by "What is," "What will be"
to define.

School parted us; we never found
again
That childish world where our two spirits mingled

Like scents from varying roses that remain
One sweetness, nor can evermore be singled.

Yet the twin habit of that early time Lingered for long about the heart and
tongue:
We had been natives of one happy
clime,
And its dear accent to our utterance clung

Till the dire years whose awful name is Change
Had grasped our souls still yearning in divorce,
And pitiless shaped them in two forms that range
Two elements which sever their life's course.

But were another childhood-world
my share,
I would be born a little sister there.

LISA'S MESSAGE TO THE KING.

[From How Lisa Loved the King.]

LOVE, thou didst see me, light as morn-ing's breath,
Roaming a garden in a joyous error,
Laughing at chases vain, a happy child,

Till of thy countenance the alluring terror
In majesty from out the blossoms smiled,
From out their life seeming a beauteous
Death.

O Love, who so didst choose me for
thine own,
Taking this little isle to thy great sway,
See now, it is the honor of thy throne
That what thou gavest perish not away, Nor leave some sweet remembrance to atone
By life that will be for the brief life
gone:
Hear, ere the shroud o'er these frail limbs be thrown —
Since every king is vassal unto thee,
My heart's lord needs must listen loyally —
O tell him I am waiting for my Death!

Tell him, for that he hath such royal
power
'Twere hard for him to think how small a thing,
How slight a sign, would make a wealthy
dower
For one like me, the bride of that pale
king
Whose bed is mine at some swift-nearing hour.
Go to my lord, and to his memory bring
That happy birthday of my sorrowing
When his large glance made meaner gazers glad,
Entering the bannered lists: 'twas then I had
The wound that laid me in the arms of
Death.

Tell him, O Love, I am a lowly maid,
No more than any little knot of thyme
That he with careless foot may often
tread;
Yet lowest fragrance oft will mount sublime
And cleave to things most high and hallowed,
As doth the fragrance of my life's springtime,

My lowly love, that soaring seeks to climb
Within his thought, and make a gentle
bliss,
More blissful than if mine, in being his:
So shall I live in him and rest in Death.

TWO LOVERS.

Two lovers by a moss-grown spring:
They leaned soft cheeks together
there,
Mingled the dark and sunny hair,
And heard the wooing thrushes sing.
O budding time!
O love's blest prime!

Two wedded from the portal step:
The bells made happy carollings,
The air was soft as fanning wings,
White petals on the pathway slept.
O pure-eyed bride!
O tender pride!

Two faces o'er a cradle bent:
Two hands above the head were locked;
These pressed each other while they rocked,
Those watched a life that love had sent.
O solemn hour!
O hidden power!

Two parents by the evening fire:
The red light fell about their knees
On heads that rose by slow degrees
Like buds upon the lily spire.
O patient life!
O tender strife!

The two still sat together there,
The red light shone about their knees;
But all the heads by slow degrees
Had gone and left that lonely pair.
O voyage fast!
O vanished past!

The red light shone upon the floor
And made the space between them
wide;

"Two lovers by a moss-grown spring."

ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

They drew their chairs up side by side,
Their pale cheeks joined, and said,
"Once more!"

O memories!
O past that is!

"O MAY I JOIN THE CHOIR INVISIBLE."

O MAY I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence:
live

In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

So to live is heaven:
To make undying music in the world;
Breathing as beautiful order that controls

With growing sway the growing life of
man.

So we inherit that sweet purity
For which we struggled, failed, and agonized

With widening retrospect that bred despair.

Rebellious flesh that would not be subdued,

A vicious parent shaming still its child
For anxious penitence, is quick dissolved;

Its discords, quenched by meeting harmonies,

Die in the large and charitable air.
And all our rarer, better, truer self,
That sobbed religiously in yearning
song,

That watched to ease the burden of the
world,

Laboriously tracing what must be,
And what may yet be better—saw within

A worthier image for the sanctuary,
And shaped it forth before the multitude

Divinely human, raising worship so
To higher reverence more mixed with
love—

That better self shall live till human
Time

Shall fold its eyelids, and the human
sky

Be gathered like a scroll within the tomb

Unread for ever.

This is life to come,
Which martyred men have made more glorious

For us who strive to follow May I reach—

That purest heaven, be to other souls
The cup of strength in some great agony;

Enkindle generous ardor, feed pure
love,

Beget the smiles that have no cruelty—
Be the sweet presence of a good diffused,

And in diffusion ever more intense.

So shall I join the choir invisible Whose music is the gladness of the world.

WILLIAM COX BENNETT.

1820—

[BORN at Greenwich in 1820. Son of a watchmaker, at which business he was put when he was 14 years old. He has taken an active part in all the agitations for popular education during the past thirty years, is the Hon. Sec. to the Greenwich branch of the National Education League, and a member of the London Council. Has published several volumes of poems, but is best known as a song-writer. Dr. Bennett is a practised political writer, and was for several years on the editorial staff of The Weekly Dispatch. The University of Tusculum conferred on him the degree of I.L.D. in 1869. A collected edition of his poems appeared in 1862, in Routledge's British Poets.]

BABY'S SHOES.

O, THOSE little, those little blue shoes !
Those shoes that no little feet use.
O the price were high
That those shoes would buy,
Those little blue unused shoes !

For they hold the small shape of feet,
That no more their mother's eyes meet,
That, by God's good will,
Years since, grew still,
And ceased from their totter so sweet.

And O, since that baby slept,
So hushed, how the mother has kept,
With a tearful pleasure,
That little dear treasure,
And o'er them thought and wept !

For they mind her forevermore
Of a patter along the floor;
And blue eyes she sees
Look up from her knees,
With the look that in life they wore.

As they lie before her there,
There babbles from chair to chair
A little sweet face
That's a gleam in the place,
With its little gold curls of hair.

Then O wonder not that her heart
From all else would rather part Than those tiny blue shoes
That no little feet use,
And whose sight makes such fond tears start !

DENIS FLORENCE MACCARTHY.

1820—1882.

[BORN in Ireland about 1820: published in 1850 a volume of Ballads, Poems, and Lyrics, with translations from several modern languages. Issued in 1853 a translation of Calderon's dramas; in 1857 two new volumes of Poems; and, in 1872, Shelby's Early Life, from original sources. In 1871 he received a pension of £100, in recognition of literary merit. Died April 7, 1882.]

SUMMER LONGINGS.

AH ! my heart is weary waiting,
Waiting for the May, —
Waiting for the pleasant rambles
Where the fragrant hawthorn-brambles,
With the woodbine alternating,
Scent the dewy way.
Ah ! my heart is weary waiting,
Waiting for the May.

Ah ! my heart is sick with longing,
Longing for the May, —
Longing to escape from study
To the young face fair and ruddy,
And the thousand charms belonging
To the summer's day.
Ah ! my heart is sick with longing,
Longing for the May.

Ah! my heart is sore with sighing,
Sighing for the May, —
Sighing for their sure returning,
When the summer beams are burning,
Hopes and flowers that, dead or dying,
All the winter lay.

Ah! my heart is sore with sighing,
Sighing for the May.

Ah! my heart is pained with throbbing,
Throbbing for the May, —
Throbbing for the seaside billows,
Or the water-wooing willows;

Where, in laughing and in sobbing,
Glide the streams away.
Ah! my heart, my heart is throbbing,
Throbbing for the May.

Waiting sad, dejected, weary,
Waiting for the May:
Spring goes by with wasted warnings, —
Moonlit evening, sunbright mornings, —
Summer comes, yet dark and dreary Life still ebbs away;
Man is ever weary, weary,
Waiting for the May!

FREDERICK LOCKER.

1821—

[BORN in 1821, son of Mr. E. H. Locker, a civil commissioner of Greenwich Hospital, and founder of the Naval Gallery there. Mr. Locker has contributed reviews to the Times, and verses to the Times, Blackwood, the Cornhill, and Punch, which have been collected in a volume called London Lyrics. His Poems have also been recently published in this country.]

A HUMAN SKULL.

A HUMAN Skull! I bought it passing cheap,
Indeed 'twas dearer to its first employer!
I thought mortality did well to keep Some mute memento of the Old Destroyer.

Time was, some may have prized its blooming skin;
Her lips were woo'd, perhaps, in transport tender;
Some may have chuck'd what was a dimpled chin,
And never had my doubt about its gender.

Did she live yesterday or ages back?
What color were the eyes when bright and waking?
And were your ringlets fair, or brown,
or black,
Poor little head! that long has done with aching?

It may have held (to shoot some random shots)
Thy brains, Eliza Fry! or Baron Byron's;
The wits of Nelly Gwynn, or Doctor Watts —
Two quoted bards. Two philanthropic sirens

But this I trust is clearly understood;
If man or woman, if adored or hated — Whoever own'd this Skull was not so
good,
Nor quite so bad as many may have stated.

Who love can need no special type of
Death;
Death steals his icy hand where Love
reposes;
Alas for love, alas for fleeting breath — Immortelles bloom with Beauty's bridal roses.

O true-love mine, what lines of care are these?
The heart still lingers with its golden
hours,
But fading tints are on the chestnut-
trees,
And where is all that lavish wealth of flowers?

The end is near. Life lacks what once it gave,
Yet death has promises that call for praises;
A very worthless rogue may dig the
grave,
But hands unseen will dress the turf with daisies.

TO MY GRANDMOTHER.

SUGGESTED BY A PICTURE BY MR. ROMNEY.

*Under the elm a rustic seat
Was merriest Susan's pet retreat
To merry make.*

THIS relative of mine,
Was she seventy-and-nine
When she died?
By the canvas may be seen
How she look'd at seventeen,
As a bride.

Beneath a summer tree,
Her maiden reverie
Has a charm;
Her ringlets are in taste;
What an arm! . . . what a waist
For an arm!

With her bridal-wreath, bouquet,
Lace farthingale, and gay Fulbala, —
Were Romney's limning true,
What a lucky dog were you,
Grandpapa!

Her lips are sweet as love;
They are parting! Do they move?
Are they dumb?

Her eyes are blue, and beam Beseechingly, and seem To say, "Come!"

What funny fancy slips
From atween these cherry lips Whisper me,
Sweet sorceress in paint,
What canon says I mayn't Marry thee?

That good-for-nothing Time
Has a confidence sublime!
When I first Saw this lady, in my youth,
Her winters had, forsooth, Done their worst.

Her locks, as white as snow,
Once shamed the swarthy crow
By-and-by
That fowl's avenging sprite
Set his cruel foot for spite Near her eye.

Her rounded form was lean,
And her silk was bombazine:
Well I wot
With her needles would she sit,
And for hours would she knit,
Would she not?

Ah, perishable clay;
Her charms had dropt away
One by one:
But if she heaved a sigh
With a burden, it was, "Thy Will be done."

In travail, as in tears,
With the fardel of her years
Overprest,
In mercy she was borne
Where the weary and the worn
Are at rest.

O, if you now are there,
And sweet as once you were,
Grandmamma,
This nether world agrees
'Twill all the better please
Grandpapa.

MATTHEW ARNOLD.

1822-1888.

[ELDEST son of the late Rev. Thos. Arnold, D.D., head-master of Rugby, born Dec. 24, 1822, at Laleham, Middlesex Co. Educated at Winchester, Rugby, and Balliol College, Oxford, graduated in 1844, and was elected a Fellow of Oriel College in 1845. Secretary to Lord Lansdowne from 1847 to 1851, when he was appointed one of the Lay Inspectors of Schools, under the Committee of Council on Education, a post which he still holds. In 1854 he published a volume of Poems under his own name, his previous volumes in 1848 and 1853 having been published without the name of the author. Elected Professor of Poetry at Oxford in 1857, which office he held till 1867. He has published several volumes of Poems and Essays, which are highly esteemed. "The strain of his mind," says an anonymous critic, "is calm and thoughtful; his style is the reverse of florid, deep culture, and a certain severity of taste have subdued every tendency to gay or passionate exuberance."]

YOUTH'S AGITATIONS.

WHEN I shall be divorced, some ten years hence,
From this poor present self which I am now;
When youth has done its tedious vain expense
Of passions that for ever ebb and
flow;
Shall I not joy youth's heats are left
behind,
And breathe more happy in an even
clime? —
Ah no, for then I shall begin to find
A thousand virtues in this hated time!
Then I shall wish its agitations back,
And all its thwarting currents of desire;
Then I shall praise the heat which then
I lack,
And call this hurrying fever, generous
fire;
And sigh that one thing only has been lent
To youth and age in common — discontent.

THE BETTER PART.

LONG fed on boundless hopes, O race of
man,
How angrily thou spurn'st all simpler
fare!

"Christ," some one says, "was human as we are;
No judge eyes us from Heaven, our sin to scan;

We live no more, when we have done our span." —

"Well, then, for Christ," thou answer-est, "who can care?
From sin, which Heaven records not,
why forbear?
Live we like brutes our life without a plan!"

So answerest thou; but why not rather
say:

"Hath man no second life? — Pitch this one high!
Sits there no judge in Heaven, our sin
to see? —

More strictly, then, the inward judge obey!

Was Christ a man like us? — Ah! let us try

If we then, too, can be such men as he!

FROM "THE SCHOLAR-GIPSY."

Go, for they call you, shepherd, from the
hill;

Go, shepherd, and untie the wattled cotes!

No longer leave thy wistful flock
unfed,

The sky is shrivelled and shred;
 The hedges down by the loan
 I can count them bone by bone,
 The leaves are open and spread.
 But I see the teeth of the land,
 And hands like a dead man's hand,
 And the eyes of a dead man's head.
 There's nothing but cinders and sand,
 The rat and the mouse have fled,
 And the summer's empty and cold;
 Over valley and wold,
 Wherever I turn my head,
 There's a mildew and a mould;
 The sun's going out overhead,
 And I'm very old,
 And Tommy's dead.

What am I staying for, boys?
 You're all born and bred —
 'Tis fifty years and more, boys,
 Since wife and I were wed;
 And she's gone before, boys,
 And Tommy's dead.

She was always sweet, boys,
 Upon his curly head,
 She knew she'd never see't, boys,
 And she stole off to bed;
 I've been sitting up alone, boys,
 For he'd come home, he said,
 But it's time I was gone, boys,
 For Tommy's dead.

Put the shutters up, boys,
 Bring out the beer and bread,
 Make haste and sup, boys,
 For my eyes are heavy as lead;
 There's something wrong i' the cup, boys,
 There's something ill wi' the bread;
 I don't care to sup, boys,
 And Tommy's dead.

I'm not right, I doubt, boys,
 I've such a sleepy head;
 I shall never more be stout, boys,
 You may carry me to bed.
 What are you about, boys,
 The prayers are all said,
 The fire's raked out, boys,
 And Tommy's dead.

The stairs are too steep, boys,
 You may carry me to the head,
 The night's dark and deep, boys,
 Your mother's long in bed;
 'Tis time to go to sleep, boys,
 And Tommy's dead.

I'm not used to kiss, boys;
 You may shake my hand instead.
 All things go amiss, boys,
 You may lay me where she is, boys,
 And I'll rest my old head;
 'Tis a poor world, this, boys,
 And Tommy's dead.

HOW'S MY BOY.

"Ho, sailor of the sea!
 How's my boy — my boy?"
 "What's your boy's name, good wife,
 And in what ship sail'd he?"

"My boy John —
 He that went to sea —
 What care I for the ship, sailor?
 My boy's my boy to me.

"You come back from sea,
 And not know my John?
 I might as well have ask'd some lands-
 man,

Yonder down in the town.
 There's not an ass in all the parish
 But know's my John.

"How's my boy — my boy?
 And unless you let me know
 I'll swear you are no sailor, Blue jacket or no —
 Brass buttons or no, sailor,
 Anchor and crown or no —
 Sure his ship was the 'Jolly Briton,' —
 "Speak low, woman, speak low!"

"And why should I speak low, sailor, About my own boy John?
 If I was loud as I am proud
 I'd sing him over the town!
 Why should I speak low, sailor?" —
 "That good ship went down."

my boy — my boy?
 re I for the ship, sailor — ver aboard her.
 float or be she aground or swimming, I'll be bound ers can afford her!
 w's my John?" —

Every man aboard her."
 "Every man on board went down,
 "How's my boy, — my boy?
 What care I for the men, sailor?
 I'm not their mother —
 How's my boy — my boy?
 Tell me of him and no other!
 How's my boy — my boy?"

THE LITTLE FAIR SOUL.

A fair soul that knew no sin
 d over the edge of Paradise, one striving to come in,
 ear and tumult in his eyes.

Other, is it you?" he cried;
 face is like a breath from home;
 you stay so long outside?
 thirst for you to come!

First how our mother fares, as she wept too much for me?"
 are her cheeks and white her
 lips,
 t from gentle tears for thee."

Where are our sisters gone?"
 I left them weary and wan."
 I me, is the baby grown?"
 he is almost a man."

You break the gathering days, the light of death comethrough, yet stumble in the maze and safely by so few, so few?

A crowd upon the sea
 arkens till you find no shore, the face of life to me,
 sank for evermore.

"And like an army in the snow
 My days went by, a treacherous train,
 Each smiling as he struck his blow,
 Until I lay among them — slain."

"Oh, brother, there was a path so clear!"
 "There might be, but I never sought."
 "Oh, brother, there was a sword so near!"
 "There might be, but I never fought!"

"Yet sweep this needless gloom aside,
 For you are come to the gate at last!"
 Then in despair that soul replied,
 "The gate is fast! the gate is fast!"

"I cannot move this mighty weight,
 I cannot find this golden key;
 But hosts of heaven around us wait,
 And none has ever said 'no' to me.

"Sweet Saint, put by thy palm and scroll,
 And come undo the door for me!"
 "Rest thee still, thou little fair soul,
 It is not mine to keep the key."

"Kind Angel, strike these doors apart!
 The air without is dark and cold."
 "Rest thee still, thou little pure heart,
 Not for my word will they unfold."

Up all the shining heights he prayed
For that poor Shadow in the cold!
Still came the word, "Not ours to aid;
We cannot make the doors unfold."

But that poor Shadow, still outside,
Wrung all the sacred air with pain;

And all the souls went up and cried,
Where never cry was heard in vain.

No eye beheld the pitying Face,
The answer none might understand,
But dimly through the silent space
Was seen the stretching of a Hand.

A WOMAN'S QUESTION.

BEFORE I trust my fate to thee,
Or place my hand in thine,
Before I let thy future give Color and form to mine, Before I peril all for thee, question thy soul to-night for me.

I break all slighter bonds, nor feel
A shadow of regret:
Is there one link within the Past
That holds thy spirit yet?
Or is thy faith as clear and free as that which I can pledge to thee?

Does there within thy dimmest dreams
A possible future shine, Wherein thy life could henceforth
breathe,
Untouched, unshared by mine?
If so, at any pain or cost, O, tell me before all is lost.

Look deeper still. If thou canst feel,
Within thy inmost soul,
That thou hast kept a portion back,
While I have staked the whole, Let no false pity spare the blow, but in true mercy tell me so.

Is there within thy heart a need
That mine cannot fulfil?
One chord that any other hand Could better wake or still?
Speak now, — lest at some future day my whole life wither and decay.

Lives there within thy nature hid
The demon-spirit Change, Shedding a passing glory still
On all things new and strange? — It may not be thy fault alone, — but shield my heart against thy own.

Couldst thou withdraw thy hand one
day
And answer to my claim,
That Fate, and that to-day's mistake —
Not thou — had been to blame?
Some soothe their conscience thus; but thou wilt surely warn and save me now.

Nay, answer not, — I dare not hear,
The words would come too late;
Yet I would spare thee all remorse,
So, comfort thee, my Fate, — Whatever on my heart may fall — remember, I would risk it all!

A LOST CHORD.

One day at the organ,
 As weary and ill at ease,
 My fingers wandered idly
 O'er the noisy keys.

Not know what I was playing,
 What I was dreaming then,
 I struck one chord of music,
 'Twas the sound of a great Amen.

I fled the crimson twilight,
 'Twas the close of an angel's psalm,
 I lay on my fevered spirit,
 With a touch of infinite calm.

My hearted pain and sorrow,
 'Twas love overcoming strife;

It seemed the harmonious echo
 From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
 Into one perfect peace,
 And trembled away into silence,
 As if it were loath to cease.

I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
 That one lost chord divine,
 That came from the soul of the organ,
 And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel
 Will speak in that chord again;
 It may be that only in heaven
 I shall hear that grand Amen.

LAS, DOUGLAS, TENDER AND TRUE.

Come back to me, Douglas,
 My old likeness that I knew,
 He so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
 As, Douglas, tender and true.

No scornful word should grieve ye,
 As idle on ye sweet as the angels
 Sing;—

Your smile on me shone ever,
 As, Douglas, tender and true.

Back the days that are not!
 As eyes were blinded, your words Were few:

Now know the truth now up in The haven,
 As, Douglas, tender and true?

I never was worthy of you, Douglas;
 Not half worthy the like of you:
 Now all men beside seem to me like Shadows—

I love you, Douglas, tender and true.
 Stretch out your hand to me, Douglas,
 Douglas,
 Drop forgiveness from heaven like
 Dew;
 As I lay my heart on your dead heart,
 Douglas,
 Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

PHILIP MY KING.

"Who bears upon his baby brow the round
 And top of sovereignty."
 LOOK at me with thy large brown eyes,
 Philip my king,
 Round whom the overshadowing purple
 Lies

Of babyhood's royal dignities:
Lay on my neck thy tiny hand
With love's invisible sceptre laden;
I am thine Esther to command
Till thou shalt find a queen-handmaiden,
Philip my king.

O the day when thou goest a wooing,
Philip my king!
When those beautiful lips 'gin suing,
And some gentle heart's bars undoing Thou dost enter, love-crowned, and
there Sittest love-glorified. Rule kindly,
Tenderly, over thy kingdom fair,
For we that love, ah! we love so blindly,
Philip my king.

Up from thy sweet mouth — up to thy
brow,
Philip my king!
The spirit that there lies sleeping now

May rise like a giant and make men
bow
As to one Heaven-chosen amongst his peers:
My Saul, than thy brethren taller and fairer
Let me behold thee in future years; —
Yet thy head needeth a circlet rarer,
Philip my king.

A wreath not of gold, but palm. One
day,
Philip my king,
Thou too must tread, as we trod, a way
Thorny and cruel and cold and gray:
Rebels within thee and foes without,
Will snatch at thy crown. But march on, glorious,
Martyr, yet monarch: till angels shout,
As thou sitt'st at the feet of God victorious,
"Philip the king!"

O, LAY THY HAND IN MINE, DEAR!

O, LAY thy hand in mine, dear!
We're growing old;
But Time hath brought no sign, dear,
That hearts grow cold.
'Tis long, long since our new love
Made life divine;
But age enricheth true love,
Like noble wine.

And lay thy cheek to mine, dear,
And take thy rest;
Mine arms around thee twine, dear,
And make thy nest.

A many cares are pressing
On this dear head;
But Sorrow's hands in blessing
Are surely laid.

O, lean thy life on mine, dear!
'Twill shelter thee.
Thou wert a winsome vine, dear,
On my young tree:
And so, till boughs are leafless,
And songbirds flown,
We'll twine, then lay us, griefless,
Together down.

WEE WHITE ROSE.

marriage garden
 niling up to God, flower than ever
 e green warmth of the sod;
 il unfathomably
 life unfurled;
 i of all things was our wee ose of all the world.

a balmy bosom of beauty grew;
 miles for sunshine,
 for daintier dew:
 ig warm and tenderly,
 es of love were curled id close about our wee
 ose of all the world.

ical faint fragrance se of life she filled; ach hour some fairy tower ringed hopes might build:
 -though none like us might
 icious promise pearled etals of our wee
 ose of all the world.

But evermore the halo
 Of angel-light increased,
 Like the mystery of moonlight
 That folds some fairy feast.
 Snow-white, snow-soft, snow-silently
 Our darling bud upcurled,
 And dropt i' the grave — God's lap — our wee
 White Rose of all the world.

Our Rose was but in blossom,
 Our life was but in spring,
 When down the solemn midnight
 We heard the spirits sing,
 "Another bud of infancy
 With holy dew's impearled!"
 And in their hands they bore our wee
 White Rose of all the world.

You scarce could think so small a thing
 Could leave a loss so large;
 Her little light such shadow fling
 From dawn to sunset's marge.
 In other springs our life may be
 In bannered bloom unfurled.
 But never, never match our wee
 White Rose of all the world.

LOVELY MARY DONNELLY.

Mary Donnelly, it's you I love
 best!
 s were round you, I'd hardly the rest
 may the time of day, the place where it will,
 ks of Mary Donnelly, they om before me still.

Her eyes like mountain water that's flowing on a rock,
 How clear they are, how dark they are!
 and they give me many a shock.
 Red rowans warm in sunshine, and wetted with a shower, Could ne'er express the charming lip that has me in its power.

Her nose is straight and handsome, her eyebrows lifted up,
Her chin is very neat and pert, and smooth like a china cup, Her hair's the brag of Ireland, so weighty and so fine;
It's rolling down upon her neck, and gathered in a twine.

The dance o' last Whit-Monday night exceeded all before;
No pretty girl for miles about was missing from the floor;
But Mary kept the belt of love, and O,
but she was gay!
She danced a jig, she sung a song, that took my heart away.

When she stood up for dancing, her steps were so complete
The music nearly killed itself to listen to her feet;
The fiddler moaned his blindness, he heard her so much praised,
But blessed himself he wasn't deaf when once her voice she raised.

And evermore I'm whistling or lilting
what you sung,
Your smile is always in my heart, your name beside my tongue;
But you've as many sweethearts as you'd count on both your hands,
And for myself there's not a thumb or little finger stands.

O, you're the flower o' womankind in country or in town;
The higher I exalt you, the lower I'm cast down.
If some great lord should come this way,
and see your beauty bright,
And you to be his lady, I'd own it was but right.

O, might we live together in a lofty palace hall,
Where joyful music rises, and where scarlet curtains fall!
O, might we live together in a cottage mean and small;
With sods of grass the only roof, and mud the only wall!

O lovely Mary Donnelly, your beauty's my distress;
It's far too beauteous to be mine, but I'll never wish it less.
The proudest place would fit your face,
and I am poor and low;
But blessings be about you, dear, where-ever you may go!

THE FAIRIES.

Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We daren't go a nunting
For fear of little men;
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together;
Green jacket, red cap,
And white owl's feather!

Down along the rocky shore
Some make their home, —
They live on crispy pancakes
Of yellow tide-foam;
Some in the reeds
Of the black mountain-lake,
With frogs for their watch-dogs,
All night awake.

High on the hill-top
The old King sits;
He is now so old and gray
He's nigh lost his wits.
With a bridge of white mist
Columkill he crosses,
On his stately journeys
From Slieveleague to Rosses;
Or going up with music
On cold starry nights,
To sup with the queen
Of the gay Northern Lights.

They stole little Bridget For seven years long;
When she came down again
Her friends were all gone.
They took her lightly back,
Between the night and morrow;
They thought that she was fast asleep,
But she was dead with sorrow.

THE SEA-LIMITS.

ER the sea's listless chime:
s self it is, made audible,— murmur of the earth's own shell.
ontinuanee sublime
sea's end: our sight may pass along further. Since time was, nd hath told the lapse of time.

t, which is death's,—it hath ournfulness of ancient life, ring always at dull strife.
world's heart of rest and wrath, inful pulse is in the sands.
utterly, the whole sky stands, d not known, along its path lone beside the sea,

i alone among the woods;
voices of twin solitudes ve one sound alike to thee:
where the murmurs of thronged
men
and sink back and surge gain,—
one voice of wave and tree.

Gather a shell from the strown beach
And listen at its lips: they sigh
The same desire and mystery,
The echo of the whole sea's speech.
And all mankind is thus at heart
Not anything but what thou art:
And Earth, Sea, Man, are all in each.

MARY MAGDALENE

AT THE DOOR OF SIMON THE PHARISEE.

"WHY wilt thou cast the roses from thine hair?
Nay, be thou all a rose,—wreath, lips, and cheek.
Nay, not this house,—that banquet-house we seek;
See how they kiss and enter; come thou there.
This delicate day of love we two will
share
Till at our ear love's whispering night shall speak.

What, sweet one, — hold'st thou still the foolish freak?
Nay, when I kiss thy feet they'll leave the stair."

"Oh loose me! See'st thou not my Bridegroom's face That draws me to Him? For His feet my kiss,
My hair, my tears He craves today: — and oh!
What words can tell what other day and
place
Shall see me clasp those blood-stained feet of His?
He needs me, calls me, loves me:
let me go!"

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL.

THE blessed damozel leaned out
From the gold bar of heaven;
Her eyes were deeper than the depth
Of waters stilled at even;
She had three lilies in her hand,
And the stars in her hair were seven.

Her robe, ungirt from clasp to hem,
No wrought flowers did adorn,
But a white rose of Mary's gift,
For service neatly worn;
Her hair that lay along her back
Was yellow like ripe corn.

Her seemed she scarce had been a day
One of God's choristers;
The wonder was not yet quite gone
From that still look of hers;
Albeit, to them she left, her day
Had counted as ten years.

It was the rampart of God's house
That she was standing on,
By God built over the sheer depth
The which is space begun;
So high, that looking downward thence
She scarce could see the sun.

It lies in heaven, across the flood
Of ether, as a bridge.
Beneath, the tides of day and night
With flame and darkness ridge
The void, as low as where this earth
Spins like a fretful nidge.

Heard hardly, some of her new friends
Amid their loving games
Spake evermore among themselves
Their virginal chaste names;
And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.

And still she bowed herself and stopped
Out of the circling charm;
Until her bosom must have made
The bar she leaned on warm,
And the lilies lay as if asleep
Along her bended arm.

From the fixed place of heaven she saw
Time like a pulse shake fierce Through all the worlds. Her gaze still strove

Within the gulf to pierce
The path; and now she spoke as when The stars sang in their spheres.

"I wish that he were come to me,
For he will come," she said.
"Have I not prayed in heaven? — on
earth,
Lord, Lord, has he not prayed?
Are not two prayers a perfect strength?
And shall I feel afraid?"

She gazed and listened, and then said,
Less sad of speech than mild, —
"All this is when he comes." She ceased.

The light thrilled toward her, filled
With angels in strong level flight.
Her eyes prayed, and she smiled.

(I saw her smile.) But soon their path
Was vague in distant spheres;
And then she cast her arms along
The golden barriers,
And laid her face between her hands,
And wept. (I heard her tears.)

MAUDE CLARE.

Out of the church she followed them
With a lofty step and mien:
His bride was like a village maid,
Maude Clare was like a queen.

"Son Thomas," his lady mother said,
With smiles, almost with tears:
"May Nell and you but live as true
As we have done for years;

"Your father thirty years ago
Had just your tale to tell;
But he was not so pale as you,
Nor I so pale as Nell."

My lord was pale with inward strife,
And Nell was pale with pride;
My lord gazed long on pale Maude Clare
Or ever he kissed the bride.

"Lo, I have brought my gift, my lord,
Have brought my gift," she said:
"To bless the hearth, to bless the board,
To bless the marriage-bed.

"Here's my half of the golden chain
You wore about your neck,
That day we waded ankle-deep
For lilies in the beck:

"Here's my half of the faded leaves
We plucked from budding bough,
With feet amongst the lily leaves, —
The lilies are budding now."

He strove to match her scorn with scorn,
He faltered in his place:

"Lady," he said, — "Maude Clare," he
said, —
"Maude Clare:" — and hid his face.

She turn'd to Nell: "My Lady Nell,
I have a gift for you;
Though, were it fruit, the bloom were
gone,
Or, were it flowers, the dew.

"Take my share of a fickle heart,
Mine of a paltry love:
Take it or leave it as you will,
I wash my hands thereof."

"And what you leave," said Nell, "I'll take,
And what you spurn I'll wear;
For he's my lord for better and worse,
And him I love, Maude Clare.

"Yea, though you're taller by the head,
More wise, and much more fair;
I'll love him till he loves me best,
Me best of all, Maude Clare."

UP-HILL.

Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole
long day?
From morn to night, my friend.

But is there for the night a resting-place?
A roof for when the slow dark hours begin.
May not the darkness hide it from my
face?
You cannot miss that inn

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night?
Those who have gone before.

Then must I knock, or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at the door.

Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak?

Of labor you shall find the sum.
Will there be beds for me and all who seek?

Yea, beds for all who come.

SONG.

WHEN I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;

Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress tree:
Be the green grass above me
With showers and dewdrops wet;
And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget.

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain;
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on, as if in pain:
And dreaming through the twilight
That doth not rise nor set,
Haply I may remember,
And haply may forget.

THE COMING IN OF THE "MERMAIDEN."

THE moon is bleached as white as wool,
And just dropping under;
Every star is gone but three,
And they hang far asunder —
There's a sea-ghost all in gray,
A tall shape of wonder!

I am not satisfied with sleep, —
The night is not ended.
But look how the sea-ghost comes,
With wan skirts extended,
Stealing up in this weird hour,
When light and dark are blended.

A vessel! To the old pier end
Her happy course she's keeping;
I heard them name her yesterday:
Some were pale with weeping;

Some with their heart-hunger sighed,
She's in — and they are sleeping.

O! now with fancied greetings blest,
They comfort their long aching:
The sea of sleep hath borne to them
What would not come with waking,
And the dreams shall most be true
In their blissful breaking.

The stars are gone, the rose-bloom comes —

No blush of maid is sweeter;
The red sun, half-way out of bed,
Shall be the first to greet her.
None tell the news, yet sleepers wake,
And rise, and run to meet her.

loss they have, they hold; from
 pain
 deeper bliss they borrow.
 natural is joy, my heart!
 how easy after sorrow! hence, the best is come that hope promised them "to-morrow."

THE LASS'S THREAD OF GOLD.

One night she told a story,
 the night and all night through,
 as the moon was in her glory,
 and the branches dropped with dew.
 Her life she told, and round it she wove the years as from a deep;
 the world's great heart she found it,
 and died like a child asleep.
 One night I saw her weaving
 the misty moonbeam cold, and she wove her shuttle cleaving through a sacred thread of gold.
 She wept me tears of sorrow, and long tears so mystic sweet;
 she wove my last to-morrow,
 and her web lay at my feet.
 Her life she made the story:
 must weep—so soon 'twas told!
 our name did lend it glory,
 and your love its thread of gold!

THE LASS IN THE LIFT.

It's we two, it's we two, it's we two for
 aye,
 the world and we two, and Heaven be our stay.
 Like a laverock in the lift, sing, O bonny
 bride!
 the world was Adam once, with Eve by his side

'Tis the world, my lass, my love! — what can it do?
 'Tis thine, and thou art mine; life is sweet and new.
 The world have missed the mark, let it stand by,
 the two have gotten leave, and once more we'll try.

Like a laverock in the lift, sing, O bonny
 bride!

It's we two, it's we two, happy side by side.

Take a kiss from me thy man; now the song begins:

"All is made afresh for us, and the brave heart wins."

When the darker days come, and no
 sun will shine,

Thou shalt dry my tears, lass, and I'll dry thine.

It's we two, it's we two, while the world's away,

Sitting by the golden sheaves on our wedding-day.

DOMINION.

[From Songs with Preludes.]

YON moored mackerel fleet
 Hangs thick as a swarm of bees,
 Or a clustering village street
 Foundationless built on the seas.

The mariners ply their craft,
 Each set in his castle frail,
 His care is all for the draught,
 And he dries the rain-beaten sail

For rain came down in the night,
 And thunder muttered full oft,
 But now the azure is bright,
 And hawks are wheeling aloft.

I take the land to my breast,
 In her coat with daisies fine;
 For me are the hills in their best,
 And all that's made is mine.

Sing high! "Though the red sun dip,

There yet is a day for me;
 Nor youth I count for a ship
 That long ago foundered at sea.

"Did the lost love die and depart?
 Many times since we have met;
 For I hold the years in my heart,
 And all that was—is yet.

"I grant to the king his reign;
Let us yield him homage due;
But over the lands there are twain,
O king, I must rule as you.

"I grant to the wise his meed,
But his yoke I will not brook,
For God taught ME to read,—
He lent me the world for a book."

BINDING SHEAVES.

HARK! a lover binding sheaves
To his maiden sings,
Flutter, flutter go the leaves,
Larks drop their wings.
Little brooks for all their mirth
Are not blithe as he.

"Give me what the love is worth
That I give thee.

"Speech that cannot be forborne Tells the story through:
I sowed my love in with the corn,
And they both grew.
Count the world full wide of girth,
And hived honey sweet,
But count the love of more worth Laid at thy feet.

"Money's worth is house and land,
Velvet coat and vest.
Work's worth is bread in hand,
Ay, and sweet rest.
Wilt thou learn what love is worth?
Ah! she sits above,
Sighing, 'Weigh me not with earth,
Love's worth is love.'"

THE HEART AND NATURE.

THE lake is calm; and, calm, the skies
In yonder cloudless sunset glow,
Where, o'er the woodland, homeward
flies
The solitary crow;

No moan the cushat makes to heave
A leaflet round her windless nest;
The air is silent in the eve;
The world's at rest.

All bright below; all pure above;
No sense of pain, no sign of wrong:
Save in thy heart of hopeless love,
Poor Child of Song!

Why must the soul through Nature
rove,
At variance with her general plan?
A stranger to the Power, whose love Soothes all save Man?

Why lack the strength of meaner creatures?

The wandering sheep, the grazing kine,
Are surer of their simpler natures
Than I of mine.

For all their wants the poorest land
Affords supply; they browse and breed;

I scarce divine, and ne'er have found,
What most I need.

O God, that in this human heart
Hath made Belief so hard to grow,
And set the doubt, the pang, the smart
In all we know —

Why hast thou, too, in solemn jest
At this tormented Thinking-power, Inscribed, in flame on yonder West,
In hues on every flower,

Through all the vast unthinking sphere
Of mere material Force without,
Rebuke so vehement and severe
To the least doubt?

And robed the world, and hung the night,
With silent, stern, and solemn forms;
And strown with sounds of awe, and
might,
The seas and storms; —

All lacking power to impart
To man the secret he assails,
But arm'd to crush him, if his heart
Once doubts or fails!

To make him feel the same forlorn
Despair, the Fiend hath felt ere now,
In gazing at the stern sweet scorn
On Michael's brow?

THE CHESS-BOARD.

My little love, do you remember,
Ere we were grown so sadly wise,
Those evenings in the bleak December,
Curtained warm from the snowy weather,
When you and I played chess together,
Checkmated by each other's eyes?

Ah! still I see your soft white hand Hovering warm o'er Queen and Knight;
Brave Pawns in valiant battle stand;
The double Castles guard the wings;
The Bishop, bent on distant things,
Moves, sidling, through the fight.

Our fingers touch; our glances meet,
And falter; falls your golden hair
Against my cheek; your bosom sweet
Is heaving. Down the field, your Queen Rides slow, her soldiery all between,
And checks me unaware.

Ah me! the little battle's done:
Disperst is all its chivalry.
Full many a move since then have we 'Mid life's perplexing checkers made,
And many a game with fortune played;
What is it we have won?
This, this at least, — if this alone:

That never, never, nevermore,
As in those old still nights of yore,
(Ere we were grown so sadly wise,)
Can you and I shut out the skies,
Shut out the world and wintry weather,
And, eyes exchanging warmth with
eyes,
Play chess, as then we played together.

ONE DAY.

ONE day, one day, our lives shall seem Thin as a brief forgotten dream:
One day, our souls by life opprest,
Shall ask no other boon than rest.

And shall no hope nor longing come,
No memory of our former home,
No yearning for the loved, the dear
Dead lives that are no longer here?

If this be age, and age no more Recall the hopes, the fears of yore,
The dear dead mother's accents mild,
The lisping of the little child,

Come, Death, and slay us ere the blood
Run slow, and turn our lives from good,
For only in such memories we Consent to linger and to be.

CÆLUM NON ANIMUM.

Oh fair to be, oh sweet to be
In fancy's shallop faring free,
With silken sail and fairy mast
To float till all the world be past.

Oh happy fortune, on and on
To wander far till care be gone, Round beetling capes, to unknown
seas,
Seeking the fair Hesperides!

But is there any land or sea
Where toil and trouble cease to be—
Some dim, unfound, diviner shore,
Where men may sin and mourn no
more?

Ah, not the feeling, but the sky
We change, however far we fly;
How swift soe'er our bark may speed,
Faster the blessed isles recede.

Nay, let us seek at home to find
Fit harvest for the brooding mind,
And find, since thus the world grows
fair,
Duty and pleasure everywhere.

Oh well-worn road, oh homely way,
Where pace our footsteps, day by day,
The homestead and the church which
bound
The tranquil seasons' circling round!

Ye hold experiences which reach Depths which no change of skies can teach,
The saintly thought, the secret strife Which guide, which do perturb our life.

THE HOME ALTAR.

WHY should we seek at all to gain
By vigils, and in pain,
By lonely life and empty heart,
To set a soul apart
Within a cloistered cell,
For whom the precious, homely hearth would serve as well?

There, with the early breaking morn,
Ere quite the day is born,
The lustral waters flow serene,
And each again grows clean;
From sleep, as from a tomb,
Born to another dawn of joy, and hope,
and doom.

There through the sweet and toilsome
day,
To labor is to pray;
There love with kindly beaming eyes
Prepares the sacrifice,
And voice and innocent smile
Of childhood do our cheerful liturgies
beguile.

There, at his chaste and frugal feast,
Love sitteth as a Priest;
And with mild eyes and men sedate,
His deacons stand and wait;
And round the holy table
Paten and chalice range in order serviceable.

And when ere night, the vespers said,
Low lies each weary head,
What giveth He who gives them sleep,
But a brief death less deep?
Or what the fair dreams given But ours who, daily dying, dream a happier heaven?

Then not within a cloistered wall
Will we expend our days;
But dawns that break and eves that fall
Shall bring their dues of praise.
This best befits a Ruler always near,
This duteous worship mild, and reasonable fear.

THE CHAPEL IN LYONNESS.

SIR OZANA LE CURE HARDY. SIR
GALAHAD. SIR BORS DE GANYS.

SIR OZANA.

ALL day long and every day,
From Christmas-Eve to Whit-Sunday,
Within that Chapel-aisle I lay,
And no man came a-near.

Naked to the waist was I,
And deep within my breast did lie,
Though no man any blood could spy,
The truncheon of a spear.

No meat did ever pass my lips.
Those days—(Alas! the sunlight slips
From off the gilded parclose, dips,
And night comes on apace.)

My arms lay back behind my head;
Over my raised-up knees was spread

A samite cloth of white and red;
A rose lay on my face

Many a time I tried to shout;
But as in dream of battle-rout,
My frozen speech would not well out;
I could not even weep.

With inward sigh I see the sun
Fade off the pillars one by one,
My heart faints when the day is done,
Because I cannot sleep.

Sometimes strange thoughts passthrough
my head,

Not like a tomb is this my bed,
Yet oft I think that I am dead;
That round my tomb is writ,

"Ozana of the hardy heart,
Knight of the Table Round,
Pray for his soul, lords, of your part;
A true knight he was found."

Ah! me, I cannot fathom it. He sleeps.

SIR GALAHAD.

All day long and every day,
Till his madness pass'd away,
I watch'd Ozana as he lay
Within the gilded screen.

All my singing moved him not;
As I sung my heart grew hot,
With the thought of Launcelot Far away, I ween.

So I went a little space
From out the chapel, bathed my face
In the stream that runs apace
By the churchyard wall.

There I pluck'd a faint wild rose,
Hard by where the linden grows,
Sighing over silver rows
Of the lilies tall.

I laid the flower across his mouth;
The sparkling drops seem'd good for drouth;

He smiled, turn'd round towards the south,
Held up a golden tress.

The light smote on it from the west;
He drew the covering from his breast,
Against his heart that hair he prest;
Death him soon will bless.

SIR BORS.

I enter'd by the western door;
I saw a knight's helm lying there:
I raised my eyes from off the floor,
And caught the gleaming of his hair.

I stept full softly up to him;
I laid my chin upon his head;
I felt him smile; my eyes did swim,
I was so glad he was not dead.

I heard Ozana murmur low,
"There comes no sleep nor any love."
But Galahad stoop'd and kiss'd his brow:
He shiver'd; I saw his pale lips move.

SIR OZANA.

There comes no sleep nor any love;
Ah me! I shiver with delight.
I am so weak I cannot move;
God move me to thee, dear, to-night!
'Christ help' I have but little wit:
My life went wrong, I see it writ,

"Ozana of the hardy heart,
Knight of the Table Round,
Pray for his soul, lords, on your part,
A good knight he was found."
Now I begin to fathom it. He dies.

SIR BORS.

Galahad sits dreamily:
What strange things may his eyes see,
Great blue eyes fix'd full on me?
On his soul, Lord, have mercy.

SIR GALAHAD.

Ozana, shall I pray for thee?
Her cheek is laid to thine;
No long time hence, also I see Thy wasted fingers twine

Within the tresses of her hair
That shineth gloriously,
Thinly outspread in the clear air
Against the jasper sea.

FROM "THE EARTHLY PARADISE."

INTRODUCTION.

OF Heaven or Hell I have no power
to sing,
I cannot ease the burden of your fears,
Or make quick-coming death a little
thing,
Or bring again the pleasure of past years, Nor for my words shall ye forget your
tears,
Or hope again for aught that I can say,
The idle singer of an empty day.

But rather, when aweary of your
mirth,
From full hearts still unsatisfied ye sigh,
And, feeling kindly unto all the earth,
Grudge every minute as it passes by,
Made the more mindful that the sweet days die —

— Remember me a little then I pray,
The idle singer of an empty day.

The heavy trouble, the bewildering
care
That weighs us down who live and earn our bread,
These idle verses have no power to bear;

let me sing of names remembered, ause they, living not, can ne'er be
 dead, long time take their memory quite
 away
 in us poor singers of an empty day.
 Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time, y should I strive to set the crooked straight?
 it suffice me that my murmuring
 rhyme
 its with light wing against the ivory
 gate,
 ling a tale not too importunate those who in the sleepy region stay, led by the singer of an empty day.
 Folk say, a wizard to a northern king Christmas-tide such wondrous things did show,

That through one window men beheld
 the spring,
 And through another saw the summer
 glow,
 And through a third the fruited vines
 a-row,
 While still, unheard, but in its wonted
 way,
 Piped the drear wind of that December
 day.

So with this Earthly Paradise it is,
 If ye will read aright, and pardon me,
 Who strive to build a shadowy isle of
 bliss
 Midmost the beating of the steely sea,
 Where tossed about all hearts of men must be;
 Whose ravening monsters mighty men shall slay,
 Not the poor singer of an empty day.

"OM" ATALANTA IN CALYDON."

CHORUS.

HEH the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,
 The mother of months in meadow or plain s the shadows and windy places
 With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;
 I the brown bright nightingale amorous
 all assuaged for Itylus, the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,
 he tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,
 Maiden most perfect, lady of light,
 With a nose of winds and many rivers,
 With a clamor of waters, and with
 night;
 Bind on thy sandals, O thou most
 fleet,
 Over the splendor, and speed of thy
 feet;
 For the faint east quickens, the wan
 west shivers,
 Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,
Fold our hands round her knees, and cling?

O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her

Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!

For the stars and the winds are unto her
As raiment, as songs of the harp-player;
For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,

And the south west-wind and the westwind sing.

For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;

And time remembered is grief forgotten,
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes,
Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot,
The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes

From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
And the oat is heard above the lyre,
And the hooped heel of a satyr crushes
The chestnut-husk at the chestnut-root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night,
Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
Follows with dancing and fills with de-
light

The Maenad and the Bassarid;
And soft as lips that laugh and hide
The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
And screen from seeing and leave in
sight

The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair
Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes;
The wild vine slipping down leaves bare
Her brightbreastshortening into sighs;
The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,

But the berried ivy catches and cleaves
To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare

The wolf that follows, the fawn that flies.

FROM "THE GARDEN OF PROSERPINE."

PALE, beyond porch and portal,
Crowned with calm leaves, she stands
Who gathers all things mortal
With cold immortal hands;
Her languid lips are sweeter
Than love's who fears to greet her
To men that mix and meet her
From many times and lands.

She waits for each and other,
She waits for all men born;
Forgets the earth her mother,
The life of fruits and corn;
And spring and seed and swallow Take wing for her and follow
Where summer song rings hollow
And flowers are put to scorn.

There go the loves that wither,
The old loves with wearier wings;
And all dead years draw thither,
And all disastrous things;
Dead dreams of days forsaken,
Blind buds that snows have shaken,
Wild leaves that winds have taken,
Red strays of ruined springs.

We are not sure of sorrow,
And joy was never sure;
To-day will die to-morrow;
Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful,
With lips but half regretful,
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving Whatever gods may be
That no life lives for ever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river Winds somewhere safe to sea.

nor star nor sun shall waken,
 for any change of light:
 nor sound of waters shaken,
 for any sound or sight:
 nor wintry leaves nor vernal, nor days nor things diurnal;
 nor the sleep eternal nor an eternal night.

FROM "HERTHA."

THE tree many-rooted
 That swells to the sky
 With frondage red-fruited,
 The life-tree am I;
 the buds of your lives is the sap of my leaves: ye shall live and not
 die.

But the Gods of your fashion
 That take and that give,
 In their pity and passion
 That scourge and forgive, they are worms that are bred in the bark that falls off; they shall die and not live.

My own blood is what stanches
 The wounds in my bark;
 Stars caught in my branches
 Make day of the dark, and are worshipped as suns till the sunrise shall tread out their fires as a spark.

Where dead ages hide under
 The live roots of the tree,
 In my darkness the thunder Makes utterance of me;
 the clash of my boughs with each other ye hear the waves sound of the sea.

That noise is of Time,
 As his feathers are spread
 And his feet set to climb
 Through the boughs overhead, and my foliage rings round him and rustles, and branches are bent with his tread.

The storm-winds of ages
 Blow through me and cease,
 The war-wind that rages,
 The spring-wind of peace, Ere the breath of them roughen my tresses, ere one of my blossoms increase.

All sounds of all changes,
 All shadows and lights
 On the world's mountain-ranges
 And stream-riven heights, Whose tongue is the wind's tongue and language of storm-clouds on earth-shaking nights;

All forms of all faces,
 All works of all hands
 In unsearchable places
 Of time-stricken lands,
 All death and all life, and all reigns and all ruins, drop through me as sands.

Though sore be my burden
 And more than ye know,
 And my growth have no guerdon
 But only to grow,
 Yet I fail not of growing for lightnings above me or deathworms below.

These too have their part in me,
 As I too in these;
 Such fire is at heart in me,
 Such sap is this tree's,
 Which hath in it all sounds and all secrets of infinite lands and of seas.

In the spring-colored hours
 When my mind was as May's,
 There brake forth of me flowers
 By centuries of days,
 Strong blossoms with perfume of manhood, shot out from my spirit as rays.

And the sound of them springing
 And smell of their shoots
 Were as warmth and sweet singing
 And strength to my roots;
 And the lives of my children made perfect with freedom of soul were my fruits.

DAVID GRAY.

1838-1861.

[BORN Jan. 29, 1838, at Duntiblae, a small village on the banks of the Luggie, about eight miles from Glasgow. Son of a weaver. Educated in part at Glasgow University, for the Christian ministry, but abandoned it for literary pursuits, and betook himself at an early age to writing verses, many of which appeared from time to time in The Glasgow Citizen, under the nom de plume of "Will Gurney." In 1860 he determined to go to London, hoping to attain literary eminence in the great metropolis, where he arrived in the month of May, without friends or means of subsistence. He attracted the favorable notice of several men of letters, who gave him some literary employment and otherwise befriended him, but soon fell ill with pulmonary disease, and was sent back to Merkland, where his parents were then living. He struggled with the disease till the third of December, 1861, when he passed away. His poems, The Luggie, and Other Poems, were published shortly after his death by Macmillan & Co., with a Memoir by James Hedderwick, and a Prefatory Notice by R. M. Milnes, M.P.]

HOMESICK.

COME to me, O my Mother! come to
me,
Thine own son slowly dying far away!
Through the moist ways of the wide ocean, blown
By great invisible winds, come stately ships
To this calm bay for quiet anchorage;
They come, they rest awhile, they go
away,
But, O my Mother, never comest thou!
The snow is round thy dwelling, the white snow,
That cold soft revelation pure as light,
And the pine-spire is mystically fringed, Laced with incrustated silver. Here —
ah me! —
The winter is decrepit, under-born,
A leper with no power but his disease.
Why am I from thee, Mother, far from
thee?
Far from the frost enchantment, and the woods
Jewelled from bough to bough? O home, my home!
O river in the valley of my home,
With mazy-winding motion intricate,
Twisting thy deathless music underneath
The polished ice-work, — must I never-
more Behold thee with familiar eyes, and watch

Thy beauty changing with the change-ful day,
Thy beauty constant to the constant change?

DIE DOWN, O DISMAL DAY.

DIE down, O dismal day, and let me
live;
And come, blue deeps, magnificently strewn
With colored clouds, — large, light, and fugitive, —
By upper winds through pompous motions blown.
Now it is death in life, — a vapor dense Creeps round my window, till I cannot see
The far snow-shining mountains, and the glens Shagging the mountain-tops. O God!
make free
This barren shackled earth, so deadly
cold, —
Breathe gently forth thy spring, till winter flies
In rude amazement, fearful and yet
bold,
While she performs her customed charities;
I weigh the loaded hours till life is bare, —
O God, for one clear day, a snowdrop, and sweet air!

"GOOD NIGHT, BABETTE!"

MONSIEUR VIEUXBOIS. BABETTE.

VIEUXBOIS (turning querulously).

tte! I say! Babette! — Babette!!

BABETTE (entering hurriedly).
ng, M'sieu'! If M'sieu' speaks

M. VIEUXBOIS.
re have you been?

BABETTE.
Why, M'sieu' knows:—
I . . . Ville-d'Avray! . . . Ma'am'selle Rose!

M. VIEUXBOIS.
I am old, — and I forget.
the place growing green, Babette?

BABETTE.
f a greenness! — yes, M'sieu'!
then the sky so blue! — so blue!

And when I dropped my immortelle,
How the birds sang!
(Lifting her apron to her eyes.)
This poor Ma'am'selle!

M. VIEUXBOIS.

You're a good girl, Babette, but she,—
She was an Angel, verily.
Sometimes I think I see her yet
Stand smiling by the cabinet;
And once, I know, she peeped and laughed
Betwixt the curtains . . .

Where's the draught?
(She gives him a cup.)
Now I shall sleep, I think, Babette;—
Sing me your Norman chansonnette.

BABETTE (sings).
"Once at the Angelus (Ere I was dead),
Angels all glorious Came to my Bed;—
Angels in blue and white Crowned on the Head."

M. VIEUXBOIS (drowsily).
"She was an Angel" . . . "Once she laughed" . . .
What, was I dreaming?
Where's the draught?

BABETTE (showing the empty cup).
The draught, M'sieu'?

M. VIEUXBOIS.

How I forget!
I am so old! But sing, Babette!

BABETTE (sings).

"One was the Friend I left Stark in the Snow;
One was the Wife who died
Long,—long ago;
One was the Love I lost . . .
How could she know?"

M. VIEUXBOIS (murmuring).

Ah, Paul! . . . old Paul! . . . Eulalie
too!
And Rose! . . . And O! "the sky so blue!"

BABETTE (sings).

"One had my Mother's eyes,
Wistful and mild;
One had my Father's face;
One was a Child:
All of them bent to me,— Bent down and smiled!"
(He is asleep!)

M. VIEUXBOIS (almost inaudibly).

"How I forget!"
"I am so old" . . . "Good night, Babette!"

MRS. HARRIET E. HAMILTON KING

1840-

[DAUGHTER of the late Admiral W. A. B. Hamilton, and Lady Harriet Hamilton the Duke of Abercorn. Born in 1840, and in 1863 married Mr. Henry S. King, the publisher. Author of Aspromonte, 1869; The Disciples, Book of Dreams, 1893.]

A DREAM MAIDEN.

My baby is sleeping overhead.
My husband is in the town,
In my large white bed uncurtained,
All alone I lay me down.

And dreamily I have said my prayers,
And dreamily closed my eyes,

And the youth in my blood sweetly
As my pulses fall and rise.

I lie so peaceful and lonely,
A maiden in spirit-land,
With the moonbeams in at the
And hand laid close to hand

With in the moonbeams,
Of heart alone,
Alike or dreaming,
It is all one.

Up across the carpet
Power-entangled spring,
Gleam through the haunted Thways murmuring

As telling her secrets,
Or strange to me;
Feeling only silence,
Her mystery.

As beautiful distance
Is so fresh and pure,
Is so cool and silvery,
It is so secure.

Down into the sunrise,
Spring dream-worlds shine;
A free heart triumphant
To make them mine.

Then, turn homeward,
Am not so cold and wild! —
Turned a woman?
Of husband and child?

AUNTED HOUSE.

Are bright, the paths are wide,
Are bursting on every side.

The bowers are green, Shining laurels a folding-
n.

Fruit ripens on many a tree,
Gold drooping heavily.

And wealth a hidden spell
By hands invisible.

Is glad some, and free they
Foughter and running feet.

Are seasons be dark or fair,
Days summer and sunshine
2.

And like a fountain that springs and falls,
There flows sweet music between the walls.

Among the guests one comes and goes
Whom no one sees and no one knows.

A neck more stately, a face more fair
Than any that meet and mingle there.

There is heaped up many a gay sea-
stone,
One pearl lies among them all alone;

With a golden halo all about,
The full moon's face from the clouds looks out;

All cold on the breast of the crimson
sky,
The star of the evening seems to lie.

Shining as pale, apart as far As the pearl, or the moon, or the evening star,

That orbèd face, with its curvings rare,
Floats out from its waves of dusky hair,

With its eyes of shadow, its archèd
eyes,
Whose lost looks dream upon Paradise.

One only knoweth it in the throng;
One knoweth too well, and knoweth
too long.

The others are ever unaware,
Though it pass and meet them in the
air,

With sighs like the sighs of the summer
night,
Breathing of love and lost delight.

That haunting vision of yearning pain,
One moment strikes and then fades
again.

It rises up at the music's sound,
And sinks before they can look around.

Few things moving up or down,
All things drowsy — Drowsietown!

Thro' the fields with sleepy gleam,
Drowsy, drowsy steals the stream,
Touching with its azure arms
Upland fields and peaceful farms,
Gliding with a twilight tide
Where the dark elms shade its side;
Twining, pausing sweet and bright
Where the lilies sail so white;
Winding in its sedgy hair
Meadow-sweet and iris fair;
Humming as it hies along Monotones of sleepy song;
Deep and dimpled, bright nut-brown, Flowing into Drowsietown.

Far as eye can see, around,
Upland fields and farms are found,
Floating prosperous and fair
In the mellow misty air:
Apple-orchards, blossoms blowing
Up above, — and clover growing
Red and scented round the knees
Of the old moss-silvered trees.
Hark! with drowsy deep refrain,
In the distance rolls a wain;
As its dull sound strikes the ear,
Other kindred sounds grow clear —
Drowsy all — the soft breeze blowing, Locusts grating, one cock crowing,
Cries like voices in a dream
Far away amid the gleam,
Then the wagons rumbling down
Thro' the lanes to Drowsietown.

Drowsy? Yea! — but idle? Nay!
Slowly, surely, night and day,
Humming low, well greased with oil,
Turns the wheel of human toil.
Here no grating gruesome cry
Of spasmodic industry;
No rude clamor, mad and mean,
Of a horrible machine!
Strong yet peaceful, surely roll'd,
Winds the wheel that whirls the gold.
Year by year the rich rare land
Yields its stores to human hand —
Year by year the stream makes fat
Every field and meadow-flat —
Year by year the orchards fair

Gather glory from the air,
Redden, ripen, freshly fed,
Their bright balls of golden red.
Thus, most prosperous and strong,
Flows the stream of life along
Six slow days! wains come and go,
Wheat-fields ripen, squashes grow.
Cattle browse on hill and dale,
Milk foams sweetly in the pail,
Six days: on the seventh day,
Toil's low murmur dies away —
All is husht save drowsy din
Of the wagons rolling in,
Drawn amid the plenteous meads
By small fat and sleepy steeds.
Folk with faces fresh as fruit
Sit therein or trudge afoot,
Brightly drest for all to see,
In their seventh-day finery:
Farmers in their breeches tight,
Snowy cuffs, and buckles bright;
Ancient dames and matrons staid
In their silk and flower'd brocade, Prim and tall, with soft brows knitted Silken aprons, and hands mitted;
Haggard women, dark of face,
Of the old lost Indian race;
Maidens happy-eyed and fair,
With bright ribbons in their hair,
Trip along, with eyes cast down,
Thro' the streets of Drowsietown.

Drowsy in the summer day
In the meeting-house sit they:
'Mid the high-back'd pews they doze,
Like bright garden-flowers in rows;
And old Parson Pendon, big
In his gown and silver'd wig,
Drones above in periods fine
Sermons like old flavor'd wine —
Crusted well with keeping long
In the darkness, and not strong
O! so drowsily he drones
In his rich and sleepy tones,
While the great door, swinging wide,
Shows the bright green street outside.
And the shadows as they pass
On the golden sunlit grass.
Then the mellow organ blows,
And the sleepy music flows,
And the folks their voices raise In old unctuous hymns of praise, ach some ancient god

 eep with drowsy nod,
 d lazy, clear and low,
 e oily organ grow! th sudden golden tease silence and a peace;
 murmur, all alive,
 es within a hive;
 y swarm with quiet feet
 the sunny street:
 t hitching-post and gate
 steeds and wagons wait.
 n groups, the gossips talk,
 hands before they walk;
 nd lovers steal away,
 hand in hand, to stray iver, and to say love in the old way — sleepy sun shines down oofs of Drowsietown.

reat marsh, far beyond
 id building, hes the Pond,

Gleaming like a silver shield
 In the midst of wood and field;
 There on sombre days you see Anglers old in reverie,
 Fishing feebly morn to night
 For the pickerel so bright.
 From the woods of beech and fir,
 Dull blows of the woodcutter
 Faintly sound; and haply, too,
 Comes the cat-owl's wild "tuhoo"! — Drown'd by distance, dull and deep,
 Like a dark sound heard in sleep; —
 And a cock may answer, down
 In the depths of Drowsietown.

Such is Drowsietown — but nay!
Was, not is, my song should say —
 Such was summer long ago
 In this town so sleepy and slow.
 Change has come: thro' wood and dale
 Runs the demon of the rail,
 And the Drowsietown of yore
 Is not drowsy any more!

BALLADE OF SLEEP.

ours are passing slow, their weary tread
 from the tower, and go to their kinsfolk dead
 ' death's twin brother dread!
 dost thou scorn me so?
 and's voice overhead wakeful here I know, music from the steep
 e waters fall and flow.
 thou not hear me, Sleep?

All sounds that might bestow
 Rest on the fever'd bed,
 All slumb'rous sounds and low
 Are mingled here and wed,
 And bring no drowshead.
 Shy dreams flit to and fro
 With shadowy hair disspread;
 With wistful eyes that glow,
 And silent robes that sweep.
 Thou wilt not hear me, no?
 Wilt thou not hear me, Sleep?

I said, "O fellow-worker, yea, for I am a worker too,
The heart nigh fails me many a day,
but how is it with you?
For while I toil, great tears of joy will sometimes fill my eyes,
And when I form my perfect work, it lives and never dies.

"I carve the marble of pure thought until the thought takes form, Until it gleams before my soul and makes the world grow warm; Until there comes the glorious voice and words that seem divine,
And the music reaches all men's hearts and draws them into mine.

"And yet for days it seems my heart shall blossom never more,
And the burden of my loneliness lies on me very sore:
Therefore, O hewer of the stones that pave base human ways,
How canst thou bear the years till death, made of such thankless
days?"

Then he replied: "Ere sunrise, when the pale lips of the day Sent forth an earnest thrill of breath at warmth of the first ray,
A great thought rose within me, how,
while men asleep had lain,
The thousand labors of the world had grown up once again.

"The sun grew on the world, and on my soul the thought grew too,—
A great appalling sun, to light my soul the long day through.
I felt the world's whole burden for a moment, then began With man's gigantic strength to do the labor of one man.

"I went forth hastily, and lo! I met a hundred men,
The worker with the chisel and the worker with the pen,—

The restless toilers after good, who sow and never reap,
And one who maketh music for their souls that may not sleep.

"Each passed me with a dauntless look,
and my undaunted eyes Were almost softened as they passed with tears that strove to rise At sight of all those labors, and because that every one,
Ay, the greatest, would be greater if my little were undone.

"They passed me, having faith in me,
and in our several ways, Together we began to-day as on the other days:
I felt their mighty hands at work, and,
as the days wore through,
Perhaps they felt that even I was helping somewhat too.

"Perhaps they felt, as with those hands they lifted mightily
The burden once more laid upon the world so heavily,
That while they nobly held it as each man can do and bear, It did not wholly fall my side as though no men were there.

"And so we toil together many a day from morn till night,
I in the lower depths of life, they on the lovely height;
For though the common stones are mine, and they have lofty cares,
Their work begins where this leaves off,
and mine is part of theirs.

"And 't is not wholly mine or theirs, I think of through the day,
But the great, eternal thing we make together, I and they;
Far in the sunset I behold a city that man owns,
Made fair with all their nobler toil, built of my common stones.

"Then noonward, as the task grows light with all the labor done,
The single thought of all the day becomes a joyous one;
For, rising in my heart at last where it has lain so long,
It thrills up seeking for a voice, and grows almost a song.

"But when the evening comes, indeed,
the words have taken wing,
The thought sings in me still, but I am all too tired to sing: Therefore, O you my friend, who serve the world with minstrelsy, Among our fellow-workers' songs make that one song for me."

E. LEE HAMILTON.

STRANGLED.

THERE is a legend in some Spanish book
About a noisy reveller who, at night, Returning home with others, saw a
light
Shine from a window, and climbed up to look,
And saw within the room, hanged to a hook
His own self-strangled self, grim, rigid,
white,
And who, struck sober by that livid
sight,
Feasting his eyes, in tongue-tied horror
shook.

Has any man a fancy to peep in And see, as through a window, in the
past,
His nobler self, self-choked with coils of
sin,
Or sloth or folly? Round the throat whipped fast
The nooses give the face a stiffened grin.
'Tis but thyself. Look well. Why be aghast?

SUNKEN GOLD.

IN dim green depths rot ingot-laden
ships,
While gold doubloons that from the drowned hand fell
Lie nestled in the ocean-flower's bell
With Love's gemmed rings once kissed by now dead lips
And round some wrought-gold cup the sea-grass whips,
And hides lost pearls, near pearls still in their shell,
Where sea-weed forests fill each ocean dell,
And seek dim sunlight with their countless tips.

So lie the wasted gifts, the long-lost
hopes,
Beneath the now hushed surface of myself,
In lonelier depths than where the diver gropes
They lie deep, deep; but I at times
behold
In doubtful glimpses, on some reefy shelf,
The gleam of irrecoverable gold.

[HER first volume, Preludes, was published before her marriage, which occurred in 1877, and received favorable notice by Rossetti and other competent critics. A YOUNG CONVERT.

WHO knows what days I answer for to-day?
Giving the bud I give the flower. I bow
This yet unfaded and a faded brow;
Bending these knees and feeble knees,
I pray.
Thoughts yet unripe in me I bend one
way,
Give one repose to pain I know not now,
One leaven to joy that comes, I guess not how.
Oh, rash! (I smile) as one, when Spring is gray,
Who dedicates a land of hidden wheat,
I fold to-day at altars far apart Hands trembling with what toils? In their retreat
I sign my love to come, my folded art.
I light the tapers at my head and feet,
And lay the crucifix on this silent
heart.

SONG.

MY Fair, no beauty of thine will last,
Save in my love's eternity.
Thy smiles, that light thee fitfully,
Are lost forever — their moment past—
Except the few thou givest to me.

Thy sweet words vanish day by day,
As all breath of mortality;
Thy laughter, done, must cease to be,
And all thy dear tones pass away,
Except the few that sing to me.

Hide then within my heart, oh, hide
All thou art loth should go from thee.
Be kinder to thyself and me.
My cupful from this river's tide
Shall never reach the long sad sea.

MISS MATHILDE BLIND.

1850—

[STEP-DAUGHTER of Karl Blind, the German author and political writer. Miss Blind is known as a skilful editor and critic of Shelley's works. In 1874 she produced a translation of Strauss's Old Faith and the New, and, in 1881, The Prophecy of St. Oran, and Other Poems. She is also the author of a Life of George Eliot, 1883, which has been republished in this country.]

CHRISTMAS EVE.

ALONE — with one fair star for company,
The loveliest star among the hosts of
night,
While the gray tide ebbs with the ebbing light —

I pace along the darkening wintry sea.
Now round the yule log and the glittering tree
Twinkling with festive tapers, eyes as
bright
Sparkle with Christmas joys and young
delight,
As each one gathers to his family.

I—a waif on earth where'er I roam —
 rooted with life's bleeding hopes and fears in that one heart that was my heart's sole home,
 I the old pang piercé through the severing years,
 I as I think upon the years to come a fair star trembles through my falling tears.

THE DEAD.

The dead abide with us! Though stark and cold
 'th seems to grip them, they are with us still:

They have forged our chains of being for good or ill;
 And their invisible hands these hands
 yet hold.
 Our perishable bodies are the mould
 In which their strong imperishable
 will —
 Mortality's deep yearning to fulfil — Hath grown incorporate through dim time untold.

Vibrations infinite of life in death,
 As a star's travelling light survives its star!
 So may we hold our lives, that when we are
 The fate of those who then will draw this breath,
 They shall not drag us to their judgment bar,
 And curse the heritage which we bequeath.

LYING IN THE GRASS.

BETWEEN two golden tufts of summer
 grass,
 see the world through hot air as through glass, and by my face sweet lights and colors
 pass.

Before me, dark against the fading
 sky,
 watch three mowers mowing, as I lie:
 how brawny arms they sweep in harmony.

Brown English faces by the sun burnt
 red,
 Rich glowing color on bare throat and
 head,
 My heart would leap to watch them,
 were I dead!

And in my strong young living as I lie,
 I seem to move with them in harmony, —
 A fourth is mowing, and that fourth
 am I.

The music of the scythes that glide and leap,
The young men whistling as their great arms sweep,
And all the perfume and sweet sense of
sleep,

The weary butterflies that droop their
wings,
The dreamy nightingale that hardly
sings,
And all the lassitude of happy things,

Is mingling with the warm and pulsing
blood
That gushes through my veins a languid flood,
And feeds my spirit as the sap a bud.

Behind the mowers, on the amber air,
A dark-green beech wood rises, still
and fair,
A white path winding up it like a stair.

And see that girl, with pitcher on her
head,
And clean white apron on her gown of red, —
Her even-song of love is but half-said:

She waits the youngest mower. Now he goes;
Her cheeks are redder than a wild blush-rose.
They climb up where the deepest shadows close

But though they pass, and vanish, I am
there
I watch his rough hands meet beneath her hair,
Their broken speech sounds sweet to me like prayer.

Ah! now the rosy children come to
play,
And romp and struggle with the new-mown hay;
Their clear high voices sound from far
away.

They know so little why the world is sad,
They dig themselves warm graves and yet are glad;
Their muffled screams and laughter make me mad!

I long to go and play among them
there;
Unseen, like wind, to take them by the
hair,
And gently make their rosy cheeks more fair.

The happy children! full of frank surprise,
And sudden whims and innocent ecstasies;
What godhead sparkles from their liquid
eyes!

No wonder round those urns of mingled clays
That Tuscan potters fashioned in old
days,
And colored like the torrid earth ablaze,

We find the little gods and loves portrayed,
Through ancient forests wandering undismayed,
And fluting hymns of pleasure unafraid.

They knew, as I do now, what keen
delight,
A strong man feels to watch the tender
flight
Of little children playing in his sight,

What pure sweet pleasure, and what sacred love,
Comes drifting down upon us from
above,
In watching how their limbs and features move.

I do not hunger for a well-stored mind
I only wish to live my life and find
My heart in unison with all mankind

My life is like the single dewy star
That trembles on the horizon's primrose-bar, —
A microcosm where all things living are.

And if, among the noiseless grasses,
Death
Should come behind and take away my
breath,
I should not rise as one who sorroweth;
For I should pass, but all the world would be Full of desire and young delight and glee,
And why should men be sad through loss of me?

The light is flying; in the silver-blue
The young moon shines from her bright window through:
The mowers are all gone, and I go too.

THE RETURN OF THE SWAL- LOWS.

"OUT in the meadows the young grass
springs,
Shivering with sap," said the larks,
"and we Shoot into air with our strong young
wings
Spirally up over level and lea;
Come, O Swallows, and fly with us
Now that horizons are luminous!
Evening and morning the world of
light,
Spreading and kindling, is infinite!"
Far away, by the sea in the south,
The hills of olive and slopes of fern Whiten and glow in the sun's long drouth,
Under the heavens that beam and
burn;
And all the swallows were gathered
there
Flitting about in the fragrant air,
And heard no sound from the larks, but flew
Flashing under the blinding blue.

Out of the depths of their soft rich throats

Languidly fluted the thrushes, and
said:

"Musical thought in the mild air floats,
Spring is coming and winter is dead!
Come, O Swallows, and stir the air,
For the buds are all bursting unaware,
And the drooping eaves and the elm trees long
To hear the sound of your low sweet
song.

Over the roofs of the white Algiers, Flashingly shadowing the bright bazaar,

Flitted the swallows, and not one hears
The call of the thrushes from far,
from far;

Sighed the thrushes; then, all at once,
Broke out singing the old sweet tones,
Singing the bridal of sap and shoot,
The tree's slow life between root and fruit.

But just when the dingles of April
flowers

Shine with the earliest daffodils,
When, before sunrise, the cold clear
hours

Gleam with a promise that noon fulfils, —

Deep in the leafage the cuckoo cried,
Perched on a spray by a rivulet-side, Swallows, O Swallows, come back
again

To swoop and herald the April rain.

And something awoke in the slumbering heart

Of the alien birds in their African air,
And they paused, and alighted, and twittered apart,

And met in the broad white dreamy square,

And the sad slave woman, who lifted
up

From the fountain her broad-lipped earthen cup,

Said to herself, with a weary sigh,
"To-morrow the swallows will northward fly!"

"O weep, weep, weep! for Love, who tarried long
 With many a kiss and song,
 Has taken wing.

No more he lightens in our eyes like
 fire;
 He heeds not our desire,
 Or songs we sing."

THE TEMPTRESS.

I.

UNTO the awful Temptress at my side,
 From whose embrace comes madness at the end,
 I say, "I will not yield, but will defend

My weary soul till body and soul divide."
 "Art thou so much in love with grief?"
 she cried,

"That thou wilt have no other love or friend?"

I answered her—"In guile thou dost transcend

All p'her foes who have my strength defied."

"Once thou didst tarry in my halls," quoth she,

"And to fair chambers were thy footsteps led."

"Blood-red and hot thy kisses were,"

Then thou and Hell should have me

LE ROI EST MORT.

 If I weep that Love's no more,
 grieve his reign?
 'Tis mortal man before
 I have his grief again.
 The long-continued ache,
 The a-dream, the nights awake,
 The voice and merry make,
 Ever more complain.

He is dead and gone for aye,
 Slain with might and main,
 A bitter word one day,
 And my tyrant slain,
 In Hecathenesse was bred,
 He was baptized, 'tis said,
 Of any creed, and dead
 Ever rise again.

LOVE'S EPIPHANY.

Softly here — for Love has passed
 His way!
 While I laughed to scorn His
 Name
 I cried aloud: There is no Love!
 Love came.
 Was glorious with an added day,
 The heavens opened far away,
 With light blown hair and Red a-flame,
 Feather-shaped wings, filled with the Wind's acclaim,
 He veiled and deigned a moment here
 To stay.

I fell upon my face and cried in fear,
 O Love! Love! Love! my King and
 God!
 But when I look'd He was no longer
 Near.
 Since then, I watch beside this grass
 He trod,
 And pray all day, all night, for any pain
 Love can inflict, so He will come again.

PARADISE FANCIES.

LAST night I met mine own true love
 Walking in Paradise,
 A halo shone above his hair,
 A glory in his eyes.

We sat and sang in alleys green
 And heard the angels play,
 Believe me, this was true last night,
 Though it is false to-day.

Through Paradise garden
 A minstrel strays,
 An old golden viol
 For ever he plays.

Birds fly to his head,
 Beasts lie at his feet,
 For none of God's angels
 Make music so sweet.

And here, far from Zion
 And lonely and mute,
 I listen and long
 For my heart is the lute.
